(b) issue such regulations for the management of the forest or produce by the person so jointly interested as it deems necessary for the conservation of the forest or produce and the interests of all parties therein.

When the Government undertakes under clause (a) of this section the management of any forest, it may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, declare that all or any of the provisions herein contained as to Reserved Forests shall apply to such forest, and thereupon such provisions shall apply accordingly.

77. All money payable to the Government under this Act, or under any rule made under this Act, or on account of the price of any forest-produce, or of expenses incurred in the execution of this Act in respect of such produce, may, if not paid when due, be recovered as if it were an arrear of land-revenue under the law for the time being in force.

If such amount is not paid when due, the Forest officer may sell such produce by public auction, and the proceeds of the sale shall be applied first in discharging such amount.

Forest officers not to trade.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The insufficiency of the present general Forest-law (Act VII of 1865) is universally admitted.

The necessity for legislation regarding forests in the Bombay Presidency, to which Act VII of 1865 has never been applied, has long been apparent, and has been urged by the Local Government. Thus, the want of legal powers to control timber in transit, to require it to be covered by a pass, and to levy duty on foreign timber, causes the loss of several lákhs of rupees annually, and a regular machinery for enquiring into and adjudicating upon private rights claimed in forests and reserves would be equally advantageous to the Government and the people.

The case of the Madras Presidency is generally similar to that of the other Provinces, and there is no doubt that the application to it of an improved Forest-law will be very beneficial.

A general Forest Bill has been under consideration since 1868, and more than one draft has been circulated to the various Local Governments. The present draft is for the most part the work of the Inspector General of Forests with the assistance of the Forest Conservators of Bengal and the Panjáb.

It will be observed that this Bill follows in a great measure the Bill for Burma, which has recently been introduced into the Legislative Council of the Governor General, and that provision is made in section 1 for the non-extension to particular Provinces of any portions of it which may have no local application or utility. The present Bill is divided into nine Chapters, dealing respectively with the following matters:—I, Preliminary; II, Reserved Forests; III, Village-Forests; IV, District-Forests; V, Forests not the property of Government; VI, Duty on Timber; VII, Control of Timber and Forest-produce in Transit; VIII, Collection of drift and stranded Timber; IX, Penalties, Procedure, etc.

In Chapter II will be found provisions for ascertaining, securing and commuting the rights of private persons in any forest which it is deemed necessary to reserve.

Chapters III and IV contain provisions regarding forest-lands belonging to Government or in which Government has proprietary rights, which it is deemed necessary to subject, as District or Village-forests, to regulations less stringent than those indispensable for Reserved Forests.

Chapter V regulates, in a manner analogous to that of the law of France and other European nations, forests and lands not the property of Government for objects affecting the safety and well-being of the public at large.

Chapters VI and VII provide for the levy of duty on timber in transit in certain parts of India, and for the prevention of illicit abstraction of timber from the Government forests.

35. For the purposes of this Act, the manager may summon and enforce the attendance of witnesses and compel them to give evidence, and compel the production of documents, by the same means and, as far as possible, in the same manner, as is provided in the case of a Civil Court by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Amendment of Bombay Act VI of 1862.

38. And whereas doubts have been raised as to the validity of Bombay Act No. VI of 1862 (for the amelioration of the condition of Taluqdárs in the Ahmedabad Collectorate, and for their relief from debt) so far as it purports to affect the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, for the purpose of precluding such doubts, it is hereby further enacted that the said Act, so far as it purports to affect the said High Court, shall be deemed to be and to have been valid.

Exemption of certain Thákurs from certain provisions of Act.

39. Nothing in section 9 shall be deemed to render any of the following Thákurs, namely, the Thákur of Ahmod, the Thákur of Sarod, the Thákur of Kerwára, the Thákur of Debej and the Thákur of Janiádra incompetent to enter into contracts involving him in pecuniary liability, nor shall anything in section 28 apply to any of the said Thákurs:

Provided that, if any such Thákur has, since the scheme for the settlement of his debts and liabilities was approved under section 11 of the said Act No. XV of 1871, entered into any contract involving him in pecuniary liability exceeding the average annual income derived during the previous five years from his immoveable property after deducting therefrom the land-tax and other dues of Government, the Local Government may, by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette, declare that the exemption made by the former part of this section shall cease in his case, and thereupon such exemption shall cease accordingly.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The primary object of this Bill is to relieve from incumbrances the estates of Thákurs in Kaira. The reasons for the measure are substantially the same as those which led to the introduction of similar measures for the relief of landholders in Oudh, Chutiá Nágpur, Ahmadábád, Broach, and Sindh.

The Bill repeals and re-enacts the substance of the Broach Act XV of 1871.

Power of stoppage, search and arrest.

4. When any officer of Government empowered by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, whether by name or office, to act under this section, has reason to suspect that any salt is being carried, or is about to be, or has recently been, carried, in any vessel so as to render the owner or master of such vessel liable to the penalties prescribed by section two, he may—

(a) require such vessel to be brought to and enter and search the same;

(b) require the master of such vessel to produce any documents in his possession relating to such vessel or the cargo thereof;

(c) arrest without a warrant any person on board of such vessel who he has reason to suspect is punishable under section two.

Penalties for resisting officer.

5. Any master of a vessel refusing or neglecting to bring to or to produce his papers when required to do so by an officer, acting under section four,

and any person obstructing any such officer in the performance of his duty, may be arrested by such officer without a warrant, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand rupees, or to imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or to both.

Confiscation of vessel and cargo.

6. Every vessel in which salt is carried in contravention of this Act, and the cargo on board such vessel, shall be liable to confiscation.

The confiscation of any vessel under this section shall include her tackle, apparel and furniture.

Confiscations under this section may be adjudged (a) by the Collector of Customs, or (b) by such other officer as the Local Government may from time to time appoint in this behalf.

Whenever any Customs officer is satisfied that any article is liable to confiscation under this section, he may seize such article and shall at once report the seizure to his superior officer for the information of the Collector of Customs or such other officer as aforesaid, who may, if satisfied on such report, or after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, that the article so seized is liable to confiscation, either declare it to be confiscated or impose a fine in lieu thereof not exceeding the value of the article.

Adjudication of offences.

7. All offences against this Act shall be punishable in a summary manner by a Magistrate.

Jurisdiction.

8. For the purpose of the adjudication of penalties under section two, every offence thereunder may be deemed to have been committed within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate of any place where the offender is found, or to which, if arrested under section four or section five, he may be brought.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

There is no law at present to prevent salt shipped from Bombay without payment of duty and destined for Madras or Calcutta, being surreptitiously landed at any port on the coast and smuggled salt being taken in lieu thereof and carried on to the port for which the vessel was cleared.

Moreover, there is nothing to prevent foreign salt or any other salt on which no duty has been made, being landed at any of our ports throughout our seaboard. Both of these defects have led to an immense amount of smuggling, which it is important to check without further delay. The present Bill therefore proposes that no vessel of less than three hundred tons shall be allowed to carry salt except under certain very strict conditions, and that vessels may be brought to and searched, regarding which suspicion exists that they are engaged in carrying on contraband traffic.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st January 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a week:—

No. 4 OF 1877.

A Bill to amend Act No. XIII of 1875.

WHEREAS it is expedient to define the expression 'High Court' as used in Act No. XIII of 1875 (to amend the law relating to Probates and Letters of Administration), sections 2, 3 and 4; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

'Chief Court' defined in Act XIII of 1875, sections 2, 3 and 4.

1. The expression 'High Court' in each of the said sections shall mean, and be deemed to have always meant—

(a) a High Court for the time being established under the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of Victoria, chapter 104:

(b) the Chief Court of the Panjáb:

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Act XIII of 1875 provides that probates or letters of administration granted by a 'High Court' shall (unless otherwise directed by the grant) have like effect throughout the whole of British India, and that, whenever such a grant is made, the Registrar shall send to each of the other High Courts a certificate of the grant.

It has been found that the burden thus imposed on the High Courts is excessive. For 'High Court' is defined to mean (both in the Succession Act and in the General Clauses Act, 1868) 'the highest Civil Court of Appeal,' and of such Courts there are, besides the High Courts properly so called, a large number in outlying parts of British India.

The remedy which the present Bill proposes to apply is to limit, in Act XIII of 1875, the expression 'High Court' to (a) the four High Courts properly so called, (b) the Panjáb Chief Court, and (c) the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon.

OF RESERVED FORESTS.

3. The Local Government may from time to time constitute any forest or waste-land which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled, a Reserved Forest in the manner hereinafter provided. Power to reserve forests.

4. Whenever it is proposed to constitute a Reserved Forest, and the limits of such Forest have not been defined by boundary-marks, and are not, in the opinion of the Local Government, already sufficiently defined by roads, rivers or other such boundaries, the Local Government may cause such limits to be demarcated in such manner as it thinks fit. Demarcation of boundaries.

5. When the Local Government has ascertained that the limits of such Forest are already sufficiently defined as aforesaid, or when such limits have been demarcated under section 4, it may publish a notification in the official Gazette— Notification by Local Government.

(a) declaring that it is proposed to reserve such Forest under this Act;

(b) specifying the limits of such Forest;

(c) appointing an officer (hereinafter called "the Forest Settlement Officer") to inquire into and determine the existence, nature and extent of any rights alleged to exist in favour of any person to or over any land comprised within such limits, or to or over any forest-produce.

During the interval between the publication of such notification and the date fixed by the notification under section 17, no right shall be acquired to, over, or in respect of the Forest comprised in such notification, except under a grant or contract in writing made or entered into by or on behalf of Government or of some person in whom such right was vested when the former notification was issued; and no fresh clearings for cultivation or any other purpose shall be made in such forest. Bar of accrual of forest-rights.

7. When a notification has been issued under section 5, the Forest Settlement Officer shall publish in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest mentioned therein a proclamation in the language of the country:— Proclamation by Forest Settlement Officer.

(a) specifying the limits of such forest;

(b) explaining the consequences which, as hereinafter provided, will ensue on the reservation of such forest; and

(c) fixing a period of not less than three months from the date of such proclamation, and requiring every person claiming any right as aforesaid, to present to such officer within such period a written notice stating the nature of such right and the amount and particulars of the compensation (if any) claimed in respect thereof.

8. Any such right in respect of which no such notice is presented within the said period shall be deemed to be extinguished, unless the person claiming such right satisfies the Forest Settlement Officer that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the notice within such period. Rights not claimed, extinguished.

9. When any such notice is presented as aforesaid, the Forest Settlement Officer shall inquire into the merits of the claim, and may, in the case of a claim to or over any land, if he considers it proved and if he thinks fit to do so, pass an order to that effect and proceed to acquire such land in the manner provided by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, and may, in the case of a claim to rights of way or of pasture, or to forest-produce, proceed in the manner prescribed in sections 10 and 11. designation and position of all buildings, in respect of which the exercise of such rights is claimed.

No such claim shall be admitted, unless

(a) the claimant was, at the time when the limits of the forest were notified under section 5, in the habitual exercise of the right claimed, and

(b) the exercise of the right is required for the beneficial use of the land or premises or of the person claiming the same.

Record where he admits claim.

12. If the Forest Settlement Officer admits any such claim with or without modification, he shall also record the extent to which such rights have been admitted by him, specifying the quantity of timber and other forest-produce annually required, the number and description of cattle admitted to graze in the forest and the season during which such pasture is required. He shall also record whether the produce obtained by the exercise of such rights may be sold or bartered.

Exercise of rights admitted or modified.

13. After making such record, the Forest Settlement Officer shall, to the best of his ability, and having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest in respect of which the claim is made, make such arrangements as will ensure the continued exercise of the rights so admitted or modified. For this purpose, the Forest Settlement Officer may—

(a) set out some other forest-tract of sufficient extent, and in a locality reasonably convenient for the purposes of such claimants, and record an order conferring upon them a right to pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be) to the extent so admitted; or

(b) so alter the limits of the proposed reserved forest as to exclude forest-land of sufficient extent, and conveniently situated for the purposes of the claimants; or

(c) record an order, conferring upon such claimants a right to pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be), to the extent so admitted, at such seasons, within such portions of the Reserved Forest and under such rules as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government.

Commutation of rights.

14. In case the Forest Settlement Officer finds it impossible, having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest, to make such arrangements as shall ensure the continued exercise of the said rights to the extent so admitted, he shall (subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe in this behalf) commute such rights, either by the payment to such persons of a sum of money in lieu thereof, or by the grant of land, or in such other manner as he thinks fit.

Appeal from order passed under section 9, 10 or 13.

15. Any person who has made a claim under this Act, or any Forest Officer or other person generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may, within three months from the date of the order passed on such claim by the Forest Settlement Officer under section 9, 10 or 13, present an appeal from such order to such of the officers who hear appeals in cases relating to land-revenue as the Local Government may from time to time appoint by notification in the official Gazette: Provided that, where the Local Government has appointed (as it is hereby empowered to do) three persons (hereinafter called the Forest Court) to hear appeals from such orders, the appeal shall lie to such persons.

Every appeal under this section shall be made by petition in writing, and shall be delivered to and forwarded by the Forest Settlement Officer.

If the appeal be to the officer so appointed, the order passed thereon shall be communicated to the Forest Settlement Officer who shall forthwith carry out the same.

If the appeal be to the Forest Court, the Court shall fix a day for hearing the appeal and shall give notice of such day to the parties, and shall hear such appeal in the neighbourhood of the forest. The order passed thereon by such Court, or by the majority of the members of such Court, shall (subject to review by the Local Government) be final, and the Forest Settlement Officer shall forthwith carry out such order.

Power to appoint pleader on behalf of Government.

16. The Local Government may appoint any person to appear, plead and act on behalf of the Government before the Forest Settlement Officer or the appellate Court in the course of any inquiry or appeal under this Act.

Notification declaring forest reserved.

17. When the following events have occurred (namely)—

(a) the period fixed under section 7 for presenting notices has elapsed, and all claims (if any) made within such period have been disposed of by the Forest Settlement Officer; and

(b) (if any such claims have been made) the period limited by section 15 for appealing from the orders passed on such claims has elapsed, and all appeals (if any) presented within such period have been disposed of by the appellate Court; and

(c) all lands (if any) included in the forest, which the Forest Settlement Officer has, under section 9, elected to acquire under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, have become vested in the Government under section 16 of that Act,

Provided that, if any rights to or over any land or forest-produce are claimed in such Reserved Forest, the Local Government may direct that such claims shall be inquired into and settled in the manner provided by this Act.

Formation and extension of Reserved Forests under Land Acquisition Act.

20. The formation and extension of a Reserved Forest shall be deemed a public purpose within the meaning of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, section 4.

21. No right of any description shall be acquired to, over, or in respect of, a Reserved Forest, except under a grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of the Government.

Rights not to be alienated.

22. No right conferred under section 13, clause (c), shall be alienated by way of grant, sale, lease, mortgage or otherwise, without the sanction of the Local Government, and no produce obtained by virtue of such a right shall be sold or bartered except to such extent as a right to sell or barter may have been admitted in the order recorded under section 12.

Power to stop ways and water-courses in such forests.

23. The Forest officer may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, stop any public or private way or water-course in a Reserved Forest, provided that he has already assigned or constructed another way or water-course (as the case may be) in lieu thereof, and that such other way or water-course is a reasonably convenient substitute for the way or water-course so stopped.

Acts prohibited in such forests.

24. Any person who—

(a) sets fire to a Reserved Forest, or kindles any fire therein in such manner as to endanger the same;

(b) kindles, keeps or carries any fire therein at such seasons as the Local Government may from time to time notify in this behalf;

(g) collects therein or removes therefrom any forest-produce;

(h) clears or breaks up any land therein for cultivation or any other purpose;

(i) hunts, shoots, fishes or sets snares therein in contravention of any rules which the Local Government may from time to time prescribe, shall be punished with imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or with fine not exceeding five hundred rupees, or with both, in addition to such damages for injury done to the forest as the Court may direct to be paid.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit any act done by permission in writing of the Forest officer, or the exercise of any right conferred under section 13, clause (a), or created by written grant or contract made by or on behalf of Government.

In any case of fire which has been caused wilfully, or which there is reason to believe has been so caused, in a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may (notwithstanding that any penalty has been inflicted under this section) direct that the forest or any portion thereof may be closed for such period as it thinks fit. During the period of such closure the exercise of all rights to pasture or other forest-produce shall be suspended.

Power to declare forest no longer reserved.

25. The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the official Gazette, direct that, from a date fixed by such notification, any forest or any portion of any forest reserved under this Act, shall cease to be a Reserved Forest.

From the date so fixed, such forest or portion thereof shall cease to be reserved, but the rights (if any) which have been extinguished in such forest shall not revive in consequence of such cessation.

CHAPTER III.

OF VILLAGE-FORESTS.

Demarcation of village-forests.

26. The Local Government may assign any Reserved-forest or portion thereof, or any forest the property of Government, for the use of any villages situated in the vicinity of such forest. All forests so assigned shall be called Village-forests. The Local Government may make rules for regulating the management of Village-forests, prescribing the conditions under which the inhabitants of the villages for the use of which any such assignment is made may be provided with timber, pasture or other forest-produce, and their duties for the protection and improvement of such forest.

All provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall (so far as they are consistent with rules so made) apply to Village-forests.

(i) the cutting of grass and pasturing of cattle;

Penalties for acts in contravention of notification under section 28.

31. Any person who—

(a) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree reserved under section 28, or strips off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise interferes with, any such tree; or

33. The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the official Gazette, regulate or prohibit the breaking up of land for cultivation or the clearing of the growth in any forest, when such regulation or prohibition appears necessary for any of the following purposes:

Protection of forests for special purposes.

First.—For protection against storms, winds, rolling stones and avalanches:

Second.—For the preservation of the soil on the ridges and slopes, and in the valleys of mountain-ranges, the prevention of landslips and of the formation of ravines and torrents, and the protection of land against shifting and moving sands:

Third.—For the maintenance of a water-supply in springs, rivers and tanks:

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The insufficiency of the present general Forest-law (Act VII of 1865) is universally admitted.

The necessity for legislation regarding forests in the Bombay Presidency, to which Act VII of 1865 has never been applied, has long been apparent, and has been urged by the Local Government. Thus, the want of legal powers to control timber in transit, to require it to be covered by a pass, and to levy duty on foreign timber, causes the loss of several lákhs of rupees annually, and a regular machinery for enquiring into and adjudicating upon private rights claimed in forests and reserves would be equally advantageous to the Government and the people.

The case of the Madras Presidency is generally similar to that of the other Provinces, and there is no doubt that the application to it of an improved Forest-law will be very beneficial.

A general Forest Bill has been under consideration since 1868, and more than one draft has been circulated to the various Local Governments. The present draft is for the most part the work of the Inspector General of Forests with the assistance of the Forest Conservators of Bengal and the Panjáb.

It will be observed that this Bill follows in a great measure the Bill for Burma, which has recently been introduced into the Legislative Council of the Governor General, and that provision is made in section 1 for the non-extension to particular Provinces of any portions of it which may have no local application or utility. The present Bill is divided into nine Chapters, dealing respectively with the following matters:—I, Preliminary; II, Reserved Forests; III, Village-Forests; IV, District-Forests; V, Forests not the property of Government; VI, Duty on Timber; VII, Control of Timber and Forest-produce in Transit; VIII, Collection of drift and stranded Timber; IX, Penalties, Procedure, etc.

In Chapter II will be found provisions for ascertaining, securing and commuting the rights of private persons in any forest which it is deemed necessary to reserve.

Chapters III and IV contain provisions regarding forest-lands belonging to Government or in which Government has proprietary rights, which it is deemed necessary to subject, as District or Village-forests, to regulations less stringent than those indispensable for Reserved Forests.

Chapter V regulates, in a manner analogous to that of the law of France and other European nations, forests and lands not the property of Government for objects affecting the safety and well-being of the public at large.

Chapters VI and VII provide for the levy of duty on timber in transit in certain parts of India, and for the prevention of illicit abstraction of timber from the Government forests.

Power to rank debts and to fix interest.

16. If such amount cannot be paid at once, the manager shall then proceed to rank such debts and liabilities according to the order in which they shall be paid, and to fix the interest (if any) to be paid thereon, respectively, from the date of the final decision thereon to the date of the payment and discharge thereof.

Scheme for liquidation.

17. When the total amount of the debts and liabilities (including those due and incurred to Government) has been finally determined, the manager shall prepare and submit to the Commissioner a schedule of such debts and liabilities, and a scheme (hereinafter called the liquidation-scheme) shewing the mode in which it is proposed to pay and discharge the same, whether from the income of the property under management, or with the aid of funds raised under the powers hereinafter conferred, or partly in one of such ways and partly in the other.

Provisions of scheme.

Every such scheme shall further provide for the continuance of the payments to be made by the manager under section 11, and may provide for the improvement of the property under management either from the said income or with the aid of the funds raised as aforesaid, or partly in one of such ways and partly in the other.

Proceedings of Commissioner on submission of scheme.

18. The Commissioner may—

(a) as often as he thinks fit send back such scheme to the manager for revision, and direct him to make such further inquiry as may be requisite for the proper preparation of the scheme, or

(b) sanction any liquidation-scheme, or any revised liquidation-scheme, submitted to him, either as it stands, or subject to such modifications as he may deem expedient.

Power to relinquish management.

19. At any time before he has sanctioned a liquidation-scheme under section 18, the Commissioner may, by an order published in the Bombay Government Gazette, direct that on a date fixed by such order the management shall be relinquished.

On the date so fixed—

(a) the management shall terminate;

(b) the owner of the property under management shall be restored to the possession thereof, subject to any leases made under section 10;

(c) any residue of the rents and profits of the said property, retained under the last clause of section 10, shall be paid to him; and

(d) the proceedings, processes, executions and attachments stayed and suspended under section 9, and the debts and liabilities barred by section 14, shall revive.

In calculating the periods of limitation applicable to suits to recover and enforce debts and liabilities revived under this section, the time during which the management has continued shall be excluded.

V.—Of the Proceedings subsequent to sanction of the Liquidation-scheme.

Effects of sanctioning scheme.

20. When the Commissioner sanctions the liquidation-scheme, he shall notify the fact of such sanction at such places and in such manner as the Local Government may from time to time by rule direct; and thereupon—

1*st*, all proceedings, processes, executions and attachments stayed or suspended under section 9 shall be for ever barred, and

2*nd*, every debt or liability due or owing to any person which was proveable before the manager shall be extinguished, and such person shall be entitled to receive under the liquidation-scheme the amount (if any) finally awarded to him under Part IV of this Act in respect of such debt or liability.

Power to remove mortgagee in possession.

21. If the property under management or any part thereof be in the possession of a mortgagee or conditional vendee, the manager, at any time after the liquidation-scheme has been sanctioned as aforesaid, may, by an order in writing, require such incumbrancer to deliver up possession of the same to him at the end of the then current revenue year.

If such incumbrancer refuse or neglect to obey such order, the manager may, without resorting to a Civil Court, enter upon the property and summarily evict therefrom the said incumbrancer and any other person obstructing or resisting on his behalf.

Nothing in this section shall be held to affect the right of any incumbrancer to receive, under the liquidation-scheme, the amount (if any) awarded to him under Part IV of this Act.

Power to inquire into consideration given for leases.

22. If the property under management or any part thereof be in the possession of any person claiming to hold under a lease dated within the three years immediately preceding the commencement of the management, the manager may inquire into the sufficiency of the consideration for which the lease was given; and if such consideration appear to him insufficient, may by order, with the consent of the Commissioner, at any time after the liquidation-scheme has been sanctioned as aforesaid, either set aside the lease or require the person so in possession to pay such consideration for the said lease as the manager thinks fit, and in default of such payment the lease shall be cancelled.

Power to lease.

23. Subject to the rules made under section 31, the manager, after the liquidation-scheme has been sanctioned as aforesaid, shall have power to demise all or any part of the property under management for any term of years not exceeding twenty years absolute, to take effect in possession, in consideration of the payment to him of any fine, or without fine, and reserving such rents, and under such conditions, as may be agreed upon.

Power to raise money by mortgage or sale.

24. At any time after the liquidation-scheme has been sanctioned as aforesaid, the manager, with the previous assent of the Commissioner, shall have power to raise any money which may be required for carrying out such scheme—

(a) by demising by way of mortgage the whole or any part of the property under management for a term not exceeding twenty years from the publication of the order of management; or

(b) by selling, by public auction or by private contract, and upon such terms as the manager thinks fit, such portion of the said property as may appear expedient.

Manager's receipt a discharge.

25. The manager's receipt for any moneys, rents or profits raised or received by him under this Act, shall discharge the person paying the same therefrom and from being concerned to see to the application thereof.

Termination of management.

26. When the debts and liabilities mentioned in the liquidation-scheme have been paid and discharged, the manager shall publish in the Bombay Government Gazette a notice fixing a date for the termination of the management.

Restoration of owner.

On the date so fixed the management shall terminate, and the owner shall be restored to the possession and enjoyment of the property under management, or of such part thereof as has not been sold by the manager under the power conferred by section 24, but subject to the leases and mortgages (if any) granted and made by the manager under the powers conferred by sections 10, 23 and 24.

Death of debtor during management.

27. If the debtor dies after the publication of the order of management and before the management has been terminated in either of the modes hereinbefore provided—

1*st*, the management shall continue and proceed in all respects as if such debtor were still living;

2*ndly*, any person succeeding to the whole or any portion of the property under management shall, while such management continues, be subject in respect of such property to the disabilities imposed by clauses (b) and (c) of section 9; and

3*rdly*, no Civil Court in British India shall, during the continuance of the management, issue any attachment or other process against any portion of the property under management, for or in respect of any debt or liability incurred by any such person whether before or after his said succession.

Mortgages, &c., made by restored Thákur valid only for his life.

28. When a Thákur has been restored under section 26 to the possession of any property, no mortgage, charge, lease or alienation of such property, or of any part thereof, made by such Thákur, shall be valid as to any time beyond his natural life.

VI.—Of Appeal and Revision.

Appeal.

29. An appeal against any decision or order under sections 14, 15, 16 and 22 and imposing a fine or imprisonment in exercise of the powers conferred by section 35, shall lie to the Commissioner, if preferred within six weeks from the date of such decision or order.

There shall be no appeal against the decision of the Commissioner on such appeal.

Power to call for proceedings and pass order thereon.

30. The Commissioner may, of his own motion or on the application of any person concerned, call for the proceedings in any case under this Act, and pass such order thereon, consistent with the provisions of this Act, as he thinks fit.

VII.—Miscellaneous.

Power to make rules.

31. The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act—

(a) to regulate the security to be required from subordinate officers under this Act;

(b) to regulate the procedure in all cases under this Act;

(c) for the guidance of officers enquiring into and determining on claims under Part IV of this Act; and in particular as to the allowance of interest (if any) on each of the principal debts and liabilities so determined, from the date on which it was incurred down to the date of the determination, and on the aggregate amount of such debts and liabilities from the date of the determination down to the date of payment, and as to the order of paying debts and liabilities;

(d) for investing any moneys received or raised by the manager under this Act in any Government securities of British India, and for the sale of such securities, and (e) generally to carry out the provisions of this Act.

Such rules shall be published in the Bombay Government Gazette, and when so published shall have the force of law.

Power to appoint new manager.

32. The Local Government may suspend or remove any manager, and may appoint any officer in the stead of any manager appointed under this Act; and thereupon the management then vested under this Act in the former manager shall become vested in the new manager.

Every such new manager shall have the same powers as if he had been originally appointed.

33. Every manager appointed under this Act, shall be deemed a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

Managers to be public servants.

34. Every investigation conducted by the manager with reference to any claim preferred before him under this Act, or to any matter connected with any such claim, shall be taken to be a judicial proceeding within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

Investigation, a judicial proceeding.

35. For the purposes of this Act, the manager may summon and enforce the attendance of witnesses and compel them to give evidence, and compel the production of documents, by the same means and, as far as possible, in the same manner, as is provided in the case of a Civil Court by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Power to summon witnesses and compel production of documents.

36. No suit or other proceeding shall be maintained against any person in respect of any thing done by him bonâ fide pursuant to this Act.

Bar of suits.

37. Nothing in this Act precludes the Courts in Broach and Kaira having jurisdiction in suits relating to the succession to any immoveable property brought under the operation of this Act from entertaining and disposing of such suits; but to all such suits the manager of such property shall be made a party.

Saving of jurisdiction of Courts in Broach and Kaira in respect of certain suits.

38. And whereas doubts have been raised as to the validity of Bombay Act No. VI of 1862 (for the amelioration of the condition of Taluqdárs in the Ahmedabad Collectorate, and for their relief from debt) so far as it purports to affect the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, for the purpose of precluding such doubts, it is hereby further enacted that the said Act, so far as it purports to affect the said High Court, shall be deemed to be and to have been valid.

Amendment of Bombay Act VI of 1862.

39. Nothing in section 9 shall be deemed to render any of the following Thákurs, namely, the Thákur of Ahmod, the Thákur of Sarod, the Thákur of Kerwára, the Thákur of Dehej and the Thákur of Janiádra incompetent to enter into contracts involving him in pecuniary liability, nor shall anything in section 28 apply to any of the said Thákurs:

Exemption of certain Thákurs from certain provisions of Act.

Provided that, if any such Thákur has, since the scheme for the settlement of his debts and liabilities was approved under section 11 of the said Act No. XV of 1871, entered into any contract involving him in pecuniary liability exceeding the average annual income derived during the previous five years from his immoveable property after deducting therefrom the land-tax and other dues of Government, the Local Government may, by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette, declare that the exemption made by the former part of this section shall cease in his case, and thereupon such exemption shall cease accordingly.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The primary object of this Bill is to relieve from incumbrances the estates of Thákurs in Kaira. The reasons for the measure are substantially the same as those which led to the introduction of similar measures for the relief of landholders in Oudh, Chutiá Nágpur, Ahmadábád, Broach, and Sindh.

The Bill repeals and re-enacts the substance of the Broach Act XV of 1871.

No. 3 OF 1877.

A Bill to restrict the transport of Salt by Sea.

WHEREAS it is expedient to restrict the transport of salt by sea in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

1. This Act may be called "The Transport of Salt Act, 1877:"

Short title.

It extends to the whole of British India and, further, applies—

Extent.

(a) to all European British subjects of Her Majesty within the territorial jurisdiction of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty;

(b) to all Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty, wherever they may be;

And it shall come into force on such day as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf.

Commencement.

2. When any salt is carried by sea in any vessel other than a square-rigged vessel of the burden of three hundred tons and upwards, the owner and master of such vessel shall each be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand rupees, or to imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or to both.

Penalty for carrying salt in certain vessels.

3. Nothing in section two applies to—

Exceptions.

(a) salt covered by a permit granted under section twenty-eight or section thirty-one of the Act of the Governor of Bombay in Council No. VII of 1873;

(b) salt covered by a pass granted by any officer whom the Governor General in Council may appoint in this behalf;

(c) such amount of salt carried on board any vessel for consumption by her crew or by the passengers or animals (if any) on board as the Governor General in Council may from time to time exempt from the operation of section two.

4. When any officer of Government empowered by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, whether by name or office, to act under this section, has reason to suspect that any salt is being carried, or is about to be, or has recently been, carried, in any vessel so as to render the owner or master of such vessel liable to the penalties prescribed by section two, he may—

Power of stoppage, search and arrest.

(a) require such vessel to be brought to and enter and search the same;

(b) require the master of such vessel to produce any documents in his possession relating to such vessel or the cargo thereof;

(c) arrest without a warrant any person on board of such vessel who he has reason to suspect is punishable under section two.

5. Any master of a vessel refusing or neglecting to bring to or to produce his papers when required to do so by an officer acting under section four, and any person obstructing any such officer in the performance of his duty, may be arrested by such officer without a warrant, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand rupees, or to imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or to both.

6. Every vessel in which salt is carried in contravention of this Act, and the cargo on board such vessel, shall be liable to confiscation.

Confiscation of vessel and cargo.

The confiscation of any vessel under this section shall include her tackle, apparel and furniture.

Confiscations under this section may be adjudged (a) by the Collector of Customs, or (b) by such other officer as the Local Government may from time to time appoint in this behalf.

Whenever any Customs officer is satisfied that any article is liable to confiscation under this section, he may seize such article and shall at once report the seizure to his superior officer for the information of the Collector of Customs or such other officer as aforesaid, who may, if satisfied on such report, or after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, that the article so seized is liable to confiscation, either declare it to be confiscated or impose a fine in lieu thereof not exceeding the value of the article.

7. All offences against this Act shall be punishable in a summary manner by a Magistrate.

Adjudication of offences.

8. For the purpose of the adjudication of penalties under section two, every offence thereunder may be deemed to have been committed within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate of any place where the offender is found, or to which, if arrested under section four or section five, he may be brought.

Jurisdiction.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

There is no law at present to prevent salt shipped from Bombay without payment of duty and destined for Madras or Calcutta, being surreptitiously landed at any port on the coast and smuggled salt being taken in lieu thereof and carried on to the port for which the vessel was cleared.

Moreover, there is nothing to prevent foreign salt or any other salt on which no duty has been made, being landed at any of our ports throughout our seaboard. Both of these defects have led to an immense amount of smuggling, which it is important to check without further delay. The present Bill therefore proposes that no vessel of less than three hundred tons shall be allowed to carry salt except under certain very strict conditions, and that vessels may be brought to and searched, regarding which suspicion exists that they are engaged in carrying on contraband traffic.

A Bill for the Limitation of Suits, and for other Purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the limitation of suits, appeals and certain applications to Courts; And whereas it is also expedient to provide rules for acquiring by possession the ownership of easements and other property; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called 'The Indian Limitation Act, 1877,' and shall come into force on the first day of July 1877.

Extent of Act.

It extends to the whole of British India; but nothing contained in sections two and three or in Parts II and III applies—

(a) to suits under the Indian Divorce Act, or

(b) to suits under Madras Regulation VI of 1831.

Repeal of Act IX of 1871.

2. Act No. IX of 1871 (An Act for the Limitation of Suits and for other purposes) shall be repealed.

But all references to such Act shall be read as if made to this Act; and nothing herein or in that Act contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired under that Act or under any enactment thereby repealed.

And notwithstanding anything herein contained, any suit mentioned in No. 143, No. 144 or No. 145 of the schedule hereto annexed, may be brought within five years next after the said first day of July 1877, unless where the period prescribed for such suit by the said Act No. IX of 1871 shall have expired before the completion of the said five years.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

'minor' means a person who has not completed his age of eighteen years:

'plaintiff' includes also any person from or through whom a plaintiff derives his right to sue:

'easement' includes also a right, not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another, or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another:

'bill of exchange' includes also a hundí:

'trustee' does not include a benámídár, a mortgagee remaining in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied, or a wrong-doer in possession without title:

'suit' does not include an appeal or an application:

'registered' means duly registered under the law for the registration of documents in force at the time and place of executing the document referred to in the context:

'foreign country' means any country other than British India;

and nothing shall be deemed to be done in 'good faith' which is not done with due care and attention.

PART II.

LIMITATION OF SUITS, APPEALS AND APPLICATIONS.

Dismissal of suits, &c., instituted, &c., after period of limitation.

4. Subject to the provisions contained in sections five to twenty-six (inclusive), every suit instituted, appeal presented, and application made after the period of limitation prescribed therefor by the schedule hereto annexed, shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence.

Explanation.*—A suit is instituted in ordinary cases when the plaint, stamped in accordance with the law for the time being in force, is presented to the proper officer: in the case of a pauper, when his application for leave to sue as a pauper is filed; and in the case of a claim against a company which is being wound up by the Court, when the claimant first sends in his claim to the official liquidator.

Illustrations.

(a).—A suit is instituted after the prescribed period of limitation. Limitation is not set up as a defence and judgment is given for the plaintiff. The defendant appeals. The appellate court must dismiss the suit.

(b).—An appeal presented after the prescribed period is admitted and registered. The appeal shall, nevertheless, be dismissed.

Proviso where Court is closed when period expires.

5. If the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, presented or made on the day that the Court re-opens:

Proviso as to appeals and applications for review.

Any appeal or application for a review of judgment may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal or making the application within such period.

Different periods of limitation prescribed by local laws.

6. When, by any law not mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed and now or hereafter to be in force in any part of British India, a period of limitation differing from that prescribed by this Act is specially prescribed for any suits, appeals or applications, nothing herein contained shall alter the period so prescribed.

Appeals from decrees of High Courts on original side.

And nothing herein contained shall affect the periods of limitation prescribed for appeals from, or applications to review, any decree, order or judgment of a High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.

Legal Disability.

Legal disability.

7. If a person entitled to sue be, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit within the same period after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the schedule hereto annexed.

Double and successive disabilities.

When he is at such time affected by two disabilities, or when before his disability has ceased he is affected by another disability, he may institute the suit within the same period after both disabilities have ceased as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

When his disability continues up to his death, his representative in interest may institute the suit within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

Disability of representative.

When such representative is at the date of the death affected by any disability, the rules contained in the former part of this section shall apply.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disability or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which the suit must be brought.

Illustrations.

(a). The right to sue for the hire of a boat accrues to A during his minority. He attains majority four years after such accruer. He may institute his suit at any time within three years from the date of his attaining majority.

(b). A, to whom a right to sue for a legacy has accrued during his minority, attains majority eleven years after such accruer. A has, under the ordinary law, only one year remaining within which to sue. But under this section an extension of two years will be allowed him, making in all a period of three years from the date of his attaining majority, within which he may bring his suit.

(d). A right to sue accrues to X during his minority. X dies before attaining majority and is succeeded by Y his minor son. Time runs against Y from the date of his attaining majority.

(e). A right to sue for an hereditary office accrues to A, who at the time is insane. Six years after the accrual A recovers his reason. A has six years, under the ordinary law, from the date when his insanity ceased within which to institute a suit. No extension of time will be given him under this section.

(f). A right to sue as landlord to recover possession from a tenant accrues to A who is an idiot. A dies three years after the accrual, his idiocy continuing up to the date of his death. A's representative in interest has, under the ordinary law, nine years from the date of A's death within which to bring a suit. This section does not extend that time.

Disability of one joint creditor.

8. When one of several joint creditors or claimants is under any such disability, and when a discharge can be given without the concurrence of such person, time will run against them all: but where no such discharge can be given, time will not run as against any of them until they all are free from disability.

Illustrations.

(a) A incurs a debt to a firm of which B, C and D are partners. B is insane and C is a minor. D can give a discharge of the debt without the concurrence of B and C. Time runs against B, C and D.

(b) A incurs a debt to the same firm. B and C are insane, and D is a minor. Time will not run against any of them until they are all free from disability.

Continuous running of time.

9. When once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it:

Provided that where letters of administration to the estate of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt shall be suspended while the administration continues.

Suits against express trustees and their representatives.

10. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his representatives, for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, shall be barred by any length of time.

Explanation.—A purchaser in good faith for value from a trustee is not his representative within the meaning of this section.

Suits on foreign contracts.

11. Suits in British India on contracts entered into in a foreign country are subject to the rules prescribed by this Act.

Foreign limitation law.

12. No foreign rule of limitations shall be a defence to a suit in British India on a contract entered into in a foreign country, unless the rule has extinguished the contract, and the parties were domiciled in such country during the period prescribed by such rule.

PART III.

COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

Exclusion of day on which right to sue accrues.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application to set aside an award, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded.

14. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the defendant has been absent from British India shall be excluded, unless service of a summons to appear and answer in the suit can, during such absence, be made under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 60.

Exclusion of time of defendant's absence from British India.

15. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another suit, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the same defendant or some person whom he represents, shall be excluded, where the last-mentioned suit is founded upon the same cause of action, and is instituted in good faith in a Court which from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to try it.

Exclusion of time of suing bonâ fide in Court without jurisdiction.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any application, the time during which the applicant has been making another application for the same relief, shall be excluded, where the last-mentioned application is made in good faith to a Court which from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to grant it.

Like exclusion in case of application.

Explanation 1.—In excluding the time during which a former suit or application was pending or being made, the day on which that suit or application was instituted or made, and the day on which the proceedings therein ended, shall both be counted.

Explanation 2.—A plaintiff resisting an appeal presented on the ground of want of jurisdiction, shall be deemed to be prosecuting a suit within the meaning of this section.

16. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the institution of which has been stayed by injunction or order, the time of the continuance of the injunction or order, shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time during which commencement of suit is stayed by injunction.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit proceedings in which have been stayed by order under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 19, the interval between the institution of the suit and the date of so staying proceedings, and the time requisite for going from the Court in which proceedings are stayed to the Court in which the suit is re-instituted, shall be excluded.

Like exclusion in case of order under Civil Procedure Code, s. 19.

17. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, the time during which the judgment-debtor has been prosecuting a suit to set aside the sale, shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time during which judgment-debtor sues to set aside execution sale.

18. When a person who would, if he were living, have a right to sue, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a representative in interest of the deceased capable of suing.

Effect of death before right to sue accrues.

When a person against whom, if he were living, a right to sue would have accrued, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a representative whom the plaintiff may sue.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the possession of immoveable property or of an hereditary office.

19. When any person having a right to sue has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded,

Effect of fraud.

or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed,

the time limited for commencing a suit,

(a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or,

(b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration,

shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or, in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production.

20. If a promise or acknowledgment in respect of any property or right has been made in writing signed, either personally or through a duly authorised agent, by the party against whom such property or right is claimed, or by some person through whom he derives title or liability, a new period of limitation, according to the nature of the original liability, shall be computed from the time when the promise or acknowledgment was so signed.

Effect of acknowledgment in writing.

When the writing containing the promise or acknowledgment is undated, oral evidence may be given of the time when it was signed. But oral evidence of its contents shall not be received unless it has been destroyed wrongfully by the person on whom the promise or acknowledgment would be binding.

EXPLANATION 1.—For the purposes of this section a promise or acknowledgment may be sufficient, though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right, or avers that the time for payment, delivery or performance has not yet come, or is accompanied by a refusal to pay, deliver or perform or is coupled with a claim to a set-off, or is addressed to any person other than the person entitled to the property or right:

but it must amount to a substantial acknowledgment of liability in respect of the property, or right in question.

EXPLANATION 2.—Nothing in this section renders one of several partners or executors chargeable by reason only of a written promise or acknowledgment signed by another of them.

Illustrations.

Z, a bond-debtor, himself writes a letter promising to pay the debt to his creditor A. Z affixes his seal, but does not sign the letter:

Z pays part of the debt and promises orally to pay the rest:

Z publishes an advertisement, requesting his creditors to bring in their claims for examination:

In none of these cases is the debt taken out of the operation of this Act.

21. When interest on a debt or legacy is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid as such by the person liable to pay the debt or legacy, or by his agent generally or specially authorized in this behalf,

Effect of payment of interest as such.

or when part of the principal of a debt is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid by the debtor or by his agent generally or specially authorized in this behalf,

Effect of part-payment of principal.

a new period of limitation, according to the nature of the original liability, shall be computed from the time when the payment was made:

Provided that, in the case of part-payment of principal, the debt has arisen from a contract in writing and the fact of the payment appears in the hand-writing of the person making the same, on the instrument, or in his own books, or in the books of the creditor.

Where mortgaged land is in the possession of the mortgagee, the delivery and receipt of the produce of such land shall be deemed to be a payment for the purpose of this section.

Effect of delivery and receipt of produce of mortgaged land.

22. When, after the institution of a suit, a new plaintiff or defendant is substituted or added, the suit shall, as regards him, be deemed to have been instituted when he was so made a party:

Effect of substituting or adding new plaintiff or defendant.

Provided that, when a plaintiff dies, and the suit is continued by his representatives in interest, it shall, as regards them, be deemed to have been instituted when it was instituted by the deceased plaintiff:

Proviso where original plaintiff dies.

Provided also, that, when a defendant dies, and the suit is continued against his representatives in interest, it shall, as regards them, be deemed to have been instituted when it was instituted against the deceased defendant.

Proviso where original defendant dies.

23. In the case of a suit for the breach of a contract, where there are successive breaches, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, upon every fresh breach; and where the breach is a continuing breach, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, at every moment of the time during which the breach continues.

Computation where there are successive breaches of contract.

Computation where the breach is continuing.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the breach of contracts for the payment of money by instalments, where, on default made in payment of one instalment, the whole becomes due.

Illustrations.

(a).—A contracts to pay an annuity to B for his life by quarterly instalments. A fails to pay any of the instalments. Here upon every fresh failure, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run; and this Act may bar the remedy on the earlier breaches without affecting the remedy on the later breaches.

(b).—A, a tenant, covenants with B, his landlord, to keep certain buildings in repair. At every moment of the time during which the buildings continue out of repair and B retains his right of entry, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run.

24. In the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues.

Continuing wrong.

Illustration.

A diverts B's watercourse. At every moment of the time during which the diversion continues and B retains his right of entry, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run.

25. In the case of a suit for compensation for an act lawful in itself which becomes unlawful in case it causes damage, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the damage accrues.

Suit for compensation for act becoming unlawful.

Illustration.

A owns the surface of a field. B owns the subsoil. B digs coal thereout without causing any immediate apparent injury to the surface, but at last the surface subsides. The period of limitation runs from the time of the subsidence.

26. All instruments shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar.

Computation of time mentioned in instruments.

Illustrations.

(a).—A Hindú makes a promissory note bearing a Native date only, and payable four months after date. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the note runs from the expiry of four months after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

(b).—A Hindú makes a bond, bearing a Native date only, for the repayment of money within one year. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the bond runs from the expiry of one year after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

PART IV.

ACQUISITION OF OWNERSHIP BY POSSESSION.

27. Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years,

Acquisition of right to easements.

and where any way or watercourse, or the use of any water, or any other easement (whether affirmative or negative) has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, or other easement, shall be absolute and indefeasible.

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested.

EXPLANATION.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Illustrations.

(a).—A suit is brought in 1871 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, from 1st January 1850 to 1st January 1870. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b).—In a like suit also brought in 1871 the plaintiff merely proves that he enjoyed the right in manner aforesaid from 1848 to 1868. The suit shall be dismissed, as no exercise of the right by actual user has been proved to have taken place within two years next before the institution of the suit.

(c).—In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff on one occasion during the twenty years had asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed.

28. Provided that, when any land or water upon, over, or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term, shall be excluded in the computation of the said last-mentioned period of twenty years, in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land or water.

Exclusion in favour of reversioner of servient tenement.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C, a deceased Hindú widow, had a life interest in the land, that on C's death B became entitled to the land, and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

29. At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished.

Extinguishment of right to property.

30. Where a series of trespassers adverse to one another and to the rightful owner of any immoveable property or hereditary office take and keep possession thereof for several periods each less than the period so limited, but collectively exceeding such period, the person who is in possession of such property or office when the title of the rightful owner is extinguished shall have a right to such possession.

Possession by successive trespassers.

Nothing in this section shall operate to bar any right to possession which any earlier trespasser may have against any later trespasser who has illegally dispossessed him.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The Limitation Act (IX of 1871) contains, directly or indirectly, numerous references to the Code of Civil Procedure. And therefore the revision of the Code, which the Indian Legislature has resumed and hopes soon to complete, entails the revision of the Limitation Act.

2. The object of the present Bill is primarily to adapt the law of limitation to the revised Code; but the opportunity has been taken to make certain amendments which the experience of nearly six years has shown to be desirable. Of these the following are the principal:—

Preliminary.

3. Titles acquired under the old Limitation Act (XIV of 1859) or the present Act (IX of 1871) will be saved.

'Easement' is defined so as to include what is technically called a profit à prendre.

Limitation of Suits, Appeals and Applications.

4. Suits will not be 'instituted' for the purpose of the Act, unless the plaints are stamped in accordance with law.

5. Section 7 has been extended so as to provide for supervenient and successive disabilities.

Computation of Period of Limitation.

6. To section 15 has been added a clause providing for the exclusion of the time during which an applicant has been making a bonâ fide application in a Court unable to grant it.

7. Section 20 (as to the effect of acknowledgments in writing as to debts and legacies) has been extended to promises or acknowledgments in respect of any property or right, and oral evidence of the contents of the writing containing the promise or acknowledgment will not be receivable, unless it has been wrongfully destroyed by the person on whom the promise or acknowledgment would be binding.

8. Section 21 (as to the effect of payment of interest or part-payment of principal) has been made to comprise the case of delivery and receipt of the produce of mortgaged land in the possession of the mortgagee.

9. Section 24 (as to continuing nuisances) has been extended so as to cover all cases of continuing wrongs independent of contract.

Acquisition by Possession of the Ownership of Easements, Land and Hereditary Offices.

10. The exception as to light and air has been struck out of section 28 (as to exclusion in favour of the reversioner of the servient tenement). This exception complicates the law, and the reasons which led to a like exception in the English Prescription Act do not seem to apply to India.

11. Provision has been made in section 30 for the case of a series of trespassers adverse to one another and to the rightful owner of any land or hereditary office, taking and keeping possession thereof for several periods, each less than the period limited by the Act, but collectively exceeding that period. The rule adopted is that the person who is in possession when the title of the rightful owner is extinguished shall have a right to such possession. But the right to possession which any earlier trespasser may have against any later trespasser who has illegally dispossessed him is expressly saved.

The Schedule.

12. The time when the period fixed for the following suits begins to run has been altered as follows:—

No.

83 (=87 of Act IX).	For the balance due on a mutual, open and current account, where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties.	The latest date at which any item is entered in the account by or on behalf of the defendant.

146. For a declaration of right to an easement.

17. In Nos. 144 and 145, the Bill provides for acknowledgments signed by the agent of a depositary, pawnee, mortgagee or some person claiming under him.

18. Lastly, in No. 169 it explains, in accordance with decided cases, when an application to execute a decree passed in favour of, or against, several persons enures in favour of, or against, them all, and when in favour of, or against, only those by, or against, whom the application is made.

CALCUTTA,

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 28th February 1877 :—

We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to restrict the transport of Salt by Sea was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin.

From Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, No. 201C.S., dated 24th July 1874.
" " ditto ditto ditto No. 232C.S., dated 7th July 1875, and enclosures.
" " ditto ditto ditto No. 320C.S., dated 23rd Nov. 1876, and enclosures.
" " ditto ditto ditto No. 355, dated 23rd December 1876.
Suggestions by G. H. M. Batten, Esq., dated 8th February 1877.

2. We think that the proposed Act should come into force on the West Coast of India at once, and elsewhere on such day as the Government of India directs.

3. We have saved from the operation of section 2 salt covered by rawánas granted under Madras Regulation I of 1805, section 11, clause 3.

4. We think that the power to stop, search and arrest, given by section 4, should be exercised only by officers who have reason to believe from personal knowledge or from information taken down in writing that salt is being, or has within twenty-four hours been, illegally carried. We have empowered such officers to seize vessels which they have reason to believe to be liable to confiscation under the proposed Act, and cause them to be brought into any British Indian port. We have limited their power to arrest persons without warrant to cases in which salt is actually found on board. We have provided that all salt in respect of which an offence has been committed under the proposed Act shall be liable to confiscation.

5. We have omitted as useless the section as to the summary punishment of offences against the proposed Act.

6. We have transferred the powers given to the Government of India by section 3, clauses (b) and (c), and section 4, to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of British Burma.

7. We recommend that the Bill thus amended be passed. But we think that it has been so altered as to require republication.

5. Any master of a vessel refusing or neglecting to bring to or to produce his papers when required to do so by an officer acting under section four,

and any person obstructing any such officer in the performance of his duty,

6. Every vessel in which salt is carried in contravention of this Act, the cargo on board such vessel, and all salt in respect of which an offence under this Act has been committed, shall be liable to confiscation.

Confiscation of vessel and cargo.

The confiscation of any vessel under this section shall include her tackle, apparel and furniture.

Confiscations under this section may be adjudged (a) by the Chief Customs Authority, or (b) by such other officer as the Local Government may from time to time appoint in this behalf.

Whenever any Customs officer is satisfied that any article is liable to confiscation under this section, he may seize such article, and shall at once report the seizure to his superior officer for the information of the Chief Customs Authority, or such other officer as aforesaid, who may, if satisfied on such report, or after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, that the article so seized is liable to confiscation, either declare it to be confiscated or impose a fine in lieu thereof not exceeding the value of the article.

7. For the purpose of the adjudication of penalties under section two or section five, every offence thereunder may be deemed to have been committed within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate of any place where the offender is found, or to which, if arrested under section four or section five, he may be brought.

A Bill for the Limitation of Suits, and for other Purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the limitation of suits, appeals and certain applications to Courts; And whereas it is also expedient to provide rules for acquiring by possession the ownership of easements and other property; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called 'The Indian Limitation Act, 1877,' and shall come into force on the first day of July 1877.

Extent of Act.

It extends to the whole of British India; but nothing contained in sections two and three or in Parts II and III applies—

(a) to suits under the Indian Divorce Act, or

(b) to suits under Madras Regulation VI of 1831.

Repeal of Act IX of 1871.

2. Act No. IX of 1871 (An Act for the Limitation of Suits and for other purposes) shall be repealed.

But all references to such Act shall be read as if made to this Act; and nothing herein or in that Act contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired under that Act or under any enactment thereby repealed.

And notwithstanding anything herein contained, any suit mentioned in No. 143, No. 144 or No. 145 of the schedule hereto annexed, may be brought within five years next after the said first day of July 1877, unless where the period prescribed for such suit by the said Act No. IX of 1871 shall have expired before the completion of the said five years.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

'minor' means a person who has not completed his age of eighteen years:

'plaintiff' includes also any person from or through whom a plaintiff derives his right to sue:

'easement' includes also a right, not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another, or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another:

'bill of exchange' includes also a hundí:

'trustee' does not include a benámídár, a mortgagee remaining in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied, or a wrong-doer in possession without title:

'suit' does not include an appeal or an application:

'registered' means duly registered under the law for the registration of documents in force at the time and place of executing the document referred to in the context:

'foreign country' means any country other than British India;

and nothing shall be deemed to be done in 'good faith' which is not done with due care and attention.

PART II.

LIMITATION OF SUITS, APPEALS AND APPLICATIONS.

Dismissal of suits, &c., instituted, &c., after period of limitation.

4. Subject to the provisions contained in sections five to twenty-six (inclusive), every suit instituted, appeal presented, and application made after the period of limitation prescribed therefor by the schedule hereto annexed, shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence.

Explanation.—A suit is instituted in ordinary cases when the plaint, stamped in accordance with the law for the time being in force, is presented to the proper officer: in the case of a pauper, when his application for leave to sue as a pauper is filed; and in the case of a claim against a company which is being wound up by the Court, when the claimant first sends in his claim to the official liquidator.

Illustrations.

(a).—A suit is instituted after the prescribed period of limitation. Limitation is not set up as a defence and judgment is given for the plaintiff. The defendant appeals. The appellate court must dismiss the suit.

(b).—An appeal presented after the prescribed period is admitted and registered. The appeal shall, nevertheless, be dismissed.

Proviso where Court is closed when period expires.

5. If the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, presented or made on the day that the Court re-opens:

Proviso as to appeals and applications for review.

Any appeal or application for a review of judgment may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal or making the application within such period.

Different periods of limitation prescribed by local laws.

6. When, by any law not mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed and now or hereafter to be in force in any part of British India, a period of limitation differing from that prescribed by this Act is specially prescribed for any suits, appeals or applications, nothing herein contained shall alter the period so prescribed.

Appeals from decrees of High Courts on original side.

And nothing herein contained shall affect the periods of limitation prescribed for appeals from, or applications to review, any decree, order or judgment of a High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.

Legal Disability.

Legal disability.

7. If a person entitled to sue be, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit within the same period after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the schedule hereto annexed.

Double and successive disabilities.

When he is at such time affected by two disabilities, or when before his disability has ceased he is affected by another disability, he may institute the suit within the same period after both disabilities have ceased as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

When his disability continues up to his death, his representative in interest may institute the suit within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

Disability of representative.

When such representative is at the date of the death affected by any disability, the rules contained in the former part of this section shall apply.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disability or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which the suit must be brought.

Illustrations.

(a). The right to sue for the hire of a boat accrues to A during his minority. He attains majority four years after such accruer. He may institute his suit at any time within three years from the date of his attaining majority.

(b). A, to whom a right to sue for a legacy has accrued during his minority, attains majority eleven years after such accruer. A has, under the ordinary law, only one year remaining within which to sue. But under this section an extension of two years will be allowed him, making in all a period of three years from the date of his attaining majority, within which he may bring his suit.

(d). A right to sue accrues to X during his minority X dies before attaining majority and is succeeded by Y his minor son. Time runs against Y from the date of his attaining majority.

(e). A right to sue for an hereditary office accrues to A, who at the time is insane. Six years after the accrual A recovers his reason. A has six years, under the ordinary law, from the date when his insanity ceased within which to institute a suit. No extension of time will be given him under this section.

(f). A right to sue as landlord to recover possession from a tenant accrues to A who is an idiot. A dies three years after the accrual, his idiocy continuing up to the date of his death. A's representative in interest has, under the ordinary law, nine years from the date of A's death within which to bring a suit. This section does not extend that time.

Disability of one joint creditor.

8. When one of several joint creditors or claimants is under any such disability, and when a discharge can be given without the concurrence of such person, time will run against them all: but where no such discharge can be given, time will not run as against any of them until they all are free from disability.

Illustrations.

(a) A incurs a debt to a firm of which B, C and D are partners. B is insane and C is a minor. D can give a discharge of the debt without the concurrence of B and C. Time runs against B, C and D.

(b) A incurs a debt to the same firm. B and C are insane, and D is a minor. Time will not run against any of them until they are all free from disability.

Continuous running of time.

9. When once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it:

Provided that where letters of administration to the estate of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt shall be suspended while the administration continues.

Suits against express trustees and their representatives.

10. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his representatives, for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, shall be barred by any length of time.

Explanation.—A purchaser in good faith for value from a trustee is not his representative within the meaning of this section.

Suits on foreign contracts.

11. Suits in British India on contracts entered into in a foreign country are subject to the rules prescribed by this Act.

Foreign limitation law.

12. No foreign rule of limitations shall be a defence to a suit in British India on a contract entered into in a foreign country, unless the rule has extinguished the contract, and the parties were domiciled in such country during the period prescribed by such rule.

PART III.

COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

Exclusion of day on which right to sue accrues.

13. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the day on which the right to sue accrued shall be excluded.

Exclusion in case of appeals and certain applications.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal, an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, an application to the High Court for the admission of a special appeal, and an application for a review of judgment, the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced, and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, sentence or order appealed against or sought to be reviewed, shall be exeluded.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application to set aside an award, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded.

14. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the defendant has been absent from British India shall be excluded, unless service of a summons to appear and answer in the suit can, during such absence, be made under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 60.

Exclusion of time of defendant's absence from British India.

15. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another suit, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the same defendant or some person whom he represents, shall be excluded, where the last-mentioned suit is founded upon the same cause of action, and is instituted in good faith in a Court which from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to try it.

Exclusion of time of suing bonâ fide in Court without jurisdiction.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any application, the time during which the applicant has been making another application for the same relief, shall be excluded, where the last-mentioned application is made in good faith to a Court which from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to grant it.

Like exclusion in case of application.

Explanation 1.—In excluding the time during which a former suit or application was pending or being made, the day on which that suit or application was instituted or made, and the day on which the proceedings therein ended, shall both be counted.

Explanation 2.—A plaintiff resisting an appeal presented on the ground of want of jurisdiction, shall be deemed to be prosecuting a suit within the meaning of this section.

16. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the institution of which has been stayed by injunction or order, the time of the continuance of the injunction or order, shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time during which commencement of suit is stayed by injunction.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit proceedings in which have been stayed by order under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 19, the interval between the institution of the suit and the date of so staying proceedings, and the time requisite for going from the Court in which proceedings are stayed to the Court in which the suit is re-instituted, shall be excluded.

Like exclusion in case of order under Civil Procedure Code, s. 19.

17. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, the time during which the judgment-debtor has been prosecuting a suit to set aside the sale, shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time during which judgment-debtor sues to set aside execution sale.

18. When a person who would, if he were living, have a right to sue, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a representative in interest of the deceased capable of suing.

Effect of death before right to sue accrues.

When a person against whom, if he were living, a right to sue would have accrued, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a representative whom the plaintiff may sue.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the possession of immoveable property or of an hereditary office.

19. When any person having a right to sue has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded,

Effect of fraud.

or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed,

the time limited for commencing a suit,

(a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or,

(b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration,

shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or, in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production.

20. If a promise or acknowledgment in respect of any property or right has been made in writing signed, either personally or through a duly authorized agent, by the party against whom such property or right is claimed, or by some person through whom he derives title or liability, a new period of limitation, according to the nature of the original liability, shall be computed from the time when the promise or acknowledgment was so signed.

Effect of acknowledgment in writing.

When the writing containing the promise or acknowledgment is undated, oral evidence may be given of the time when it was signed. But oral evidence of its contents shall not be received unless it has been destroyed wrongfully by the person on whom the promise or acknowledgment would be binding.

EXPLANATION 1.—For the purposes of this section a promise or acknowledgment may be sufficient, though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right, or avers that the time for payment, delivery or performance has not yet come, or is accompanied by a refusal to pay, deliver or perform or is coupled with a claim to a set-off, or is addressed to any person other than the person entitled to the property or right:

but it must amount to a substantial acknowledgment of liability in respect of the property, or right in question.

EXPLANATION 2.—Nothing in this section renders one of several partners or executors chargeable by reason only of a written promise or acknowledgment signed by another of them.

Illustrations.

Z, a bond-debtor, himself writes a letter promising to pay the debt to his creditor A. Z affixes his seal, but does not sign the letter:

Z pays part of the debt and promises orally to pay the rest:

Z publishes an advertisement, requesting his creditors to bring in their claims for examination:

In none of these cases is the debt taken out of the operation of this Act.

21. When interest on a debt or legacy is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid as such by the person liable to pay the debt or legacy, or by his agent generally or specially authorized in this behalf,

Effect of payment of interest as such.

or when part of the principal of a debt is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid by the debtor or by his agent generally or specially authorized in this behalf,

Effect of part-payment of principal.

a new period of limitation, according to the nature of the original liability, shall be computed from the time when the payment was made:

Provided that, in the case of part-payment of principal, the debt has arisen from a contract in writing and the fact of the payment appears in the hand-writing of the person making the same, on the instrument, or in his own books, or in the books of the creditor.

Where mortgaged land is in the possession of the mortgagee, the delivery and receipt of the produce of such land shall be deemed to be a payment for the purpose of this section.

Effect of delivery and receipt of produce of mortgaged land.

22. When, after the institution of a suit, a new plaintiff or defendant is substituted or added, the suit shall, as regards him, be deemed to have been instituted when he was so made a party:

Effect of substituting or adding new plaintiff or defendant.

Provided that, when a plaintiff dies, and the suit is continued by his representatives in interest, it shall, as regards them, be deemed to have been instituted when it was instituted by the deceased plaintiff:

Proviso where original plaintiff dies.

Provided also, that, when a defendant dies, and the suit is continued against his representatives in interest, it shall, as regards them, be deemed to have been instituted when it was instituted against the deceased defendant.

Proviso where original defendant dies.

23. In the case of a suit for the breach of a contract, where there are successive breaches, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, upon every fresh breach; and where the breach is a continuing breach, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, at every moment of the time during which the breach continues.

Computation where there are successive breaches of contract.

Computation where the breach is continuing.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the breach of contracts for the payment of money by instalments, where, on default made in payment of one instalment, the whole becomes due.

Illustrations.

(a).—A contracts to pay an annuity to B for his life by quarterly instalments. A fails to pay any of the instalments. Here upon every fresh failure, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run; and this Act may bar the remedy on the earlier breaches without affecting the remedy on the later breaches.

24. In the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues.

Continuing wrong.

Illustration.

A diverts B's watercourse. At every moment of the time during which the diversion continues and B retains his right of entry, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run.

25. In the case of a suit for compensation for an act lawful in itself which becomes unlawful in case it causes damage, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the damage accrues.

Suit for compensation for act becoming unlawful.

Illustration.

A owns the surface of a field. B owns the subsoil. B digs coal thereout without causing any immediate apparent injury to the surface, but at last the surface subsides. The period of limitation runs from the time of the subsidence.

26. All instruments shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar.

Computation of time mentioned in instruments.

Illustrations.

(a).—A Hindú makes a promissory note bearing a Native date only, and payable four months after date. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the note runs from the expiry of four months after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

(b).—A Hindú makes a bond, bearing a Native date only, for the repayment of money within one year. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the bond runs from the expiry of one year after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

PART IV.

ACQUISITION OF OWNERSHIP BY POSSESSION.

27. Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years,

Acquisition of right to easements.

and where any way or watercourse, or the use of any water, or any other easement (whether affirmative or negative) has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, or other easement, shall be absolute and indefeasible.

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested.

EXPLANATION.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Illustrations.

(a).—A suit is brought in 1871 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, from 1st January 1850 to 1st January 1870. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b).—In a like suit also brought in 1871 the plaintiff merely proves that he enjoyed the right in manner aforesaid from 1848 to 1868. The suit shall be dismissed, as no exercise of the right by actual user has been proved to have taken place within two years next before the institution of the suit.

(c).—In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff on one occasion during the twenty years had asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed.

Exclusion in favour of reversioner of servient tenement.

28. Provided that, when any land or water upon, over, or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term, shall be excluded in the computation of the said last-mentioned period of twenty years, in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land or water.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C, a deceased Hindú widow, had a life interest in the land, that on C's death B became entitled to the land, and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

Extinguishment of right to property.

29. At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished.

Possession by successive trespassers.

30. Where a series of trespassers adverse to one another and to the rightful owner of any immoveable property or hereditary office take and keep possession thereof for several periods each less than the period so limited, but collectively exceeding such period, the person who is in possession of such property or office when the title of the rightful owner is extinguished shall have a right to such possession.

Nothing in this section shall operate to bar any right to possession which any earlier trespasser may have against any later trespasser who has illegally dispossessed him.

171.—To enforce a judgment, decree or order of any Court established by Royal Charter in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, or an order of Her Majesty in Council. STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The Limitation Act (IX of 1871) contains, directly or indirectly, numerous references to the Code of Civil Procedure. And therefore the revision of the Code, which the Indian Legislature has resumed and hopes soon to complete, entails the revision of the Limitation Act.

2. The object of the present Bill is primarily to adapt the law of limitation to the revised Code; but the opportunity has been taken to make certain amendments which the experience of nearly six years has shown to be desirable. Of these the following are the principal:—

Preliminary.

3. Titles acquired under the old Limitation Act (XIV of 1859) or the present Act (IX of 1871) will be saved.

'Easement' is defined so as to include what is technically called a profit à prendre.

Limitation of Suits, Appeals and Applications.

4. Suits will not be 'instituted' for the purpose of the Act, unless the plaints are stamped in accordance with law.

5. Section 7 has been extended so as to provide for supervenient and successive disabilities.

Computation of Period of Limitation.

6. To section 15 has been added a clause providing for the exclusion of the time during which an applicant has been making a bonâ fide application in a Court unable to grant it.

7. Section 20 (as to the effect of acknowledgments in writing as to debts and legacies) has been extended to promises or acknowledgments in respect of any property or right, and oral evidence of the contents of the writing containing the promise or acknowledgment will not be receivable, unless it has been wrongfully destroyed by the person on whom the promise or acknowledgment would be binding.

8. Section 21 (as to the effect of payment of interest or part-payment of principal) has been made to comprise the case of delivery and receipt of the produce of mortgaged land in the possession of the mortgagee.

9. Section 24 (as to continuing nuisances) has been extended so as to cover all cases of continuing wrongs independent of contract.

Acquisition by Possession of the Ownership of Easements, Land and Hereditary Offices.

10. The exception as to light and air has been struck out of section 28 (as to exclusion in favour of the reversioner of the servient tenement). This exception complicates the law, and the reasons which led to a like exception in the English Prescription Act do not seem to apply to India.

11. Provision has been made in section 30 for the case of a series of trespassers adverse to one another and to the rightful owner of any land or hereditary office, taking and keeping possession thereof for several periods, each less than the period limited by the Act, but collectively exceeding that period. The rule adopted is that the person who is in possession when the title of the rightful owner is extinguished shall have a right to such possession. But the right to possession which any earlier trespasser may have against any later trespasser who has illegally dispossessed him is expressly saved.

The Schedule.

12. The time when the period fixed for the following suits begins to run has been altered as follows:—

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th March 1877 :—

No. 6 of 1877.

A Bill to amend the law relating to assignments from the general Provincial Fund established under the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871.

WHEREAS it is expedient to authorise the Local Government of the North-Western Provinces to provide out of the general Provincial Fund established under the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871, for payment of certain charges incurred or to be incurred on account of canals and railways in the North-Western Provinces ; It is hereby enacted as follows :— Preamble.

1. Section 10 of the said Act shall be repealed, and in lieu thereof the following shall be substituted :— Substitution of new section for section 10 of Act XVIII, 1871.

"10. The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time assign from such Fund such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in payment of charges incurred or to be incurred on account of such canals and railways as he, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may declare to be works of general provincial utility, and he shall from time to time allot from such Fund an amount to be applied in each district for expenditure on all or any of the following purposes :— Assignments from general fund.

(a) the construction, repair and maintenance of roads and communications ;

(b) the maintenance of the rural police and district post ;

(c) the construction and repair of schoolhouses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers, and the establishment of scholarships ;

(d) the construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, markets, wells and tanks ; the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, and any other local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience :

Provided that the amount assigned in respect of such canals and railways shall not exceed ten per cent. of the total sum levied under this Act in the year in which the assignment was made, and that the amount allotted to be applied in each district for expenditure on all or any of the purposes mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of this section shall be at least ninety per cent. of the total sum levied under this Act in such district in the year in which the allotment was made." Proviso.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to make a small amendment of Act No. XVIII of 1871, which provides for the levy, in the North-Western Provinces, of rates on land for local purposes. These rates are in the first instance credited to a general Provincial Fund, from which the Lieutenant-Governor is bound to assign amounts to be applied in each district for certain specified purposes.

These are the construction and maintenance of Roads and Communications ; Rural Police ; District-post ; Education ; Hospitals ; Lunatic Asylums ; Markets ; Wells and Tanks ; and other local works likely to promote the public health, comfort, or convenience : the annual assignment made to each district must not be less than the total amount of local rates levied in it ; but any portion of such assignment which remains unexpended at the end of the year may be spent in any way which the Lieutenant-Governor thinks beneficial to the North-Western Provinces generally.

The principle is thus recognized, that these rates may, in part at least, be expended on objects of provincial utility; and, as a matter of fact, a large portion of them has been so expended. As it is not now wished to increase the burdens on the land, the present Bill proposes to authorize the Local Government to make assignments from the local rates for the purpose of meeting charges on account of Irrigation-works and Railways of provincial utility: the maximum amount of such assignments is fixed at ten per cent. of the total sum levied under the proposed Act, leaving 90 per cent. to be spent as at present; but there is no reason for anticipating that the actual proportion of the rates so assigned will amount to this maximum. The total amount of the local rates levied annually in the North-Western Provinces is about £430,000, and the proposed amendment of the law will not seriously diminish the existing grants for local purposes.

(Power to require returns from Municipalities.)

If the Municipal Committee fails within the period prescribed to make such returns, or if it make such returns, but the Collector of the District has reason to doubt their accuracy, he may at any time cause a return showing the names, numbers, classes and grades aforesaid to be prepared in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government.

Similar measures are in force in many large Indian towns and (under Act XIV of 1867) in the Central Provinces. The principal trades have been classified and graded, and a specific sum is put down against each class and grade: the highest license fees proposed are those on Bankers and wholesale dealers in country-produce, and they vary from Rs. 16 to Rs. 64 a year: other traders will have to pay smaller sums, which are in some cases as low as Rs. 2, and in no case exceed Rs. 32.

CALCUTTA,
The 2nd March 1877.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

[First Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 28th March 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 10 OF 1877.

A Bill to provide for the execution of emergent works in connection with embankments in British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the execution of emergent works in connection with embankments in British Burma; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Embankment Act, 1877:"

Local extent.

It extends to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma; but nothing herein contained applies to embankments belonging to private persons;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Interpretation-clause.

2. In this Act—

"Embankment."

"Embankment" means any embankment constructed for the purpose of excluding, regulating or retaining water, and includes all earthen walls, dams, canals, drains, piers, groins, sluices, buildings, water-gauges, bench-marks and other works subsidiary to any such embankment; and

"Embankment-officer."

"Embankment-officer," used with reference to an embankment, means the officer appointed by the Chief Commissioner to carry out this Act in respect of such embankment.

Circumstances under which this Act may be put in operation.

3. Whenever it appears probable to the embankment-officer that unless some work is quickly executed in connection with an embankment, loss of life or extensive damage to property will ensue, and that the labourers or materials required for the execution of such work cannot be obtained in the ordinary course in time to enable him to execute such work with the expedition necessary in order to avert such loss or damage, he may, by order under his hand, direct that the provisions of this Act shall be put into operation for the execution of such work; and thereupon Power to impress labour.

(a) every able-bodied male person belonging to any class of labourers, and residing in the neighbourhood of such embankment, shall, if required to do so by such officer or by any person authorized by him in this behalf, be bound to assist such officer in the execution of such work by labouring thereon, after the manner of his class or trade, as such officer or any person authorized by him in this behalf may direct; and

Power to take materials.

(b) such officer or any person authorized by him in this behalf may enter upon any immoveable property in the said neighbourhood and take possession of, appropriate and remove, any trees or bamboos, whether standing or not, and any timber, mats, rope or other materials found on such property, and use the same for the purposes of such work.

Payment for labour impressed and materials taken.

4. All persons labouring in compliance with a requisition made under section three, or whose materials may be taken under that section, shall as soon as may be reasonably practicable be paid by the embankment-officer for their labour or for such materials (as the case may be) at such rates not being less than fifteen per cent. above the market-rates for similar labour or materials for the time being prevailing in the said neighbourhood as the Chief Commissioner may from time to time by written order direct.

Compensation for damage done in taking materials.

5. When from the removal of any trees, bamboos or other materials under section three, any damage over and above the price payable for such materials under section four, results directly to any person, the embankment-officer shall pay to such person such sum as may be agreed upon as compensation for such damage, or in case of dispute as to the amount so to be paid, as the Deputy Commissioner of the district may award.

Penalties for trespass on embankments, &c.

6. Where an embankment-officer has been appointed for any embankment, any person who, without the permission of such officer—

(a) grazes any cattle or allows any cattle under his charge to trespass on such embankment, or

(b) cuts or roots out any trees, shrubs or grass growing on such embankment, or

(c) obstructs any drain or sluice connected with such embankment,

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Certain persons to be deemed public servants.

7. Every embankment-officer and every officer authorized by an embankment-officer to act under section three, shall be deemed to be a "public servant" within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The primary object of this Bill is to legalize and regulate the levying of labour when sudden danger threatens embankment-works in floods, and when such labour cannot be hired. The necessity for provisions of this kind became apparent in the Irrawaddy floods of 1875, when some of the embankments were breached and others overflowed. In some cases the people whose property was threatened with injury came forward cheerfully and prevented further disaster; but in others, where the danger was equally real and of greater extent, but not so immediately apparent, great difficulty was experienced in getting the people whose lives and property were jeopardized to assist in any way in saving the works.

The great losses of life and property that have occurred during the last few years all over the world prove that the works esteemed the most perfect are liable to such sudden and unforeseen failures, and almost universal experience proves that the only remedy possible to apply in such cases consists in the labour of the persons most interested being concentrated on the weaker spots under proper direction.

This Bill will therefore legalize a practice which already obtains imperfectly in Burma, and which is general where embankment-works exist.

In drawing up the details of the Bill, attention has been given to Act No. I of 1858 relating to similar works in Madras.

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 28th March 1877:—

We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill for the limitation of suits and for other purposes was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin.

From Financial Department, No. 178, dated 5th May 1873.
„ Government of Bombay, No. 4418, dated 31st July 1875.
Note by Sir R. Garth, C.J., dated 8th March 1876.
„ by Secretary, Legislative Department, dated August 1876.
„ by Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse, dated 22nd October 1876.
From Home Department, No. 1884, dated 18th December 1876.
Observations by Sir R. Garth, C.J., dated 12th January 1877.
Suggestions by Bábu Opendro Nauth Mullick, dated 2nd March 1877.
Remarks by Bábu Abinásh Chandra Bannerjee, Munsif of Agra, dated 7th March 1877.
Note by N. H. Thomson, Esq., dated 23rd March 1877.
From Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, No. 216, dated 19th March 1877, and enclosures.

2. We have postponed the commencement of the proposed Act to 1st October 1877, the day on which the Code of Civil Procedure is to come into force.

3. We have declared that nothing in the proposed Act shall operate to revive any right to sue which was barred under Act IX of 1871.

4. We have struck out as unnecessary the definition of 'minor.'

5. We have extended to appeals and applications, the provisions of section 13 as to excluding the day on which the right to sue accrued.

6. We have also excluded, in the case of appeals, the time necessary for obtaining a copy of the judgment.

7. In computing the period prescribed for any suit, we think that the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting any proceeding (whether it be a suit, an appeal or an application for execution) against the same defendant in a Court unable to entertain it should be excluded.

8. We have made a similar alteration in section 17, so as to exclude the time occupied by a judgment-debtor in setting aside an execution-sale.

9. In the Schedule we have made the following substantial amendments :—

10. We have provided (No. 11) for suits by persons against whom orders are passed under sections 280, 281, 282, 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to establish their right to, or to the present possession of, property comprised in the order.

11. In the case of suits for the restitution of conjugal rights, we think that the refusal mentioned in the third column should be by a husband or wife of full age and sound mind. It is clear, for instance, that the refusal of a minor wife should not make time run against the husband.

12. We have made the No. (104) relating to suits by managers of the joint estates of undivided families apply as well to Muhammadans as to Hindús. In Lower Bengal, the joint family system prevails among both classes of religionists.

13. We have altered Nos. 125, 123 and 124 as follows :—

115. To obtain a declaration that an adoption is invalid	Six years	When the alleged adoption becomes known to the plaintiff.
116. To obtain a declaration that an adoption is valid	Ditto ...	When the rights of the adopted son as such are interfered with.
123. By a person excluded from joint family property to enforce a right to share therein	Twelve years	When the exclusion becomes known to the plaintiff.
124. By a Hindú for arrears of maintenance ...	Ditto ...	When the arrears are payable.
125. By a Hindú for a declaration of his right to maintenance	Ditto ...	When the right is denied.

14. We have struck out No. 135 as being comprised in No. 139, and No. 168 as being now useless.

15. We have provided for application for a re-hearing on an appeal heard ex parte.

16. We have cut down from 90 to 30 days the time allowed a pauper to apply for leave to appeal.

17. We have provided a general clause for applications for which no period is expressly provided.

18. We have made a few changes in wording and arrangement, and we recommend that the Bill thus amended be passed. But first we think that it should be republished.

A Bill for the Limitation of Suits, and for other Purposes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the limitation of suits, appeals and certain applications to Courts; And whereas it is also expedient to provide rules for acquiring by possession the ownership of easements and other property; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preamble.

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called 'The Indian Limitation Act, 1877 :'

Extent of Act.

It extends to the whole of British India; but nothing contained in sections two and three or in Parts II and III applies—

(a) to suits under the Indian Divorce Act, or

(b) to suits under Madras Regulation VI of 1831;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of October 1877.

Repeal of Act IX of 1871.

2. On and from that day Act No. IX of 1871 (An Act for the Limitation of Suits and for other purposes) shall be repealed.

But all references to such Act shall be read as if made to this Act; and nothing herein or in that Act contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired, or to revive any right to sue barred, under that Act or under any enactment thereby repealed.

Notwithstanding anything herein contained, any suit mentioned in No. 143, No. 144 or No. 145 of the schedule hereto annexed, may be brought within five years next after the said first day of October 1877, unless where the period prescribed for such suit by the said Act No. IX of 1871, shall have expired before the completion of the said five years.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

'plaintiff' includes also any person from or through whom a plaintiff derives his right to sue:

'easement' includes also a right, not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another, or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another:

'bill of exchange' includes also a hundí:

'trustee' does not include a benámidár, a mortgagee remaining in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied, or a wrong-doer in possession without title:

'suit' does not include an appeal or an application:

'registered' means duly registered under the law for the registration of documents in force at the time and place of executing the document referred to in the context:

'foreign country' means any country other than British India;

and nothing shall be deemed to be done in 'good faith' which is not done with due care and attention.

PART II.

LIMITATION OF SUITS, APPEALS AND APPLICATIONS.

Dismissal of suits, &c., instituted, &c., after period of limitation.

4. Subject to the provisions contained in sections five to twenty-six (inclusive), every suit instituted, appeal presented, and application made after the period of limitation prescribed therefor by the schedule hereto annexed, shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence.

Explanation.—A suit is instituted in ordinary cases when the plaint, stamped in accordance with the law for the time being in force, is presented to the proper officer: in the case of a pauper, when his application for leave to sue as a pauper is filed; and in the case of a claim against a company which is being wound up by the Court, when the claimant first sends in his claim to the official liquidator.

Illustrations.

(a).—A suit is instituted after the prescribed period of limitation. Limitation is not set up as a defence and judgment is given for the plaintiff. The defendant appeals. The appellate court must dismiss the suit.

(b).—An appeal presented after the prescribed period is admitted and registered. The appeal shall, nevertheless, be dismissed.

5. If the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, presented or made on the day that the Court re-opens:

Proviso where Court is closed when period expires.

Any appeal or application for a review of judgment may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal or making the application within such period.

Proviso as to appeals and applications for review.

6. When, by any special or local law now or hereafter in force in British India, a period of limitation is specially prescribed for any suit, appeal or application, nothing herein contained shall affect or alter the period so prescribed.

Different periods of limitation prescribed by local laws.

And nothing herein contained shall affect the periods of limitation prescribed for appeals from, or applications to review, any decree, order or judgment of a High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.

Appeals from decrees of High Courts on original side.

7. If a person entitled to sue be, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit within the same period after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the schedule hereto annexed.

Legal disability.

When he is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, affected by two disabilities, or when before his disability has ceased he is affected by another disability, he may institute the suit within the same period after both disabilities have ceased as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

Double and successive disabilities.

When his disability continues up to his death, his representative in interest may institute the suit within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

When such representative is at the date of the death affected by any disability, the rules contained in the former part of this section shall apply.

Disability of representative.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disability or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which the suit must be brought.

Illustrations.

(a). The right to sue for the hire of a boat accrues to A during his minority. He attains majority four years after such accruer. He may institute his suit at any time within three years from the date of his attaining majority.

(b). A, to whom a right to sue for a legacy has accrued during his minority, attains majority eleven years after such accruer. A has, under the ordinary law, only one year remaining within which to sue. But under this section an extension of two years will be allowed him, making in all a period of three years from the date of his attaining majority, within which he may bring his suit.

(c). A right to sue accrues to Z during his minority. After the accruer, but while Z is still a minor, he becomes insane. Time runs against Z from the date when his insanity ceases.

(d). A right to sue accrues to X during his minority. X dies before attaining majority and is succeeded by Y his minor son. Time runs against Y from the date of his attaining majority.

(e). A right to sue for an hereditary office accrues to A, who at the time is insane. Six years after the accrual A recovers his reason. A has six years, under the ordinary law, from the date when his insanity ceased within which to institute a suit. No extension of time will be given him under this section.

(f). A right to sue as landlord to recover possession from a tenant accrues to A who is an idiot. A dies three years after the accruer, his idiocy continuing up to the date of his death. A's representative in interest has, under the ordinary law, nine years from the date of A's death within which to bring a suit. This section does not extend that time, except where the representative is himself under disability when the representation devolves upon him.

8. When one of several joint creditors or claimants is under any such disability, and when a discharge can be given without the concurrence of such person, time will run against them all: but where no such discharge can be given, time will not run as against any of them until they all are free from disability.

Disability of one joint creditor.

Illustrations.

(a) A incurs a debt to a firm of which B, C and D are partners. B is insane and C is a minor. D can give a discharge of the debt without the concurrence of B and C Time runs against B, C and D.

(b) A incurs a debt to a firm of which E, F and G are partners. E and F are insane, and G is a minor. Time will not run against any of them until they are all free from disability.

9. When once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it:

Continuous running of time.

Provided that where letters of administration to the estate of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt shall be suspended while the administration continues.

10. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his representatives, for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, shall be barred by any length of time.

Explanation.—A purchaser in good faith for value from a trustee is not his representative within the meaning of this section.

11. Suits instituted in British India on contracts entered into in a foreign country are subject to the rules prescribed by this Act.

Suits on foreign contracts.

12. No foreign rule of limitations shall be a defence to a suit instituted in British India on a contract entered into in a foreign country, unless the rule has extinguished the contract, and the parties were domiciled in such country during the period prescribed by such rule.

Foreign limitation law.

PART III.

COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

13. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application, the day from which such period is to be reckoned shall be excluded.

Exclusion of day on which right to sue accrues.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal, an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, and an application for a review of judgment, the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced, and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, sentence or order appealed against or sought to be reviewed, shall be excluded.

Exclusion in case of appeals and certain applications.

Where a decree is appealed against or sought to be reviewed, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment on which it is founded shall also be excluded.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application to set aside an award, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded.

14. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the defendant has been absent from British India shall be excluded, unless service of a summons to appear and answer in the suit can, during such absence, be made under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 89.

Exclusion of time of defendant's absence from British India.

15. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the defendant or some person whom he represents, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action, and is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

Exclusion of time of proceeding bond fide in Court without jurisdiction.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit proceedings in which have been stayed by order under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 20, the interval between the institution of the suit and the date of so staying proceedings, and the time requisite for going from the Court in which proceedings are stayed to the Court in which the suit is re-instituted, shall be excluded.

Like exclusion in case of order under Civil Procedure Code, s. 20.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any application, the time during which the applicant has been making another application for the same relief, shall be excluded, where the last-mentioned application is made in good faith to a Court which from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to grant it.

Like exclusion in case of application.

Explanation 1.—In excluding the time during which a former suit or application was pending or being made, the day on which that suit or application was instituted or made, and the day on which the proceedings therein ended, shall both be counted.

Explanation 2.—A plaintiff resisting an appeal presented on the ground of want of jurisdiction, shall be deemed to be prosecuting a suit within the meaning of this section.

16. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the institution of which has been stayed by injunction or order, the time of the continuance of the injunction or order, shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time during which commencement of suit is stayed by injunction or order.

17. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, the time during which the judgment-debtor has been prosecuting a proceeding to set aside the sale, shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time during which judgment-debtor is attempting to set aside execution-sale.

18. When a person who would, if he were living, have a right to sue, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a representative in interest of the deceased capable of suing.

Effect of death before right to sue accrues.

When a person against whom, if he were living, a right to sue would have accrued, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a representative whom the plaintiff may sue.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the possession of immoveable property or of an hereditary office.

19. When any person having a right to sue has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded,

Effect of fraud.

or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed,

the time limited for commencing a suit,

(a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or,

(b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration,

shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or, in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production.

Effect of acknowledgment in writing.

20. If before the expiration of the period prescribed for a suit in respect of any property or right a substantial acknowledgment of liability in respect of such property or right has been made in writing signed by the party against whom such property or right is claimed, or by some person through whom he derives title or liability, a new period of limitation, according to the nature of the original liability, shall be computed from the time when the acknowledgment was so signed.

When the writing containing the acknowledgment is undated, oral evidence may be given of the time when it was signed. But oral evidence of its contents shall not be received unless it has been destroyed wrongfully by the person on whom the acknowledgment would be binding.

EXPLANATION 1.—For the purposes of this section an acknowledgment may be sufficient, though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right, or avers that the time for payment, delivery or performance has not yet come, or is accompanied by a refusal to pay, deliver or perform, or is coupled with a claim to a set-off, or is addressed to a person other than the person entitled to the property or right:

EXPLANATION 2.—In this section "signed" means signed either personally or by an agent generally or specially authorised in this behalf.

EXPLANATION 3.—Nothing in this section renders one of several partners or executors chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed by another of them.

Illustrations.

Z, a bond-debtor, himself writes a letter promising to pay the debt to his creditor A. Z affixes his seal, but does not sign the letter:

Z pays part of the debt, making no written record of the fact of the payment, and promises orally to pay the rest:

Z publishes an advertisement, requesting his creditors to bring in their claims for examination:

In none of these cases is the debt taken out of the operation of this Act.

Effect of payment of interest as such.

21. When interest on a debt or legacy is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid as such by the person liable to pay the debt or legacy, or by his agent generally or specially authorized in this behalf, or when part of the principal of a debt is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid by the debtor or by his agent generally or specially authorized in this behalf,

Effect of part-payment of principal.

a new period of limitation, according to the nature of the original liability, shall be computed from the time when the payment was made:

Provided that, in the case of part-payment of principal, the debt has arisen from a contract in writing and the fact of the payment appears in the hand-writing of the person making the same, on the instrument, or in his own books, or in the books of the creditor.

Effect of receipt of produce of mortgaged land.

Where mortgaged land is in the possession of the mortgagee, the receipt of the produce of such land shall be deemed to be a payment for the purpose of this section.

Effect of substituting or adding new plaintiff or defendant.

22. When, after the institution of a suit, a new plaintiff or defendant is substituted or added, the suit shall, as regards him, be deemed to have been instituted when he was so made a party:

Proviso where original plaintiff dies.

Provided that, when a plaintiff dies, and the suit is continued by his representatives in interest, it shall, as regards them, be deemed to have been instituted when it was instituted by the deceased plaintiff:

Proviso where original defendant dies.

Provided also, that, when a defendant dies, and the suit is continued against his representatives in interest, it shall, as regards them, be deemed to have been instituted when it was instituted against the deceased defendant.

Computation where there are successive breaches of contract.

23. In the case of a suit for the breach of a contract, where there are successive breaches, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, upon every fresh breach.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the breach of contracts for the payment of money by instalments, where, on default made in payment of one instalment, the whole becomes due.

Illustration.

(a).—A contracts to pay an annuity to B for his life by quarterly instalments. A fails to pay any of the instalments. Here upon every fresh failure, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run; and this Act may bar the remedy on the earlier breaches without affecting the remedy on the later breaches.

Continuing breaches and wrongs.

24. In the case of a continuing breach of contract and in the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, at every moment of the time during which the breach or the wrong, as the case may be, continues.

Illustrations.

(b).—A diverts B's watercourse. At every moment of the time during which the diversion continues and B retains his right of entry, a fresh right to sue arises and a fresh period of limitation begins to run.

Suit for compensation for act becoming unlawful.

25. In the case of a suit for compensation for an act lawful in itself which becomes unlawful in case it causes damage, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the damage accrues.

Illustration.

A owns the surface of a field. B owns the subsoil. B digs coal thereout without causing any immediate apparent injury to the surface, but at last the surface subsides. The period of limitation runs from the time of the subsidence.

Computation of time mentioned in instruments.

26. All instruments shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar.

Illustrations.

(a).—A Hindú makes a promissory note bearing a Native date only, and payable four months after date. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the note runs from the expiry of four months after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

(b).—A Hindú makes a bond, bearing a Native date only, for the repayment of money within one year. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the bond runs from the expiry of one year after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

PART IV.

ACQUISITION OF OWNERSHIP BY POSSESSION.

Acquisition of right to easements.

and where any way or watercourse, or the use of any water, or any other easement (whether affirmative or negative) has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, or other easement, shall be absolute and indefeasible.

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested.

EXPLANATION.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Illustrations.

(a).—A suit is brought in 1881 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, from 1st January 1860 to 1st January 1880. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b).—In a like suit also brought in 1881 the plaintiff merely proves that he enjoyed the right in manner aforesaid from 1858 to 1878. The suit shall be dismissed, as no exercise of the right by actual user has been proved to have taken place within two years next before the institution of the suit.

(c).—In a like suit the plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff on one occasion during the twenty years had asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed.

(d).—A diverts B's watercourse and claiming title thereto as an easement, peaceably and openly enjoys the same for twenty years without interruption. At the end of that period A's right to the watercourse becomes absolute and indefeasible.

Exclusion in favour of reversioner of servient tenement.

28. Provided that, when any land or water upon, over, or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term, shall be excluded in the computation of the said last-mentioned period of twenty years, in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land or water.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C had a life interest in the land, that on C's death B became entitled to the land, and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

Extinguishment of right to property.

29. At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished.

Possession by successive trespassers.

30. Where a series of trespassers adverse to one another and to the rightful owner of any immoveable property or hereditary office take and keep possession thereof for several periods each less than the period so limited, but collectively exceeding such period, the person who is in possession of such property or office when the title of the rightful owner would have been extinguished had the trespassers not been adverse to one another, shall have a right to such possession.

Nothing in this section shall operate to bar any right to possession which any earlier trespasser may have against any later trespasser who has illegally dispossessed him.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st March 1877:—

No. 8 of 1877.

A Bill to facilitate the admission of Military Lunatics into Asylums.

WHEREAS it is expedient to facilitate the admission of European Military Lunatics into Asylums, and to amend the law now in force with regard to the admission thereto of Native Military Lunatics; It is hereby enacted as follows:— Preamble.

1. This Act may be called the "Military Lunatics Act, 1877:" Short title.

It extends to the whole of British India and, so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the dominions of Native Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty; Local extent.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof. Commencement.

2. Act XXI of 1872 (to facilitate the admission of Native Military Lunatics into Asylums) shall be repealed. Repeal of Act XXI of 1872.

3. Whenever any European officer, Warrant-officer, Non-commissioned officer, soldier or other person subject to the provisions of the Act for punishing Mutiny and Desertion and for the better payment of the Army and their quarters for the time being in force has been declared a lunatic, in accordance with the provisions of the military regulations of the Presidency to which he belongs, and has been ordered to be forwarded to any one of the Presidency-towns, and it appears to one of the Surgeons General, either of the British Forces or of the Indian Medical Service, according to the Presidency and the service to which the said lunatic belongs, that it is inexpedient that he should be removed to England, or that he should be detained in military custody until he can be conveniently sent to England, such Surgeon General may, if he think fit, make an order under his hand for the reception of the said lunatic into the Lunatic Asylum at Bhowanipur, Madras, or Bombay, or such other Lunatic Asylum as may be duly authorized for the purpose by the Governor-General in Council; Procedure in respect of European officer or soldier declared lunatic.

and the officer in charge of such asylum shall receive the lunatic in the asylum, and detain him therein until he is discharged therefrom, in accordance with the local military regulations in force for the time being, or until the Surgeon General applies for his transfer to the military authorities in view to his removal to England.

4. Whenever any Native officer, Non-commissioned officer or soldier appears to be insane, the officer commanding the regiment or detachment to which he belongs shall report the case to the general officer commanding the division or district or force in which such regiment or detachment is serving. Report in case of Native officer or soldier appearing to be insane.

5. Such general officer shall thereupon cause the said Native to be examined by a committee composed of at least two medical officers, or (if this be impracticable) by a regimental committee comprising the officer in command of the wing or squadron to which the Native Examination of Native by committee.

belongs and the medical officer in charge of the corps or detachment of which such wing or squadron forms part.

Procedure on Native being found by committee to be insane.

6. If the said committee or regimental committee (as the case may be) are satisfied that the Native is insane, the officer commanding the division or district or force may, if he thinks fit, make an order under his hand for the reception of the said Native into a Lunatic Asylum, and shall then send him thither under military escort; and the officer in charge of such asylum shall receive the Native into the asylum and detain him therein until he is discharged therefrom in accordance with the local military regulations in force for the time being.

Procedure for discharge of European or Native military lunatic.

7. Whenever it appears to the officer in charge of a Lunatic Asylum that the discharge of a military lunatic, whether European or Native, is necessary either on account of his recovery, or for any other purpose, such person shall be brought before the visitors of the asylum, and on the visitors recording their opinion that the discharge should be made, the general officer commanding the division, district or force, or other officer authorized to order the admission of military lunatics into asylums, shall forthwith direct him to be discharged, and such discharge shall take place in accordance with the local military regulations in force for the time being.

Payment of expenses of lunatic.

8. The Paymaster of the military circle within which any such asylum is situate shall pay to the officer in charge of such asylum the expense of the lodging, maintenance, clothing and medicine or every lunatic, whether European or Native, received and detained under this Act.

Legalization of past receptions in asylum.

9. All military lunatics heretofore received into Lunatic Asylums shall be deemed to have been so received in accordance with law.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

It appears that at present there is no law whatever under which British soldiers afflicted with mental disease can be admitted into, or (when cured) discharged from, Lunatic Asylums in this country; and the primary object of this Bill is to legalize such admission and discharge.

At the same time the opportunity has been taken to amend the law as to the discharge of Native military lunatics. The Bill proposes to repeal Act XXI of 1872 (to facilitate the admission of Native Military Lunatics into Asylums) and re-enact it with the necessary addition.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Embankment Act, 1877:"

Local extent.

It extends to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma; but nothing herein contained applies to embankments belonging to private persons;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Interpretation-clause.

2. In this Act—

"Embankment."

"Embankment" means any embankment constructed for the purpose of excluding, regulating or retaining water, and includes all earthen walls, dams, canals, drains, piers, groins, sluices, buildings, water-gauges, bench-marks and other works subsidiary to any such embankment; and

"Embankment-officer."

"Embankment-officer," used with reference to an embankment, means the officer appointed by the Chief Commissioner to carry out this Act in respect of such embankment.

Circumstances under which this Act may be put in operation.

3. Whenever it appears probable to the embankment-officer that unless some work is quickly executed in connection with an embankment, loss of life or extensive damage to property will ensue, and that the labourers or materials required for the execution of such work cannot be obtained in the ordinary course in time to enable him to execute such work with the expedition necessary in order to avert such loss or damage, he may, by order under his hand, direct that the provisions of this Act shall be put into operation for the execution of such work; and thereupon

Power to impress labour.

(a) every able-bodied male person belonging to any class of labourers, and residing in the neighbourhood of such embankment, shall, if required to do so by such officer or by any person authorized by him in this behalf, be bound to assist such officer in the execution of such work by labouring thereon, after the manner of his class or trade, as such officer or any person authorized by him in this behalf may direct; and

Power to take materials.

(b) such officer or any person authorized by him in this behalf may enter upon any immoveable property in the said neighbourhood and take possession of, appropriate and remove, any trees or bamboos, whether standing or not, and any timber, mats, rope or other materials found on such property, and use the same for the purposes of such work.

Payment for labour impressed and materials taken.

4. All persons labouring in compliance with a requisition made under section three, or whose materials may be taken under that section, shall as soon as may be reasonably practicable be paid by the embankment-officer for their labour or for such materials (as the case may be) at such rates not being less than fifteen per cent. above the market-rates for similar labour or materials for the time being prevailing in the said neighbourhood as the Chief Commissioner may from time to time by written order direct.

Compensation for damage done in taking materials.

5. When from the removal of any trees, bamboos or other materials under section three, any damage over and above the price payable for such materials under section four, results directly to any person, the embankment-officer shall pay to such person such sum as may be agreed upon as compensation for such damage, or in case of dispute as to the amount so to be paid, as the Deputy Commissioner of the district may award.

Penalties for trespass on embankments, &c.

6. Where an embankment-officer has been appointed for any embankment, any person who, without the permission of such officer—

(a) grazes any cattle or allows any cattle under his charge to trespass on such embankment, or

(b) cuts or roots out any trees, shrubs or grass growing on such embankment, or

(c) obstructs any drain or sluice connected with such embankment,

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Certain persons to be deemed public servants.

7. Every embankment-officer and every officer authorized by an embankment-officer to act under section three, shall be deemed to be a "public servant" within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The primary object of this Bill is to legalize and regulate the levying of labour when sudden danger threatens embankment-works in floods, and when such labour cannot be hired. The necessity for provisions of this kind became apparent in the Irrawaddy floods of 1875, when some of the embankments were breached and others overflowed. In some cases the people whose property was threatened with injury came forward cheerfully and prevented further disaster; but in others, where the danger was equally real and of greater extent, but not so immediately apparent, great difficulty was experienced in getting the people whose lives and property were jeopardized to assist in any way in saving the works.

The great losses of life and property that have occurred during the last few years all over the world prove that the works esteemed the most perfect are liable to such sudden and unforeseen failures, and almost universal experience proves that the only remedy possible to apply in such cases consists in the labour of the persons most interested being concentrated on the weaker spots under proper direction.

This Bill will therefore legalize a practice which already obtains imperfectly in Burma, and which is general where embankment-works exist.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making laws and Regulations on the 14th June 1877:—

No. 11 of 1877.

A Bill to amend the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to exempt from the operation of the fourth section of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, certain suits instituted in the Districts mentioned in the Schedule hereto annexed; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Addition to section 5, Act X of 1876.

1. To section five of the said Act the following clause shall be added (namely)—

"and nothing in section four shall be held to prevent the Civil Courts in the Districts mentioned in the second Schedule hereto annexed from exercising such jurisdiction as, according to the terms of Acts No. XI of 1852, No. XXVI of 1871, and Bombay Acts No. II of 1863, No. VII of 1863 and No. III of 1874, or of any other law in force on the twenty-eighth day of March 1876, they could have exercised over claims against Government—

"(a) relating to any property appertaining to the office of any hereditary officer appointed or recognised under Bombay Act No. III of 1874, or any other law for the time being in force, or of any other village-officer or servant:

"(b) to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land-revenue:

"(c) to receive payments charged on, or payable out of, the land-revenue."

Schedule added to Act X of 1876.

2. The following Schedule shall be added to the said Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, (namely)—

"THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

The District of Ahmedabad.

The District of Kaira, exclusive of the Panch Mahals.

The District of Broach.

The District of Surat, exclusive of the lapsed State of Mándvi, as described in the schedule annexed to Act X of 1848.

The District of Tanna.

The District of Colába, exclusive of the lapsed State of Colába mentioned in Act VIII of 1853.

The District of Ratnágiri.

The District of Kanara."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), section 4, sub-section (a), article 1, and sub-section (f), article 1 and 2, withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in every part of the Bombay Presidency (1) claims against Government relating to property appertaining to the office of any hereditary officer appointed or recognized under Bombay Act III of 1874, or any other law for the time being in force, or of any other village-officer or servant, and (2) claims against Government to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land-revenue, or to receive payments charged on, or payable out of, the land-revenue.

2. The object of this Bill is to restore to the Civil Courts, so far as the Old Provinces are concerned, whatever jurisdiction has been taken away by the articles above referred to.

3. The reasons for the Bill are shortly as follows: In the Old Provinces the Courts had, to a certain extent, cognizance of the claims in question; obscure and disputed claims to exemption from land-revenue or from enhanced assessments are commoner there than in other parts of India; and for these and other causes the change effected by the articles above mentioned is distasteful to the population.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th June 1877:—

No. 12 OF 1877.

A Bill to amend the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876.

Preamble.

FOR the purpose of amending the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act No. VI of 1876; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Amendment of Act VI of 1876, section 12, clause 2.

1. For the word "six" shall be substituted the word "twelve" in the second clause of the twelfth section of the said Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Government of Bengal being of opinion that the period of six months provided by section 12 of the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876, is too short for deciding whether an estate should be retained under management or relinquished under that section, the period of six months is, by the amending Bill, increased to twelve months, which period it is believed will be sufficient for the purpose.

And it shall come into force on the day of 1878. (Commencement.)

2. On and from that day the enactments specified in the first schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof. (Repeal of Acts.)

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect— (Saving of certain rights, liabilities, &c.)

OF ASSURANCES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

5. Immoveable property may be granted with the right to an easement affecting any other immoveable property belonging to the grantor, or subject to an easement for the benefit of any other property. (Conveyance of easements.)

Easements may be made the subject of separate grants.

Where any easement is actually enjoyed with any property the subject of any grant, the grant shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, be deemed to pass such easement.

6. Immoveable property may be granted subject to an obligation for the benefit of the public or of any neighbouring owner. (Power to convey subject to obligation for benefit of public or neighbour.)

Such obligation shall bind the grantee and all persons claiming the granted property under him, and may be the subject of a separate grant.

Whenever such an obligation is created for the benefit of the public, it may be enforced by the grantor and his legal representatives or by the Government as a civil right.

Illustrations.

(b). A grants certain land to Z, subject to the condition that Z shall for ever maintain thereon a fountain for the use of travellers.

In each case either A or the Government may enforce the obligation against Z, and all persons claiming the land under him.

7. Immoveable property may be granted with the reservation of any right of using the same or of severing and removing any part thereof. Such rights may be the subject of separate grant. (Power to convey with reservation of certain rights.)

Illustrations.

(a). A may grant to B his lands of Rámnagar, reserving to himself the right to dig for and remove the coal and other minerals thereon, and to do in person, or by his servants, whatever is necessary for obtaining and removing the coal and other minerals.

(b). A may grant to B, by a separate assurance, the right to plant fruit-trees on A's lands of Rámnagar, and to gather the fruit.

8. An assurance may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention thereby, and without any further act, to grant any interest in immoveable property. (Form of assurance.)

9. The rules of construction which apply to testamentary instruments shall also be applicable to assurances, so far as the different nature of assurances will permit. (Application of rules of construction.)

10. Unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, a grant shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the subject of the grant, and to comprise— (Operation of assurance.)

(a) trees and all other products of the soil ;

(b) things affixed to the soil, and, in the case of machinery so affixed, the moveable parts thereof ;

(c) in the case of a house, the locks, keys, bars, doors and windows, and a covenant by the grantee concerning the subject of the assurance binds all persons claiming such subject under the grantee, and may be enforced by all persons claiming under the grantor, and a like covenant by the grantor binds all persons claiming the subject under the grantor, and may be enforced by all persons claiming under the grantee. (Covenants concerning its subject.)

CHAPTER III.

OF SALES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

11. Unless a contrary intention appears from the assurance or, when no assurance has been made, from the contract, the seller and the buyer of immoveable property respectively possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the nine rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property sold : (Rights and liabilities of seller and buyer.)

(a). If the buyer, or any person claiming under him, suffers loss by reason of any invalidity of the seller's title not known to the buyer when the contract was entered into, the seller, or, where the seller is not the person for whose benefit the consideration was received, then such other person, is responsible for the loss so suffered.

(b). The seller has a charge upon the property for the amount of the purchase-money, or any part thereof, remaining unpaid ; but as soon as the assurance (if any) is registered, such charge shall cease.

EXPLANATION.—Money for which a bill of exchange has been taken remains unpaid, within the meaning of this clause, until the bill is paid.

(c). After the contract has been made, the seller is entitled to the rents and profits of the property until the time fixed for the completion of the sale, and if he has received any such rents and profits which accrued after that time, he must on completion account for them to the buyer. The buyer must, on completion, pay to the seller interest on the purchase-money from the time fixed for the completion of the sale. But this is not to preclude either party from obtaining compensation where loss has been occasioned by the default or delay of the other party.

(d). The buyer is entitled to a charge on the property for the amount of any purchase-money properly paid by him in anticipation of the completion of the sale.

(e). In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation the seller is not answerable for any latent defect in the property sold.

(g). The seller is bound to execute a proper assurance of the property when the buyer tenders it to him for execution at a proper time and place.

(h). When the buyer has been let into beneficial possession of the property pending discussions as to the seller's title thereto, and the contract is not completed owing to defects in such title, the buyer is not liable to pay for his use of the property.

(i). When the completion of the contract is delayed by the buyer, and, after the day fixed for completing it, the seller expends money on the property, the seller is entitled to recover the amount so expended, provided that such expenditure was required for the preservation of the property, or by any law for the time being in force.

12. Save as provided by section 11, clause (b), a contract for the sale of, or relating to, immoveable property, whether registered or not, shall not have the effect of creating any interest in, or charge on, such property ; but the only right of any person under the contract shall be to apply for specific performance, or for compensation, or for both, according to the rules laid down in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, and the Specific Relief Act, 1877. (Contract for sale not of itself to create interest in property.)

13. A person paying the consideration for any immoveable property, but having the transfer of it made to another person, is not, by reason of such payment, entitled to such property or to any interest therein. (Purchase of immoveable property which buyer causes to be transferred to another.)

CHAPTER IV.

OF MORTGAGES AND CHARGES.

Mortgage, mortgagor and mortgagee defined.

14. When any interest in specific property is actually or contingently transferred by one person to another for the purpose of securing the payment of money, the transfer is called a mortgage, the transferor is called a mortgagor, the transferee a mortgagee, the money of which payment is secured is called the mortgage-money, and the instrument (if any) by which the transfer is effected is called a mortgage-deed.

For the purposes of this chapter, any person claiming as heir, legatee, assignee, lessee or otherwise the interest of the transferor in the property subject to the mortgage, or any part of such interest, is a mortgagor; and any person claiming as heir, legatee, assignee or otherwise the interest of the transferee under the mortgage, or any part thereof, is a mortgagee.

EXPLANATION.—A judgment-creditor who attaches any mortgaged property or mortgage-money claims under the transferor or transferee (as the case may be) within the meaning of the second paragraph of this section.

Illustrations.

(a). A binding himself personally for the repayment of a loan, pledges certain land to B as collateral security for such repayment, but does not actually deliver possession.

(b). A not so binding himself, pledges certain land as in illustration (a), and covenants that in default of payment of the loan on a certain date the land pledged shall pass to B.

(c). A borrows money from B, and gives up certain land to B that he may retain possession thereof until he has from the rents and profits of the land repaid himself the sum so lent.

(d). A binding himself as in illustration (a), pledges certain land to B as a collateral security for the repayment, and permits B to receive the rents and profits of the land until he has repaid himself the loan, but does not actually deliver possession.

(e). A not so binding himself covenants that on default of payment of the loan on a certain date the land pledged shall pass to B. A meanwhile puts B into possession of the land, and allows him to receive the rents and profits in discharge of the loan.

(f). A charges certain land in favour of B with Rs. 1,000 and interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.

(g). A charges a certain fund in favour of B with the amount which shall be due to him on the balance of A's account not exceeding Rs. 1,000, together with interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.

(h). A borrows Rs. 10,000 from B and conveys certain land to B in trust that the same shall stand charged with the payment to B of the Rs. 10,000 and interest and subject thereto in trust for C and others, and the deed confers express power on B in default of payment to sell the land.

Each of these transactions is a mortgage. A is the mortgagor, B the mortgagee.

(i). A, in consideration of a loan of money paid to him by B, makes over his land to B for a term of twenty years, but does not bind himself to pay to B principal or interest. This is not a mortgage.

Respective rights of mortgagor and mortgagee.

15. On the completion of a mortgage the mortgagor has the following rights:—

(a) he may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable, or has been paid, and before his right to redeem the mortgaged property is foreclosed or the property is sold, institute a suit (hereinafter called a suit for redemption) to have the mortgaged property retransferred to him;

(b) he may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable and before such suit is barred, tender to the mortgagee or deposit in the principal Civil Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate, to the account of the mortgagee, the whole amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

And the mortgagee has the following rights:—

(c) he may take possession of the mortgaged property at or after the time, if any, specified in the mortgage-deed for payment of the mortgage-money, or, if no time is so specified, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable to him;

(d) he may, at any time after he is entitled to take possession of the mortgaged property, and before it is redeemed, institute a suit against the mortgagor (1) for a foreclosure of his right to redeem the property, with or without possession thereof, or (2) for a sale of the property, or (3) for either of such remedies;

(e) where the mortgagor deposits money in court under clause (b) of this section, the Court shall forthwith cause written notice of the deposit to be served on the mortgagee, and the mortgagee may, on depositing the mortgage-deed (if any) in the same Court and on filing a written statement (verified in manner prescribed by law for the verification of plaints) of the amount due to him under the mortgage, apply for and receive in payment of such amount the money so deposited;

(f) if at the date of the mortgage the mortgaged property is insured against fire, the mortgagee, in case of damage to the property by fire, may (in the absence of a contract to the contrary) require the insurance-money to be laid out in reinstating the property.

Rights and duties of mortgagee in possession.

16. When, during the continuance of the mortgage, the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property, he has the following duties and rights:—

(a) he shall manage the property as a person of ordinary prudence would manage it if it were his own;

(b) he shall collect all rents and other profits arising out of the property;

(c) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, pay out of the income of the property the Government revenue and all other charges of a public nature due in respect thereof and keep down the interest due on all mortgages of the property prior to his own, and on all mortgages of the property subsequent to his own, of which he has notice;

(d) he may spend such money as is necessary for the due management and preservation of the property and add it to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(e) where the property is by its nature insurable, he may insure and keep insured from loss or damage by fire the whole or any part of such property, and add the premiums paid for any such insurance to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(f) he shall keep accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee;

(g) he shall, at any time during the continuance of the mortgage, give the mortgagor, at his request and cost, true copies of such accounts and of the vouchers by which they are supported.

Receipts of mortgagee in possession.

17. When the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, unless there is an express contract in writing between the mortgagee and the mortgagor that his net receipts therefrom shall, so long as the mortgagee is in possession thereof, be taken in lieu of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage, such receipts shall be debited against him in reduction of the amount (if any) from time to time due to him on account of interest on the principal sum so secured, or, so far as such receipts exceed any interest due, in reduction of such principal sum.

Injunctions to restrain waste.

18. Where the mortgagor remains in possession of the mortgaged property or any part thereof, and commits or threatens to commit waste thereon, the mortgagee may obtain an injunction to stay the waste: provided that the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by the waste complained of. Where the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property or any part thereof and commits or threatens to commit waste thereon, the mortgagor may obtain an injunction to stay the waste.

EXPLANATION.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of houses, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money.

Foreclosure and Sale.

Preliminary decree in foreclosure-suit.

19. In a suit for foreclosure or sale, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree, ordering—

(a) that an account be taken of what will be due to the mortgagee for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit, on the day next hereinafter referred to,

(b) that, upon the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into Court the amount so due, on a day within six months from the date of the decree, to be fixed by the Court, the mortgagor shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee free from all incumbrances created by the mortgagee or any person claiming under him, or, where the mortgagee claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims; but

(c) that, if such payment is not made on or before such day, the mortgagor shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

If payment is so made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section 30, the mortgagor shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

Procedure in case of payment of amount due and subsequent costs.

If such payment is not so made, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to apply to the Court for a decree for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the Court may then pass a decree ordering the defendant to be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the mortgagee; and thereupon the mortgagor's right to redeem and the debt secured by the mortgage shall both be extinguished.

Final decree for foreclosure.

Power to order sale at instance of mortgagee.

20. In any suit by the mortgagee under this chapter, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff, decree that in default of the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into court the amount for the time being due on the mortgage and the plaintiff's costs of the suit, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into court and applied in payment of what is due for the time being to the plaintiff on the mortgage, and that the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Power to decree sale in foreclosure-suit.

21. When the mortgagee sues only for a foreclosure, the Court may, at the instance of the mortgagor, decree that in default of such payment, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, if (a) the Court considers that the mortgagee will not be damnified thereby, and (b) the mortgagor furnishes such security, if any, as the Court thinks fit for the payment of the balance due for the time being by him on the mortgage.

Mortgagee not to bid at sale.

22. At any sale under section 20 or section 21, the mortgagee shall not bid for or acquire any interest in the property sold without the leave of the Court, or without submitting to such conditions as the Court may impose.

Recovery of balance due on mortgage.

23. If the nett proceeds of any such sale are insufficient to pay the amount due for the time being on the mortgage, the balance may be recovered in the same suit in the same manner as under a decree for money, or by any other legal process open to the mortgagee.

Power of sale.

24. Power may be expressly conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee to sell or concur in selling the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, on default made in payment of any principal money or interest, payment of which is secured by the mortgage-deed. But in exercising such a power, the mortgagee shall be subject to the following rules (namely)—

(a) he shall use all reasonable diligence to obtain a fair price for the property:

(b) no such sale shall be made (1) until after six months' notice in writing of the intended sale has been given to the mortgagor, or (2) after the amount for the time being due on the mortgage has been paid or tendered to the mortgagee by or on behalf of the mortgagor, or (3) pending a suit for redemption of the property, or (4) so as to give the mortgagee any interest in the property.

When a sale has been effected in professed exercise of any such power, the title of the purchaser shall not be liable to be impeached on the ground that no such default had been made or that the rules so prescribed had not been complied with.

Receipts for purchase-money given by the mortgagee exercising such power shall discharge the purchasers therefrom.

The proceeds of every such sale shall be applied as follows:—

first, in defraying the expenses incident to the sale, or properly incurred in any attempted sale under the power;

secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being due on the mortgage; and thirdly, the surplus (if any) of the said proceeds shall be paid to the mortgagor.

Redemption.

25. In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree for taking the accounts, as provided by section 19, between the mortgagor and mortgagee, and directing that upon the mortgagor paying within six months from the date of the decree to the mortgagee or into Court what (if anything) is found due to the mortgagee for principal, interest and costs, the mortgagee shall re-convey the mortgaged property to the mortgagor, free from the mortgage, and from all incumbrances created by the mortgagee or any persons claiming under him, and that if such amount is not so paid, the plaintiff's suit shall thenceforth stand dismissed, and that he shall be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property.

Preliminary decree in redemption-suit.

26. If the mortgagee fail to perform any of the duties imposed upon him by section 16, he may, when the said accounts are taken, be debited with the loss, if any, occasioned by such failure.

Loss occasioned by mortgagee's default.

27. If on taking the accounts nothing is found due to the mortgagee, or if the amount found due together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section 30 is paid according to the decree, the mortgagor shall, if necessary, be put into possession of the property. But if such amount and costs are not so paid, the mortgagor shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem the property, and the Court shall, if necessary, deliver possession thereof to the mortgagee.

Procedure where nothing due or amount paid.

Procedure when amount due is not paid.

Interest.

28. When the mortgagor and mortgagee have contracted as to the payment of interest on the principal money for the time being due to the mortgagee under the mortgage, interest shall be payable in accordance with such contract: Provided that where the mortgagor has tendered or deposited in Court the whole amount due to the mortgagee, such interest shall cease from the date of the tender or from the time when the mortgagee could take such amount out of Court, as the case may be.

Payment of interest.

Proviso.

Costs.

29. The mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to add to his debt his costs properly incurred of any suit under this chapter. But such costs, or any part thereof, may be disallowed if the mortgagor has tendered to the mortgagee or has deposited in Court the whole amount due to him under the mortgage, and if the mortgagee has unreasonably refused to accept such tender or to take such money out of Court in discharge of his claim, or if he has prevented a mortgagor willing and able to make such tender or deposit from making it by refusing or neglecting to give him proper information as to the state of the accounts required to be kept under section 16.

Costs of mortgagee.

30. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a redemption or a sale by the Court under this chapter, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the principal debt such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure, redemption or sale up to the time of actual payment.

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree.

Deposit of Title-deeds.

31. The deposit of title-deeds with intent to create a mortgage on the property comprised therein, but without actual transfer of such property, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract for a mortgage of the property, and shall entitle the depositee merely to institute a suit for specific performance of such contract.

Effect of deposit of title-deeds.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

32. If any property the sale of which is directed under this chapter is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, order that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

33. Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows:

Application of proceeds.

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, if the property has been sold free from any prior mortgage, in payment of whatever is due on account of such mortgage;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made;

fourthly, in payment of all principal moneys due on account of that mortgage; and fifthly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proved to be interested in the property sold, or if there be more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein.

34. If a mortgage made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a subsequent mortgage on the same property shall, if made with notice of the prior mortgage, be postponed to the prior mortgage in respect of all advances or debits not exceeding the maximum, though made or allowed with notice of the subsequent mortgage.

Mortgage to secure balance of account.

Illustration.

A gives to his bankers, B & Co., a charge on Sultánpur to secure the balance of his account with them to the extent of Rs. 10,000. A then gives to C a charge on Sultánpur to secure Rs. 10,000; and C gives notice thereof to B & Co. At the date of the second charge, the balance due to B & Co. does not exceed Rs. 5,000. B & Co. subsequently advance to A sums making the balance of the account against him exceed the sum of Rs. 10,000. B & Co. are entitled, to the extent of Rs. 10,000, to priority over C.

35. Any person having an interest in mortgaged immoveable property may, at any time before a sale of such property has taken place under this chapter, tender to the next prior mortgagee the amount due to him on account of his mortgage. Such mortgagee is bound to accept such tender and to give a receipt for the sum due, and on such receipt being registered, his interest in the property in respect of the mortgage shall absolutely cease.

Right to pay off mortgagee in order to prevent sale.

36. In such case, where the person making the tender has, subject to the mortgage, the absolute ownership of the property, the mortgage shall cease to exist and the property shall vest in the person making such tender.

Effect of such payment by person having which interest in property charged.

Effect of payment by person only partially interested.

38. No mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original security. And no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such subsequent advance.

Tacking abolished.

39. If the owner of two or more properties creates separate mortgages on them by separate assurances, each mortgage may be dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

Redemption of one of two properties separately mortgaged.

Illustration.

A, the owner of farms Z and Y, mortgages Z to B for Rs. 1,000. A afterwards mortgages Y to B for Rs. 1,000, making no stipulation as to any additional charge on Z. A may institute a suit for the redemption of the mortgage on Z alone.

40. If property subject to a mortgage, or the right to receive mortgage-money, be transferred to a third person, the transferee has all the rights and powers of his transferor, under the mortgage, and is subject to the liabilities existing between his transferor and the mortgagor or mortgagee, as the case may be.

Rights and powers of transferee of mortgage-debt or mortgaged property.

Where such a transfer is made for the purpose of securing the payment of money, the original mortgage-debt, if recovered by either the transferor or the transferee, is applicable, first, in payment of the costs of such recovery, secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being secured by the transfer; and the residue, if any, belongs to the transferor.

41. If by any assurance other than a mortgage-deed, or by any will, or under the provisions of this or any other Act, or by operation of law, certain property of one person is made security for the payment of certain money to another, all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagor shall apply to the owner of such property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagee shall apply to the owner of such money.

Charge made by assurance or will.

CHAPTER V.

OF LEASES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

42. A lease may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention of the parties to give and take, for rent or a fine, possession of, or profits derived from, immoveable property, for a time shorter in duration than the lessor's interest therein.

Form of written lease.

43. Where the time limited by a lease is expressed as commencing from a particular day, in computing that time such day shall be excluded.

Exclusion of day on which term commences.

Where the time so limited is a year or a number of years, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, the lease shall last during the whole anniversary of the day on which such time commences.

Duration of term.

Where the time so limited is expressed to be determinable before its expiration, and there is no express agreement as to the party having the option of determining it, the lessee shall have such option.

Option to determine lease.

44. Unless a contrary intention appears from the lease, the lessor and the lessee, as against one another, respectively possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the twenty-two rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property leased:—

Rights and liabilities of lessor and lessee.

(a). During the continuance of the lease, the lessee is entitled to the enjoyment of all lights, waters, water-courses, drains, ways and other easements enjoyed as incident to the property leased at the time when the lease was made.

(b). The lessor is bound to put the lessee in possession of the property leased, and to deliver it to him in a condition reasonably fit for the purpose for which both parties contemplate that the lessee is to use it.

(c). If the lessee is, by reason of the invalidity of the lessor's title, or by any act or default of the lessor, or of any person claiming under him, or of any person claiming by a superior title to his, disturbed in the peaceable enjoyment of the property leased, the lessee is entitled to compensation from the lessor for any loss thereby caused, and may also obtain from any Court of competent jurisdiction a decree for the rescission of the lease.

(d). If the lessee is, by reason of the invalidity of the lessor's title, deprived of any substantial part of the property leased, or of anything essential to his enjoyment thereof, he is entitled to compensation from the lessor for any loss thereby caused, and may also obtain from any Court of competent jurisdiction a decree for the rescission of the lease.

(e). In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation, the lessor is not answerable for any latent defect in the thing leased.

(f). The lessor is bound to do all things necessary for maintaining the roof, walls, beams, floors, stairs and drains of any house or other building comprised in the lease, and may for that purpose enter such building at all reasonable times.

(g). In all other respects the lessee is bound to keep, and at the end of the lease to restore, the property leased in as good condition as it was in at the time when he was put in possession, subject only to reasonable wear and tear.

(h). Deteriorations arising from want of painting or plastering, or from breaking of glass, are not to be considered as wear and tear, but shall be made good by the lessee.

(i). If by fire, tempest or flood, or violence of an army or of a mob, or other superior force, any part of the property leased be wholly destroyed or rendered substantially unfit for the purposes for which it was let, the obligation of the lessor as to that part shall cease unless he consents to reinstate the part so destroyed or rendered unfit; but in case of refusal or neglect to reinstate the same, the lessee shall be entitled to be discharged from his lease.

If the injury be occasioned by the wrongful act of either party, such party shall not be entitled to avail himself of the benefit of this provision.

(j). In case any rent remains unpaid at the end of a month from the time when it was payable and demanded, or in case within a reasonable time after notice default is made by the lessee in the performance of any of his other obligations under the lease, the lessor may institute a suit for a decree for the rescission of the lease and for possession of the property leased, unless the lessee shall, within a time to be specified by the Court, pay such arrears and perform such obligations, and also pay all costs and expenses sustained by the lessor through the lessee's default.

(k). In case the lease is rescinded for the default of the lessee, he is bound to pay the rent up to the time of such rescission, and also to make compensation for any other loss resulting from his default.

(l). If the lessor neglects to make, within a reasonable time after notice, repairs which he ought to make, the lessee may make the same himself, and deduct the expense of such repairs from the rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor.

(m). If the lessor neglects to make any payment which he is bound to make, and which if not made is recoverable against the property leased, the lessee may make such payment himself, and deduct it from his rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor.

(n). Every lessee who receives notice of any proceeding to recover the property leased to him or any part thereof, is bound to give notice thereof to the lessor with reasonable diligence; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission.

(o). The lessee is bound to give notice to the lessor, within a reasonable time, of any encroachment made upon, or any interference with the lessor's rights concerning, the property leased; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission.

(p). The lessee may use the soil and its products for all purposes of enjoyment as a reasonable owner would use them: but he may not destroy them wastefully, nor remove them after the expiration of the lease.

(q). No lessee of immoveable property who erects thereon any building, engine or machinery for agricultural purposes shall remove the same without first giving to the lessor or his agent one month's previous notice in writing of his intention so to do, and thereupon the lessor or his agent may elect to purchase the thing so proposed to be removed, and the lessee's right to remove the same shall thereby cease, and the same shall belong to the lessor, and the value thereof shall in case of dispute be ascertained and determined by two referees, one to be chosen by each party, or by an umpire to be named by such referees, and shall be paid or allowed in account by the lessor.

(r). Subject to the provisions of clause (q) and clause (q), the lessee has a right to remove at any time during his possession of the property leased, or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things not being products of the soil which he has affixed to the soil.

(s). When a lease of land determines in consequence of an uncertain event over which the lessee has no control, the lessee is entitled to all the crops growing upon the land for the season current when the lease determines, and to free ingress, egress and regress to reap and carry them.

(t). Upon the death of the lessor or of the lessee, his legal representative shall have all the rights and be subject to all liabilities of the lessor or lessee whom he represents.

(u). If the lessor transfers the property leased, or any part thereof, or any part of his interest therein, the transferee shall possess all the rights and, if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities of the lessor as to the property or part transferred so long as he is the owner of it; but the lessor shall not by reason only of such transfer cease to be subject to any of the liabilities imposed upon him by the lease, unless the lessee elects to treat the transferee as the person liable to him: Provided that if the lessee pay rent to the lessor without having reason to believe that such transfer has been made, he shall not be liable to pay such rent over again to the transferee.

Where only a part of the property leased is transferred by the lessor, he may determine what proportion of the rent reserved by the lease is payable in respect of the part so transferred.

(v). The lessee has a right to transfer his lease. The transferee may again transfer it. The lessee shall not, by reason of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities attaching to the lease, unless the lessor elects to treat the transferee as the person subject to such liabilities. Subject as aforesaid, each successive transferee, so long as he is entitled to the property leased, possesses all the rights, and is subject to all the liabilities, of the lessee.

45. Nothing in this Act shall affect any right to distrain which a lessor may exercise under any local law for the time being in force.

Saving of right to distrain.

46. In the absence of any written agreement and of any local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of property for purposes of cultivation shall be a lease from year to year terminable by six months' notice ending with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of property for any other purpose shall be a lease from month to month, terminable by fifteen days' notice ending with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Duration of certain leases in absence of written agreement or local usage.

Every notice under this section must be in writing signed by or on behalf of the party giving it and served on the party who is intended to be bound by it.

47. If a lessee of property remains in possession thereof after the expiration of the lease, and the lessor accepts rent from him, or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession, the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year or from month to month, according to the purpose for which the property is leased, as specified in the last preceding section.

Effect of holding over.

Illustrations.

(a). A lets a house to B for five years. B sub-lets the house to C at a monthly rent of Rs. 100. The five years expire, but C continues in possession of the house and pays the rent to A. C's lease is renewed from month to month.

(b). A lets a farm to B for the life of C. C dies, but B continues in possession with A's assent. B's lease is renewed from year to year.

CHAPTER VI.

OF EXCHANGES.

48. Exchange is a contract by which the parties mutually give, or agree to give, one thing for another, neither thing or both things being money only.

"Exchange" defined.

Rights and obligations of parties.

On an exchange of money, each party thereby warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Exchange of money.

CHAPTER VII.

OF SETTLEMENTS.

49. "Settlement" means in this chapter any disposition of property—

"Settlement" defined.

(a) which is not testamentary, and is not founded on any valuable consideration, or

(b) which is made in consideration of marriage, or

(c) which is made for the purpose of dividing property of the settlor among his family or those for whom he desires to provide,

but does not include a gift made by a Hindú Muhammadan or Buddhist.

50. In order that a settlement should be binding, it is not necessary that it should be made for a consideration.

Consideration not necessary to make settlement binding.

51. A settlement made for the purpose of depriving present or future creditors or other persons having demands against the settlor, of their demands on him, is voidable at the option of such creditors or other persons, and so far as regards the demands of such creditors or other persons, but not as against a person who, having no knowledge of the purpose for which the settlement was made, has contracted for or acquired an interest therein by marriage or for other valuable consideration, nor as against claimants under such persons. Such settlement is nevertheless binding on the settlor and on all persons claiming under him.

Voidability of settlement made in fraud of creditors.

EXPLANATION.—Where there is no positive evidence of fraud, the intent to deprive creditors and other persons of their demands on the settlor may be inferred from

(a) the indebtedness of the settlor at the date of the settlement,

(b) want of consideration for the settlement, and

(c) any other circumstance indicative of fraud.

52. A condition or limitation in a settlement or will restraining any person from parting with or disposing of his interest, is void.

Condition restraining alienation of interest.

53. A condition or limitation contained in a settlement or will making an interest thereby reserved or given to or in trust for any person to cease on his becoming insolvent, or endeavouring to transfer or dispose of the same, is void.

Condition making interest determinable on insolvency or alienation.

54. If by a settlement property be given to a person then living in general terms, without indicating the time when it is to be paid or delivered, such person has a vested interest therein from the day of the execution of the settlement, and if he dies without having received it, it shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representatives.

Vesting of gift in general terms.

55. Where by the terms of a settlement a thing is given to a person not in existence, but he is not entitled to possession of it immediately upon his birth, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the settlement, become vested in such person upon his birth, and shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative if he dies before that time, and without having received it. And in such cases it is from his birth said to be vested in interest.

Vesting in interest of gift to unborn person not entitled to possession immediately on birth.

56. The provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 100 to 104, both inclusive, 107 and 108, 111 to 127, both inclusive, and 167, shall be applicable, so far as the nature of the case will admit, to gifts contained in settlements.

Application of sections of Act X of 1865 to gifts contained in settlements.

Right to income of property coming into possession under settlement.

57. Whenever a person becomes entitled in possession by virtue of a settlement to money or any other property yielding income, he shall be entitled to receive the interest or income thereof from that time.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF GIFTS FOR RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE PURPOSES.

Gift to charitable uses by person having certain relatives.

58. No person having a nephew or niece, or any nearer relative, shall have power to give any property to religious or charitable uses, by any instrument which is required to be registered, unless such instrument be executed not less than twelve months before his death, and duly registered.

Assurance of property in perpetuity for use of any community or institution.

59. Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, property may be assured in perpetuity for the benefit of the public in the advancement of religion, knowledge, commerce, health, safety, or any other object beneficial to mankind. But no such assurance shall take effect until it has been sanctioned by some public authority to be designated by the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette.

The grant or refusal of such sanction may be notified by an entry in the book in which the assurance is registered, and the registering officer shall make such entry on receiving from the public authority aforesaid a written order in this behalf.

If no such order is made within two years next after the time when the property becomes applicable for the benefit of the public, it shall be deemed that sanction has been granted.

If such sanction is refused, the property shall devolve as if no such assurance had been made.

CHAPTER IX.

OF APPORTIONMENT.

Apportionment of rents and other periodical payments.

60. All rents, annuities, pensions, dividends and other periodical payments shall, upon the determination of such payments by the death of the recipient or otherwise, be apportionable as if they had been made to accrue due from day to day, but to be payable on the days appointed for the payment thereof.

Nothing in this section shall affect any express provision in any instrument binding on the recipient.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LIMITED OWNERS.

Rights and obligations of persons having limited interest in property.

61. A person having a limited interest in any immoveable property is not entitled to do or omit any act the doing or omitting of which is destructive or permanently injurious to such property.

EXPLANATION.—No act done in the reasonable use and enjoyment of property is destructive or injurious within the meaning of this section, though it may exhaust the substance of the property.

Illustrations.

(a). A Hindú widow is in possession as such of land protected from floods and rendered cultivable by a dyke. She is not entitled to cut the dyke and turn the land into a lake.

(b). A is tenant for life of land on which a dwelling-house stands. He is not entitled to pull down the house. Nor must he suffer it to fall for want of necessary repairs.

(c). A is tenant for life of land in which coal lies. He is entitled to work and use the coal.

(d). A is tenant for life of land planted with trees. He is entitled to cut the trees at maturity, but is not entitled to cut them when immature, except for the purpose of thinning out or otherwise benefiting the plantation.

Save as aforesaid, such person or his legal representative has the same right as a lessee to remove during the continuance of such interest, or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things which he has affixed to the soil in which he had such limited interest, and all crops growing upon the land for the season current when such limited interest determines.

Obligation of limited owner in possession of property mortgaged.

62. A person having a limited interest in possession in any property, is bound to discharge all periodical payments due on account of any mortgage thereon taking effect during the continuance of his interest in priority to such interest, and all taxes and other public periodical charges to which such property is liable.

Right to increase of value to property in which there are successive interests.

63. Every advantage or increase of value accruing (accidentally or through the exertions of any one having a limited interest) to any property in which successive interests exist, belongs to all the persons having any interest in the property in the same shares and manner as they are entitled to the property.

EXPLANATION.—A person having a mortgage on property has not thereby an interest within the meaning of this section.

Discovery of death of tenant for life.

64. Any person claiming any immoveable property after the death of any minor, married woman, or other person, and having reason to believe that such minor, married woman or other person is dead, and that his or her death is concealed by his or her guardian, husband or any other person, may once a year move the High Court to order the person concealing or suspected to conceal such person to produce him or her at such time and place, and before such persons (if any), as the Court may direct. And the High Court, if it think fit, shall make such order, and in case of disobedience thereto, the person so claiming the property may enter thereon and receive the profits thereof as if the person so concealed or suspected to be concealed were dead.

Saving of lessees.

65. Nothing in this chapter applies to lessees.

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE DISCRETION OF THE COURTS TO DEAL WITH SETTLED LAND.

Powers exercisable by Court on application of person interested in possession in settled immoveable property.

66. If any person having, under a settlement or will, a limited interest in possession in any immoveable property, apply under this section to the High Court or District Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction such property or any part thereof is situate, the Court may, if it deem it just and expedient to do so,—

(a) make such leases of the whole or any part of the property for such terms of years, for such rents, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(b) make such sales of the whole or any part of the property, for such sums, payable either at once or periodically, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(c) appropriate any part of the property for the formation of streets, roads, gardens or other open spaces, tanks, sewers, drains or water-courses, and authorize the erection of buildings and works thereon;

and generally deal with the property in any way the Court may think just and beneficial to the persons interested therein.

Service of notice and advertisement of application.

67. Every such application shall be in writing, and notice thereof shall be served through the Court on all trustees under the settlement or will and on any other persons who in the opinion of the Court ought to be so served, and shall be published in such newspapers as the Court may direct.

Appearance to oppose or support application.

68. The Court may permit any person, whether interested in the property or not, to appear and be heard in opposition to or in support of any such application on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Costs of application.

69. The Court may order the costs of all or any parties to any application under this section to be paid out of any principal money receivable on account of any dealing with the property which is the subject of the application or to be a charge on such property or on any other property belonging to the same owners.

Leases under section 66.

70. Every lease made under section 66, shall take effect in possession; and on every such lease shall be reserved the best rent that can be reasonably obtained, to be made payable half-yearly or oftener without taking any fine or other benefit in the nature of a fine.

Payment into Court of money receivable under section 66.

71. All or any part of the proceeds of any lease, sale or disposition under section 66 may, if the Court think fit, be paid into Court.

Power to direct payment of income to person entitled.

72. The Court shall declare what parts of such proceeds so received shall be considered as income, and may direct the same to be paid to the person for the time being entitled in possession to the property dealt with; and the residue of such money shall be applied as the Court shall direct in one or more of the manners following:—

Application of residue.

(a) the payment of the amount due in respect of any charge on the property dealt with;

(b) the purchase of other property or the investment in securities for the benefit of the persons interested in the property dealt with;

(c) the payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled to the property dealt with;

EXPLANATION—In this section the term "securities" means—

(d) promissory notes, debentures, stock and other securities of the Government of India;

(e) bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India;

(f) stock or debentures of, or shares in, railway or other companies, the interest whereon has been guaranteed by the Government of India; and

(g) debentures or other securities for money issued by or on behalf of any municipal body under the authority of any Act of an Indian legislature.

CHAPTER XII.

OF POWERS.

Power to appoint, defined.

73. Where a person is authorized to determine the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of his ownership, he is said to have power to appoint such property.

Donor, donee, objects, appointee, defined.

The person who gives the power is called the donor, the person to whom the power is given is called the donee, and the persons for whose benefit the power is to be exercised are called the objects of the power. A person to whom any property is appointed is called an appointee.

Illustration.

A grants land to B for life, with remainder to such of B's children as B shall appoint. B appoints to C and D, two of his children, in equal shares. A is the donor of the power, B the donee, B's children the objects, and C and D the appointees.

General power.

A power authorising the donee to appoint to whomsoever and for whatsoever interest he pleases, is called a general power.

Special power.

A power restricted in respect either of its objects or the interests that may be conferred under it, is called a special power.

Rules as to all powers.

Exercise of power vested in several donees.

74. Where a power is vested in several donees, all who are living must unite in its execution; but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, it may be exercised by the survivors or the survivor, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Modes in which powers may be executed.

75. The donor may direct that the power shall be exercised by will only or by non-testamentary instrument only.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by will only, it must be exercised by will duly executed according to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, or according to such other law as at the time of the execution of the power may be applicable to a will executed by the donee.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by non-testamentary instrument only, it must be exercised by an instrument executed as an assurance and registered.

If he imposes no such restriction on the exercise of the power, it may be exercised either by such will or by such instrument as lastly hereinbefore mentioned.

Jurisdiction to aid defective executions abolished.

When the power is not properly exercised, no Court shall in any case compel the person in possession of the property to which the power relates to deliver the property as if the power had been properly exercised or shall otherwise aid the defective execution.

Validity of forms hereby prescribed.

76. All appointments made in the manner directed by section 75 shall be deemed to be executed and attested in proper form, notwithstanding that some other mode of execution or attestation has been prescribed by the donor.

Concurrence where power is to be exercised with consent of several persons.

77. Where a power is to be exercised with the consent of several persons, all who are living must concur in the consent, but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, the consent of the survivors or the survivor is sufficient, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Consent to the exercise of a power must be given by an instrument executed as an assurance and registered.

Consent to the exercise of a power need not be given by the instrument by which the power is exercised, but if it is given by a different instrument, such instrument must be executed at a time not later than the time at which the donee of the power executes the instrument by which he exercises the power.

Recital of power not necessary.

78. If a person disposes of property in such manner as is authorized by a power vested in him, such disposition shall take effect out of the power, notwithstanding that the power is not mentioned or referred to in the instrument of disposition.

Illustration.

Land is settled upon A for life with a special power to charge, by a non-testamentary instrument, portions in favour of his children. Subsequently a general power to dispose of the land by any instrument is vested in A. He executes an assurance, by which he directs that a sum of money shall be raised out of the land and settled on his son B for life, with remainder to B.'s wife and children. Such an appointment cannot take effect under the special power, but may be treated as a valid exercise of the general power.

Power exerciseable by several instruments executed at different times.

79. The donee of a power need not exercise it entirely and at once by a single instrument, but he may from time to time exercise any unexhausted part thereof at his discretion.

If the donee has purported to exercise his power in such a manner that his appointment is void, the power is, to that extent, unexhausted.

Disposition intended to take effect after interests appointed under void power.

80. Where a power given by any instrument is void in its creation, no disposition or gift made by the same instrument shall be deemed void merely because it is intended to take effect after the interests to be appointed under the power or in default of any such appointment.

Illustration.

A marriage-settlement provides that the settled property shall belong to the husband and wife successively for their lives; that after the death of the survivor of them, it shall go to such of the children of the marriage and in such shares as the husband and wife shall jointly appoint, the interest of each such child to become vested in him on his attaining the age of twenty-five years; and that in the event of there being no child of the marriage who shall attain that age, or in default of appointment, the property shall belong to the husband or his legal representative.

Here the power to appoint the property is, under section 56, void in its creation; but the ultimate interest given to the husband takes effect.

General Powers.

Effect of general power.

81. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, the donee shall, so far as regards his power of disposition, his creditors and all persons who contract with him for valuable consideration to obtain any interest in the property comprised in the power, be deemed to be the absolute owner of such property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

This rule is to take effect notwithstanding that the donor has prescribed some particular method for executing the power.

Illustrations.

A, the absolute owner of land, settles it on B for life, with remainder to such purposes as B—

shall appoint, or shall by deed appoint, or shall by will appoint, or shall by deed or will appoint,

and, in case B dies without making any such appointment, on C absolutely.

If B—grants the land by assurance, or bequeathes it, or contracts to sell it, or incurs debt,

the property is liable, in the hands of either B or C, as the case may be, to the claims of B.'s grantee, legatee, purchaser or creditors, as the case may be.

If B dies having made no disposition of the property, C is entitled to it, subject to any claims which B's creditors may establish against it.

Effect of general power without disposition of property in case of non-appointment.

82. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, and makes no disposition of the property in the event of non-appointment, the donee shall be considered as the absolute owner of the property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

Illustration.

A, the absolute owner of property, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint, and makes no gift over in default of appointment. B dies without making any disposition of the property. The property vests in the representatives of B, and does not revert to A or his representatives.

Special Powers.

Interest conferrible by donee of special power.

83. If the donee has only a special power, he cannot confer any interest in the property comprised therein which could not have been conferred by the donor at the time of the creation of the power.

Illustrations.

(a). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint. After the settlement is made C is born. B then appoints the fund to C for life with remainder to C's children absolutely. The appointment is valid, though C has no children at the time.

(b). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to his children as he shall appoint. At the date of the settlement B has no child, but afterwards has a son C. B then appoints to C for his life, with remainder to his children. Such interest could not have been conferred by A, and B's appointment is void.

Effect of appointment to objects, some authorized and others unauthorized.

84. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to objects authorized by the power and also to objects not so authorized, the appointment in favour of the authorized objects shall take effect if their interests can be separated from those of the unauthorized objects.

Illustration.

Property is settled on A for life, and after his death on such of his children as he shall appoint, and in default of appointment to all A's children equally. A appoints that the property shall go after his death to his widow for her life, and after her death to two of his sons, C and D, in equal shares. There are five children of A. The appointment in favour of A's widow is invalid, and the rents and profits of the property during her life will go to all the five children in equal shares, but after her death to C and D absolutely.

Appointment in excess of power when voidable at election of appointee.

85. Where the donee of a special power purports in exercise of the power to confer a larger interest than is authorized thereby, such appointment shall, if the appointee so elect, be void only for the excess, and good for the residue, if they can be separated.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a life-interest in Rámnagar, with power to grant leases thereof for 30 years. A makes a lease of Rámnagar for 50 years. Such lease is good for 30 years only.

(b). A having a life-interest in Rámnagar and Sultánpur, with power to grant leases of Rámnagar for 21 years, grants a lease comprising both Rámnagar and Sultánpur for 21 years. After A's death the lessee may, if he thinks fit, elect to retain the lease as a lease of Rámnagar only, till the end of the 21 years.

Invalidity of appointment creating authorised and unauthorized interests not separable.

86. Where, by an appointment under a special power, interests authorized and also interests unauthorized are created, and the interests authorized cannot be distinguished from those unauthorized, the whole is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A fund is settled on A during his life, and after his death on his children as he shall appoint. A appoints the annual income for the benefit of his son B and his wife and children, in such manner as trustees shall think fit. The appointment is wholly void.

(b). Under a similar settlement, A having legitimate children by B, his wife, and others by C and D, his concubines, appoints the property to be divided among his children by B, C and D, the shares of the sons to be double those of the daughters. Here the interests authorized and unauthorized cannot be distinguished, and the appointment is wholly void.

Appointment with unauthorized condition.

87. When a person exercising a special power annexes to the gift a condition or qualification which is not authorized by the power, the gift is good and the condition or qualification only is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having a power to appoint a fund among his children, gives a part of it to his son B on condition that B shall settle it on B's children. The condition is void, and the gift is absolute.

(b). A, having a power to appoint a fund to a limited class of objects of whom B is one, appoints it to B, adding a condition that B shall release a debt owing to him by A, and also pay Rs. 1,000 to C. The appointment is good; but the condition is void.

Contract not to exercise power of leasing.

88. If a beneficial interest in immoveable property and also a power to let it are given to the same person and he grants his interest in the property, he may enter into a contract not to exercise his power.

Invalidity of agreement not to exercise power.

89. Save as provided by section 88, an agreement or undertaking not to exercise a power which is given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is void.

Frauds on powers.

90. Where a power given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is exercised with a view to the benefit, direct or indirect, of the donee, in any mode not intended by the donor, the appointment is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of her children, appoints the whole fund absolutely to one child, who has previously entered into an agreement with her to give one-half of the fund to A's husband absolutely. The appointment is void.

(b). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of his children, appoints a portion of the fund to his son C, a minor, whom he knows to be suffering from a mortal disease; A being the person entitled to C's property in the event of his death. The appointment is void.

(c). A, having power to grant leases of certain settled land, exercises the power in favour of B in consideration of Rs. 1,000 paid to A by B as a fine or premium. The lease is void, and A holds the Rs. 1,000 in trust for the persons interested under the settlement.

Right to property in default of appointment.

91. If the instrument by which a power of appointment in favour of specified objects is created does not provide for the event of no appointment being made, the property belongs (subject to any appointment that may have been made) in equal shares to the said objects.

Illustration.

A settles property on B for life with remainder to B's children as he shall appoint, and makes no disposition in default of appointment. B has two children, C and D, and appoints Rs. 1,000, part of the property, to C. Then C dies. Then B dies without making any further appointment. After paying Rs. 1,000 to C or his representative, the residue of the property is divisible in equal moieties between D and the representative of C.

Appointment of whole property to some only of several objects in favour of which power is given.

92. Under a power of appointment in favour of several objects, an appointment of the whole property to one or more of such objects exclusively of the others is valid:

Provided that, where the assurance creating the power declares the minimum amount or value of the share from which no object of the power is to be excluded, the appointment shall be invalid so far as it excludes any such object from any such share, and no farther.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF PROPERTY HELD BY SEVERAL PERSONS.

Right to property by survivorship created only by express words.

93. Where property is held by more persons than one, the share of any of them having at the time of his death a beneficial heritable interest therein shall become vested in his legal representative, unless the property is held under an instrument which expressly provides that on the death of one his share shall accrue to the survivors.

Nothing in this section applies to property belonging to an undivided Hindú family.

Illustration.

A and B jointly advance money on mortgage. A dies intestate. The money advanced by A belongs to his legal representative.

Partition of immoveable property.

94. When immoveable property is held in possession by joint owners, any one of them may institute a suit in the proper Court, and such Court may direct a partition of the property to be made among the joint owners, and for the purposes of partition may, in order to equalise the value of the shares, direct any money to be paid by one to another or to be charged on one share in favour of another.

Power to direct sale and to distribute proceeds.

If it appear to the Court that a sale of the property and a distribution of the proceeds would be more beneficial for the persons interested than a division of the property between them, the Court may, on the application of any such person, direct a sale of the property.

Power to allow person interested to bid for property sold for purpose of partition.

95. On any sale under the last preceding section, the Court may, if it think fit, allow any of the persons interested in the property to bid at the sale, on such terms as to setting-off or accounting for the purchase-money or any part thereof, or as to any other matters, as to the Court seems reasonable.

Payment into Court.

96. All sums of money paid under the two last preceding sections may if the Court think fit, be paid into Court.

Saving of laws relating to partition of revenue-paying estates.

97. Nothing in this chapter shall affect any local law for the time being in force relating to the partition of estates paying revenue to Government.

Waste by one joint-owner.

98. When one joint-owner of immoveable property commits, or threatens to commit, waste to the same without the consent of the other joint owner, that other may institute a suit to recover compensation for the injury caused to him by the waste or to obtain an injunction to stay the waste, as the case may require.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF ASSIGNMENTS OF THINGS IN ACTION.

Sale, &c., of things in action.

99. No sale or disposition of, or charge on, any debt, and no sale or disposition of, or charge on, any beneficial interest in moveable property, shall have any operation against the debtor or against the person in whom the property is vested, until notice of the sale, disposition or charge is given to him, unless he is a party to such sale, disposition or charge; and every dealing by such debtor or person, not being a party to, and not having received notice of, a sale, disposition or charge, with the debt owing by him, or with the property vested in him, shall be valid as against such sale, disposition or charge.

Illustrations.

(a). A owes money to B, who assigns the debt to C. B then demands the debt from A, who having no notice of the assignment, pays B. The payment is valid, and C cannot sue A for the debt.

(b). A has jewels deposited with B, a jeweller. A mortgages them to C. A then executes an assignment of them to D, who takes his assignment to B and gets the jewels from him before he, B, has received any notice of C's mortgage. B is justified in handing the jewels to D, and C has no remedy against D.

Notice to be in writing signed.

100. Every such notice must be in writing signed by the person making such sale, disposition or charge, or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf.

Liability of assignee of thing in action.

101. The person to whom a debt or charge is assigned shall take it subject to all the liabilities to which the assignor was subject in respect thereof at the date of the assignment.

Illustration.

(a). A debenture is issued in fraud of a public company to A. A sells and transfers the debenture to B, who has no notice of the fraud. The debenture is invalid in the hands of B.

Saving of negotiable instruments.

102. Nothing in this chapter applies to debts secured by negotiable instruments.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill embodies the bulk of the rules submitted in the sixth report of the late Indian Law Commission. One of its chief objects is to bring the rules which regulate the transmission of property between living persons into harmony with the rules affecting its devolution upon death, and thus to furnish the necessary complement of the work commenced in framing the law of succession, now Act X of 1865. Another is to render more simple and efficient the law relating to mortgages and conditional sales. The expediency of legislation on this subject was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of Tambasvámi Mudali v. Muhammad Husain, L. R. 2 Indian Appeals, 241. Rules are also laid down on the other subjects hereinafter mentioned.

The Bill is divided into fourteen chapters.

Preliminary.

Chapter I contains the usual preliminary matter. The repealing clause will get rid of several obsolete statutes relating to land which are still in force in the Presidency Towns and, in the case of Europeans, may possibly be in force elsewhere. The saving clause exempts from the operation of the proposed Act acquired rights and liabilities incurred before the Act comes into force, subsequently acquired rights of pre-emption, options of mortgagees to make further advances (such options exist in Malabar and possibly elsewhere), contracts of bottomry and respondentia, transfers of British ships, sales in execution of decrees or for arrears of rent or revenue.

Assurances of Immoveable Property.

Chapter II deals with assurances of immoveable property. It declares (section 4) that every person competent to contract may make an assurance of property of which he is the owner, or which he is entitled to transfer, or on which he is entitled to create a charge. It declares (sections 5, 6 and 7) that land may be conveyed (a) with the benefit of, or subject to, an easement: (b) subject to an obligation for the benefit of the public or of the neighbouring owner, or (c) with the reservation of any right of user, severance and removal. It lays down rules (section 8) as to the mode in which the transfer inter vivos of immoveable property can alone be effected, and applies (section 9) to assurances the rules of construction contained in the Succession Act. It declares (section 10) that, unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, a grant shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the subject, and a grant of land shall be deemed to comprise trees and fixtures. Covenants running with the land are dealt with by the same section.

Sales of Immoveable Property.

The Bill then enumerates (section 11) the rights and liabilities which, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, arise in the case of a sale of land. The principal changes in the law here made are as follows: the seller will be responsible for loss caused to the buyer, or any person claiming under him, through any invalidity of the seller's title not known to the buyer when the contract was entered into and the seller's lien for unpaid purchase-money will cease as soon as the assurance is registered. Section 12 declares that, except so far as regards the vendor's lien, a contract for sale shall not of itself have the effect of creating any interest in the property sold: the Bill will thus get rid of much difficult law relating to the purchaser's equitable ownership, and the rights created by charging and assigning it. Lastly, section 13 declares that a person paying the purchase-money for any immoveable property, but having the transfer made to another, will not by reason of the payment be entitled to the property or to any interest therein. It will thus become the absolute property of the transferee, unless he is made a trustee in some way more definite than by the mere payment of the money by another person; and it is hoped that this rule will tend to prevent the litigation which arises from the doctrine of equitable presumption.

Mortgages and Charges.

Chapter IV deals with mortgages and charges. 'Mortgage' is so defined and explained as to include, besides simple mortgages, usufructuary mortgages, mortgages by conditional sale, and their combinations. The Bill declares (section 15) the respective rights of mortgagor and mortgagee on completion of a mortgage. It defines (sections 16, 17 and 18) the rights and duties of a mortgagee in possession. It shews when the mortgagor or the mortgagee may obtain an injunction to stay waste committed or threatened by the other. It provides rules (sections 19—24) as to suits for foreclosure or sale. Powers of sale given by the mortgage-deed to the mortgagee have been held void in the Mufassal: the Bill (section 24) declares them to be valid: but contains provisions for the protection of the mortgagor similar to those in 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, ss. 11—14. It provides rules (sections 25, 26 and 27) as to suits for redemption. It contains provisions as to interest (section 28) and costs (sections 29, 30). It declares (section 31) that a deposit by a debtor of his title-deeds, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract for a mortgage and to entitle the creditor merely to sue for specific performance. Any person having an interest in the property charged may prevent a sale at the suit of a mortgagee (section 35) by paying off the mortgagee who requires it, and the registration of the mortgagee's receipt for the money will be sufficient without any further assurance. If the payment be made by a person having the whole interest in the property subject to the mortgage, the mortgage so paid off will (section 36) cease to exist: if the payment be made by a person not having the whole of such interest, he will acquire (section 37) the rights of the incumbrancer whom he has paid off.

The Bill abolishes the system of tacking, by declaring in sections 38 and 39 that no mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original mortgage; that no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such advance; and that, if the owner of two properties creates separate mortgages upon them by separate assurances, each property may be redeemed or dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

It has been held that, where a mortgage extends to future advances, the mortgagee cannot safely make such advances, if he has notice of an intervening second mortgage. But the Bill (section 34) provides that, if a charge made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a second charge shall be postponed to the first charge in respect of advances not exceeding the maximum, though made subsequently to the second charge with notice thereof.

Leases.

Chapter V deals with leases of immoveable property. It lays down rules (section 43) as to the commencement and duration of leases. It states in some detail (section 44) the obligations which, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, are to arise out of the relationship of landlord and tenant. Special notice may be called to the provision enabling a lessee, where the lessor omits to make repairs which he is bound to make, himself to make them and deduct the expense from the rent, and the similar provision for the case of failure on the part of the lessor to make payments, which, if not made, are recoverable against the thing leased; to the provisions binding tenants to inform their landlords of proceedings to eject, and of encroachments, and to the power of obtaining a decree for the rescission of a lease, in a suit by either party, in case of misconduct by the other.

The rules as to fixtures in section 44, clauses (q) and (r), are, it is thought, likely to prove useful. No distinction is made between ornamental, trade and agricultural fixtures, save that the landlord is given a right (resembling that conferred by 15 Vic., cap. 25, section 23) to purchase agricultural fixtures.

The rest of this chapter saves (section 45) any right to distrain possessed under any local law: provides rules (section 46) as to the duration of leases in the absence of written agreement or of local law or usage; and treats (section 47) of the effect of holding over.

Exchanges.

Chapter VI deals with Exchange or Barter. It is taken from the New York Civil Code, and merely declares that each party has the rights and obligations of a seller as to that which he gives, and those of a buyer as to that which he takes; and that, on an exchange of money, each party warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Settlements.

Chapter VII deals with settlements, which are defined so as to include endowments and absolute gifts to children and others, excluding, however, gifts by Natives. The Bill declares (section 50) that a settlement may be binding, though not made for a consideration. Settlements made in fraud of creditors will be voidable (section 51) at their option; but not as against persons who, without notice and for valuable consideration, have acquired interests thereunder. The English law, by which a voluntary settlor of land can by subsequent sale defeat the settlement he has made, is not perpetuated here. Conditions restraining any person from parting with his or her interest will be void (section 52), and when property is settled on a married woman, it will therefore no longer be possible to deprive her of the power of anticipation. Such power is the logical consequence of a married woman's capacity, under Act IX of 1872, to enter into contracts. The Bill also contains provisions as to making interests under settlements or wills determinable on insolvency or attempted alienation (section 53), as to the vesting of gifts in general terms (section 54), as to the vesting of a gift to an unborn person not entitled to possession immediately on birth (section 55). Various sections of the Indian Succession Act (100—104, 107, 108, 111—127, 167) are applied (section 56), so far as the nature of the case will admit, to gifts contained in settlements.

Gifts for Religious and Charitable purposes.

In accordance with the Succession Act, the Bill prohibits (section 58) persons who have near relatives from giving property to religious or charitable uses unless by an instrument executed not less than twelve months before their death and duly registered. And while allowing property to be given in perpetuity for such uses, the Bill requires (section 59) that it shall be given with the sanction of some public authority to be designated by the Government. A mode of notifying the grant or refusal of such sanction is provided. Where the sanction is refused, the property will devolve as if the gift had not been made.

Apportionment.

Chapter IX consists of a single section (60) treating of the apportionment of rents and other periodical payments.

Rights and Liabilities of limited Owners.

In Chapter X, the Bill abolishes the distinction between limited owners with, and those without, impeachment of waste. Such persons (section 61) will not be entitled to do any act destructive or permanently injurious to the property; but it is explained that no act done in the reasonable enjoyment of property (such, for example, as working a mine) is 'destructive' or 'injurious,' though it may exhaust the substance of the property. The power of such persons and their representatives to remove fixtures will be the same as that given to tenants under a lease. Persons having limited interests in possession will be bound (section 62) to discharge periodical payments due under prior mortgages and also taxes and other public periodical charges. The right to increase in the value of property in which there are successive interests is declared (section 63); and a provision (resembling that made by 6 Anne, chapter 72, section 1) is made for the production of tenants for life, when the remainder-man has reason to suspect fraud.

Leases and Sales of settled Estates.

Chapter XI is suggested by the English Statute 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 20. It gives the Courts (here defined to mean only the High Courts and the District Courts) a power to deal with lands subject to a settlement or will, by lease or sale, or by appropriating any part of the property for the formation of streets, roads, gardens, tanks, &c. The various modes in which the proceeds of the sales or leases may be applied are specified.

Powers.

Chapter XII treats of powers, i. e., rights to determine the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of ownership. It reproduces the principal rules of the English law on the subject. But the Bill does not propose to give the Courts power to aid defective executions of powers. This jurisdiction does not rest on any sound principle, and is, indeed, hardly consistent with a strict system of registration. In the case of the exercise of a power given to several donees some of whom die before it has been fully exercised, the Bill declares (section 74) that the survivors may do all that might have been done by the whole number. An analogous declaration is made (section 77) as to a power exercisable with the consent of several persons.

Property held by several Persons.

Chapter XIII contains some rules as to the devolution of shares of several persons holding the same property. The Bill proposes to declare that a right by survivorship can be created only by express words. This chapter also contains some provisions (sections 94, 95, 96) as to partitions of immoveable property, which may be useful in cases to which no local law as to the partition of revenue-paying estates applies. In case of illegal waste by one of several persons holding the same property, power is given (section 98) to sue for compensation or to obtain an injunction.

Assignments of Things in Action.

Chapter XIV deals with the assignment of debts and other things which are not in the possession of the person entitled to them, but for the recovery of which he may be obliged to sue. The only change proposed to be made in what is now the law in all Indian Courts is, that the Bill requires (section 99) the assignee to complete his title by giving the debtor notice in writing of the assignment. Negotiable instruments are excluded from the operation of this chapter.

The subject of the Bill is one of great difficulty and complexity, and errors will doubtless be found in the present draft. Ample time will be given for the searching criticism which it is hoped the draft will receive at the hands of the Local Governments, the Judges and the legal profession.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th June 1877 :—

No. 11 of 1877.

A Bill to amend the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to exempt from the operation of the fourth section of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, certain suits instituted in the Districts mentioned in the Schedule hereto annexed; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Addition to section 5, Act X of 1876.

1. To section five of the said Act the following clause shall be added (namely)—

"and nothing in section four shall be held to prevent the Civil Courts in the Districts mentioned in the second Schedule hereto annexed from exercising such jurisdiction as, according to the terms of Acts No. XI of 1852, No. XXIII of 1871, and Bombay Acts No. II of 1868, No. VII of 1863 and No. III of 1874, or of any other law in force on the twenty-eighth day of March 1876, they could have exercised over claims against Government—

"(a) relating to any property appertaining to the office of any hereditary officer appointed or recognized under Bombay Act No. III of 1874, or any other law for the time being in force, or of any other village-officer or servant :

"(b) to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land-revenue :

"(c) to receive payments charged on, or payable out of, the land-revenue."

Schedule added to Act X of 1876.

2. The following Schedule shall be added to the said Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, (namely)—

"THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

The District of Ahmedabad.

The District of Kaira, exclusive of the Panch Mahâls.

The District of Broach.

The District of Surat, exclusive of the lapsed State of Mándvi, as described in the schedule annexed to Act X of 1848.

The District of Tanna.

The District of Colába, exclusive of the lapsed State of Colába mentioned in Act VIII of 1853.

The District of Ratnágiri.

The District of Kanara."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), section 4, sub-section (a), article 1, and sub-section (f), articles 1 and 2, withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in every part of the Bombay Presidency (1) claims against Government relating to property appertaining to the office of any hereditary officer appointed or recognized under Bombay Act III of 1874, or any other law for the time being in force, or of any other village-officer or servant, and (2) claims against Government to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land-revenue, or to receive payments charged on, or payable out of, the land-revenue.

2. The object of this Bill is to restore to the Civil Courts, so far as the Old Provinces are concerned, whatever jurisdiction has been taken away by the articles above referred to.

3. The reasons for the Bill are shortly as follows: In the Old Provinces the Courts had, to a certain extent, cognizance of the claims in question; obscure and disputed claims to exemption from land-revenue or from enhanced assessments are commoner there than in other parts of India; and for these and other causes the change effected by the articles above mentioned is distasteful to the population.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th June 1877:—

No. 12 OF 1877.

A Bill to amend the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876.

Preamble.

FOR the purpose of amending the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act No. VI of 1876; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Amendment of Act VI of 1876, section 12, clause 2.

1. For the word "six" shall be substituted the word "twelve" in the second clause of the twelfth section of the said Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Government of Bengal being of opinion that the period of six months provided by section 12 of the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876, is too short for deciding whether an estate should be retained under management or relinquished under that section, the period of six months is, by the amending Bill, increased to twelve months, which period it is believed will be sufficient for the purpose.

CHAPTER II.

OF ASSURANCES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

5. Immoveable property may be granted with the right to an easement affecting any other immoveable property belonging to the grantor, or subject to an easement for the benefit of any other property. Conveyance of easements.

Easements may be made the subject of separate grants.

Where any easement is actually enjoyed with any property the subject of any grant, the grant shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, be deemed to pass such easement.

6. Immoveable property may be granted subject to an obligation for the benefit of the public or of any neighbouring owner. Power to convey subject to obligation for benefit of public or neighbour.

Such obligation shall bind the grantee and all persons claiming the granted property under him, and may be the subject of a separate grant.

Whenever such an obligation is created for the benefit of the public, it may be enforced by the grantor and his legal representatives or by the Government as a civil right.

Illustrations.

(a). A grants certain land to Z subject to the condition that Z shall not, without the consent of A, build any dwelling-house within a hundred yards of certain adjoining land of A. A and all persons claiming such land under him may enforce this obligation on Z, and all persons claiming the granted land under him.

(b). A may grant to B, by a separate assurance, the right to plant fruit-trees on A's lands of Rámnagar, and to gather the fruit.

8. An assurance may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention thereby, and without any further act, to grant any interest in immoveable property. Form of assurance.

9. The rules of construction which apply to testamentary instruments shall also be applicable to assurances, so far as the different nature of assurances will permit. Application of rules of construction.

10. Unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, a grant shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the subject of the grant, and to comprise— Operation of assurance.

(a) trees and all other products of the soil;

(b) things affixed to the soil, and, in the case of machinery so affixed, the moveable parts thereof;

(c) in the case of a house, the locks, keys, bars, doors and windows, and a covenant by the grantee concerning the subject of the assurance binds all persons claiming such subject under the grantee, and may be enforced by all persons claiming under the grantor, and a like covenant by the grantor binds all persons claiming the subject under the grantor, and may be enforced by all persons claiming under the grantee. Covenants concerning the subject.

CHAPTER III.

OF SALES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

11. Unless a contrary intention appears from the assurance or, when no assurance has been made, from the contract, the seller and the buyer of immoveable property respectively possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the nine rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property sold: Rights and liabilities of seller and buyer.

(a). If the buyer, or any person claiming under him, suffers loss by reason of any invalidity of the seller's title not known to the buyer when the contract was entered into, the seller, or, where the seller is not the person for whose benefit the consideration was received, then such other person, is responsible for the loss so suffered.

(b). The seller has a charge upon the property for the amount of the purchase-money, or any part thereof, remaining unpaid; but as soon as the assurance (if any) is registered, such charge shall cease.

EXPLANATION.—Money for which a bill of exchange has been taken remains unpaid, within the meaning of this clause, until the bill is paid.

(c). After the contract has been made, the seller is entitled to the rents and profits of the property until the time fixed for the completion of the sale, and if he has received any such rents and profits which accrued after that time, he must on completion account for them to the buyer. The buyer must, on completion, pay to the seller interest on the purchase-money from the time fixed for the completion of the sale. But this is not to preclude either party from obtaining compensation where loss has been occasioned by the default or delay of the other party.

(d). The buyer is entitled to a charge on the property for the amount of any purchase-money properly paid by him in anticipation of the completion of the sale.

(e). In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation the seller is not answerable for any latent defect in the property sold.

(g). The seller is bound to execute a proper assurance of the property when the buyer tenders it to him for execution at a proper time and place.

(h). When the buyer has been let into beneficial possession of the property pending discussions as to the seller's title thereto, and the contract is not completed owing to defects in such title, the buyer is not liable to pay for his use of the property.

(i). When the completion of the contract is delayed by the buyer, and, after the day fixed for completing it, the seller expends money on the property, the seller is entitled to recover the amount so expended, provided that such expenditure was required for the preservation of the property, or by any law for the time being in force.

12. Save as provided by section 11, clause (b), a contract for the sale of, or relating to, immoveable property, whether registered or not, shall not have the effect of creating any interest in, or charge on, such property; but the only right of any person under the contract shall be to apply for specific performance, or for compensation, or for both, according to the rules laid down in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, and the Specific Relief Act, 1877. Contract for sale not of itself to create interest in property.

13. A person paying the consideration for any immoveable property, but having the transfer of it made to another person, is not, by reason of such payment, entitled to such property or to any interest therein. Purchase of immoveable property which buyer causes to be transferred to another,

CHAPTER IV.

OF MORTGAGES AND CHARGES.

14. When any interest in specific property is actually or contingently transferred by one person to another for the purpose of securing the payment of money, the transfer is called a mortgage, the transferor is called a mortgagor, the transferee a mortgagee, the money of which payment is secured is called the mortgage-money, and the instrument (if any) by which the transfer is effected is called a mortgage-deed.

Mortgage, mortgagor and mortgagee defined.

For the purposes of this chapter, any person claiming as heir, legatee, assignee, lessee or otherwise the interest of the transferor in the property subject to the mortgage, or any part of such interest, is a mortgagor; and any person claiming as heir, legatee, assignee or otherwise the interest of the transferee under the mortgage, or any part thereof, is a mortgagee.

EXPLANATION.—A judgment-creditor who attaches any mortgaged property or mortgage-money claims under the transferor or transferee (as the case may be) within the meaning of the second paragraph of this section.

Illustrations.

(a). A binding himself personally for the repayment of a loan, pledges certain land to B as collateral security for such repayment, but does not actually deliver possession.

(b). A not so binding himself, pledges certain land as in illustration (a), and covenants that in default of payment of the loan on a certain date the land pledged shall pass to B.

(c). A borrows money from B, and gives up certain land to B that he may retain possession thereof until he has from the rents and profits of the land repaid himself the sum so lent.

(d). A binding himself as in illustration (a), pledges certain land to B as a collateral security for the repayment, and permits B to receive the rents and profits of the land until he has repaid himself the loan, but does not actually deliver possession.

(e). A not so binding himself covenants that on default of payment of the loan on a certain date the land pledged shall pass to B. A meanwhile puts B into possession of the land, and allows him to receive the rents and profits in discharge of the loan.

(f). A charges certain land in favour of B with Rs. 1,000 and interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.

(g). A charges a certain fund in favour of B with the amount which shall be due to him on the balance of A's account not exceeding Rs. 1,000, together with interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.

(h). A borrows Rs. 10,000 from B and conveys certain land to B in trust that the same shall stand charged with the payment to B of the Rs. 10,000 and interest and subject thereto in trust for C and others, and the deed confers express power on B in default of payment to sell the land.

Each of these transactions is a mortgage. A is the mortgagor, B the mortgagee.

(i). A, in consideration of a loan of money paid to him by B, makes over his land to B for a term of twenty years, but does not bind himself to pay to B principal or interest. This is not a mortgage.

Respective rights of mortgagor and mortgagee.

15. On the completion of a mortgage the mortgagor has the following rights:—

(a) he may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable, or has been paid, and before his right to redeem the mortgaged property is foreclosed or the property is sold, institute a suit (hereinafter called a suit for redemption) to have the mortgaged property re-transferred to him;

(b) he may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable and before such suit is barred, tender to the mortgagee or deposit in the principal Civil Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate, to the account of the mortgagee, the whole amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

And the mortgagee has the following rights:—

(c) he may take possession of the mortgaged property at or after the time, if any, specified in the mortgage-deed for payment of the mortgage-money, or, if no time is so specified, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable to him;

(d) he may, at any time after he is entitled to take possession of the mortgaged property, and before it is redeemed, institute a suit against the mortgagor (1) for a foreclosure of his right to redeem the property, with or without possession thereof, or (2) for a sale of the property, or (3) for either of such remedies;

(e) where the mortgagor deposits money in court under clause (b) of this section, the Court shall forthwith cause written notice of the deposit to be served on the mortgagee, and the mortgagee may, on depositing the mortgage-deed (if any) in the same Court and on filing a written statement (verified in manner prescribed by law for the verification of plaints) of the amount due to him under the mortgage, apply for and receive in payment of such amount the money so deposited;

(f) if at the date of the mortgage the mortgaged property is insured against fire, the mortgagee, in case of damage to the property by fire, may (in the absence of a contract to the contrary) require the insurance-money to be laid out in reinstating the property.

Rights and duties of mortgagee in possession.

16. When, during the continuance of the mortgage, the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property, he has the following duties and rights:—

(a) he shall manage the property as a person of ordinary prudence would manage it if it were his own;

(b) he shall collect all rents and other profits arising out of the property;

(c) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, pay out of the income of the property the Government revenue and all other charges of a public nature due in respect thereof and keep down the interest due on all mortgages of the property prior to his own, and on all mortgages of the property subsequent to his own, of which he has notice;

(d) he may spend such money as is necessary for the due management and preservation of the property and add it to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(e) where the property is by its nature insurable, he may insure and keep insured from loss or damage by fire the whole or any part of such property, and add the premiums paid for any such insurance to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(f) he shall keep accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee;

(g) he shall, at any time during the continuance of the mortgage, give the mortgagor, at his request and cost, true copies of such accounts and of the vouchers by which they are supported.

Receipts of mortgagee in possession.

17. When the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, unless there is an express contract in writing between the mortgagee and the mortgagor that his net receipts therefrom shall, so long as the mortgagee is in possession thereof, be taken in lieu of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage, such receipts shall be debited against him in reduction of the amount (if any) from time to time due to him on account of interest on the principal sum so secured, or, so far as such receipts exceed any interest due, in reduction of such principal sum.

Injunctions to restrain waste.

18. Where the mortgagor remains in possession of the mortgaged property or any part thereof, and commits or threatens to commit waste thereon, the mortgagee may obtain an injunction to stay the waste: provided that the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by the waste complained of. Where the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property or any part thereof and commits or threatens to commit waste thereon, the mortgagor may obtain an injunction to stay the waste.

EXPLANATION.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of houses, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money.

Foreclosure and Sale.

Preliminary decree in foreclosure-suit.

19. In a suit for foreclosure or sale, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree, ordering—

(a) that an account be taken of what will be due to the mortgagee for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit, on the day next hereinafter referred to,

(b) that, upon the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into Court the amount so due, on a day within six months from the date of the decree, to be fixed by the Court, the mortgagor shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee free from all incumbrances created by the mortgagee or any person claiming under him, or, where the mortgagee claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims; but

(c) that, if such payment is not made on or before such day, the mortgagor shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

Procedure in case of payment of amount due and subsequent costs.

If payment is so made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section 30, the mortgagor shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

Final decree for foreclosure.

If such payment is not so made, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to apply to the Court for a decree for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the Court may then pass a decree ordering the defendant to be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the mortgagee; and thereupon the mortgagor's right to redeem and the debt secured by the mortgage shall both be extinguished.

Power to order sale at instance of mortgagee.

20. In any suit by the mortgagee under this chapter, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff, decree that in default of the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into court the amount for the time being due on the mortgage and the plaintiff's costs of the suit, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into court and applied in payment of what is due for the time being to the plaintiff on the mortgage, and that the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Power to decree sale in foreclosure-suit.

21. When the mortgagee sues only for a foreclosure, the Court may, at the instance of the mortgagor, decree that in default of such payment, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, if (a) the Court considers that the mortgagee will not be damnified thereby, and (b) the mortgagor furnishes such security, if any, as the Court thinks fit for the payment of the balance due for the time being by him on the mortgage.

Mortgagee not to bid at sale.

22. At any sale under section 20 or section 21, the mortgagee shall not bid for or acquire any interest in the property sold without the leave of the Court, or without submitting to such conditions as the Court may impose.

Recovery of balance due on mortgage.

23. If the nett proceeds of any such sale are insufficient to pay the amount due for the time being on the mortgage, the balance may be recovered in the same suit in the same manner as under a decree for money, or by any other legal process open to the mortgagee.

Power of sale.

24. Power may be expressly conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee to sell or concur in selling the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, on default made in payment of any principal money or interest, payment of which is secured by the mortgage-deed. But in exercising such a power, the mortgagee shall be subject to the following rules (namely)—

(a) he shall use all reasonable diligence to obtain a fair price for the property:

(b) no such sale shall be made (1) until after six months' notice in writing of the intended sale has been given to the mortgagor, or (2) after the amount for the time being due on the mortgage has been paid or tendered to the mortgagee by or on behalf of the mortgagor, or (3) pending a suit for redemption of the property, or (4) so as to give the mortgagee any interest in the property.

When a sale has been effected in professed exercise of any such power, the title of the purchaser shall not be liable to be impeached on the ground that no such default had been made or that the rules so prescribed had not been complied with.

Receipts for purchase-money given by the mortgagee exercising such power shall discharge the purchasers therefrom.

The proceeds of every such sale shall be applied as follows:—

first, in defraying the expenses incident to the sale, or properly incurred in any attempted sale under the power;

secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being due on the mortgage; and thirdly, the surplus (if any) of the said proceeds shall be paid to the mortgagor.

Redemption.

Preliminary decree in redemption-suit.

25. In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree for taking the accounts, as provided by section 19, between the mortgagor and mortgagee, and directing that upon the mortgagor paying within six months from the date of the decree to the mortgagee or into Court what (if anything) is found due to the mortgagee for principal, interest and costs, the mortgagee shall re-convey the mortgaged property to the mortgagor, free from the mortgage, and from all incumbrances created by the mortgagee or any persons claiming under him, and that if such amount is not so paid, the plaintiff's suit shall thenceforth stand dismissed, and that he shall be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property.

Loss occasioned by mortgagee's default.

26. If the mortgagee fail to perform any of the duties imposed upon him by section 16, he may, when the said accounts are taken, be debited with the loss, if any, occasioned by such failure.

Procedure where nothing due or amount paid.

27. If on taking the accounts nothing is found due to the mortgagee, or if the amount found due together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section 30 is paid according to the decree, the mortgagor shall, if necessary, be put into possession of the property. But if such amount and costs are not so paid, the mortgagor shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem the property, and the Court shall, if necessary, deliver possession thereof to the mortgagee.

Procedure when amount due is not paid.

Interest.

Payment of interest.

28. When the mortgagor and mortgagee have contracted as to the payment of interest on the principal money for the time being due to the mortgagee under the mortgage, interest shall be payable in accordance with such contract: Provided that where the mortgagor has tendered or deposited in Court the whole amount due to the mortgagee, such interest shall cease from the date of the tender or from the time when the mortgagee could take such amount out of Court, as the case may be.

Proviso.

Costs.

Costs of mortgagee.

29. The mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to add to his debt his costs properly incurred of any suit under this chapter. But such costs, or any part thereof, may be disallowed if the mortgagor has tendered to the mortgagee or has deposited in Court the whole amount due to him under the mortgage, and if the mortgagee has unreasonably refused to accept such tender or to take such money out of Court in discharge of his claim, or if he has prevented a mortgagor willing and able to make such tender or deposit from making it by refusing or neglecting to give him proper information as to the state of the accounts required to be kept under section 16.

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree.

30. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a redemption or a sale by the Court under this chapter, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the principal debt such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure, redemption or sale up to the time of actual payment.

Deposit of Title-deeds.

Effect of deposit of title-deeds.

31. The deposit of title-deeds with intent to create a mortgage on the property comprised therein, but without actual transfer of such property, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract for a mortgage of the property, and shall entitle the depositee merely to institute a suit for specific performance of such contract.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

32. If any property the sale of which is directed under this chapter is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, order that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Application of proceeds.

33. Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows:

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, if the property has been sold free from any prior mortgage, in payment of whatever is due on account of such mortgage;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made;

fourthly, in payment of all principal moneys due on account of that mortgage; and

fifthly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proved to be interested in the property sold, or if there be more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein.

Mortgage to secure balance of account.

34. If a mortgage made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a subsequent mortgage on the same property shall, if made with notice of the prior mortgage, be postponed to the prior mortgage in respect of all advances or debits not exceeding the maximum, though made or allowed with notice of the subsequent mortgage.

Illustration.

A gives to his bankers, B & Co., a charge on Sultánpur to secure the balance of his account with them to the extent of Rs. 10,000. A then gives to C a charge on Sultánpur to secure Rs. 10,000; and C gives notice thereof to B & Co. At the date of the second charge, the balance due to B & Co. does not exceed Rs. 5,000. B & Co. subsequently advance to A sums making the balance of the account against him exceed the sum of Rs. 10,000. B & Co. are entitled, to the extent of Rs. 10,000, to priority over C.

Right to pay off mortgagee in order to prevent sale.

35. Any person having an interest in mortgaged immoveable property may, at any time before a sale of such property has taken place under this chapter, tender to the next prior mortgagee the amount due to him on account of his mortgage. Such mortgagee is bound to accept such tender and to give a receipt for the sum due, and on such receipt being registered, his interest in the property in respect of the mortgage shall absolutely cease.

Effect of such payment by person having whole interest in property charged.

36. In such case, where the person making the tender has, subject to the mortgage, the absolute ownership of the property, the mortgage shall cease to exist and the property shall vest in the person making such tender.

Effect of payment by person only partially interested.

37. If the tender be made by a person not having, subject to the mortgage, the absolute ownership of the property, he shall acquire in respect of the property all the rights and powers of the mortgagee to whom he has made such tender.

Tacking abolished.

38. No mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original security. And no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such subsequent advance.

Redemption of one of two properties separately mortgaged.

39. If the owner of two or more properties creates separate mortgages on them by separate assurances, each mortgage may be dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

Illustration.

A, the owner of farms Z and Y, mortgages Z to B for Rs. 1,000. A afterwards mortgages Y to B for Rs. 1,000, making no stipulation as to any additional charge on Z. A may institute a suit for the redemption of the mortgage on Z alone.

Rights and powers of transferee of mortgage-debt or mortgaged property.

40. If property subject to a mortgage, or the right to receive mortgage-money, be transferred to a third person, the transferee has all the rights and powers of his transferor, under the mortgage, and is subject to the liabilities existing between his transferor and the mortgagor or mortgagee, as the case may be.

Where such a transfer is made for the purpose of securing the payment of money, the original mortgage-debt, if recovered by either the transferor or the transferee, is applicable, first, in payment of the costs of such recovery, secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being secured by the transfer; and the residue, if any, belongs to the transferor.

Charge made by assurance or will.

41. If by any assurance other than a mortgage-deed, or by any will, or under the provisions of this or any other Act, or by operation of law, certain property of one person is made security for the payment of certain money to another, all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagor shall apply to the owner of such property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagee shall apply to the owner of such money.

CHAPTER V.

OF LEASES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

Form of written lease.

42. A lease may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention of the parties to give and take, for rent or a fine, possession of, or profits derived from, immoveable property, for a time shorter in duration than the lessor's interest therein.

Exclusion of day on which term commences.

43. Where the time limited by a lease is expressed as commencing from a particular day, in computing that time such day shall be excluded.

Duration of term.

Where the time so limited is a year or a number of years, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, the lease shall last during the whole anniversary of the day on which such time commences.

Option to determine lease.

Where the time so limited is expressed to be determinable before its expiration, and there is no express agreement as to the party having the option of determining it, the lessee shall have such option.

Rights and liabilities of lessor and lessee.

44. Unless a contrary intention appears from the lease, the lessor and the lessee, as against one another, respectively possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the twenty-two rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property leased:—

(a). During the continuance of the lease, the lessee is entitled to the enjoyment of all rights, waters, water-courses, drains, ways and other easements enjoyed as incident to the property leased at the time when the lease was made.

(b). The lessor is bound to put the lessee in possession of the property leased, and to deliver it to him in a condition reasonably fit for the purpose for which both parties contemplate that the lessee is to use it.

(c). If the lessee is, by reason of the invalidity of the lessor's title, or by any act or default of the lessor, or of any person claiming under him, or of any person claiming by a superior title to his, disturbed in the peaceable enjoyment of the property leased, the lessee is entitled to compensation from the lessor for any loss thereby caused, and may also obtain from any Court of competent jurisdiction a decree for the rescission of the lease.

(d). If the lessee is, by reason of the invalidity of the lessor's title, deprived of any substantial part of the property leased, or of anything essential to his enjoyment thereof, he is entitled to compensation from the lessor for any loss thereby caused, and may also obtain from any Court of competent jurisdiction a decree for the rescission of the lease.

(e). In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation, the lessor is not answerable for any latent defect in the thing leased.

(f). The lessor is bound to do all things necessary for maintaining the roof, walls, beams, floors, stairs and drains of any house or other building comprised in the lease, and may for that purpose enter such building at all reasonable times.

(g). In all other respects the lessee is bound to keep, and at the end of the lease to restore, the property leased in as good condition as it was in at the time when he was put in possession, subject only to reasonable wear and tear.

(h). Deteriorations arising from want of painting or plastering, or from breaking of glass, are not to be considered as wear and tear, but shall be made good by the lessee.

(i). If by fire, tempest or flood, or violence of an army or of a mob, or other superior force, any part of the property leased be wholly destroyed or rendered substantially unfit for the purposes for which it was let, the obligation of the lessor as to that part shall cease unless he consents to reinstate the part so destroyed or rendered unfit; but in case of refusal or neglect to reinstate the same, the lessee shall be entitled to be discharged from his lease.

If the injury be occasioned by the wrongful act of either party, such party shall not be entitled to avail himself of the benefit of this provision.

(j). In case any rent remains unpaid at the end of a month from the time when it was payable and demanded, or in case within a reasonable time after notice default is made by the lessee in the performance of any of his other obligations under the lease, the lessor may institute a suit for a decree for the rescission of the lease and for possession of the property leased, unless the lessee shall, within a time to be specified by the Court, pay such arrears and perform such obligations, and also pay all costs and expenses sustained by the lessor through the lessee's default.

(k). In case the lease is rescinded for the default of the lessee, he is bound to pay the rent up to the time of such rescission, and also to make compensation for any other loss resulting from his default.

(l). If the lessor neglects to make, within a reasonable time after notice, repairs which he ought to make, the lessee may make the same himself, and deduct the expense of such repairs from the rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor.

(m). If the lessor neglects to make any payment which he is bound to make, and which if not made is recoverable against the property leased, the lessee may make such payment himself, and deduct it from his rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor.

(n). Every lessee who receives notice of any proceeding to recover the property leased to him or any part thereof, is bound to give notice thereof to the lessor with reasonable diligence; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission.

(o). The lessee is bound to give notice to the lessor, within a reasonable time, of any encroachment made upon, or any interference with the lessor's rights concerning, the property leased; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission.

(p). The lessee may use the soil and its products for all purposes of enjoyment as a reasonable owner would use them: but he may not destroy them wastefully, nor remove them after the expiration of the lease.

(q). No lessee of immoveable property who erects thereon any building, engine or machinery for agricultural purposes shall remove the same without first giving to the lessor or his agent one month's previous notice in writing of his intention so to do, and thereupon the lessor or his agent may elect to purchase the thing so proposed to be removed, and the lessee's right to remove the same shall thereby cease, and the same shall belong to the lessor, and the value thereof shall in case of dispute be ascertained and determined by two referees, one to be chosen by each party, or by an umpire to be named by such referees, and shall be paid or allowed in account by the lessor.

(r). Subject to the provisions of clause (g) and clause (q), the lessee has a right to remove at any time during his possession of the property leased, or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things not being products of the soil which he has affixed to the soil.

(s). When a lease of land determines in consequence of an uncertain event over which the lessee has no control, the lessee is entitled to all the crops growing upon the land for the season current when the lease determines, and to free ingress, egress and regress to reap and carry them.

(t). Upon the death of the lessor or of the lessee, his legal representative shall have all the rights and be subject to all liabilities of the lessor or lessee whom he represents.

(u). If the lessor transfers the property leased, or any part thereof, or any part of his interest therein, the transferee shall possess all the rights and, if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities of the lessor as to the property or part transferred so long as he is the owner of it; but the lessor shall not by reason only of such transfer cease to be subject to any of the liabilities imposed upon him by the lease, unless the lessee elects to treat the transferee as the person liable to him: Provided that if the lessee pay rent to the lessor without having reason to believe that such transfer has been made, he shall not be liable to pay such rent over again to the transferee.

Where only a part of the property leased is transferred by the lessor, he may determine what proportion of the rent reserved by the lease is payable in respect of the part so transferred.

(v). The lessee has a right to transfer his lease. The transferee may again transfer it. The lessee shall not, by reason of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities attaching to the lease, unless the lessor elects to treat the transferee as the person subject to such liabilities. Subject as aforesaid, each successive transferee, so long as he is entitled to the property leased, possesses all the rights, and is subject to all the liabilities, of the lessee.

45. Nothing in this Act shall affect any right to distrain which a lessor may exercise under any local law for the time being in force.

Saving of right to distrain.

46. In the absence of any written agreement and of any local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of property for purposes of cultivation shall be a lease from year to year terminable by six months' notice ending with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of property for any other purpose shall be a lease from month to month, terminable by fifteen days' notice ending with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Duration of certain leases in absence of written agreement or local usage.

Every notice under this section must be in writing signed by or on behalf of the party giving it and served on the party who is intended to be bound by it.

47. If a lessee of property remains in possession thereof after the expiration of the lease, and the lessor accepts rent from him, or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession, the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year or from month to month, according to the purpose for which the property is leased, as specified in the last preceding section.

Effect of holding over.

Illustrations.

(a). A lets a house to B for five years. B sub-lets the house to C at a monthly rent of Rs. 100. The five years expire, but C continues in possession of the house and pays the rent to A. C's lease is renewed from month to month.

(b). A lets a farm to B for the life of C. C dies, but B continues in possession with A's assent. B's lease is renewed from year to year.

CHAPTER VI.

OF EXCHANGES.

48. Exchange is a contract by which the parties mutually give, or agree to give, one thing for another, neither thing or both things being money only.

"Exchange" defined.

Rights and obligations of parties.

On an exchange of money, each party thereby warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Exchange of money.

CHAPTER VII.

OF SETTLEMENTS.

49. "Settlement" means in this chapter any disposition of property—

"Settlement" defined.

(a) which is not testamentary, and is not founded on any valuable consideration, or

(b) which is made in consideration of marriage, or

(c) which is made for the purpose of dividing property of the settlor among his family or those for whom he desires to provide,

but does not include a gift made by a Hindú Muhammadan or Buddhist.

50. In order that a settlement should be binding, it is not necessary that it should be made for a consideration.

Consideration not necessary to make settlement binding.

51. A settlement made for the purpose of depriving present or future creditors or other persons having demands against the settlor, of their demands on him, is voidable at the option of such creditors or other persons, and so far as regards the demands of such creditors or other persons, but not as against a person who, having no knowledge of the purpose for which the settlement was made, has contracted for or acquired an interest therein by marriage or for other valuable consideration, nor as against claimants under such persons. Such settlement is nevertheless binding on the settlor and on all persons claiming under him.

Voidability of settlement made in fraud of creditors.

EXPLANATION.—Where there is no positive evidence of fraud, the intent to deprive creditors and other persons of their demands on the settlor may be inferred from

(a) the indebtedness of the settlor at the date of the settlement,

(b) want of consideration for the settlement, and

(c) any other circumstance indicative of fraud.

52. A condition or limitation in a settlement or will restraining any person from parting with or disposing of his interest, is void.

Condition restraining alienation of interest.

53. A condition or limitation contained in a settlement or will making an interest thereby reserved or given to or in trust for any person to cease on his becoming insolvent, or endeavouring to transfer or dispose of the same, is void.

Condition making interest determinable on insolvency or alienation.

54. If by a settlement property be given to a person then living in general terms, without indicating the time when it is to be paid or delivered, such person has a vested interest therein from the day of the execution of the settlement, and if he dies without having received it, it shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representatives.

Vesting of gift in general terms.

55. Where by the terms of a settlement a thing is given to a person not in existence, but he is not entitled to possession of it immediately upon his birth, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the settlement, become vested in such person upon his birth, and shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative if he dies before that time, and without having received it. And in such cases it is from his birth said to be vested in interest.

Vesting in interest of gift to unborn person not entitled to possession immediately on birth.

56. The provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 100 to 104, both inclusive, 107 and 108, 111 to 127, both inclusive, and 167, shall be applicable, so far as the nature of the case will admit, to gifts contained in settlements.

Application of sections of Act X of 1865 to gifts contained in settlements.

57. Whenever a person becomes entitled in possession by virtue of a settlement to money or any other property yielding income, he shall be entitled to receive the interest or income thereof from that time.

Right to income of property coming into possession under settlement.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF GIFTS FOR RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE PURPOSES.

58. No person having a nephew or niece, or any nearer relative, shall have power to give any property to religious or charitable uses, by any instrument which is required to be registered, unless such instrument be executed not less than twelve months before his death, and duly registered.

Gift to charitable uses by person having certain relatives.

59. Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, property may be assured in perpetuity for the benefit of the public in the advancement of religion, knowledge, commerce, health, safety, or any other object beneficial to mankind. But no such assurance shall take effect until it has been sanctioned by some public authority to be designated by the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette.

Assurance of property in perpetuity for use of any community or institution.

The grant or refusal of such sanction may be notified by an entry in the book in which the assurance is registered, and the registering officer shall make such entry on receiving from the public authority aforesaid a written order in this behalf.

If no such order is made within two years next after the time when the property becomes applicable for the benefit of the public, it shall be deemed that sanction has been granted.

If such sanction is refused, the property shall devolve as if no such assurance had been made.

CHAPTER IX.

OF APPORTIONMENT.

60. All rents, annuities, pensions, dividends and other periodical payments shall, upon the determination of such payments by the death of the recipient or otherwise, be apportionable as if they had been made to accrue due from day to day, but to be payable on the days appointed for the payment thereof.

Apportionment of rents and other periodical payments.

Nothing in this section shall affect any express provision in any instrument binding on the recipient.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LIMITED OWNERS.

61. A person having a limited interest in any immoveable property is not entitled to do or omit any act the doing or omitting of which is destructive or permanently injurious to such property.

Rights and obligations of persons having limited interest in property.

EXPLANATION.—No act done in the reasonable use and enjoyment of property is destructive or injurious within the meaning of this section, though it may exhaust the substance of the property.

Illustrations.

(a). A Hindú widow is in possession as such of land protected from floods and rendered cultivable by a dyke. She is not entitled to cut the dyke and turn the land into a lake.

(b). A is tenant for life of land on which a dwelling-house stands. He is not entitled to pull down the house. Nor must he suffer it to fall for want of necessary repairs.

(c). A is tenant for life of land in which coal lies. He is entitled to work and use the coal.

(d). A is tenant for life of land planted with trees. He is entitled to cut the trees at maturity, but is not entitled to cut them when immature, except for the purpose of thinning out or otherwise benefiting the plantation.

Save as aforesaid, such person or his legal representative has the same right as a lessee to remove during the continuance of such interest, or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things which he has affixed to the soil in which he had such limited interest, and all crops growing upon the land for the season current when such limited interest determines.

62. A person having a limited interest in possession in any property, is bound to discharge all periodical payments due on account of any mortgage thereon taking effect during the continuance of his interest in priority to such interest, and all taxes and other public periodical charges to which such property is liable.

Obligation of limited owner in possession of property mortgaged.

63. Every advantage or increase of value accruing (accidentally or through the exertions of any one having a limited interest) to any property in which successive interests exist, belongs to all the persons having any interest in the property in the same shares and manner as they are entitled to the property.

Right to increase of value to property in which there are successive interests.

EXPLANATION.—A person having a mortgage on property has not thereby an interest within the meaning of this section.

64. Any person claiming any immoveable property after the death of any minor, married woman, or other person, and having reason to believe that such minor, married woman or other person is dead, and that his or her death is concealed by his or her guardian, husband or any other person, may once a year move the High Court to order the person concealing or suspected to conceal such person to produce him or her at such time and place, and before such persons (if any), as the Court may direct. And the High Court, if it think fit, shall make such order, and in case of disobedience thereto, the person so claiming the property may enter thereon and receive the profits thereof as if the person so concealed or suspected to be concealed were dead.

Discovery of death of tenant for life.

65. Nothing in this chapter applies to lessees.

Saving of lessees.

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE DISCRETION OF THE COURTS TO DEAL WITH SETTLED LAND.

66. If any person having, under a settlement or will, a limited interest in possession in any immoveable property, apply under this section to the High Court or District Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction such property or any part thereof is situate, the Court may, if it deem it just and expedient to do so,—

Powers exercisable by Court on application of person interested in possession in settled immoveable property.

(a) make such leases of the whole or any part of the property for such terms of years, for such rents, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(b) make such sales of the whole or any part of the property, for such sums, payable either at once or periodically, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(c) appropriate any part of the property for the formation of streets, roads, gardens or other open spaces, tanks, sewers, drains or water-courses, and authorize the erection of buildings and works thereon;

and generally deal with the property in any way the Court may think just and beneficial to the persons interested therein.

67. Every such application shall be in writing, and notice thereof shall be served through the Court on all trustees under the settlement or will and on any other persons who in the opinion of the Court ought to be so served, and shall be published in such newspapers as the Court may direct.

Service of notice and advertisement of application.

68. The Court may permit any person, whether interested in the property or not, to appear and be heard in opposition to or in support of any such application on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Appearance to oppose or support application.

69. The Court may order the costs of all or any parties to any application under this section to be paid out of any principal money receivable on account of any dealing with the property which is the subject of the application or to be a charge on such property or on any other property belonging to the same owners.

Costs of application.

Leases under section 66.

71. All or any part of the proceeds of any lease, sale or disposition under section 66 may, if the Court think fit, be paid into Court.

Payment into Court of money receivable under section 66.

72. The Court shall declare what parts of such proceeds so received shall be considered as income, and may direct the same to be paid to the person for the time being entitled in possession to the property dealt with; and the residue of such money shall be applied as the Court shall direct in one or more of the manners following:—

Power to direct payment of income to person entitled.

Application of residue.

(a) the payment of the amount due in respect of any charge on the property dealt with;

(b) the purchase of other property or the investment in securities for the benefit of the persons interested in the property dealt with;

(c) the payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled to the property dealt with;

EXPLANATION—In this section the term "securities" means—

(d) promissory notes, debentures, stock and other securities of the Government of India;

(e) bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India;

(f) stock or debentures of, or shares in, railway or other companies, the interest whereon has been guaranteed by the Government of India; and

(g) debentures or other securities for money issued by or on behalf of any municipal body under the authority of any Act of an Indian legislature.

CHAPTER XII.

OF POWERS.

73. Where a person is authorized to determine the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of his ownership, he is said to have power to appoint such property.

Power to appoint, defined.

The person who gives the power is called the donor, the person to whom the power is given is called the donee, and the persons for whose benefit the power is to be exercised are called the objects of the power. A person to whom any property is appointed is called an appointee.

Donor, donee, objects, appointee, defined.

Illustration.

A grants land to B for life, with remainder to such of B's children as B shall appoint. B appoints to C and D, two of his children, in equal shares. A is the donor of the power, B the donee, B's children the objects, and C and D the appointees.

A power authorising the donee to appoint to whomsoever and for whatsoever interest he pleases, is called a general power.

General power.

A power restricted in respect either of its objects or the interests that may be conferred under it, is called a special power.

Special power.

Rules as to all powers.

74. Where a power is vested in several donees, all who are living must unite in its execution; but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, it may be exercised by the survivors or the survivor, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Exercise of power vested in several donees.

75. The donor may direct that the power shall be exercised by will only or by non-testamentary instrument only.

Modes in which powers may be executed.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by will only, it must be exercised by will duly executed according to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, or according to such other law as at the time of the execution of the power may be applicable to a will executed by the donee.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by non-testamentary instrument only, it must be exercised by an instrument executed as an assurance and registered.

If he imposes no such restriction on the exercise of the power, it may be exercised either by such will or by such instrument as lastly hereinbefore mentioned.

Jurisdiction to aid defective executions abolished.

When the power is not properly exercised, no Court shall in any case compel the person in possession of the property to which the power relates to deliver the property as if the power had been properly exercised or shall otherwise aid the defective execution.

Validity of forms hereby prescribed.

76. All appointments made in the manner directed by section 75 shall be deemed to be executed and attested in proper form, notwithstanding that some other mode of execution or attestation has been prescribed by the donor.

Concurrence where power is to be exercised with consent of several persons.

77. Where a power is to be exercised with the consent of several persons, all who are living must concur in the consent, but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, the consent of the survivors or the survivor is sufficient, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Consent to the exercise of a power must be given by an instrument executed as an assurance and registered.

Consent to the exercise of a power need not be given by the instrument by which the power is exercised, but if it is given by a different instrument, such instrument must be executed at a time not later than the time at which the donee of the power executes the instrument by which he exercises the power.

Recital of power not necessary.

78. If a person disposes of property in such manner as is authorized by a power vested in him, such disposition shall take effect out of the power, notwithstanding that the power is not mentioned or referred to in the instrument of disposition.

Illustration.

Land is settled upon A for life with a special power to charge, by a non-testamentary instrument, portions in favour of his children. Subsequently a general power to dispose of the land by any instrument is vested in A. He executes an assurance, by which he directs that a sum of money shall be raised out of the land and settled on his son B for life, with remainder to B.'s wife and children. Such an appointment cannot take effect under the special power, but may be treated as a valid exercise of the general power.

Power exerciseable by several instruments executed at different times.

79. The donee of a power need not exercise it entirely and at once by a single instrument, but he may from time to time exercise any unexhausted part thereof at his discretion.

If the donee has purported to exercise his power in such a manner that his appointment is void, the power is, to that extent, unexhausted.

Disposition intended to take effect after interests appointed under void power.

80. Where a power given by any instrument is void in its creation, no disposition or gift made by the same instrument shall be deemed void merely because it is intended to take effect after the interests to be appointed under the power or in default of any such appointment.

Illustration.

A marriage-settlement provides that the settled property shall belong to the husband and wife successively for their lives; that after the death of the survivor of them, it shall go to such of the children of the marriage and in such shares as the husband and wife shall jointly appoint, the interest of each such child to become vested in him on his attaining the age of twenty-five years; and that in the event of there being no child of the marriage who shall attain that age, or in default of appointment, the property shall belong to the husband or his legal representative.

Here the power to appoint the property is, under section 56, void in its creation; but the ultimate interest given to the husband takes effect.

General Powers.

Effect of general power.

81. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, the donee shall, so far as regards his power of disposition, his creditors and all persons who contract with him for valuable consideration to obtain any interest in the property comprised in the power, be deemed to be the absolute owner of such property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

This rule is to take effect notwithstanding that the donor has prescribed some particular method for executing the power.

Illustrations.

A, the absolute owner of land, settles it on B for life, with remainder to such purposes as B—

shall appoint, or shall by deed appoint, or shall by will appoint, or shall by deed or will appoint,

and, in case B dies without making any such appointment, on C absolutely.

If B—

grants the land by assurance, or bequeathes it, or contracts to sell it, or incurs debt,

the property is liable, in the hands of either B or C, as the case may be, to the claims of B.'s grantee, legatee, purchaser or creditors, as the case may be.

If B dies having made no disposition of the property, C is entitled to it, subject to any claims which B's creditors may establish against it.

Effect of general power without disposition of property in case of non-appointment.

82. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, and makes no disposition of the property in the event of non-appointment, the donee shall be considered as the absolute owner of the property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

Illustration.

A, the absolute owner of property, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint and makes no gift over in default of appointment. B dies without making any disposition of the property. The property vests in the representatives of B, and does not revert to A or his representatives.

Special Powers.

Interest conferrible by donee of special power.

83. If the donee has only a special power, he cannot confer any interest in the property comprised therein which could not have been conferred by the donor at the time of the creation of the power.

Illustrations.

(a). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint. After the settlement is made C is born. B then appoints the fund to C for life with remainder to C's children absolutely. The appointment is valid, though C has no children at the time.

(b). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to his children as he shall appoint. At the date of the settlement B has no child, but afterwards has a son C. B then appoints to C for his life, with remainder to his children. Such interest could not have been conferred by A, and B's appointment is void.

Effect of appointment to objects, some authorized and others unauthorized.

84. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to objects authorized by the power and also to objects not so authorized, the appointment in favour of the authorized objects shall take effect if their interests can be separated from those of the unauthorized objects.

Illustration.

Property is settled on A for life, and after his death on such of his children as he shall appoint, and in default of appointment to all A's children equally. A appoints that the property shall go after his death to his widow for her life, and after her death to two of his sons, C and D, in equal shares. There are five children of A. The appointment in favour of A's widow is invalid, and the rents and profits of the property during her life will go to all the five children in equal shares, but after her death to C and D absolutely.

Appointment in excess of power when voidable at election of appointee.

85. Where the donee of a special power purports in exercise of the power to confer a larger interest than is authorized thereby, such appointment shall, if the appointee so elect, be void only for the excess, and good for the residue, if they can be separated.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a life-interest in Rámnagar, with power to grant leases thereof for 30 years. A makes a lease of Rámnagar for 50 years. Such lease is good for 30 years only.

(b). A having a life-interest in Rámnagar and Sultánpur, with power to grant leases of Rámnagar for 21 years, grants a lease comprising both Rámnagar and Sultánpur for 21 years. After A's death the lessee may, if he thinks fit, elect to retain the lease as a lease of Rámnagar only, till the end of the 21 years.

Invalidity of appointment creating authorized and unauthorized interests not separable.

86. Where, by an appointment under a special power, interests authorized and also interests unauthorized are created, and the interests authorized cannot be distinguished from those unauthorized, the whole is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A fund is settled on A during his life, and after his death on his children as he shall appoint. A appoints the annual income for the benefit of his son B and his wife and children, in such manner as trustees shall think fit. The appointment is wholly void.

(b). Under a similar settlement, A having legitimate children by B, his wife, and others by C and D, his concubines, appoints the property to be divided among his children by B, C and D, the shares of the sons to be double those of the daughters. Here the interests authorized and unauthorized cannot be distinguished, and the appointment is wholly void.

Appointment with unauthorized condition.

87. When a person exercising a special power annexes to the gift a condition or qualification which is not authorized by the power, the gift is good and the condition or qualification only is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having a power to appoint a fund among his children, gives a part of it to his son B on condition that B shall settle it on B's children. The condition is void, and the gift is absolute.

(b). A, having a power to appoint a fund to a limited class of objects of whom B is one, appoints it to B, adding a condition that B shall release a debt owing to him by A, and also pay Rs. 1,000 to C. The appointment is good; but the condition is void.

Contract not to exercise power of leasing.

88. If a beneficial interest in immoveable property and also a power to let it are given to the same person and he grants his interest in the property, he may enter into a contract not to exercise his power.

Invalidity of agreement not to exercise power.

89. Save as provided by section 88, an agreement or undertaking not to exercise a power which is given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is void.

Frauds on powers.

90. Where a power given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is exercised with a view to the benefit, direct or indirect, of the donee, in any mode not intended by the donor, the appointment is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of her children, appoints the whole fund absolutely to one child, who has previously entered into an agreement with her to give one-half of the fund to A's husband absolutely. The appointment is void.

(b). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of his children, appoints a portion of the fund to his son C, a minor, whom he knows to be suffering from a mortal disease; A being the person entitled to C's property in the event of his death. The appointment is void.

(c). A, having power to grant leases of certain settled land, exercises the power in favour of B in consideration of Rs. 1,000 paid to A by B as a fine or premium. The lease is void, and A holds the Rs. 1,000 in trust for the persons interested under the settlement.

Right to property in default of appointment.

91. If the instrument by which a power of appointment in favour of specified objects is created does not provide for the event of no appointment being made, the property belongs (subject to any appointment that may have been made) in equal shares to the said objects.

Illustration.

A settles property on B for life with remainder to B's children as he shall appoint, and makes no disposition in default of appointment. B has two children, C and D, and appoints Rs. 1,000, part of the property, to C. Then C dies. Then B dies without making any further appointment. After paying Rs. 1,000 to C or his representative, the residue of the property is divisible in equal moieties between D and the representative of C.

Appointment of whole property to some only of several objects in favour of which power is given.

92. Under a power of appointment in favour of several objects, an appointment of the whole property to one or more of such objects exclusively of the others is valid:

Provided that, where the assurance creating the power declares the minimum amount or value of the share from which no object of the power is to be excluded, the appointment shall be invalid so far as it excludes any such object from any such share, and no farther.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF PROPERTY HELD BY SEVERAL PERSONS.

Right to property by survivorship created only by express words.

93. Where property is held by more persons than one, the share of any of them having at the time of his death a beneficial heritable interest therein shall become vested in his legal representative, unless the property is held under an instrument which expressly provides that on the death of one his share shall accrue to the survivors.

Nothing in this section applies to property belonging to an undivided Hindú family.

Illustration.

A and B jointly advance money on mortgage. A dies intestate. The money advanced by A belongs to his legal representative.

Partition of immoveable property.

94. When immoveable property is held in possession by joint owners, any one of them may institute a suit in the proper Court, and such Court may direct a partition of the property to be made among the joint owners, and for the purposes of partition may, in order to equalise the value of the shares, direct any money to be paid by one to another or to be charged on one share in favour of another.

Power to direct sale and to distribute proceeds.

If it appear to the Court that a sale of the property and a distribution of the proceeds would be more beneficial for the persons interested than a division of the property between them, the Court may, on the application of any such person, direct a sale of the property.

Power to allow person interested to bid for property sold for purpose of partition.

95. On any sale under the last preceding section, the Court may, if it think fit, allow any of the persons interested in the property to bid at the sale, on such terms as to setting-off or accounting for the purchase-money or any part thereof, or as to any other matters, as to the Court seems reasonable.

Payment into Court.

96. All sums of money paid under the two last preceding sections may if the Court think fit, be paid into Court.

Saving of laws relating to partition of revenue-paying estates.

97. Nothing in this chapter shall affect any local law for the time being in force relating to the partition of estates paying revenue to Government.

Waste by one joint-owner.

98. When one joint-owner of immoveable property commits, or threatens to commit, waste to the same without the consent of the other joint owner, that other may institute a suit to recover compensation for the injury caused to him by the waste or to obtain an injunction to stay the waste, as the case may require.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF ASSIGNMENTS OF THINGS IN ACTION.

Sale, &c., of things in action.

99. No sale or disposition of, or charge on, any debt, and no sale or disposition of, or charge on, any beneficial interest in moveable property, shall have any operation against the debtor or against the person in whom the property is vested, until notice of the sale, disposition or charge is given to him, unless he is a party to such sale, disposition or charge; and every dealing by such debtor or person, not being a party to, and not having received notice of, a sale, disposition or charge, with the debt owing by him, or with the property vested in him, shall be valid as against such sale, disposition or charge.

Illustrations.

(a). A owes money to B, who assigns the debt to C. B then demands the debt from A, who having no notice of the assignment, pays B. The payment is valid, and C cannot sue A for the debt.

(b). A has jewels deposited with B, a jeweller. A mortgages them to C. A then executes an assignment of them to D, who takes his assignment to B and gets the jewels from him before he, B, has received any notice of C's mortgage. B is justified in handing the jewels to D, and C has no remedy against D.

Notice to be in writing signed.

100. Every such notice must be in writing signed by the person making such sale, disposition or charge, or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf.

Liability of assignee of thing in action.

101. The person to whom a debt or charge is assigned shall take it subject to all the liabilities to which the assignor was subject in respect thereof at the date of the assignment.

Illustration.

(a). A debenture is issued in fraud of a public company to A. A sells and transfers the debenture to B, who has no notice of the fraud. The debenture is invalid in the hands of B.

Saving of negotiable instruments.

102. Nothing in this chapter applies to debts secured by negotiable instruments.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill embodies the bulk of the rules submitted in the sixth report of the late Indian Law Commission. One of its chief objects is to bring the rules which regulate the transmission of property between living persons into harmony with the rules affecting its devolution upon death, and thus to furnish the necessary complement of the work commenced in framing the law of succession, now Act X of 1865. Another is to render more simple and efficient the law relating to mortgages and conditional sales. The expediency of legislation on this subject was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of Tambasvámi Mudali v. Muhammad Husain, L. R. 2 Indian Appeals, 241. Rules are also laid down on the other subjects hereinafter mentioned.

The Bill is divided into fourteen chapters.

Preliminary.

Chapter I contains the usual preliminary matter. The repealing clause will get rid of several obsolete statutes relating to land which are still in force in the Presidency Towns and, in the case of Europeans, may possibly be in force elsewhere. The saving clause exempts from the operation of the proposed Act acquired rights and liabilities incurred before the Act comes into force, subsequently acquired rights of pre-emption, options of mortgagees to make further advances (such options exist in Malabar and possibly elsewhere), contracts of bottomry and respondentia, transfers of British ships, sales in execution of decrees or for arrears of rent or revenue.

Assurances of Immoveable Property.

Chapter II deals with assurances of immoveable property. It declares (section 4) that every person competent to contract may make an assurance of property of which he is the owner, or which he is entitled to transfer, or on which he is entitled to create a charge. It declares (sections 5, 6 and 7) that land may be conveyed (a) with the benefit of, or subject to, an easement: (b) subject to an obligation for the benefit of the public or of the neighbouring owner, or (c) with the reservation of any right of user, severance and removal. It lays down rules (section 8) as to the mode in which the transfer inter vivos of immoveable property can alone be effected, and applies (section 9) to assurances the rules of construction contained in the Succession Act. It declares (section 10) that, unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, a grant shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the subject, and a grant of land shall be deemed to comprise trees and fixtures. Covenants running with the land are dealt with by the same section.

Sales of Immoveable Property.

The Bill then enumerates (section 11) the rights and liabilities which, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, arise in the case of a sale of land. The principal changes in the law here made are as follows: the seller will be responsible for loss caused to the buyer, or any person claiming under him, through any invalidity of the seller's title not known to the buyer when the contract was entered into and the seller's lien for unpaid purchase-money will cease as soon as the assurance is registered. Section 12 declares that, except so far as regards the vendor's lien, a contract for sale shall not of itself have the effect of creating any interest in the property sold: the Bill will thus get rid of much difficult law relating to the purchaser's equitable ownership, and the rights created by charging and assigning it. Lastly, section 13 declares that a person paying the purchase-money for any immoveable property, but having the transfer made to another, will not by reason of the payment be entitled to the property or to any interest therein. It will thus become the absolute property of the transferee, unless he is made a trustee in some way more definite than by the mere payment of the money by another person; and it is hoped that this rule will tend to prevent the litigation which arises from the doctrine of equitable presumption.

Mortgages and Charges.

Chapter IV deals with mortgages and charges. 'Mortgage' is so defined and explained as to include, besides simple mortgages, usufructuary mortgages, mortgages by conditional sale, and their combinations. The Bill declares (section 15) the respective rights of mortgagor and mortgagee on completion of a mortgage. It defines (sections 16, 17 and 18) the rights and duties of a mortgagee in possession. It shews when the mortgagor or the mortgagee may obtain an injunction to stay waste committed or threatened by the other. It provides rules (sections 19—24) as to suits for foreclosure or sale. Powers of sale given by the mortgage-deed to the mortgagee have been held void in the Mufassal: the Bill (section 24) declares them to be valid: but contains provisions for the protection of the mortgagor similar to those in 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, ss. 11—14. It provides rules (sections 25, 26 and 27) as to suits for redemption. It contains provisions as to interest (section 28) and costs (sections 29, 30). It declares (section 31) that a deposit by a debtor of his title-deeds, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract for a mortgage and to entitle the creditor merely to sue for specific performance. Any person having an interest in the property charged may prevent a sale at the suit of a mortgagee (section 35) by paying off the mortgagee who requires it, and the registration of the mortgagee's receipt for the money will be sufficient without any further assurance. If the payment be made by a person having the whole interest in the property subject to the mortgage, the mortgage so paid off will (section 36) cease to exist: if the payment be made by a person not having the whole of such interest, he will acquire (section 37) the rights of the incumbrancer whom he has paid off.

The Bill abolishes the system of tacking, by declaring in sections 38 and 39 that no mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original mortgage; that no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such advance; and that, if the owner of two properties creates separate mortgages upon them by separate assurances, each property may be redeemed or dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

It has been held that, where a mortgage extends to future advances, the mortgagee cannot safely make such advances, if he has notice of an intervening second mortgage. But the Bill (section 34) provides that, if a charge made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a second charge shall be postponed to the first charge in respect of advances not exceeding the maximum, though made subsequently to the second charge with notice thereof.

Leases.

Chapter V deals with leases of immoveable property. It lays down rules (section 43) as to the commencement and duration of leases. It states in some detail (section 44) the obligations which, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, are to arise out of the relationship of landlord and tenant. Special notice may be called to the provision enabling a lessee, where the lessor omits to make repairs which he is bound to make, himself to make them and deduct the expense from the rent, and the similar provision for the case of failure on the part of the lessor to make payments, which, if not made, are recoverable against the thing leased; to the provisions binding tenants to inform their landlords of proceedings to eject, and of encroachments, and to the power of obtaining a decree for the rescission of a lease, in a suit by either party, in case of misconduct by the other.

The rules as to fixtures in section 44, clauses (q) and (r), are, it is thought, likely to prove useful. No distinction is made between ornamental, trade and agricultural fixtures, save that the landlord is given a right (resembling that conferred by 15 Vic., cap. 25, section 23) to purchase agricultural fixtures.

The rest of this chapter saves (section 45) any right to distrain possessed under any local law: provides rules (section 46) as to the duration of leases in the absence of written agreement or of local law or usage; and treats (section 47) of the effect of holding over.

Exchanges.

Chapter VI deals with Exchange or Barter. It is taken from the New York Civil Code, and merely declares that each party has the rights and obligations of a seller as to that which he gives, and those of a buyer as to that which he takes; and that, on an exchange of money, each party warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Settlements.

Chapter VII deals with settlements, which are defined so as to include endowments and absolute gifts to children and others, excluding, however, gifts by Natives. The Bill declares (section 50) that a settlement may be binding, though not made for a consideration. Settlements made in fraud of creditors will be voidable (section 51) at their option; but not as against persons who, without notice and for valuable consideration, have acquired interests thereunder. The English law, by which a voluntary settlor of land can by subsequent sale defeat the settlement he has made, is not perpetuated here. Conditions restraining any person from parting with his or her interest will be void (section 52), and when property is settled on a married woman, it will therefore no longer be possible to deprive her of the power of anticipation. Such power is the logical consequence of a married woman's capacity, under Act IX of 1872, to enter into contracts. The Bill also contains provisions as to making interests under settlements or wills determinable on insolvency or attempted alienation (section 53), as to the vesting of gifts in general terms (section 54), as to the vesting of a gift to an unborn person not entitled to possession immediately on birth (section 55). Various sections of the Indian Succession Act (100—104, 107, 108, 111—127, 167) are applied (section 56), so far as the nature of the case will admit, to gifts contained in settlements.

Gifts for Religious and Charitable purposes.

In accordance with the Succession Act, the Bill prohibits (section 58) persons who have near relatives from giving property to religious or charitable uses unless by an instrument executed not less than twelve months before their death and duly registered. And while allowing property to be given in perpetuity for such uses, the Bill requires (section 59) that it shall be given with the sanction of some public authority to be designated by the Government. A mode of notifying the grant or refusal of such sanction is provided. Where the sanction is refused, the property will devolve as if the gift had not been made.

Apportionment.

Chapter IX consists of a single section (60) treating of the apportionment of rents and other periodical payments.

Rights and Liabilities of limited Owners.

In Chapter X, the Bill abolishes the distinction between limited owners with, and those without, impeachment of waste. Such persons (section 61) will not be entitled to do any act destructive or permanently injurious to the property; but it is explained that no act done in the reasonable enjoyment of property (such, for example, as working a mine) is 'destructive' or 'injurious,' though it may exhaust the substance of the property. The power of such persons and their representatives to remove fixtures will be the same as that given to tenants under a lease. Persons having limited interests in possession will be bound (section 62) to discharge periodical payments due under prior mortgages and also taxes and other public periodical charges. The right to increase in the value of property in which there are successive interests is declared (section 63); and a provision (resembling that made by 6 Anne, chapter 72, section 1) is made for the production of tenants for life, when the remainder-man has reason to suspect fraud.

Leases and Sales of settled Estates.

Chapter XI is suggested by the English Statute 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 20. It gives the Courts (here defined to mean only the High Courts and the District Courts) a power to deal with lands subject to a settlement or will, by lease or sale, or by appropriating any part of the property for the formation of streets, roads, gardens, tanks, &c. The various modes in which the proceeds of the sales or leases may be applied are specified.

Powers.

Chapter XII treats of powers, i. e., rights to determine the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of ownership. It reproduces the principal rules of the English law on the subject. But the Bill does not propose to give the Courts power to aid defective executions of powers. This jurisdiction does not rest on any sound principle, and is, indeed, hardly consistent with a strict system of registration. In the case of the exercise of a power given to several donees some of whom die before it has been fully exercised, the Bill declares (section 74) that the survivors may do all that might have been done by the whole number. An analogous declaration is made (section 77) as to a power exercisable with the consent of several persons.

Property held by several Persons.

Chapter XIII contains some rules as to the devolution of shares of several persons holding the same property. The Bill proposes to declare that a right by survivorship can be created only by express words. This chapter also contains some provisions (sections 94, 95, 96) as to partitions of immoveable property, which may be useful in cases to which no local law as to the partition of revenue-paying estates applies. In case of illegal waste by one of several persons holding the same property, power is given (section 98) to sue for compensation or to obtain an injunction.

Assignments of Things in Action.

Chapter XIV deals with the assignment of debts and other things which are not in the possession of the person entitled to them, but for the recovery of which he may be obliged to sue. The only change proposed to be made in what is now the law in all Indian Courts is, that the Bill requires (section 99) the assignee to complete his title by giving the debtor notice in writing of the assignment. Negotiable instruments are excluded from the operation of this chapter.

The subject of the Bill is one of great difficulty and complexity, and errors will doubtless be found in the present draft. Ample time will be given for the searching criticism which it is hoped the draft will receive at the hands of the Local Governments, the Judges and the legal profession.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th June 1877:—

No. 11 OF 1877.

A Bill to amend the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876.

WHEREAS it is expedient to exempt from the operation of the fourth section of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, certain suits instituted in the Districts mentioned in the Schedule hereto annexed; It is hereby enacted as follows:— Preamble.

1. To section five of the said Act the following clause shall be added (namely)— Addition to section 5, Act X of 1876.

"and nothing in section four shall be held to prevent the Civil Courts in the Districts mentioned in the second Schedule hereto annexed from exercising such jurisdiction as, according to the terms of Acts No. XI of 1852, No. XXIII of 1871, and Bombay Acts No. II of 1863, No. VII of 1863 and No. III of 1874, or of any other law in force on the twenty-eighth day of March 1876, they could have exercised over claims against Government—

"(a) relating to any property appertaining to the office of any hereditary officer appointed or recognized under Bombay Act No. III of 1874, or any other law for the time being in force, or of any other village-officer or servant:

"(b) to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land-revenue:

"(c) to receive payments charged on, or payable out of, the land-revenue."

2. The following Schedule shall be added to the said Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, (namely)— Schedule added to Act X of 1876.

"THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

The District of Ahmedabad.

The District of Kaira, exclusive of the Panch Mahâls.

The District of Broach.

The District of Surat, exclusive of the lapsed State of Mándví, as described in the schedule annexed to Act X of 1848.

The District of Tanna.

The District of Colába, exclusive of the lapsed State of Colába mentioned in Act VIII of 1853.

The District of Ratnágiri.

The District of Kanara."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), section 4, sub-section (a), article 1, and sub-section (f), articles 1 and 2, withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in every part of the Bombay Presidency (1) claims against Government relating to property appertaining to the office of any hereditary officer appointed or recognized under Bombay Act III of 1874, or any other law for the time being in force, or of any other village-officer or servant, and (2) claims against Government to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land-revenue, or to receive payments charged on, or payable out of, the land-revenue.

2. The object of this Bill is to restore to the Civil Courts, so far as the Old Provinces are concerned, whatever jurisdiction has been taken away by the articles above referred to.

3. The reasons for the Bill are shortly as follows: In the Old Provinces the Courts had, to a certain extent, cognizance of the claims in question; obscure and disputed claims to exemption from land-revenue or from enhanced assessments are commoner there than in other parts of India; and for these and other causes the change effected by the articles above mentioned is distasteful to the population.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th June 1877 :—

No. 12 OF 1877.

A Bill to amend the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876.

Preamble.

FOR the purpose of amending the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act No. VI of 1876; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Amendment of Act VI of 1876, section 12, clause 2.

1. For the word "six" shall be substituted the word "twelve" in the second clause of the twelfth section of the said Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Government of Bengal being of opinion that the period of six months provided by section 12 of the Chutia Nágpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876, is too short for deciding whether an estate should be retained under management or relinquished under that section, the period of six months is, by the amending Bill, increased to twelve months, which period it is believed will be sufficient for the purpose.

CHAPTER II.

OF ASSURANCES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

5. Immoveable property may be granted with the right to an easement affecting any other immoveable property belonging to the grantor, or subject to an easement for the benefit of any other property. (Conveyance of easements.)

Easements may be made the subject of separate grants.

Where any easement is actually enjoyed with any property the subject of any grant, the grant shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, be deemed to pass such easement.

6. Immoveable property may be granted subject to an obligation for the benefit of the public or of any neighbouring owner. (Power to convey subject to obligation for benefit of public or neighbour.)

Such obligation shall bind the grantee and all persons claiming the granted property under him, and may be the subject of a separate grant.

Whenever such an obligation is created for the benefit of the public, it may be enforced by the grantor and his legal representatives or by the Government as a civil right.

Illustrations.

(a). A grants certain land to Z subject to the condition that Z shall not, without the consent of A, build any dwelling-house within a hundred yards of certain adjoining land of A. A and all persons claiming such land under him may enforce this obligation on Z, and all persons claiming the granted land under him.

(b). A grants certain land to Z, subject to the condition that Z shall for ever maintain thereon a fountain for the use of travellers.

Z, being the owner of certain land, covenants with A that he will for ever maintain thereon a fountain for the use of travellers.

In each case either A or the Government may enforce the obligation against Z, and all persons claiming the land under him.

7. Immoveable property may be granted with the reservation of any right of using the same or of severing and removing any part thereof. Such rights may be the subject of separate grant. (Power to convey with reservation of certain rights.)

Illustrations.

(a). A may grant to B his lands of Rámnagar, reserving to himself the right to dig for and remove the coal and other minerals thereon, and to do in person, or by his servants, whatever is necessary for obtaining and removing the coal and other minerals.

(b). A may grant to B, by a separate assurance, the right to plant fruit-trees on A's lands of Rámnagar, and to gather the fruit.

8. An assurance may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention thereby, and without any further act, to grant any interest in immoveable property. (Form of assurance.)

9. The rules of construction which apply to testamentary instruments shall also be applicable to assurances, so far as the different nature of assurances will permit. (Application of rules of construction.)

10. Unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, a grant shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the subject of the grant, and to comprise— (Operation of assurance.)

(a) trees and all other products of the soil ;

(b) things affixed to the soil, and, in the case of machinery so affixed, the moveable parts thereof ;

(c) in the case of a house, the locks, keys, bars, doors and windows, and a covenant by the grantee concerning the subject of the assurance binds all persons claiming such subject under the grantee, and may be enforced by all persons claiming under the grantor, and a like covenant by the grantor binds all persons claiming the subject under the grantor, and may be enforced by all persons claiming under the grantee. (Covenants concerning its subject.)

CHAPTER III.

OF SALES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

11. Unless a contrary intention appears from the assurance or, when no assurance has been made, from the contract, the seller and the buyer of immoveable property respectively possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the nine rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property sold : (Rights and liabilities of seller and buyer.)

(a). If the buyer, or any person claiming under him, suffers loss by reason of any invalidity of the seller's title not known to the buyer when the contract was entered into, the seller, or, where the seller is not the person for whose benefit the consideration was received, then such other person, is responsible for the loss so suffered.

(b). The seller has a charge upon the property for the amount of the purchase-money, or any part thereof, remaining unpaid ; but as soon as the assurance (if any) is registered, such charge shall cease.

EXPLANATION.—Money for which a bill of exchange has been taken remains unpaid, within the meaning of this clause, until the bill is paid.

(c). After the contract has been made, the seller is entitled to the rents and profits of the property until the time fixed for the completion of the sale, and if he has received any such rents and profits which accrued after that time, he must on completion account for them to the buyer. The buyer must, on completion, pay to the seller interest on the purchase-money from the time fixed for the completion of the sale. But this is not to preclude either party from obtaining compensation where loss has been occasioned by the default or delay of the other party.

(d). The buyer is entitled to a charge on the property for the amount of any purchase-money properly paid by him in anticipation of the completion of the sale.

(e). In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation the seller is not answerable for any latent defect in the property sold.

(g). The seller is bound to execute a proper assurance of the property when the buyer tenders it to him for execution at a proper time and place.

(h). When the buyer has been let into beneficial possession of the property pending discussions as to the seller's title thereto, and the contract is not completed owing to defects in such title, the buyer is not liable to pay for his use of the property.

(i). When the completion of the contract is delayed by the buyer, and, after the day fixed for completing it, the seller expends money on the property, the seller is entitled to recover the amount so expended, provided that such expenditure was required for the preservation of the property, or by any law for the time being in force.

12. Save as provided by section 11, clause (b), a contract for the sale of, or relating to, immoveable property, whether registered or not, shall not have the effect of creating any interest in, or charge on, such property ; but the only right of any person under the contract shall be to apply for specific performance, or for compensation, or for both, according to the rules laid down in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, and the Specific Relief Act, 1877. (Contract for sale not of itself to create interest in property.)

13. A person paying the consideration for any immoveable property, but having the transfer of it made to another person, is not, by reason of such payment, entitled to such property or to any interest therein. (Purchase of immoveable property which buyer causes to be transferred to another.)

CHAPTER IV.

OF MORTGAGES AND CHARGES.

Mortgage, mortgagor and mortgagee defined.

14. When any interest in specific property is actually or contingently transferred by one person to another for the purpose of securing the payment of money, the transfer is called a mortgage, the transferor is called a mortgagor, the transferee a mortgagee, the money of which payment is secured is called the mortgage-money, and the instrument (if any) by which the transfer is effected is called a mortgage-deed.

For the purposes of this chapter, any person claiming as heir, legatee, assignee, lessee or otherwise the interest of the transferor in the property subject to the mortgage, or any part of such interest, is a mortgagor; and any person claiming as heir, legatee, assignee or otherwise the interest of the transferee under the mortgage, or any part thereof, is a mortgagee.

EXPLANATION.—A judgment-creditor who attaches any mortgaged property or mortgage-money claims under the transferor or transferee (as the case may be) within the meaning of the second paragraph of this section.

Illustrations.

(a). A binding himself personally for the repayment of a loan, pledges certain land to B as collateral security for such repayment, but does not actually deliver possession.

(b). A not so binding himself, pledges certain land as in illustration (a), and covenants that in default of payment of the loan on a certain date the land pledged shall pass to B.

(c). A borrows money from B, and gives up certain land to B that he may retain possession thereof until he has from the rents and profits of the land repaid himself the sum so lent.

(d). A binding himself as in illustration (a), pledges certain land to B as a collateral security for the repayment, and permits B to receive the rents and profits of the land until he has repaid himself the loan, but does not actually deliver possession.

(e). A not so binding himself covenants that on default of payment of the loan on a certain date the land pledged shall pass to B. A meanwhile puts B into possession of the land, and allows him to receive the rents and profits in discharge of the loan.

(f). A charges certain land in favour of B with Rs. 1,000 and interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.

(g). A charges a certain fund in favour of B with the amount which shall be due to him on the balance of A's account not exceeding Rs. 1,000, together with interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.

(h). A borrows Rs. 10,000 from B and conveys certain land to B in trust that the same shall stand charged with the payment to B of the Rs. 10,000 and interest and subject thereto in trust for C and others, and the deed confers express power on B in default of payment to sell the land.

Each of these transactions is a mortgage. A is the mortgagor, B the mortgagee.

(i). A, in consideration of a loan of money paid to him by B, makes over his land to B for a term of twenty years, but does not bind himself to pay to B principal or interest. This is not a mortgage.

Respective rights of mortgagor and mortgagee.

15. On the completion of a mortgage the mortgagor has the following rights:—

(a) he may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable, or has been paid, and before his right to redeem the mortgaged property is foreclosed or the property is sold, institute a suit (hereinafter called a suit for redemption) to have the mortgaged property retransferred to him;

(b) he may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable and before such suit is barred, tender to the mortgagee or deposit in the principal Civil Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate, to the account of the mortgagee, the whole amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

And the mortgagee has the following rights:—

(c) he may take possession of the mortgaged property at or after the time, if any, specified in the mortgage-deed for payment of the mortgage-money, or, if no time is so specified, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable to him;

(d) he may, at any time after he is entitled to take possession of the mortgaged property, and before it is redeemed, institute a suit against the mortgagor (1) for a foreclosure of his right to redeem the property, with or without possession thereof, or (2) for a sale of the property, or (3) for either of such remedies;

(e) where the mortgagor deposits money in court under clause (b) of this section, the Court shall forthwith cause written notice of the deposit to be served on the mortgagee, and the mortgagee may, on depositing the mortgage-deed (if any) in the same Court and on filing a written statement (verified in manner prescribed by law for the verification of plaints) of the amount due to him under the mortgage, apply for and receive in payment of such amount the money so deposited;

(f) if at the date of the mortgage the mortgaged property is insured against fire, the mortgagee, in case of damage to the property by fire, may (in the absence of a contract to the contrary) require the insurance-money to be laid out in reinstating the property.

Rights and duties of mortgagee in possession.

16. When, during the continuance of the mortgage, the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property, he has the following duties and rights:—

(a) he shall manage the property as a person of ordinary prudence would manage it if it were his own;

(b) he shall collect all rents and other profits arising out of the property;

(c) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, pay out of the income of the property the Government revenue and all other charges of a public nature due in respect thereof and keep down the interest due on all mortgages of the property prior to his own, and on all mortgages of the property subsequent to his own, of which he has notice;

(d) he may spend such money as is necessary for the due management and preservation of the property and add it to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(e) where the property is by its nature insurable, he may insure and keep insured from loss or damage by fire the whole or any part of such property, and add the premiums paid for any such insurance to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(f) he shall keep accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee;

(g) he shall, at any time during the continuance of the mortgage, give the mortgagor, at his request and cost, true copies of such accounts and of the vouchers by which they are supported.

Receipts of mortgagee in possession.

17. When the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, unless there is an express contract in writing between the mortgagee and the mortgagor that his net receipts therefrom shall, so long as the mortgagee is in possession thereof, be taken in lieu of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage, such receipts shall be debited against him in reduction of the amount (if any) from time to time due to him on account of interest on the principal sum so secured, or, so far as such receipts exceed any interest due, in reduction of such principal sum.

Injunctions to restrain waste.

18. Where the mortgagor remains in possession of the mortgaged property or any part thereof, and commits or threatens to commit waste thereon, the mortgagee may obtain an injunction to stay the waste: provided that the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by the waste complained of. Where the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property or any part thereof and commits or threatens to commit waste thereon, the mortgagor may obtain an injunction to stay the waste.

EXPLANATION.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of houses, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money.

Foreclosure and Sale.

Preliminary decree in foreclosure-suit.

19. In a suit for foreclosure or sale, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree, ordering—

(a) that an account be taken of what will be due to the mortgagee for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit, on the day next hereinafter referred to,

(b) that, upon the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into Court the amount so due, on a day within six months from the date of the decree, to be fixed by the Court, the mortgagor shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee free from all incumbrances created by the mortgagee or any person claiming under him, or, where the mortgagee claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims; but

Procedure in case of payment of amount due and subsequent costs.

If payment is so made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section 30, the mortgagor shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

Final decree for foreclosure.

If such payment is not so made, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to apply to the Court for a decree for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the Court may then pass a decree ordering the defendant to be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the mortgagee; and thereupon the mortgagor's right to redeem and the debt secured by the mortgage shall both be extinguished.

Power to order sale at instance of mortgagee.

20. In any suit by the mortgagee under this chapter, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff, decree that in default of the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into court the amount for the time being due on the mortgage and the plaintiff's costs of the suit, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into court and applied in payment of what is due for the time being to the plaintiff on the mortgage, and that the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Power to decree sale in foreclosure-suit.

21. When the mortgagee sues only for a foreclosure, the Court may, at the instance of the mortgagor, decree that in default of such payment, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, if (a) the Court considers that the mortgagee will not be damnified thereby, and (b) the mortgagor furnishes such security, if any, as the Court thinks fit for the payment of the balance due for the time being by him on the mortgage.

Mortgagee not to bid at sale.

22. At any sale under section 20 or section 21, the mortgagee shall not bid for or acquire any interest in the property sold without the leave of the Court, or without submitting to such conditions as the Court may impose.

Recovery of balance due on mortgage.

23. If the nett proceeds of any such sale are insufficient to pay the amount due for the time being on the mortgage, the balance may be recovered in the same suit in the same manner as under a decree for money, or by any other legal process open to the mortgagee.

Power of sale.

24. Power may be expressly conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee to sell or concur in selling the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, on default made in payment of any principal money or interest, payment of which is secured by the mortgage-deed. But in exercising such a power, the mortgagee shall be subject to the following rules (namely)—

(a) he shall use all reasonable diligence to obtain a fair price for the property:

(b) no such sale shall be made (1) until after six months' notice in writing of the intended sale has been given to the mortgagor, or (2) after the amount for the time being due on the mortgage has been paid or tendered to the mortgagee by or on behalf of the mortgagor, or (3) pending a suit for redemption of the property, or (4) so as to give the mortgagee any interest in the property.

When a sale has been effected in professed exercise of any such power, the title of the purchaser shall not be liable to be impeached on the ground that no such default had been made or that the rules so prescribed had not been complied with.

Receipts for purchase-money given by the mortgagee exercising such power shall discharge the purchasers therefrom.

The proceeds of every such sale shall be applied as follows:—

first, in defraying the expenses incident to the sale, or properly incurred in any attempted sale under the power;

secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being due on the mortgage; and thirdly, the surplus (if any) of the said proceeds shall be paid to the mortgagor.

Redemption.

25. In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree for taking the accounts, as provided by section 19, between the mortgagor and mortgagee, and directing that upon the mortgagor paying within six months from the date of the decree to the mortgagee or into Court what (if anything) is found due to the mortgagee for principal, interest and costs, the mortgagee shall re-convey the mortgaged property to the mortgagor, free from the mortgage, and from all incumbrances created by the mortgagee or any persons claiming under him, and that if such amount is not so paid, the plaintiff's suit shall thenceforth stand dismissed, and that he shall be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property.

Preliminary decree in redemption-suit.

Loss occasioned by mortgagee's default.

27. If on taking the accounts nothing is found due to the mortgagee, or if the amount found due together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section 30 is paid according to the decree, the mortgagor shall, if necessary, be put into possession of the property. But if such amount and costs are not so paid, the mortgagor shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem the property, and the Court shall, if necessary, deliver possession thereof to the mortgagee.

Procedure where nothing due or amount paid.

Interest.

28. When the mortgagor and mortgagee have contracted as to the payment of interest on the principal money for the time being due to the mortgagee under the mortgage, interest shall be payable in accordance with such contract: Provided that where the mortgagor has tendered or deposited in Court the whole amount due to the mortgagee, such interest shall cease from the date of the tender or from the time when the mortgagee could take such amount out of Court, as the case may be.

Payment of interest.

Proviso.

Costs.

29. The mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to add to his debt his costs properly incurred of any suit under this chapter. But such costs, or any part thereof, may be disallowed if the mortgagor has tendered to the mortgagee or has deposited in Court the whole amount due to him under the mortgage, and if the mortgagee has unreasonably refused to accept such tender or to take such money out of Court in discharge of his claim, or if he has prevented a mortgagor willing and able to make such tender or deposit from making it by refusing or neglecting to give him proper information as to the state of the accounts required to be kept under section 16.

Costs of mortgagee.

30. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a redemption or a sale by the Court under this chapter, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the principal debt such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure, redemption or sale up to the time of actual payment.

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree.

Deposit of Title-deeds.

31. The deposit of title-deeds with intent to create a mortgage on the property comprised therein, but without actual transfer of such property, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract for a mortgage of the property, and shall entitle the depositee merely to institute a suit for specific performance of such contract.

Effect of deposit of title-deeds.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

32. If any property the sale of which is directed under this chapter is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, order that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

33. Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows:

Application of proceeds.

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, if the property has been sold free from any prior mortgage, in payment of whatever is due on account of such mortgage;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made;

fourthly, in payment of all principal moneys due on account of that mortgage; and

fifthly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proved to be interested in the property sold, or if there be more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein.

34. If a mortgage made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a subsequent mortgage on the same property shall, if made with notice of the prior mortgage, be postponed to the prior mortgage in respect of all advances or debits not exceeding the maximum, though made or allowed with notice of the subsequent mortgage.

Mortgage to secure balance of account.

Illustration.

A gives to his bankers, B & Co., a charge on Sultánpur to secure the balance of his account with them to the extent of Rs. 10,000. A then gives to C a charge on Sultánpur to secure Rs. 10,000; and C gives notice thereof to B & Co. At the date of the second charge, the balance due to B & Co. does not exceed Rs. 5,000. B & Co. subsequently advance to A sums making the balance of the account against him exceed the sum of Rs. 10,000. B & Co. are entitled, to the extent of Rs. 10,000, to priority over C.

35. Any person having an interest in mortgaged immoveable property may, at any time before a sale of such property has taken place under this chapter, tender to the next prior mortgagee the amount due to him on account of his mortgage. Such mortgagee is bound to accept such tender and to give a receipt for the sum due, and on such receipt being registered, his interest in the property in respect of the mortgage shall absolutely cease.

Right to pay off mortgagee in order to prevent sale.

36. In such case, where the person making the tender has, subject to the mortgage, the absolute ownership of the property, the mortgage shall cease to exist and the property shall vest in the person making such tender.

Effect of such payment by person having whole interest in property charged.

Effect of payment by person only partially interested.

38. No mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original security. And no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such subsequent advance.

Tacking abolished.

39. If the owner of two or more properties creates separate mortgages on them by separate assurances, each mortgage may be dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

Redemption of one of two properties separately mortgaged.

Illustration.

A, the owner of farms Z and Y, mortgages Z to B for Rs. 1,000. A afterwards mortgages Y to B for Rs. 1,000, making no stipulation as to any additional charge on Z. A may institute a suit for the redemption of the mortgage on Z alone.

40. If property subject to a mortgage, or the right to receive mortgage-money, be transferred to a third person, the transferee has all the rights and powers of his transferor, under the mortgage, and is subject to the liabilities existing between his transferor and the mortgagor or mortgagee, as the case may be.

Rights and powers of transferee of mortgage-debt or mortgaged property.

Where such a transfer is made for the purpose of securing the payment of money, the original mortgage-debt, if recovered by either the transferor or the transferee, is applicable, first, in payment of the costs of such recovery, secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being secured by the transfer; and the residue, if any, belongs to the transferor.

41. If by any assurance other than a mortgage-deed, or by any will, or under the provisions of this or any other Act, or by operation of law, certain property of one person is made security for the payment of certain money to another, all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagor shall apply to the owner of such property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagee shall apply to the owner of such money.

Charge made by assurance or will.

CHAPTER V.

OF LEASES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

42. A lease may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention of the parties to give and take, for rent or a fine, possession of, or profits derived from, immoveable property, for a time shorter in duration than the lessor's interest therein.

Form of written lease.

43. Where the time limited by a lease is expressed as commencing from a particular day, in computing that time such day shall be excluded.

Exclusion of day on which term commences.

Where the time so limited is a year or a number of years, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, the lease shall last during the whole anniversary of the day on which such time commences.

Duration of term.

Where the time so limited is expressed to be determinable before its expiration, and there is no express agreement as to the party having the option of determining it, the lessee shall have such option.

Option to determine lease.

44. Unless a contrary intention appears from the lease, the lessor and the lessee, as against one another, respectively possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the twenty-two rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property leased:—

Rights and liabilities of lessor and lessee.

(a). During the continuance of the lease, the lessee is entitled to the enjoyment of all lights, waters, water-courses, drains, ways and other easements enjoyed as incident to the property leased at the time when the lease was made.

(b). The lessor is bound to put the lessee in possession of the property leased, and to deliver it to him in a condition reasonably fit for the purpose for which both parties contemplate that the lessee is to use it.

(c). If the lessee is, by reason of the invalidity of the lessor's title, or by any act or default of the lessor, or of any person claiming under him, or of any person claiming by a superior title to his, disturbed in the peaceable enjoyment of the property leased, the lessee is entitled to compensation from the lessor for any loss thereby caused, and may also obtain from any Court of competent jurisdiction a decree for the rescission of the lease.

(d). If the lessee is, by reason of the invalidity of the lessor's title, deprived of any substantial part of the property leased, or of anything essential to his enjoyment thereof, he is entitled to compensation from the lessor for any loss thereby caused, and may also obtain from any Court of competent jurisdiction a decree for the rescission of the lease.

(e). In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation, the lessor is not answerable for any latent defect in the thing leased.

(f). The lessor is bound to do all things necessary for maintaining the roof, walls, beams, floors, stairs and drains of any house or other building comprised in the lease, and may for that purpose enter such building at all reasonable times.

(g). In all other respects the lessee is bound to keep, and at the end of the lease to restore, the property leased in as good condition as it was in at the time when he was put in possession, subject only to reasonable wear and tear.

(h). Deteriorations arising from want of painting or plastering, or from breaking of glass, are not to be considered as wear and tear, but shall be made good by the lessee.

(i). If by fire, tempest or flood, or violence of an army or of a mob, or other superior force, any part of the property leased be wholly destroyed or rendered substantially unfit for the purposes for which it was let, the obligation of the lessor as to that part shall cease unless he consents to reinstate the part so destroyed or rendered unfit; but in case of refusal or neglect to reinstate the same, the lessee shall be entitled to be discharged from his lease.

If the injury be occasioned by the wrongful act of either party, such party shall not be entitled to avail himself of the benefit of this provision.

(j). In case any rent remains unpaid at the end of a month from the time when it was payable and demanded, or in case within a reasonable time after notice default is made by the lessee in the performance of any of his other obligations under the lease, the lessor may institute a suit for a decree for the rescission of the lease and for possession of the property leased, unless the lessee shall, within a time to be specified by the Court, pay such arrears and perform such obligations, and also pay all costs and expenses sustained by the lessor through the lessee's default.

(k). In case the lease is rescinded for the default of the lessee, he is bound to pay the rent up to the time of such rescission, and also to make compensation for any other loss resulting from his default.

(l). If the lessor neglects to make, within a reasonable time after notice, repairs which he ought to make, the lessee may make the same himself, and deduct the expense of such repairs from the rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor.

(m). If the lessor neglects to make any payment which he is bound to make, and which if not made is recoverable against the property leased, the lessee may make such payment himself, and deduct it from his rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor.

(n). Every lessee who receives notice of any proceeding to recover the property leased to him or any part thereof, is bound to give notice thereof to the lessor with reasonable diligence; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission.

(o). The lessee is bound to give notice to the lessor, within a reasonable time, of any encroachment made upon, or any interference with the lessor's rights concerning, the property leased; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission.

(p). The lessee may use the soil and its products for all purposes of enjoyment as a reasonable owner would use them: but he may not destroy them wastefully, nor remove them after the expiration of the lease.

(q). No lessee of immoveable property who erects thereon any building, engine or machinery for agricultural purposes shall remove the same without first giving to the lessor or his agent one month's previous notice in writing of his intention so to do, and thereupon the lessor or his agent may elect to purchase the thing so proposed to be removed, and the lessee's right to remove the same shall thereby cease, and the same shall belong to the lessor, and the value thereof shall in case of dispute be ascertained and determined by two referees, one to be chosen by each party, or by an umpire to be named by such referees, and shall be paid or allowed in account by the lessor.

(r). Subject to the provisions of clause (g) and clause (q), the lessee has a right to remove at any time during his possession of the property leased, or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things not being products of the soil which he has affixed to the soil.

(s). When a lease of land determines in consequence of an uncertain event over which the lessee has no control, the lessee is entitled to all the crops growing upon the land for the season current when the lease determines, and to free ingress, egress and regress to reap and carry them.

(t). Upon the death of the lessor or of the lessee, his legal representative shall have all the rights and be subject to all liabilities of the lessor or lessee whom he represents.

(u). If the lessor transfers the property leased, or any part thereof, or any part of his interest therein, the transferee shall possess all the rights and, if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities of the lessor as to the property or part transferred so long as he is the owner of it; but the lessor shall not by reason only of such transfer cease to be subject to any of the liabilities imposed upon him by the lease, unless the lessee elects to treat the transferee as the person liable to him: Provided that if the lessee pay rent to the lessor without having reason to believe that such transfer has been made, he shall not be liable to pay such rent over again to the transferee.

Where only a part of the property leased is transferred by the lessor, he may determine what proportion of the rent reserved by the lease is payable in respect of the part so transferred.

(v). The lessee has a right to transfer his lease. The transferee may again transfer it. The lessee shall not, by reason of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities attaching to the lease, unless the lessor elects to treat the transferee as the person subject to such liabilities. Subject as aforesaid, each successive transferee, so long as he is entitled to the property leased, possesses all the rights, and is subject to all the liabilities, of the lessee.

45. Nothing in this Act shall affect any right to distrain which a lessor may exercise under any local law for the time being in force.

Saving of right to distrain.

46. In the absence of any written agreement and of any local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of property for purposes of cultivation shall be a lease from year to year terminable by six months' notice ending with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of property for any other purpose shall be a lease from month to month, terminable by fifteen days' notice ending with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Duration of certain leases in absence of written agreement or local usage.

Every notice under this section must be in writing signed by or on behalf of the party giving it and served on the party who is intended to be bound by it.

47. If a lessee of property remains in possession thereof after the expiration of the lease, and the lessor accepts rent from him, or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession, the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year or from month to month, according to the purpose for which the property is leased, as specified in the last preceding section.

Effect of holding over.

Illustrations.

(a). A lets a house to B for five years. B sub-lets the house to C at a monthly rent of Rs. 100. The five years expire, but C continues in possession of the house and pays the rent to A. C's lease is renewed from month to month.

(b). A lets a farm to B for the life of C. C dies, but B continues in possession with A's assent. B's lease is renewed from year to year.

CHAPTER VI.

OF EXCHANGES.

48. Exchange is a contract by which the parties mutually give, or agree to give, one thing for another, neither thing or both things being money only.

"Exchange" defined.

Rights and obligations of parties.

On an exchange of money, each party thereby warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Exchange of money.

CHAPTER VII.

OF SETTLEMENTS.

49. "Settlement" means in this chapter any disposition of property—

"Settlement" defined.

(a) which is not testamentary, and is not founded on any valuable consideration, or

(b) which is made in consideration of marriage, or

(c) which is made for the purpose of dividing property of the settlor among his family or those for whom he desires to provide,

but does not include a gift made by a Hindú Muhammadan or Buddhist.

50. In order that a settlement should be binding, it is not necessary that it should be made for a consideration.

Consideration not necessary to make settlement binding.

51. A settlement made for the purpose of depriving present or future creditors or other persons having demands against the settlor, of their demands on him, is voidable at the option of such creditors or other persons, and so far as regards the demands of such creditors or other persons, but not as against a person who, having no knowledge of the purpose for which the settlement was made, has contracted for or acquired an interest therein by marriage or for other valuable consideration, nor as against claimants under such persons. Such settlement is nevertheless binding on the settlor and on all persons claiming under him.

Voidability of settlement made in fraud of creditors.

EXPLANATION.—Where there is no positive evidence of fraud, the intent to deprive creditors and other persons of their demands on the settlor may be inferred from

(a) the indebtedness of the settlor at the date of the settlement,

(b) want of consideration for the settlement, and

(c) any other circumstance indicative of fraud.

52. A condition or limitation in a settlement or will restraining any person from parting with or disposing of his interest, is void.

Condition restraining alienation of interest.

53. A condition or limitation contained in a settlement or will making an interest thereby reserved or given to or in trust for any person to cease on his becoming insolvent, or endeavouring to transfer or dispose of the same, is void.

Condition making interest determinable on insolvency or alienation.

54. If by a settlement property be given to a person then living in general terms, without indicating the time when it is to be paid or delivered, such person has a vested interest therein from the day of the execution of the settlement, and if he dies without having received it, it shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representatives.

Vesting of gift in general terms.

55. Where by the terms of a settlement a thing is given to a person not in existence, but he is not entitled to possession of it immediately upon his birth, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the settlement, become vested in such person upon his birth, and shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative if he dies before that time, and without having received it. And in such cases it is from his birth said to be vested in interest.

Vesting in interest of gift to unborn person not entitled to possession immediately on birth.

56. The provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 100 to 104, both inclusive, 107 and 108, 111 to 127, both inclusive, and 167, shall be applicable, so far as the nature of the case will admit, to gifts contained in settlements.

Application of sections of Act X of 1865 to gifts contained in settlements.

57. Whenever a person becomes entitled in possession by virtue of a settlement to money or any other property yielding income, he shall be entitled to receive the interest or income thereof from that time.

Right to income of property coming into possession under settlement.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF GIFTS FOR RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE PURPOSES.

58. No person having a nephew or niece, or any nearer relative, shall have power to give any property to religious or charitable uses, by any instrument which is required to be registered, unless such instrument be executed not less than twelve months before his death, and duly registered.

Gift to charitable uses by person having certain relatives.

59. Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, property may be assured in perpetuity for the benefit of the public in the advancement of religion, knowledge, commerce, health, safety, or any other object beneficial to mankind. But no such assurance shall take effect until it has been sanctioned by some public authority to be designated by the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette.

Assurance of property in perpetuity for use of any community or institution.

The grant or refusal of such sanction may be notified by an entry in the book in which the assurance is registered, and the registering officer shall make such entry on receiving from the public authority aforesaid a written order in this behalf.

If no such order is made within two years next after the time when the property becomes applicable for the benefit of the public, it shall be deemed that sanction has been granted.

If such sanction is refused, the property shall devolve as if no such assurance had been made.

CHAPTER IX.

OF APPORTIONMENT.

60. All rents, annuities, pensions, dividends and other periodical payments shall, upon the determination of such payments by the death of the recipient or otherwise, be apportionable as if they had been made to accrue due from day to day, but to be payable on the days appointed for the payment thereof.

Apportionment of rents and other periodical payments.

Nothing in this section shall affect any express provision in any instrument binding on the recipient.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LIMITED OWNERS.

61. A person having a limited interest in any immoveable property is not entitled to do or omit any act the doing or omitting of which is destructive or permanently injurious to such property.

Rights and obligations of persons having limited interest in property.

EXPLANATION.—No act done in the reasonable use and enjoyment of property is destructive or injurious within the meaning of this section, though it may exhaust the substance of the property.

Illustrations.

(a). A Hindú widow is in possession as such of land protected from floods and rendered cultivable by a dyke. She is not entitled to cut the dyke and turn the land into a lake.

(b). A is tenant for life of land on which a dwelling-house stands. He is not entitled to pull down the house. Nor must he suffer it to fall for want of necessary repairs.

(c). A is tenant for life of land in which coal lies. He is entitled to work and use the coal.

(d). A is tenant for life of land planted with trees. He is entitled to cut the trees at maturity, but is not entitled to cut them when immature, except for the purpose of thinning out or otherwise benefiting the plantation.

Save as aforesaid, such person or his legal representative has the same right as a lessee to remove during the continuance of such interest, or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things which he has affixed to the soil in which he had such limited interest, and all crops growing upon the land for the season current when such limited interest determines.

62. A person having a limited interest in possession in any property, is bound to discharge all periodical payments due on account of any mortgage thereon taking effect during the continuance of his interest in priority to such interest, and all taxes and other public periodical charges to which such property is liable.

Obligation of limited owner in possession of property mortgaged.

63. Every advantage or increase of value accruing (accidentally or through the exertions of any one having a limited interest) to any property in which successive interests exist, belongs to all the persons having any interest in the property in the same shares and manner as they are entitled to the property.

Right to increase of value to property in which there are successive interests.

EXPLANATION.—A person having a mortgage on property has not thereby an interest within the meaning of this section.

64. Any person claiming any immoveable property after the death of any minor, married woman, or other person, and having reason to believe that such minor, married woman or other person is dead, and that his or her death is concealed by his or her guardian, husband or any other person, may once a year move the High Court to order the person concealing or suspected to conceal such person to produce him or her at such time and place, and before such persons (if any), as the Court may direct. And the High Court, if it think fit, shall make such order, and in case of disobedience thereto, the person so claiming the property may enter thereon and receive the profits thereof as if the person so concealed or suspected to be concealed were dead.

Discovery of death of tenant for life.

65. Nothing in this chapter applies to lessees.

Saving of lessees.

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE DISCRETION OF THE COURTS TO DEAL WITH SETTLED LAND.

66. If any person having, under a settlement or will, a limited interest in possession in any immoveable property, apply under this section to the High Court or District Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction such property or any part thereof is situate, the Court may, if it deem it just and expedient to do so,—

Powers exercisable by Court on application of person interested in possession in settled immoveable property.

(a) make such leases of the whole or any part of the property for such terms of years, for such rents, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(b) make such sales of the whole or any part of the property, for such sums, payable either at once or periodically, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(c) appropriate any part of the property for the formation of streets, roads, gardens or other open spaces, tanks, sewers, drains or water-courses, and authorize the erection of buildings and works thereon;

and generally deal with the property in any way the Court may think just and beneficial to the persons interested therein.

67. Every such application shall be in writing, and notice thereof shall be served through the Court on all trustees under the settlement or will and on any other persons who in the opinion of the Court ought to be so served, and shall be published in such newspapers as the Court may direct.

Service of notice and advertisement of application.

68. The Court may permit any person, whether interested in the property or not, to appear and be heard in opposition to or in support of any such application on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Appearance to oppose or support application.

69. The Court may order the costs of all or any parties to any application under this section to be paid out of any principal money receivable on account of any dealing with the property which is the subject of the application or to be a charge on such property or on any other property belonging to the same owners.

Costs of application.

Leases under section 66.

71. All or any part of the proceeds of any lease, sale or disposition under section 66 may, if the Court think fit, be paid into Court.

Payment into Court of money receivable under section 66.

72. The Court shall declare what parts of such proceeds so received shall be considered as income, and may direct the same to be paid to the person for the time being entitled in possession to the property dealt with; and the residue of such money shall be applied as the Court shall direct in one or more of the manners following:—

Power to direct payment of income to person entitled.

Application of residue.

(a) the payment of the amount due in respect of any charge on the property dealt with;

(b) the purchase of other property or the investment in securities for the benefit of the persons interested in the property dealt with;

(c) the payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled to the property dealt with;

EXPLANATION—In this section the term "securities" means—

(d) promissory notes, debentures, stock and other securities of the Government of India;

(e) bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India;

(f) stock or debentures of, or shares in, railway or other companies, the interest whereon has been guaranteed by the Government of India; and

(g) debentures or other securities for money issued by or on behalf of any municipal body under the authority of any Act of an Indian legislature.

CHAPTER XII.

OF POWERS.

73. Where a person is authorized to determine the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of his ownership, he is said to have power to appoint such property.

Power to appoint, defined.

The person who gives the power is called the donor, the person to whom the power is given is called the donee, and the persons for whose benefit the power is to be exercised are called the objects of the power. A person to whom any property is appointed is called an appointee.

Donor, donee, objects, appointee, defined.

Illustration.

A grants land to B for life, with remainder to such of B's children as B shall appoint. B appoints to C and D, two of his children, in equal shares. A is the donor of the power, B the donee, B's children the objects, and C and D the appointees.

A power authorising the donee to appoint to whomsoever and for whatsoever interest he pleases, is called a general power.

General power.

A power restricted in respect either of its objects or the interests that may be conferred under it, is called a special power.

Special power.

Rules as to all powers.

74. Where a power is vested in several donees, all who are living must unite in its execution; but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, it may be exercised by the survivors or the survivor, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Exercise of power vested in several donees.

75. The donor may direct that the power shall be exercised by will only or by non-testamentary instrument only.

Modes in which powers may be executed.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by will only, it must be exercised by will duly executed according to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, or according to such other law as at the time of the execution of the power may be applicable to a will executed by the donee.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by non-testamentary instrument only, it must be exercised by an instrument executed as an assurance and registered.

If he imposes no such restriction on the exercise of the power, it may be exercised either by such will or by such instrument as lastly hereinbefore mentioned.

When the power is not properly exercised, no Court shall in any case compel the person in possession of the property to which the power relates to deliver the property as if the power had been properly exercised or shall otherwise aid the defective execution.

Jurisdiction to aid defective executions abolished.

76. All appointments made in the manner directed by section 75 shall be deemed to be executed and attested in proper form, notwithstanding that some other mode of execution or attestation has been prescribed by the donor.

Validity of forms hereby prescribed.

77. Where a power is to be exercised with the consent of several persons, all who are living must concur in the consent, but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, the consent of the survivors or the survivor is sufficient, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Concurrence where power is to be exercised with consent of several persons.

Consent to the exercise of a power must be given by an instrument executed as an assurance and registered.

Consent to the exercise of a power need not be given by the instrument by which the power is exercised, but if it is given by a different instrument, such instrument must be executed at a time not later than the time at which the donee of the power executes the instrument by which he exercises the power.

78. If a person disposes of property in such manner as is authorized by a power vested in him, such disposition shall take effect out of the power, notwithstanding that the power is not mentioned or referred to in the instrument of disposition.

Recital of power not necessary.

Illustration.

Land is settled upon A for life with a special power to charge, by a non-testamentary instrument, portions in favour of his children. Subsequently a general power to dispose of the land by any instrument is vested in A. He executes an assurance, by which he directs that a sum of money shall be raised out of the land and settled on his son B for life, with remainder to B.'s wife and children. Such an appointment cannot take effect under the special power, but may be treated as a valid exercise of the general power.

79. The donee of a power need not exercise it entirely and at once by a single instrument, but he may from time to time exercise any unexhausted part thereof at his discretion.

Power exerciseable by several instruments executed at different times.

If the donee has purported to exercise his power in such a manner that his appointment is void, the power is, to that extent, unexhausted.

80. Where a power given by any instrument is void in its creation, no disposition or gift made by the same instrument shall be deemed void merely because it is intended to take effect after the interests to be appointed under the power or in default of any such appointment.

Disposition intended to take effect after interests appointed under void power.

Illustration.

A marriage-settlement provides that the settled property shall belong to the husband and wife successively for their lives; that after the death of the survivor of them, it shall go to such of the children of the marriage and in such shares as the husband and wife shall jointly appoint, the interest of each such child to become vested in him on his attaining the age of twenty-five years; and that in the event of there being no child of the marriage who shall attain that age, or in default of appointment, the property shall belong to the husband or his legal representative.

Here the power to appoint the property is, under section 56, void in its creation; but the ultimate interest given to the husband takes effect.

General Powers.

81. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, the donee shall, so far as regards his power of disposition, his creditors and all persons who contract with him for valuable consideration to obtain any interest in the property comprised in the power, be deemed to be the absolute owner of such property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

Effect of general power.

This rule is to take effect notwithstanding that the donor has prescribed some particular method for executing the power.

Illustrations.

A, the absolute owner of land, settles it on B for life, with remainder to such purposes as B—

shall appoint, or shall by deed appoint, or shall by will appoint, or shall by deed or will appoint,

and, in case B dies without making any such appointment, on C absolutely.

If B—

grants the land by assurance, or bequeathes it, or contracts to sell it, or incurs debt,

the property is liable, in the hands of either B or C, as the case may be, to the claims of B.'s grantee, legatee, purchaser or creditors, as the case may be.

If B dies having made no disposition of the property, C is entitled to it, subject to any claims which B's creditors may establish against it.

82. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, and makes no disposition of the property in the event of non-appointment, the donee shall be considered as the absolute owner of the property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

Effect of general power without disposition of property in case of non-appointment.

Illustration.

A, the absolute owner of property, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint, and makes no gift over in default of appointment. B dies without making any disposition of the property. The property vests in the representatives of B, and does not revert to A or his representatives.

Special Powers.

83. If the donee has only a special power, he cannot confer any interest in the property comprised therein which could not have been conferred by the donor at the time of the creation of the power.

Interest conferrible by donee of special power.

Illustrations.

(a). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint. After the settlement is made C is born. B then appoints the fund to C for life with remainder to C's children absolutely. The appointment is valid, though C has no children at the time.

(b). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to his children as he shall appoint. At the date of the settlement B has no child, but afterwards has a son C. B then appoints to C for his life, with remainder to his children. Such interest could not have been conferred by A, and B's appointment is void.

84. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to objects authorized by the power and also to objects not so authorized, the appointment in favour of the authorized objects shall take effect if their interests can be separated from those of the unauthorized objects.

Effect of appointment to objects, some authorized and others unauthorized.

Illustration.

Property is settled on A for life, and after his death on such of his children as he shall appoint, and in default of appointment to all A's children equally. A appoints that the property shall go after his death to his widow for her life, and after her death to two of his sons, C and D, in equal shares. There are five children of A. The appointment in favour of A's widow is invalid, and the rents and profits of the property during her life will go to all the five children in equal shares, but after her death to C and D absolutely.

85. Where the donee of a special power purports in exercise of the power to confer a larger interest than is authorized thereby, such appointment shall, if the appointee so elect, be void only for the excess, and good for the residue, if they can be separated.

Appointment in excess of power when voidable at election of appointee.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a life-interest in Rámnagar, with power to grant leases thereof for 30 years. A makes a lease of Rámnagar for 50 years. Such lease is good for 30 years only.

(b). A having a life-interest in Rámnagar and Sultánpur, with power to grant leases of Rámnagar for 21 years, grants a lease comprising both Rámnagar and Sultánpur for 21 years. After A's death the lessee may, if he thinks fit, elect to retain the lease as a lease of Rámnagar only, till the end of the 21 years.

86. Where, by an appointment under a special power, interests authorized and also interests unauthorized are created, and the interests authorized cannot be distinguished from those unauthorized, the whole is void.

Invalidity of appointment creating authorised and unauthorized interests not separable.

Illustrations.

(a). A fund is settled on A during his life, and after his death on his children as he shall appoint. A appoints the annual income for the benefit of his son B and his wife and children, in such manner as trustees shall think fit. The appointment is wholly void.

(b). Under a similar settlement, A having legitimate children by B, his wife, and others by C and D, his concubines, appoints the property to be divided among his children by B, C and D, the shares of the sons to be double those of the daughters. Here the interests authorized and unauthorized cannot be distinguished, and the appointment is wholly void.

87. When a person exercising a special power annexes to the gift a condition or qualification which is not authorized by the power, the gift is good and the condition or qualification only is void.

Appointment with unauthorized condition.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having a power to appoint a fund among his children, gives a part of it to his son B on condition that B shall settle it on B's children. The condition is void, and the gift is absolute.

(b). A, having a power to appoint a fund to a limited class of objects of whom B is one, appoints it to B, adding a condition that B shall release a debt owing to him by A, and also pay Rs, 1,000 to C. The appointment is good; but the condition is void.

88. If a beneficial interest in immoveable property and also a power to let it are given to the same person and he grants his interest in the property, he may enter into a contract not to exercise his power.

Contract not to exercise power of leasing.

89. Save as provided by section 88, an agreement or undertaking not to exercise a power which is given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is void.

Invalidity of agreement not to exercise power.

90. Where a power given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is exercised with a view to the benefit, direct or indirect, of the donee, in any mode not intended by the donor, the appointment is void.

Frauds on powers.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of her children, appoints the whole fund absolutely to one child, who has previously entered into an agreement with her to give one-half of the fund to A's husband absolutely. The appointment is void.

(b). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of his children, appoints a portion of the fund to his son C, a minor, whom he knows to be suffering from a mortal disease; A being the person entitled to C's property in the event of his death. The appointment is void.

(c). A, having power to grant leases of certain settled land, exercises the power in favour of B in consideration of Rs. 1,000 paid to A by B as a fine or premium. The lease is void, and A holds the Rs. 1,000 in trust for the persons interested under the settlement.

91. If the instrument by which a power of appointment in favour of specified objects is created does not provide for the event of no appointment being made, the property belongs (subject to any appointment that may have been made) in equal shares to the said objects.

Right to property in default of appointment.

Illustration.

A settles property on B for life with remainder to B's children as he shall appoint, and makes no disposition in default of appointment. B has two children, C and D, and appoints Rs. 1,000, part of the property, to C. Then C dies. Then B dies without making any further appointment. After paying Rs. 1,000 to C or his representative, the residue of the property is divisible in equal moieties between D and the representative of C.

92. Under a power of appointment in favour of several objects, an appointment of the whole property to one or more of such objects exclusively of the others is valid:

Appointment of whole property to some only of several objects in favour of which power is given.

Provided that, where the assurance creating the power declares the minimum amount or value of the share from which no object of the power is to be excluded, the appointment shall be invalid so far as it excludes any such object from any such share, and no farther.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF PROPERTY HELD BY SEVERAL PERSONS.

93. Where property is held by more persons than one, the share of any of them having at the time of his death a beneficial heritable interest therein shall become vested in his legal representative, unless the property is held under an instrument which expressly provides that on the death of one his share shall accrue to the survivors.

Right to property by survivorship created only by express words.

Nothing in this section applies to property belonging to an undivided Hindú family.

Illustration.

A and B jointly advance money on mortgage. A dies intestate. The money advanced by A belongs to his legal representative.

94. When immoveable property is held in possession by joint owners, any one of them may institute a suit in the proper Court, and such Court may direct a partition of the property to be made among the joint owners, and for the purposes of partition may, in order to equalise the value of the shares, direct any money to be paid by one to another or to be charged on one share in favour of another.

Partition of immoveable property.

If it appear to the Court that a sale of the property and a distribution of the proceeds would be more beneficial for the persons interested than a division of the property between them, the Court may, on the application of any such person, direct a sale of the property.

Power to direct sale and to distribute proceeds.

95. On any sale under the last preceding section, the Court may, if it think fit, allow any of the persons interested in the property to bid at the sale, on such terms as to setting-off or accounting for the purchase-money or any part thereof, or as to any other matters, as to the Court seems reasonable.

Power to allow person interested to bid for property sold for purpose of partition.

96. All sums of money paid under the two last preceding sections may if the Court think fit, be paid into Court.

Payment into Court.

97. Nothing in this chapter shall affect any local law for the time being in force relating to the partition of estates paying revenue to Government.

Saving of laws relating to partition of revenue-paying estates.

98. When one joint-owner of immoveable property commits, or threatens to commit, waste to the same without the consent of the other joint owner, that other may institute a suit to recover compensation for the injury caused to him by the waste or to obtain an injunction to stay the waste, as the case may require.

Waste by one joint-owner.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF ASSIGNMENTS OF THINGS IN ACTION.

99. No sale or disposition of, or charge on, any debt, and no sale or disposition of, or charge on, any beneficial interest in moveable property, shall have any operation against the debtor or against the person in whom the property is vested, until notice of the sale, disposition or charge is given to him, unless he is a party to such sale, disposition or charge; and every dealing by such debtor or person, not being a party to, and not having received notice of, a sale, disposition or charge, with the debt owing by him, or with the property vested in him, shall be valid as against such sale, disposition or charge.

Sale, &c., of things in action.

Illustrations.

(a). A owes money to B, who assigns the debt to C. B then demands the debt from A, who having no notice of the assignment, pays B. The payment is valid, and C cannot sue A for the debt.

(b). A has jewels deposited with B, a jeweller. A mortgages them to C. A then executes an assignment of them to D, who takes his assignment to B and gets the jewels from him before he, B, has received any notice of C's mortgage. B is justified in handing the jewels to D, and C has no remedy against D.

100. Every such notice must be in writing signed by the person making such sale, disposition or charge, or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf.

Notice to be in writing signed.

101. The person to whom a debt or charge is assigned shall take it subject to all the liabilities to which the assignor was subject in respect thereof at the date of the assignment.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill embodies the bulk of the rules submitted in the sixth report of the late Indian Law Commission. One of its chief objects is to bring the rules which regulate the transmission of property between living persons into harmony with the rules affecting its devolution upon death, and thus to furnish the necessary complement of the work commenced in framing the law of succession, now Act X of 1865. Another is to render more simple and efficient the law relating to mortgages and conditional sales. The expediency of legislation on this subject was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of Tambaváni Mudali v. Muhammad Husain, L. R. 2 Indian Appeals, 241. Rules are also laid down on the other subjects hereinafter mentioned.

The Bill is divided into fourteen chapters.

Preliminary.

Chapter I contains the usual preliminary matter. The repealing clause will get rid of several obsolete statutes relating to land which are still in force in the Presidency Towns and, in the case of Europeans, may possibly be in force elsewhere. The saving clause exempts from the operation of the proposed Act acquired rights and liabilities incurred before the Act comes into force, subsequently acquired rights of pre-emption, options of mortgagees to make further advances (such options exist in Malabar and possibly elsewhere), contracts of bottomry and respondentia, transfers of British ships, sales in execution of decrees or for arrears of rent or revenue.

Assurances of Immoveable Property.

Chapter II deals with assurances of immoveable property. It declares (section 4) that every person competent to contract may make an assurance of property of which he is the owner, or which he is entitled to transfer, or on which he is entitled to create a charge. It declares (sections 5, 6 and 7) that land may be conveyed (a) with the benefit of, or subject to, an easement: (b) subject to an obligation for the benefit of the public or of the neighbouring owner, or (c) with the reservation of any right of user, severance and removal. It lays down rules (section 8) as to the mode in which the transfer inter vivos of immoveable property can alone be effected, and applies (section 9) to assurances the rules of construction contained in the Succession Act. It declares (section 10) that, unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, a grant shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the subject, and a grant of land shall be deemed to comprise trees and fixtures. Covenants running with the land are dealt with by the same section.

Sales of Immoveable Property.

The Bill then enumerates (section 11) the rights and liabilities which, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, arise in the case of a sale of land. The principal changes in the law here made are as follows: the seller will be responsible for loss caused to the buyer, or any person claiming under him, through any invalidity of the seller's title not known to the buyer when the contract was entered into and the seller's lien for unpaid purchase-money will cease as soon as the assurance is registered. Section 12 declares that, except so far as regards the vendor's lien, a contract for sale shall not of itself have the effect of creating any interest in the property sold: the Bill will thus get rid of much difficult law relating to the purchaser's equitable ownership, and the rights created by charging and assigning it. Lastly, section 13 declares that a person paying the purchase-money for any immoveable property, but having the transfer made to another, will not by reason of the payment be entitled to the property or to any interest therein. It will thus become the absolute property of the transferee, unless he is made a trustee in some way more definite than by the mere payment of the money by another person; and it is hoped that this rule will tend to prevent the litigation which arises from the doctrine of equitable presumption.

Mortgages and Charges.

Chapter IV deals with mortgages and charges. 'Mortgage' is so defined and explained as to include, besides simple mortgages, usufructuary mortgages, mortgages by conditional sale, and their combinations. The Bill declares (section 15) the respective rights of mortgagor and mortgagee on completion of a mortgage. It defines (sections 16, 17 and 18) the rights and duties of a mortgagee in possession. It shews when the mortgagor or the mortgagee may obtain an injunction to stay waste committed or threatened by the other. It provides rules (sections 19—24) as to suits for foreclosure or sale. Powers of sale given by the mortgage-deed to the mortgagee have been held void in the Mufassal: the Bill (section 24) declares them to be valid: but contains provisions for the protection of the mortgagor similar to those in 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, ss. 11—14. It provides rules (sections 25, 26 and 27) as to suits for redemption. It contains provisions as to interest (section 28) and costs (sections 29, 30). It declares (section 31) that a deposit by a debtor of his title-deeds, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract for a mortgage and to entitle the creditor merely to sue for specific performance. Any person having an interest in the property charged may prevent a sale at the suit of a mortgagee (section 35) by paying off the mortgagee who requires it, and the registration of the mortgagee's receipt for the money will be sufficient without any further assurance. If the payment be made by a person having the whole interest in the property subject to the mortgage, the mortgage so paid off will (section 36) cease to exist: if the payment be made by a person not having the whole of such interest, he will acquire (section 37) the rights of the incumbrancer whom he has paid off.

The Bill abolishes the system of tacking, by declaring in sections 38 and 39 that no mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original mortgage; that no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such advance; and that, if the owner of two properties creates separate mortgages upon them by separate assurances, each property may be redeemed or dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

It has been held that, where a mortgage extends to future advances, the mortgagee cannot safely make such advances, if he has notice of an intervening second mortgage. But the Bill (section 34) provides that, if a charge made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a second charge shall be postponed to the first charge in respect of advances not exceeding the maximum, though made subsequently to the second charge with notice thereof.

Leases.

Chapter V deals with leases of immoveable property. It lays down rules (section 43) as to the commencement and duration of leases. It states in some detail (section 44) the obligations which, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, are to arise out of the relationship of landlord and tenant. Special notice may be called to the provision enabling a lessee, where the lessor omits to make repairs which he is bound to make, himself to make them and deduct the expense from the rent, and the similar provision for the case of failure on the part of the lessor to make payments, which, if not made, are recoverable against the thing leased; to the provisions binding tenants to inform their landlords of proceedings to eject, and of encroachments, and to the power of obtaining a decree for the rescission of a lease, in a suit by either party, in case of misconduct by the other.

The rules as to fixtures in section 44, clauses (q) and (r), are, it is thought, likely to prove useful. No distinction is made between ornamental, trade and agricultural fixtures, save that the landlord is given a right (resembling that conferred by 15 Vic., cap. 25, section 23) to purchase agricultural fixtures.

The rest of this chapter saves (section 45) any right to distrain possessed under any local law: provides rules (section 46) as to the duration of leases in the absence of written agreement or of local law or usage; and treats (section 47) of the effect of holding over.

Exchanges.

Chapter VI deals with Exchange or Barter. It is taken from the New York Civil Code, and merely declares that each party has the rights and obligations of a seller as to that which he gives, and those of a buyer as to that which he takes; and that, on an exchange of money, each party warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Settlements.

Chapter VII deals with settlements, which are defined so as to include endowments and absolute gifts to children and others, excluding, however, gifts by Natives. The Bill declares (section 50) that a settlement may be binding, though not made for a consideration. Settlements made in fraud of creditors will be voidable (section 51) at their option; but not as against persons who, without notice and for valuable consideration, have acquired interests thereunder. The English law, by which a voluntary settlor of land can by subsequent sale defeat the settlement he has made, is not perpetuated here. Conditions restraining any person from parting with his or her interest will be void (section 52), and when property is settled on a married woman, it will therefore no longer be possible to deprive her of the power of anticipation. Such power is the logical consequence of a married woman's capacity, under Act IX of 1872, to enter into contracts. The Bill also contains provisions as to making interests under settlements or wills determinable on insolvency or attempted alienation (section 53), as to the vesting of gifts in general terms (section 54), as to the vesting of a gift to an unborn person not entitled to possession immediately on birth (section 55). Various sections of the Indian Succession Act (100—104, 107, 108, 111—127, 187) are applied (section 56), so far as the nature of the case will admit, to gifts contained in settlements.

Gifts for Religious and Charitable purposes.

In accordance with the Succession Act, the Bill prohibits (section 58) persons who have near relatives from giving property to religious or charitable uses unless by an instrument executed not less than twelve months before their death and duly registered. And while allowing property to be given in perpetuity for such uses, the Bill requires (section 59) that it shall be given with the sanction of some public authority to be designated by the Government. A mode of notifying the grant or refusal of such sanction is provided. Where the sanction is refused, the property will devolve as if the gift had not been made.

Apportionment.

Chapter IX consists of a single section (60) treating of the apportionment of rents and other periodical payments.

Rights and Liabilities of limited Owners.

In Chapter X, the Bill abolishes the distinction between limited owners with, and those without, impeachment of waste. Such persons (section 61) will not be entitled to do any act destructive or permanently injurious to the property; but it is explained that no act done in the reasonable enjoyment of property (such, for example, as working a mine) is 'destructive' or 'injurious,' though it may exhaust the substance of the property. The power of such persons and their representatives to remove fixtures will be the same as that given to tenants under a lease. Persons having limited interests in possession will be bound (section 62) to discharge periodical payments due under prior mortgages and also taxes and other public periodical charges. The right to increase in the value of property in which there are successive interests is declared (section 63); and a provision (resembling that made by 6 Anne, chapter 72, section 1) is made for the production of tenants for life, when the remainder-man has reason to suspect fraud.

Leases and Sales of settled Estates.

Chapter XI is suggested by the English Statute 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 20. It gives the Courts (here defined to mean only the High Courts and the District Courts) a power to deal with lands subject to a settlement or will, by lease or sale, or by appropriating any part of the property for the formation of streets, roads, gardens, tanks, &c. The various modes in which the proceeds of the sales or leases may be applied are specified.

Powers.

Chapter XII treats of powers, i. e., rights to determine the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of ownership. It reproduces the principal rules of the English law on the subject. But the Bill does not propose to give the Courts power to aid defective executions of powers. This jurisdiction does not rest on any sound principle, and is, indeed, hardly consistent with a strict system of registration. In the case of the exercise of a power given to several donees some of whom die before it has been fully exercised, the Bill declares (section 74) that the survivors may do all that might have been done by the whole number. An analogous declaration is made (section 77) as to a power exercisable with the consent of several persons.

Property held by several Persons.

Chapter XIII contains some rules as to the devolution of shares of several persons holding the same property. The Bill proposes to declare that a right by survivorship can be created only by express words. This chapter also contains some provisions (sections 94, 95, 96) as to partitions of immoveable property, which may be useful in cases to which no local law as to the partition of revenue-paying estates applies. In case of illegal waste by one of several persons holding the same property, power is given (section 98) to sue for compensation or to obtain an injunction.

Assignments of Things in Action.

Chapter XIV deals with the assignment of debts and other things which are not in the possession of the person entitled to them, but for the recovery of which he may be obliged to sue. The only change proposed to be made in what is now the law in all Indian Courts is, that the Bill requires (section 99) the assignee to complete his title by giving the debtor notice in writing of the assignment. Negotiable instruments are excluded from the operation of this chapter.

The subject of the Bill is one of great difficulty and complexity, and errors will doubtless be found in the present draft. Ample time will be given for the searching criticism which it is hoped the draft will receive at the hands of the Local Governments, the Judges and the legal profession.
