munication reporting the occurrence was dated 1st December, he was only one day late. He further states that the delay was accidental, and that on his pay-bill for November 1880 being made out, he directed that subscriptions for this child be deducted. He was informed in reply to his application that the fine must be paid and that the Managers would submit his representation to the subscribers at the next general meeting, if he desired it; but that they would be unable to recommend the subscribers to comply with his request. The practice of the Fund has been to exact the penalty of Rs. 50 in all cases where only carelessness or oversight can be pleaded. The case is submitted to the meeting, at the request of Mr. Marindin, for decision.

5. The Managers have received the following further application from Miss Palmer for a reconsideration of her case:—

Dated 4th October 1880.

From—MISS ALICE W. PALMER,
To—The Secretary to the Managers of the Bengal Civil Fund, Calcutta.

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th July. I regret that the Managers of the Bengal Civil Fund have not felt themselves at liberty to recommend my appeal to the favorable consideration of the Members of the Service; for I am sure they must perceive the inequality of the rules, that accord to my half-brother, whose mother is living, and supported by the Fund, what they deny to me, who have no living mother to maintain or assist me.

The fact of my step-mother being on the Fund, is held by the Managers to bar my claim to an increase of allowance until after her death, though no bar to the claim of her son, my half-brother, during her life-time.

The fundamental error, as it appears to me, in the rule regarding the "wife or widow," is its failing to recognise the obvious distinction between a mother and a step-mother, in relation to the daughter. The daughter has a natural right to protection from the mother or "widow," but the step-daughter has none, and may be left at any time, to an unaided and admittedly inadequate provision.

My father, as I have stated in my former appeal, was more than forty years in the service, and contributed to the Fund, as the price of his annuity, more than three times the estimated half value of the pension.

Can it be too late, with the permission of the Managers, to re-open my case, as special [redacted] exceptional at the next general meeting of the members of the service, or too presumptuous [redacted] t, in again soliciting the support of the Managers which I am certain they would grant [redacted] ly realise the difficulty, or rather the impossibility, of maintaining even a decent ex[redacted]come of one such further

3. It is further suggested that the Managers suppressed the resolution of 28th January 1874. That this is not the case will be apparent from the following extract from the Managers' circular of 13th October 1879, in which they stated the grounds on which they had decided not to recommend that the rules should be amended with retrospective effect from 1st April 1873:—

"The Managers consider it unnecessary to go back further than 31st March 1878 for the adjustment of the accounts. It is a fixed principle in the administration of all systems of insurance that long retrospective effect cannot be given to any distribution of surplus funds. The existing members of a fund are alone entitled to the benefit of a surplus, as they alone bear the chance of having to provide for a deficit. Claims which have become incumbent are represented by separate allotments of funds to provide for them. No risk attaches to them, they have been settled in full, and it would be impossible to manage any institution properly if they were liable to reconsideration. Moreover, the principle of retrospective adjustment, if once admitted, would involve the extinction of the greater part of the surplus, with no appreciable benefit to the Fund. It will be observed that the Actuary's calculation gives only Rs. 6,18,333 as the surplus on 31st March 1873. If, therefore, retrospective effect were given to that date, there would be very little to distribute."

The resolution was also prominently referred to at the meeting of 31st January last, immediately before the vote was taken on the proposal to give retrospective effect to the amendments of the rules from 1st April 1878 only: and the report of the proceedings of that meeting was before the subscribers for the period of two months, required by the rules, before their confirmation of its resolutions was finally accepted. It is stated in the circular that "so long ago as the 30th October 1879, Mr. Cotton protested by letter against the Managers' proposal, but without effect." This letter was communicated by Mr. Cotton to the newspapers simultaneously with its despatch to the Managers; it was referred to in the circular of 22nd November 1879; and it was referred to at the meeting of 31st January, before the vote was taken; Mr. Cotton also informed the Managers unofficially that he did not require a separate reply to his letter; and he afterwards, in March, voted in favour of the resolution, against which he now states that he protested without effect. If Mr. Cotton, the author of the letter, thus adopted the very view against which the letter was chiefly directed, it is very difficult to see how it can be urged that others would have voted differently had their attention been more closely directed to the contents of this letter.

4. From the wording of the first resolution and the language used in the paragraph which precedes it, it would seem that the authors of the circular are of opinion that, under the rules as now amended, the families enumerated do not in any way participate in the increased benefits. As a matter of fact, however, these families are, except in respect of the donation, in exactly the same position, from 1st April 1878, as the families of subscribers who died on or after that date. None of them are subject to the one-sixth deduction; all of them who were motherless on 1st April 1878, and who have since become motherless, draw the increased allowance with effect from the date in question; all the sons draw the special allowance with effect from 1st April 1878. Additions can only be made to benefits by amendments of rules, and retrospective distribution can only be effected by giving retrospective effect to the amendments. The amendments were given retrospective effect from 1st April 1878. They were accordingly to be read as having been in force on that day; and therefore the rule regarding one-sixth deduction ceased to have effect from that day, and every child fulfilling the conditions of being motherless, or, in the cases of sons attaining the age of 16 years on or after that day, was necessarily entitled to the new benefits. The donation, however, could only be given to families which became incumbent on or after that day. It could only be granted under the rules on the decease of the subscriber, and accordingly the family of a subscriber, who had died before 1st April 1878, could not claim it. The deductions of one-sixth were wholly eliminated from the Actuary's calculations of the liabilities of the Fund from 1st April 1878, and at page 7 of his second report, he shows the charges placed on the Fund by the extension from that date of the special allowances to motherless orphans, and by the provisions of special allowances to sons attaining the age of 16. The actual effect, therefore, of the first resolution would be simply to give to certain families arrear payments before 1st April 1878 of allowances which they never expect to get, and which accordingly never entered into their calculations in regulating their expenditure. The donation, for instance, is given avowedly to enable the family to meet the expenses incident on settling in a home. Can it be said that there is any reason in giving in 1880 a donation of £200 or £300 to the family of a subscriber who died in 1874 in order to enable them to establish themselves? The Managers are altogether unable to understand how such a proceeding can be recommended on the ground of "keeping faith with the members of our own Service." They will show further on that the proposal as it stands involves a breach of faith with two other classes—annuitants who retired before 31st March 1873 and died before 31st March 1878, and annuitants now surviving. To deprive the families of the former of benefits given to the families of active subscribers who died during the same period, and to tax the latter indefinitely to provide the necessary funds, would be to act in diametric opposition to the terms of the resolution of January 1874, on which the proposals of the circular profess to proceed.

5. With reference to the second Resolution, the Managers do not know why Mr. G. K. Webster is selected for exceptional treatment. It is the duty of the Managers to inform the subscribers that, if this resolution is adopted, there are many other subscribers who will possess similar claims. The amendment of the rule must have effect from 1st April 1873, if it is taken beyond 1st April 1878; and every invalid annuitant who retired in the interval will come within its purview. Mr. Richardson Evans is precisely in the same position as Mr. Webster: he retired in March 1877, and, like Mr. Webster, secured one-fourth benefits only to his family. Messrs. W. Johnstone, P. Humphrey, E. Waterfield, and G. Graham retired between 1873 and 1878, making up their balances to Rs. 12,500, and securing half benefits. If Mr. Webster is to be admitted to the same position without paying anything, clearly the amounts paid by these gentlemen, not being demandable under the amended rule, must be refunded. Messrs. C. E. C. Merington, H. Priestly, D. W. Marsden, H. M. Rogers, F. Hurley, and E. M. Money have not made up their balance to the minimum of Rs. 6,250, and have consequently ceased to belong to the Fund. If the operation of the amendment is thrown back so as to secure half benefits to Mr. Webster's family, these subscribers must also be restored, and the Fund must undertake liability for their existing or future families. The cost of this measure alone to the Fund would be nearly Rs. 70,000.

6. But the Managers must point out that the proposal to extend special consideration to invalid annuitants who retired between 1873 and 1878 is not reasonable, even on the grounds on which the other proposals of the circular are supposed to rest. The argument of the circular is that the subscribers of 1874, only abstained from utilizing the then existing surplus in certain ways, on the understanding that their families would not lose by the postponement, and that their expectations must be fulfilled. Now, it is clear that those expectations could only extend to measures which had been already discussed. But the proposal to deal specially with invalid annuitants was never mooted till 1879. Clearly, therefore, any invalid subscriber retiring before 1st April 1878 was innocent of any expectation of special benefit of this nature, and the subscribers have not even an imaginary duty to fulfil in regard to him.

7. The Managers cannot accept the proposal to exclude from the additional benefits the families of annuitants who retired from the service before 31st March 1873, but who died before 31st March 1878. The arguments that they were not voters when the resolution of January 1874 was carried, and "were not considered when that vote was passed," are such as have not hitherto been resorted to in dealing with Fund questions, and they will not, the Managers apprehend, find favour with the subscribers. Though annuitants are, from the accident of their position, debarred from active co-operation in the administration of the Fund, they have, it is needless to say, precisely the same rights in the Fund that active subscribers possess. To exclude them from benefits because they were not present to assert their rights, or to cause themselves to be considered, would be a proceeding out of harmony with the spirit that has hitherto governed the action of the Service. The proposal, however, is impracticable as well as unjust. The same error has been made here as has been made in regard to the position of incumbent families on 1st April 1878. As has already been said, additions can only be made to benefits by amendments of rules, and retrospective distribution can only be effected by giving retrospective effect to the amendments. If it is intended to give retrospective effect to 1st April 1873, every case occurring on or since that date must be dealt with as if the amended rule applied to it. Therefore the families of deceased annuitants must have precisely the same privileges as those of deceased active subscribers, however little the interests of the annuitants in question may have been considered by those who voted away the surplus funds.

8. Before proceeding to discuss the estimate of the cost of the proposed measures, it is necessary for the Managers to advert to the source from which it is sought to obtain the funds required. It is proposed in the circular to meet the increased charges "by a further postponement of the total exemption of annuitants." Now, the resolution of January 1874, on which the circular relies, provided that "any benefits that may be distributed shall have retrospective effect from the 1st April 1873." It is not easy to see how those who rely upon this resolution can propose, not only not to give retrospective effect to one of the benefits decreed, but to postpone it indefinitely. The Managers apprehend that it is not open to those who consider the resolution binding to proceed directly against its terms, in order, amongst other things, to provide funds for a measure which it did not contemplate.

9. It is estimated in the circular that the cost of the proposals would be "about two lakhs, or perhaps rather more than two lakhs;" but no details are given to show the basis on which the estimate was framed. With reference to this point it may be mentioned that, in returning to Mr. Cotton his draft circular, the Managers warned him that many of his statements were open to contradiction, and that the liabilities which his proposal involved would "certainly enormously exceed" his estimate of two lakhs. The proposals are too vague to be made the subject of a precise estimate. In the first place the Managers have shown that the greater part of the effect intended by the signatories is already included under the Resolutions of January, so that the actual effect in regard to the families named is much less than the signatories intend. But, on the other hand, it is clear that the proposals cannot be accepted without entailing several extensions beyond what the circular contemplates. Taking the proposals as they appear to the signatories of the circular, the Managers have no hesitation in saying that the estimate should be multiplied by at least five. Taking them as they must in any case be modified by the considerations which have been detailed above, the Managers present the following estimate of the real cost of giving effect to the amendments of the rules from 1st April 1873, with the exception of that regarding the ordinary subscriptions of annuitants:—

Refund of one-sixth deductions	11,350
Refund of additional subscriptions, composition, &c.	11,460
Increase of £50 to sons	3,050
Increase of 50 per cent. to motherless orphans	11,300
Donations	12,350
Refund to invalid annuitants	1,460
Value of contingent and potential benefits to families of invalid annuitants who have left the Fund, so far as known	5,430
Total ...	56,400

As regards the proposal to retain the ordinary subscriptions of annuitants in order to cover this charge, it must be remembered that these subscriptions have been provisionally retained, on the ground that the proposals already carried out have left the Fund considerably in deficit. Mr. Cotton's proposal would leave the Fund in deficit by 5⅜ lakhs in addition to the present deficit of about 3 lakhs, making a total of at least 8½ lakhs. The retention of 4¼ lakhs would only meet half of this deficit. To carry out the proposals now made, therefore, it would be necessary either to continue the subscriptions of annuitants to both branches for a practically indefinite period, or to impose additional rates on active subscribers. The Managers think it right to inform the subscribers that the first course is not open to them consistently with the undertaking already given by the Service. In 1869 the subscribers decided by a majority of 92 to 11 to amend the rules so as to relieve annuitants of all charges except a composition rate of one-tenth of their subscriptions, which was to be maintained under the erroneous impression that some payment would be required to ensure correct returns of family occurrences. As the Actuary reported that the Fund could not afford this measure in full, it was decided "for the present" to reduce annuitants' subscriptions only by half. But it has always been recognized that the Service is committed to the remission of annuitants' subscriptions as soon as the Fund can afford it. The circular professes to rest upon the general resolution of January 1874,—the provisions of which, however, it proposes to infringe, but it takes no cognizance of a formal amendment of the rules deliberately adopted by the Service, and avowedly only suspended for a time on financial grounds.

10. It remains therefore for the subscribers to decide whether they are willing to impose additional taxation on active members in order that certain families may receive arrear payments, for a period which closed more than two-and-a-half years ago, representing allowances which they never expected to receive and for which the occasion has necessarily passed away, and that a number of invalid annuitants may be placed in a position which, at the time of their retirement, they could not possibly have contemplated. The Managers have little doubt what the decision of the Service will be.

11. In conclusion, the Managers desire me to say that while they are most anxious that all proposals affecting the Fund should receive the fullest possible discussion (and of this they have given ample proof in the communications addressed to the subscribers before the proposals carried in January were formally submitted), and that the records of the Fund Office should be consulted to the fullest extent by every subscriber, they must point out the impossibility of carrying on the administration of a great institution like our Fund, if there is to be no finality in formal amendments of rules. In the present instance the measures for distributing the surplus were fully discussed before they were formulated; they were under consideration by the subscribers in their formal shape for two months before the general meeting was held; they were discussed at the meeting; they were, after being carried with only one dissentient vote in a meeting at which 45 subscribers were present, submitted for two months to the further consideration of the Service, and they were confirmed by an overwhelming majority. Eight months after this confirmation certain gentlemen re-opened the discussion. Even had these gentlemen consistently opposed the resolutions of January, the Managers think that they should have accepted the decision of the majority of the subscribers. But it is a remarkable circumstance that not one of them recorded a vote against the measures which they now so vehemently assail. Three of them voted unreservedly for all the resolutions. The other signatories of the circular did not feel themselves called upon even to return the voting papers supplied to them.

With this exposition of the circumstances, the Managers leave it to the Service to pronounce its decision on the question. In order that Members who cannot be present at the meeting may be able to record their votes on one side or the other, the usual form of proxy is enclosed. The Managers hope that Members of the Service will not fail in these important discussions to exercise their privilege of recording a distinct vote, so that some finality may be attained.

I have, &c.,

COLMAN MACAULAY,

Secretary.

Mr. Cotton has announced in the public papers that he does not intend to bring forward the Resolutions in question: but the Managers have received no communication from him on the subject.

The following letter has since been received by the Managers:—

TO THE MANAGERS OF THE BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

GENTLEMEN,

WE have had under consideration your circular of the 11th instant on the subject of the retrospective effect to be given to the increased benefits from the Fund to the families of subscribers deceased since 1873. We have also read the letter published by Mr. Cotton in to-day's Englishman, in which that gentleman announces (for the first time) his withdrawal from the positions originally taken up by him in common with the rest of us.

2. In the circular to which we attached our signatures, we took up two prominent and important positions—the first, to the effect that a resolution which had received the formal sanction of the service, and which consequently, under paragraph 2, Articles 17 and 18 of the rules, was "finally adopted" and became "final and conclusive," had never been formally rescinded by the service; and the second, that certain increased benefits should be extended to the families of certain specified deceased subscribers with retrospective effect from April 1873.

3. The second of these positions has been, we consider, disposed of by your circular already alluded to. We now understand that it has been your intention to extend to the families of subscribers dying between 1873 and 1878 very much what our first proposal was intended to secure for them, inasmuch as it is now stated that such families are to be included in the increased benefits which are to accrue from April 1878.

4. But our first position remains, in our opinion, intact. We do not find in your reply any specific statement to the effect that the final and conclusive resolution arrived at by the service has been formally cancelled or rescinded by the subscribers, who alone have power in the matter. We do not find that the question of rescission has been ever formally put to the subscribers as it should be. The fact that the resolution of the Managers was "prominently referred to" on the occasion of the vote being taken thereon has not, we consider, that formality which the rules require; and the further argument that the majority of the service voted for the accrual of the increased benefits from April 1878, while it shows indeed that the subscribers were willing to go so far, falls short of a resolve on the part of the service that they should go no further. It is true that in your circular of the 11th instant you state that "the vote was taken on the proposal to give retrospective effect to the amendments of the rules from the 31st April 1878 only." But if you will refer to the report of the meeting held on the 31st January 1880, as well as to the vote paper separately circulated amongst all subscribers, you will find that this word "only" occurs in neither; and we think you will agree with us that many who did vote on that occasion may not have understood that they were voting for the entire cancelment of the former resolution of the service, and that the word "only" should not, therefore, have been inserted in the circular-reply. Taking, therefore, into consideration the whole facts of the case as they are now before us, we are of opinion that the resolution of January 1874 should now be formally and specifically cancelled or amended so as to meet the circumstances of the Fund, so as to allow an accrual of increased benefits from April 1878 only.

5. We have only to add that for the accuracy of the statements contained in our previous circular we are not directly responsible. We were not all in a position to satisfy ourselves from a personal inspection of the records of the Fund as to the accuracy of these statements, and some of us accepted them on the distinct declaration (communicated to us) that they were statements of absolute and undeniable facts.

6. We are now content to leave the matter in the hands of the Managers, being satisfied that we have done our duty in bringing what we consider to be an omission to the notice of the service, and that the Managers will be, equally with ourselves, desirous to rectify this omission so as best to suit the interests of all subscribers.

We have, &c.,

G. J. B. T. DALTON.
A. A. WACE.
C. A. WILKINS.
F. C. DAUKES.
J. A. BOURDILLON.
L. C. ABBOTT.

The 25th December 1880.

With reference to the last paragraph of this letter, the Managers are satisfied that the decision arrived at represents fully the wishes of the service at large, and they are of opinion that no further formal action on their part is required.

7. In accordance with Article XXII of the revised rules, the Managers have to report that the Hon'ble J. O'Kinealy having obtained six months' leave of absence from 11th October last, tendered his resignation as an elected manager, and that the Hon'ble H. J. Reynolds was invited to join the Board of Managers in succession to Mr. O'Kinealy.

8. The following is the result of the voting on the resolution of the Special General Meeting of 22nd November:—

"That so much of the amendment of Article VIII of the Rules, adopted at the Half-yearly General Meeting held on 31st January last, as regards the subscriptions of annuitants to the Ordinary Branch of the Fund be held in abeyance."

THAT the following gentlemen be elected Managers for the ensuing year:—

Hon'ble Mr. Justice McDonell, v.c.; Hon'ble H. J. Reynolds; J. Monro, Esq.; A. Forbes, Esq., and C. A. Wilkins, Esq.

Mr. Cotton said that he rose to make a personal explanation, and also to make a statement which he thought, in the opinion of the subscribers present, would call for explanation from the Board of Management. Although he had no especial authority to do so, he felt that in the remarks he was about to make he might speak both for himself and for the other gentlemen who had joined with him in signing the appeal-circular to the subscribers dated 26th November 1880. That circular was in the hands of all present. It proposed that the increased benefits awarded at the General Meeting of 31st January 1880, should be awarded (in accordance with the Resolution of the 28th January 1874) so as to include the specified families of subscribers who died after the 1st April 1873, but before the 1st April 1878, from which latter date only the benefits were declared by the meeting of 31st January 1880 to have effect. It had subsequently been explained by the Managers, in their circular of the 11th December 1880, that the families of the subscribers who died within this quinquennial period "were, except in respect of the donation, in exactly the same position from 1st April 1878 as the families of subscribers who died on or after that date." So that in point of fact the appeal which he and others thought it necessary to make to the Service had substantially been allowed by the management, and there was no necessity therefore for him to press the resolution of which he had given notice.

He would explain, however, that the authoritative interpretation now given by the Managers, of the retrospective character of the benefits recently awarded, was a novel one and directly inconsistent with the interpretation the Managers had themselves put upon the same point in the circular letter in which they had recommended those benefits for the approval of the Service. In that circular, dated 13th October 1879, it was distinctly explained that the families of suboribers who died before 1st April 1878, would be ineligible for any increased benefits that might be awarded. The arguments of that circular had never been disavowed or contradicted. They had gone abroad to the Service as indicating the policy it was intended to follow in regard to the distribution of benefits, and Mr. Cotton for one certainly understood from them, and he believed that almost every member of the Service was also with him in understanding from them, that the families of subscribers who died before 1st April 1878, were excluded from all participation in the increased benefits recently awarded.

In order to justify these remarks and the public action he had taken in consequence of the opinion he held, he would read to the meeting extracts from the Managers' circular of the 13th October 1879. That circular was sent along with a copy of the Actuaries' report, and "submitted proposals for the distribution of the surplus as ascertained by Mr. Sutton." Paragraph 3 of that circular is expressed as follows:—

"3. The Managers consider it unnecessary to go back farther than 31st March 1878 for the adjustment of the accounts. It is a fixed principle in the administration of all systems of insurance that long retrospective effect cannot be given to any distribution of surplus funds. The existing members of a fund are alone entitled to the benefit of a surplus, as they alone bear the chance of having to provide for a deficit."

He begged to call particular attention to the last-quoted sentence. It meant, as plainly as words could say it, that members of the Fund who had died before 1st April 1878 would not be entitled to the benefit of the surplus, and the reason it gave for their exclusion was, that as they were dead and no longer subscribers, it would be impossible to impose upon them any liability to provide for a deficit. Under this interpretation there could be no doubt that the families of the late Messrs. Schalch, Geoghegan, Carpenter, Falcon, and others, enumerated in the appeal which he and his co-signitaries had made to the Service, would be excluded once and for all from any participation in the increased benefits. He would continue reading from the 3rd paragraph of the Managers' circular:—

"Claims which have become incumbent are represented by separate allotment of funds to provide for them. No risk attaches to them, they have been settled in full, and it would be impossible to manage any institution properly if they were liable to reconsideration."

These words also can bear but one meaning. They mean that funds had been appropriated on account of the families of subscribers who died before the 1st April 1878, and that it would be impossible to readjust the amount of appropriated funds so as to admit those families to any subsequently sanctioned increase of benefits.

The same paragraph proceeds:—

"Moreover, the principle of retrospective adjustment, if once admitted, would involve the extinction of the greater part of the surplus, with no appreciable benefit to the Fund."

This sentence, when read with the context of the words which precede it, has no other meaning than that the Managers were opposed to granting increased benefits to the families of any subscriber who died before the 1st April 1878, on the ground that, by so doing, they would swallow up the greater part of the Fund surplus.

The Managers then proceeded, in the circular from which he was quoting, to describe the increased benefits proposed, and to estimate the cost of each. In the seventh paragraph they summarise their remarks, and continue, in language which must clear away the faintest doubt that may have lingered in the mind of any reader, as follows:—

These measures (i.e., above recited benefits) as well as the abolition of the rule regarding one-sixth deductions, the Managers would wish to see introduced at once with retrospective effect from 1st April 1878, the first day of the new quinquennial period,—that is, they will be applied to all pensions which have become incumbent on or after that date."

Here is a distinct exclusion of all pensions which had become incumbent before the 1st April 1878. There is nothing more wanted to show that, in the opinion of the Managers, on the 13th October 1879 the families of all subscribers who had come on the Fund before 1st April 1878 were to be excluded from any participation in the increased benefits. This at least is the view Mr. Cotton took, and this is the justification—he ventured to think it was a satisfactory one—that he had now to offer to the Service for the action he had taken. In this view of the case he had recorded a formal written protest from Chittagong, where he was stationed at the time of the last January meeting. At that meeting it is true the subject was just alluded to, but nothing explanatory of the circular of the 13th October, or in any way modifying the observations therein expressed, was elicited from the management.

Mr. Cotton being fully occupied with other concerns was then inclined to let the matter drop, but he was moved to act again on the representation of others who had a personal interest in seeing that the incumbents of the Fund, during the quinquennial period from 1873 to 1878, were not excluded from the increased benefits. He accordingly, on the 6th September 1880, addressed the Secretary to the Fund with the same arguments as those on which his own and his co-signitaries' circular of the 26th November was based, and in order to avoid any division in the Service, asked the Managers to identify themselves with a proposal, that the increased benefits should be distributed with retrospective effect, so as to include the families of all subscribers who died during the quinquennial period from 1873 to 1878, and pointed out that this was in accordance with the Resolution of the 28th January 1874, which enjoined that "any benefits that may be distributed shall have retrospective effect from the 1st April 1873." In reply to this representation Mr. Cotton received a letter on the 15th September, in which it was said that the Managers "did not consider that they could profitably enter on a discussion of an informal proposal, made by a single member of the Service, to set aside a Resolution almost unanimously adopted by the Service at a recent General Meeting." There was no mention in this reply that Mr. Cotton was labouring under any misapprehension in regard to the actual retrospective distribution of the benefits, or that the Managers in any way repudiated the principles and proposals they had enunciated in their circular of the 13th October 1879.

Failing to get any satisfaction from the management, and relying entirely on the statements of the Managers in their circular of October, which it never occurred to him for one moment to mistrust, Mr. Cotton then consulted certain other members of the service as to the course he should pursue, and the result was the issue of the circular-appeal to the Service, dated 28th November 1880. The result of this appeal was that Managers proceeded to make an elaborate exposition of the case for the information of the Service.

The manifesto of the Managers, dated 11th December 1880, was a most valuable document, and although it contained many passages, personal allusions, as well as other points open to much objection, Mr. Cotton did not propose to detain the meeting by indulging in any criticism in regard to them. He might say in passing that he considered the expression "vehement assault" contained in the penultimate paragraph was quite uncalled for by any of the language used in his own circular. But he did not wish to dwell on such matters. He would refer to the fourth paragraph only, and was glad to express his unqualified satisfaction that the Fund management had now been able to place such an interpretation on the retrospective clause as to admit the families of all subscribers who died before 1st April 1878 to the full benefits now sanctioned (except donation), equally with the families of subscribers who may die, or have died, after that date. The Managers had now virtually conceded what he and his co-signitaries had asked for, and the only regret he had to express was that the Managers had not thought fit to favour him personally with this explanation (which had now, as it were, been furnished at the eleventh hour) when he addressed them in September last on the subject. Had the Managers at that time discussed the matter with him, or supplied him with information, which presumably at that time was available, showing that their October circular was no longer to be accepted as an indication of the Managers' policy, much time and trouble would have been saved.

Mr. Cotton had now completed the personal explanation he had to make to the meeting. He would now ask the Managers to furnish the explanation he thought was due from them to the meeting,—that is to say, he would ask them to reconcile the contradictory statements he had pointed out that afternoon, between the remarks contained in the circular of the 13th October 1879 and those contained in the fourth paragraph of the circular of the 11th December 1880. Before he sat down, however, he wished to make some remarks regarding the distribution of the surplus, with retrospective effect, to the families of invalid annuitants. This was a point prominently alluded to in the appeal-circular of the 28th November. The name of Mr. Webster was particularly cited in that circular, because from the information available to the drafters of that circular it could not be discovered that any other invalid annuitant occupied a similar position to his. The facts of Mr. Webster's case were that he retired with a family in 1877, and now subscribes at quarter rates, and that under the Resolution of 1880, his wife and children on his death will only get quarter benefits, calculated on the increased allowances now awarded; but if the benefits recently sanctioned are extended as contemplated by the Resolution of 1874, they would be entitled to half benefits calculated on the increased allowances. It is now explained by the Managers that there are other subscribers who possess similar claims to those of Mr. Webster, and that if half benefits were guaranteed to Mr. Webster's family, it would be necessary to restore other subscribers to the Fund, and that the Fund would have to undertake liability for their existing or future families. The cost of such a measure is estimated by the Managers at nearly Rs. 70,000. It appeared, however, to Mr. Cotton that this estimate would probably be found to be excessive. He observed that in the Managers' circular of 22nd November 1879, in which the concession of this benefit generally to the families of invalid annuitants was discussed and recommended, it was stated: "The provision will not affect wives married, and children born of such wives after retirement. The cost of the benefit proposed by the Managers will not be great. Cases of this nature are so rare that they cannot be accurately valued." The benefit at that time was considered a very inexpensive one, and yet when the Managers were asked to extend it to the families of the invalid annuitants during a single quinquennial period, they pointed out that for these families only the benefit would cost nearly Rs. 70,000. It occurred to Mr. Cotton that when the management were in favour of a proposal, there was a tendency among the Managers to under-estimate its cost; but that when they were opposed to a proposition, they were liable to a tendency to pronounce the cost greater than it really was. In the present case it must be remembered that the benefit proposed "would not effect wives married, and children born of such wives after retirement." It was Mr. Cotton's belief that, of the invalid annuitants between 1st April 1873 and 1st April 1878, not above two or three were married at the time of retirement, and it was in his opinion out of the question to say that it would cost nearly Rs. 70,000 to extend the recently sanctioned benefit to the case of these families. Those who retired as bachelors could have no claim on the Fund on account of this benefit. It appeared to Mr. Cotton that the Managers had lost sight of this fact, and he questioned therefore the accuracy of their calculations. He threw himself on the favourable consideration of the Managers and of the meeting in dealing with this question. There was no class of subscribers for whom the members of the Service ought to feel greater sympathy than for the invalid annuitants. They were all men cut off from active service in the prime of life, with pitiful annuities hardly sufficient to support existence, and their families, in the event of their death, will be even in still narrower circumstances. It was not for Mr. Webster's family only that he was pleading, but for the families of all other invalid annuitants who had retired between 1873 and 1878, and whose position under the rules was similar to that of Mr. Webster's family. He was sure that if the accounts were again made up, the cost of this concession would come to a very insignificant total compared with the resources of the Fund and the value of the benefit to the family in each individual case. He earnestly hoped that the Managers and the meeting would consider his plea, and, as a special case, or as a special favour, allow the wives married to, and children born of, the invalid annuitants of this quinquennial period, at the time of retirement, the full value of the benefits awarded to the families of invalid annuitants by the Resolutions passed at the last January meeting.

Mr. Westland said he was surprised to find Mr. Cotton, when he rose to address the meeting, instead of offering an apology to the Managers, had proceeded to demand explanations of them. The proceedings which culminated on the resolution of last January had been characterized by the utmost deliberation, having been submitted to the Service for discussion for some months before the meeting, and afterwards in accordance with the rules for confirmation after it; he thought that Mr. Cotton should have been more careful before challenging the resolutions, and re-opening the whole matter by a new agitation. It was only twelve months since he (Mr. Westland) in this same place had complained of Members of the Service rushing into print, and getting up agitations without first making some enquiry as to their facts. Last year's agitation collapsed the moment a simple statement of the fact was made. This year's had collapsed for the same reason even before it came up for discussion.

Mr. Cotton had tried to justify his misapprehension of the facts by quoting from a Circular of the Managers of October 1879, in which they had asked for the opinions of the Service. The fact was that the Managers, after consulting the Service, and receiving, among other communications, one from Mr. Cotton himself, had determined to frame the resolutions so as to give the new benefits more of retrospective effect than they at first indicated; and Mr. Cotton, if he wanted to know what the effect of the resolutions was, should have looked to their wording, and not merely excerpted a statement from the discussions preceding it. At the meeting of January 1880, when the resolutions were brought forward, a valuation of their effect was printed and laid upon the table, where an entry would be found of the very benefits which Mr. Cotton was proposing by his first resolution; and afterwards in the Actuary's report, which was circulated to all the Service, the same entry was made, viz., "present incumbents" upon page

7. If Mr. Cotton had only read the documents sent him, he would never have been under any misapprehension as to the purport of the resolutions.

Then, besides that, Mr. Cotton sent a copy of his proposed circular to the Managers, and was distinctly informed that "many of his statements were open to contradiction." But the only result was, as appeared from a letter now received from Mr. Cotton's co-signatories, that the circular was sent to them for signature, with the assurance that "they were statements of absolute and undeniable facts." It was plainly Mr. Cotton himself and not the Managers who were responsible for the former so completely misunderstanding the facts of the case concerning which he had undertaken to address the Service.

As the other point raised by Mr. Cotton,—the case of the invalid annuitants,—Mr. Westland said that he was very sorry to appear to press hard upon any individual. Mr. Webster was a friend of his own, and he could not but sympathize with him in the misfortunes which had closed to him an Indian career. But the Managers were dealing in this matter with money which they held as trustees, and they would manifestly fail in their duty, if, instead of holding the scales evenly between all parties, they were to give special consideration to the hard cases which happened to come to their personal knowledge, or with which they might have some personal sympathy. Mr. Webster had at the time of his retirement deliberately chosen to insure his life for quarter benefits, and that at a time when no question had been raised about giving any extension in that direction. His case was not distinguishable from that of a person who, after insuring his life in an assurance office for £500, should apply that, in consideration of his special hardship, he might get £1,000 instead, and he would leave the meeting to judge what the Directors' reply to such an application would be. It was manifestly impossible for the Managers to accept Mr. Cotton's motion to separate off Mr. Webster's case for special treatment.

On the question of valuations Mr. Westland warned the meeting of the carefulness necessary in discussing all questions of increased benefits. The Managers drew up careful valuations of all that they themselves proposed, and the details of these were as open to Mr. Cotton as to any other person. All these questions were matters of very serious responsibility, and he warned the service of the extreme danger they would be led into, if they permitted private members to brush aside all careful calculations upon the mere plea that their own inner consciousness gave a result that differed from that arrived at by mathematical processes. He also explained the details of the Rs. 70,000, stated by the Managers as the cost of the application of Mr. Cotton's proposal to such invalid annuitant cases as were known.

Mr. Dampier said that before the subject was dropped, he would like to ask Mr. Westland on behalf of the Managers a question—

If before the next meeting Mr. Cotton were to address the Managers saying that he proposed to bring forward a motion that the service should as a matter of grace admit all subscribers whose cases stood on all fours with that of Mr. Webster, to the extra benefits which had been proposed for Mr Webster, and asking the Managers to assist him in getting up his case by furnishing a list of such members, and of the probable cost which the measure would entail, what answer would the Managers make to such an application?

No one could regret more than he did the growth of what he might term an opposition to the Managers, which was inclined to be overwilling to call them to account for informalities rather than to accept what they did on its merits.

Mr. Barbour pointed out that the question raised by Mr. Dampier was not before the meeting, and that Mr. Westland had no authority to speak for the Managers.

Mr. Westland said that he had no business to answer for the Managers in such a matter, as of course it would come before the Board for settlement, but that for himself he might say that, if Mr. Cotton, or any other member of the Service, desired to bring forward any reasonable proposal, he would give him every facility for obtaining information from the records of the Fund Office; and if Mr. Cotton wished to bring forward such a motion as Mr. Dampier mentioned, he (Mr. Westland) would also be happy to give him personal assistance.

Mr. Dampier said that his question was now completely and satisfactorily answered.

After a vote of thanks to the Chair the meeting dissolved.

The clear produce of it forms part of the residue of the testator's estate.

Illustrations.

(a). A bequeathes his flock of sheep to B. Between the death of A and delivery by his executor the sheep are shorn, or some of the ewes produce lambs. The wool and lambs are the property of B.

(b). A bequeathes his Government-securities to B, but postpones the delivery of them till the death of C. The interest which falls due between the death of A and the death of C belongs to B, and must, unless he is a minor, be paid to him as it is received.

(c). The testator bequeathes all his four per cent. Government promissory notes to A when he shall complete the age of 18. A, if he complete that age, is entitled to receive the notes, but the interest which accrues in respect of them, between the testator's death and A's completing 18 forms part of the residue.

Residuary legatee's title to produce of residuary fund.

129. The legatee under a general residuary bequest is entitled to the produce of the residuary fund from the testator's death.

Exception.—A general residuary bequest contingent in its terms does not comprise the income which may accrue upon the fund bequeathed between the death of the testator and the vesting of the legacy.

Such income goes as undisposed of.

Illustrations.

(a). The testator bequeathes the residue of his property to A, a minor, to be paid to him when he shall complete the age of 18. The income from the testator's death belongs to A.

(b). The testator bequeathes the residue of his property to A when he shall complete the age of 18. A, if he complete that age, is entitled to receive the residue. The income which has accrued in respect of it since the testator's death goes as undisposed of.

130. Where no time has been fixed for the payment of a general legacy, interest begins to run from the expiration of one year from the testator's death.

(2). Where the testator was a parent or a more remote ancestor of the legatee, or has put himself in the place of a parent of the legatee, the legacy shall bear interest from the death of the testator.

(3). Where a sum is bequeathed to a minor with a direction to pay for his maintenance out of it, interest is payable from the death of the testator.

134. Where a sum of money is directed to be invested to produce an annuity, interest is payable on it from the death of the testator.

CHAPTER XII.

OF THE REFUNDING OF LEGACIES.

Refund of legacy paid under Judge's orders.

135. An executor who has paid a legacy under the order of a Judge, is entitled to call upon the legatee to refund in the event of the assets proving insufficient to pay all the legacies.

No refund if paid voluntarily.

136. When an executor has voluntarily paid a legacy, he cannot call upon a legatee to refund in the event of the assets proving insufficient to pay all the legacies.

Refund when legacy becomes due on performance of condition within further time allowed.

137. When the time prescribed by the will for the performance of a condition has elapsed, without the condition having been performed, and the executor has thereupon, without fraud, distributed the assets; in such case, if further time has, under the second clause of this section, been allowed for the performance of the condition, and the condition has been performed accordingly, the legacy cannot be claimed from the executor, but those to whom he has paid it are liable to refund the amount.

Where the will requires an act to be performed by the legatee within a specified time, either as a condition to be fulfilled before the legacy is enjoyed, or as a condition upon the non-fulfilment of which the subject-matter of the bequest is to go over to another person, or the bequest is to cease to have effect, the act must be performed within the time specified, unless the performance of it be prevented by fraud, in which case such further time shall be allowed as is requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud.

When each legatee compellable to refund in proportion.

138. When the executor has paid away the assets in legacies, and he is afterwards obliged to discharge a debt of which he had no previous notice, he is entitled to call upon each legatee to refund in proportion.

Distribution of assets.

139. Where an executor or administrator has given such notices as the High Court may, by any general rule to be made from time to time, prescribe, for creditors and others to send in to him their claims against the estate of the deceased, he shall, at the expiration of the time therein named for sending in claims, be at liberty to distribute the assets, or any part thereof, in discharge of such lawful claims as he knows of, and shall not be liable for the assets so distributed to any person of whose claim he has not had notice at the time of such distribution;

Creditor may follow assets.

but nothing herein contained shall prejudice the right of any creditor or claimant to follow the assets, or any part thereof, in the hands of the persons who may have received the same respectively.

Creditor may call upon legatee to refund.

140. A creditor who has not received payment of his debt may call upon a legatee who has received payment of his legacy to refund, whether the assets of the testator's estate were or were not sufficient at the time of his death to pay both debts and legacies, and whether the payment of the legacy by the executor was voluntary or not.

When legatee, not satisfied or compelled to refund under section 140, cannot oblige one paid in full to refund.

141. If the assets were sufficient to satisfy all the legacies at the time of the testator's death, a legatee who has not received payment of his legacy, or who has been compelled to refund under the last preceding section, cannot oblige one who has received payment in full to refund, whether the legacy were paid to him with or without suit, although the assets have subsequently become deficient by the wasting of the executor.

When unsatisfied legatee must first proceed against executor, if solvent.

142. If the assets were not sufficient to satisfy all the legacies at the time of the testator's death, a legatee who has not received payment of his legacy must, before he can call on a satisfied legatee to refund, first proceed against the executor if he is solvent; but, if the executor is insolvent or not liable to pay, the unsatisfied legatee can oblige each satisfied legatee to refund in proportion.

Limit to refunding of one legatee to another.

143. The refunding of one legatee to another shall not exceed the sum by which the satisfied legatee ought to have contributed if the estate had been properly administered.

Illustration.

A has bequeathed 240 rupees to B, 480 rupees to C and 720 rupees to D. The assets are only 1,200 rupees. If properly administered would give 200 rupees to B, 400 rupees to C and 600 rupees to D. Probate only to appointed executor.

6. Probate can be granted only to an executor appointed by the will.

Appointment express or implied.

7. The appointment may be express or by necessary implication.

Illustrations.

(a.) A wills that C be his executor if B will not. B is appointed executor by implication.

(b.) A gives a legacy to B and several legacies to other persons, among the rest to his daughter-in-law, C, and adds, "but should the within-named C be not living, I do constitute and appoint B my whole and sole executrix." C is appointed executrix by implication.

(c.) A appoints several persons executors of his will and codicils, and his nephew residuary legatee, and in another codicil are these words:—"I appoint my nephew my residuary legatee to discharge all lawful demands against my will and codicils, signed of different dates." The nephew is appointed an executor by implication.

13. Letters of administration cannot be granted to any person who is a minor or is of unsound mind.

Effect of letters of administration.

14. Letters of administration entitle the administrator to all rights belonging to the intestate as effectually as if the administration had been granted at the moment after his death.

Acts not validated by administration.

15. Letters of administration do not render valid any intermediate acts of the administrator tending to the diminution or damage of the intestate's estate.

Grant of administration where executor has not renounced.

16. When a person appointed an executor has not renounced the executorship, letters of administration shall not be granted to any other person until a citation has been issued calling upon the executor to accept or renounce his executorship;

except that, when one or more of several executors has or have proved a will, the Court may, on the death of the survivor of those who have proved, grant letters of administration without citing those who have not proved. — Exception.

Form and effect of renunciation of executorship.

17. The renunciation may be made orally in the presence of the Judge, or by a writing signed by the person renouncing, and when made shall preclude him from ever thereafter applying for probate of the will appointing him executor.

Procedure where executor renounces or fails to accept within time limited.

18. If the executor renounce, or fail to accept, the executorship within the time limited for the acceptance or refusal thereof, the will may be proved and letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed may be granted to the person who would be entitled to administration in case of intestacy.

19. When the deceased has made a will, but has not appointed an executor, or

21. When there is no executor and no residuary legatee or representative of a residuary legatee, or he declines or is incapable to act, or cannot be found, the person or persons who would be entitled to the administration of the estate of the deceased if he had died intestate, or any other legatee having a beneficial interest, or a creditor, may be admitted to prove the will, and letters of administration may be granted to him or them accordingly.

Citation before grant of administration to legatee other than universal or residuary.

22. Letters of administration with the will annexed shall not be granted to any legatee other than an universal or a residuary legatee, until a citation has been issued and published in the manner hereinafter mentioned, calling on the next-of-kin to accept or refuse letters of administration.

To whom administration may be granted.

23. When the deceased has died intestate, administration of his estate may be granted to any person who, according to the rules for the distribution of the estate of an intestate applicable in the case of such deceased, would be entitled to the whole or any part of such deceased's estate.

When several such persons apply for administration, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to grant it to any one or more of them.

CHAPTER II.

But nothing herein contained shall vest in an executor or administrator any property of a deceased person which would otherwise have passed by survivorship to some other person.

Administration with copy annexed of authenticated copy of will proved abroad.

5. When a will has been proved and deposited in a Court of competent jurisdiction, situated beyond the limits of the Province, whether in the British dominions, or in a foreign country, and a properly authenticated copy of the will is produced, letters of administration may be granted with a copy of such copy annexed.

Probate only to appointed executor.

6. Probate can be granted only to an executor appointed by the will.

Appointment express or implied.

7. The appointment may be express or by necessary implication.

Illustrations.

(a.) A wills that C be his executor if B will not. B is appointed executor by implication.

(b.) A gives a legacy to B and several legacies to other persons, among the rest to his daughter-in-law, C, and adds, "but should the within-named C be not living, I do constitute and appoint B my whole and sole executrix." C is appointed executrix by implication.

(c.) A appoints several persons executors of his will and codicils, and his nephew residuary legatee, and in another codicil are these words:—"I appoint my nephew my residuary legatee to discharge all lawful demands against my will and codicils, signed of different dates." The nephew is appointed an executor by implication.

Persons to whom probate cannot be granted.

8. Probate cannot be granted to any person who is a minor or is of unsound mind.

Grant of probate to several executors simultaneously or at different times.

9. When several executors are appointed, probate may be granted to them all simultaneously or at different times.

Illustration.

Separate probate of codicil discovered after grant of probate.

10. If a codicil be discovered after the grant of probate, a separate probate of that codicil may be granted to the executor, if it in no way repeals the appointment of executors made by the will.

Procedure when different executors appointed by codicil.

If different executors are appointed by the codicil, the probate of the will must be revoked, and a new probate granted of the will and the codicil together.

Accrual of representation to surviving executor.

11. When probate has been granted to several executors, and one of them dies, the entire representation of the testator accrues to the surviving executor or executors.

Effect of probate.

To whom administration may not be granted.

13. Letters of administration cannot be granted to any person who is a minor or is of unsound mind.

Effect of letters of administration.

14. Letters of administration entitle the administrator to all rights belonging to the intestate as effectually as if the administration had been granted at the moment after his death.

Acts not validated by administration.

15. Letters of administration do not render valid any intermediate acts of the administrator tending to the diminution or damage of the intestate's estate.

Grant of administration where executor has not renounced.

16. When a person appointed an executor has not renounced the executorship, letters of administration shall not be granted to any other person until a citation has been issued calling upon the executor to accept or renounce his executorship;

Exception.

except that, when one or more of several executors has or have proved a will, the Court may, on the death of the survivor of those who have proved, grant letters of administration without citing those who have not proved.

Form and effect of renunciation of executorship.

17. The renunciation may be made orally in the presence of the Judge, or by a writing signed by the person renouncing, and when made shall preclude him from ever thereafter applying for probate of the will appointing him executor.

Procedure where executor renounces or fails to accept within time limited.

18. If the executor renounce, or fail to accept, the executorship within the time limited for the acceptance or refusal thereof, the will may be proved and letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed may be granted to the person who would be entitled to administration in case of intestacy.

Grant of administration to universal or residuary legatee.

19. When the deceased has made a will, but has not appointed an executor, or when he has appointed an executor who is legally incapable or refuses to act, or has died before the testator, or before he has proved the will, or when the executor dies after having proved the will but before he has administered all the estate of the deceased, an universal or a residuary legatee may be admitted to prove the will, and letters of administration with the will annexed may be granted to him of the whole estate, or of so much thereof as may be unadministered.

21. When there is no executor and no residuary legatee or representative of a residuary legatee, or he declines or is incapable to act, or cannot be found, the person or persons who would be entitled to the administration of the estate of the deceased if he had died intestate, or any other legatee having a beneficial interest, or a creditor, may be admitted to prove the will, and letters of administration may be granted to him or them accordingly.

Citation before grant of administration to legatee other than universal or residuary.

22. Letters of administration with the will annexed shall not be granted to any legatee other than an universal or a residuary legatee, until a citation has been issued and published in the manner hereinafter mentioned, calling on the next-of-kin to accept or refuse letters of administration.

To whom administration may be granted.

23. When the deceased has died intestate, administration of his estate may be granted to any person who, according to the rules for the distribution of the estate of an intestate applicable in the case of such deceased, would be entitled to the whole or any part of such deceased's estate.

When several such persons apply for administration, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to grant it to any one or more of them.

Where an executor or administrator has given such notices as the High Court may, by any general rule to be made from time to time, prescribe, for creditors and others to send in to him their claims against the estate of the deceased, he shall, at the expiration of the time therein named for sending in claims, be at liberty to distribute the assets, or any part thereof, in discharge of such lawful claims as he knows of, and shall not be liable for the assets so distributed to any person of whose claim he has not had notice at the time of such distribution;

When unsatisfied legatee must first proceed against executor, if solvent.

B can oblige C to refund 80 rupees, and D to refund 120 rupees.

THE SCHEDULE.

Specification explanatory of the Test Apparatus.

The following is a description of the details of the apparatus:—

The oil-cup consists of a cylindrical vessel 2″ diameter, $2\frac{2}{10}$″ height (internal), with outward projecting rim $\frac{5}{10}$″ wide, $\frac{3}{8}$″ from the top and $1\frac{3}{8}$″ from the bottom of the cup. It is made of gun-metal or brass (17 B. W. G.), tinned inside. A bracket, consisting of a short stout piece of wire, bent upwards and terminating in a point, is fixed to the inside of the cup to serve as a gauge. The distance of the point from the bottom of the cup is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover made of brass (22 B. W. G.) which carries the thermometer and test-lamp. The latter is suspended from two supports from the side by means of trunnions, upon which it may be made to oscillate: it is provided with a spout the mouth of which is $\frac{1}{16}$″ in diameter. The socket which is to hold the thermometer is fixed at such an angle, and its length is so adjusted that the bulb of the thermometer, when inserted to its full depth, shall be $1\frac{1}{2}$″ below the centre of the lid.

The cover is provided with three square holes, one in the centre $\frac{5}{10}$″ by $\frac{4}{10}$″, and two smaller ones, $\frac{3}{10}$″ by $\frac{2}{10}$″, close to the sides and opposite each other. These three holes may be closed and uncovered by means of a slide moving in grooves, and having perforations corresponding to those on the lid.

In moving the slide so as to uncover the holes, the oscillating lamp is caught by a pin fixed in the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. Upon the slide being pushed back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position.

Upon the cover, in front of, and in line with, the mouth of the lamp, is fixed a white bead the dimensions of which represent the size of the test flame to be used.

The bath or heated vessel consists of two flat-bottomed copper cylinders (24 B. W. G.), an inner one of 3″ diameter and $2\frac{1}{2}$″ height, and an outer one of $5\frac{1}{2}$″ diameter and $5\frac{3}{4}$″ height; they are soldered to a circular copper plate (20 B. W. G.) perforated in the centre, which forms the top of the bath, in such a manner as to enclose the space between the two cylinders, but leaving access to the inner cylinder. The top of the bath projects both outwards and inwards about $\frac{3}{8}''$, that is, its diameter is about $\frac{6}{8}''$ greater than that of the body of the bath, while the diameter of the circular opening in the centre is about the same amount less than that of the inner copper cylinder. To the inner projection of the top is fastened, by six small screws, a flat ring of ebonite, the screws being sunk below the surface of the ebonite to avoid metallic contact between the bath and the oil-cup. The exact distance between the sides and bottom of the bath of the oil-lamp is $1\frac{1}{2}''$. A split socket similar to that on the cover of the oil-cup, but set at a right angle, allows a thermometer to be inserted into the space between the two cylinders. The bath is further provided with a funnel, an overflow pipe, and two loop handles.

The bath rests upon a cast-iron tripod stand, to the ring of which is attached a copper cylinder or jacket (24 B. W. G.), flanged at the top, and of such dimensions that the bath, while firmly resting on the iron ring, just touches with its projecting top the inward-turned flange. The diameter of this outer jacket is $6\frac{1}{2}''$. One of the three legs of the stand serves as support for the spirit-lamp, attached to it by means of a small swing bracket. The distance of the wick-holder from the bottom of the bath is $1''$.

Two thermometers are provided with the apparatus, the one for ascertaining the temperature of the bath, the other for determining the flashing-point. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the water has a long bulb and a space at the top. Its range is from about 90° to 190° Fahrenheit. The scale (in degrees of Fahrenheit) is marked on an ivory back fastened to the tube in the usual way; it is fitted with a metal collar fitting the socket, and the part of the tube below the scale should have a length of about $3\frac{1}{2}''$ measured from the lower end of the scale to the end of the bulb. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the oil is fitted with collar and ivory scale in a similar manner to the one described. It has a round bulb, a space at the top, and ranges from about 55° F. to 150° F.; it measures from end of ivory back to bulb $2\frac{1}{4}''$.

NOTE.—A model apparatus is deposited at the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government at Calcutta.

Directions for applying the Test.

1. The test-apparatus is to be placed for use in a position where it is not exposed to currents of air or draughts.

2. The heating vessel or water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the spout of the vessel. The temperature of the water at the commencement of the test is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance either by mixing hot and cold water in the bath, or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or by heating the water with the spirit-lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

If the water has been heated too highly, it is easily reduced to 130° by pouring in cold water little by little (to replace a portion of the warm water) until the thermometer gives the proper reading.

When a test has been completed, this water-bath is again raised to 130° by placing the lamp underneath, and the result is readily obtained while the petroleum cup is being emptied, cooled, and refilled with a fresh sample to be tested. The lamp is then turned on its swivel from under the apparatus, and the next test is proceeded with.

3. The test-lamp is prepared for use by fitting it with a piece of flat plaited candlewick, and filling it with colza or rape-oil up to the lower edge of the opening of the spout or wick-tube. The lamp is trimmed so that when lighted it gives a flame of about 0·15 of an inch diameter, and this size of flame, which is represented by the projecting white bead on the cover of the oil-cup, is readily maintained by simple manipulation from time to time with a small wire trimmer.

When gas is available it may be conveniently used in place of the little oil-lamp, and for this purpose a test-flame arrangement for use with gas may be substituted for the lamp.

4. The bath having been raised to the proper temperature, the oil to be tested is introduced into the petroleum cup, being poured in slowly until the level of the liquid just reaches the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. In warm weather the temperature of the room in which the samples to be tested have been kept should be observed in the first instance, and, if it exceeds 65°, the samples to be tested should be cooled down (to about 60°) by immersing the bottle containing them in cold water, or by any other convenient method. The lid of the cup, with the slide closed, is then put on, and the cup is put into the bath or heating vessel. The thermometer in the lid of the cup has been adjusted so as to have its bulb just immersed in the liquid, and its position is not under any circumstances to be altered. When the cup has been placed in the proper position, the scale of the thermometer faces the operator.

5. The test-lamp is then placed in position upon the lid of the cup, the lead line or pendulum,* which has been fixed in a convenient position in front of the operator, is set in motion, and the rise of the thermometer in the petroleum cup is watched. When the temperature has reached about 66°, the operation of testing is to be commenced, the test-flame being applied once for every rise of one degree in the following manner:—

The slide is slowly drawn open while the pendulum performs three oscillations, and is closed during the fourth oscillation.

NOTE.—If it is desired to employ the test-apparatus to determine the flashing-points of oils of very low volatility, the mode of proceeding is to be modified as follows:—

The air-chamber which surrounds the cup is filled with cold water to a depth of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and the heating vessel or water-bath is filled as usual, but also with cold water. The lamp is then placed under the apparatus and kept there during the entire operation. If a very heavy oil is being dealt with, the operation may be commenced with water previously heated to 120°, instead of with cold water.

* This pendulum is two (2) feet in length from the point of suspension to the centre of gravity of the weight.

THE SCHEDULE.

Specification explanatory of the Test Apparatus.

The following is a description of the details of the apparatus:—

The oil-cup consists of a cylindrical vessel 2″ diameter, $2\frac{2}{10}$″ height (internal), with outward projecting rim $\frac{5}{10}$″ wide, $\frac{3}{8}$″ from the top and $1\frac{1}{8}$″ from the bottom of the cup. It is made of gun-metal or brass (17 B. W. G.), tinned inside. A bracket, consisting of a short stout piece of wire, bent upwards and terminating in a point, is fixed to the inside of the cup to serve as a gauge. The distance of the point from the bottom of the cup is $1\frac{1}{4}$″. The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover made of brass (22 B. W. G.) which carries the thermometer and test-lamp. The latter is suspended from two supports from the side by means of trunnions, upon which it may be made to oscillate: it is provided with a spout the mouth of which is $\frac{1}{16}$″ in diameter. The socket which is to hold the thermometer is fixed at such an angle, and its length is so adjusted that the bulb of the thermometer, when inserted to its full depth, shall be $1\frac{1}{2}$″ below the centre of the lid.

The cover is provided with three square holes, one in the centre $\frac{6}{10}$″ by $\frac{4}{10}$″, and two smaller ones, $\frac{3}{10}$″ by $\frac{3}{10}$″, close to the sides and opposite each other. These three holes may be closed and uncovered by means of a slide moving in grooves, and having perforations corresponding to those on the lid.

In moving the slide so as to uncover the holes, the oscillating lamp is caught by a pin fixed in the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. Upon the slide being pushed back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position.

Upon the cover, in front of, and in line with, the mouth of the lamp, is fixed a white bead the dimensions of which represent the size of the test flame to be used.

The bath or heated vessel consists of two flat-bottomed copper cylinders (24 B. W. G.), an inner one of 3″ diameter and $2\frac{1}{2}$″ height, and an outer one of $5\frac{1}{4}$″ diameter and $5\frac{3}{4}$″ height; they are soldered to a circular copper plate (20 B. W. G.) perforated in the centre, which forms the top of the bath, in such a manner as to enclose the space between the two cylinders, but leaving access to the inner cylinder. The top of the bath projects both outwards and inwards about $\frac{3}{8}''$, that is, its diameter is about $\frac{3}{8}''$ greater than that of the body of the bath, while the diameter of the circular opening in the centre is about the same amount less than that of the inner copper cylinder. To the inner projection of the top is fastened, by six small screws, a flat ring of ebonite, the screws being sunk below the surface of the ebonite to avoid metallic contact between the bath and the oil-cup. The exact distance between the sides and bottom of the bath of the oil-lamp is $1\frac{1}{2}''$. A split socket similar to that on the cover of the oil-cup, but set at a right angle, allows a thermometer to be inserted into the space between the two cylinders. The bath is further provided with a funnel, an overflow pipe, and two loop handles.

The bath rests upon a cast-iron tripod stand, to the ring of which is attached a copper cylinder or jacket (24 B. W. G.), flanged at the top, and of such dimensions that the bath, while firmly resting on the iron ring, just touches with its projecting top the inward-turned flange. The diameter of this outer jacket is $6\frac{1}{2}''$. One of the three legs of the stand serves as support for the spirit-lamp, attached to it by means of a small swing bracket. The distance of the wick-holder from the bottom of the bath is $1''$.

Two thermometers are provided with the apparatus, the one for ascertaining the temperature of the bath, the other for determining the flashing-point. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the water has a long bulb and a space at the top. Its range is from about 90° to 190° Fahrenheit. The scale (in degrees of Fahrenheit) is marked on an ivory back fastened to the tube in the usual way; it is fitted with a metal collar fitting the socket, and the part of the tube below the scale should have a length of about $3\frac{1}{2}''$ measured from the lower end of the scale to the end of the bulb. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the oil is fitted with collar and ivory scale in a similar manner to the one described. It has a round bulb, a space at the top, and ranges from about 55° F. to 150° F.; it measures from end of ivory back to bulb $2\frac{1}{2}''$.

NOTE.—A model apparatus is deposited at the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government at Calcutta.

Directions for applying the Test.

1. The test-apparatus is to be placed for use in a position where it is not exposed to currents of air or draughts.

2. The heating vessel or water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the spout of the vessel. The temperature of the water at the commencement of the test is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance either by mixing hot and cold water in the bath, or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or by heating the water with the spirit-lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

If the water has been heated too highly, it is easily reduced to 130° by pouring in cold water little by little (to replace a portion of the warm water) until the thermometer gives the proper reading.

When a test has been completed, this water-bath is again raised to 130° by placing the lamp underneath, and the result is readily obtained while the petroleum cup is being emptied, cooled, and refilled with a fresh sample to be tested. The lamp is then turned on its swivel from under the apparatus, and the next test is proceeded with.

3. The test-lamp is prepared for use by fitting it with a piece of flat plaited candlewick, and filling it with colza or rape-oil up to the lower edge of the opening of the spout or wick-tube. The lamp is trimmed so that when lighted it gives a flame of about 0·15 of an inch diameter, and this size of flame, which is represented by the projecting white bead on the cover of the oil-cup, is readily maintained by simple manipulation from time to time with a small wire trimmer.

When gas is available it may be conveniently used in place of the little oil-lamp, and for this purpose a test-flame arrangement for use with gas may be substituted for the lamp.

4. The bath having been raised to the proper temperature, the oil to be tested is introduced into the petroleum cup, being poured in slowly until the level of the liquid just reaches the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. In warm weather the temperature of the room in which the samples to be tested have been kept should be observed in the first instance, and, if it exceeds 65°, the samples to be tested should be cooled down (to about 60°) by immersing the bottle containing them in cold water, or by any other convenient method. The lid of the cup, with the slide closed, is then put on, and the cup is put into the bath or heating vessel. The thermometer in the lid of the cup has been adjusted so as to have its bulb just immersed in the liquid, and its position is not under any circumstances to be altered. When the cup has been placed in the proper position, the scale of the thermometer faces the operator.

5. The test-lamp is then placed in position upon the lid of the cup, the lead line or pendulum,* which has been fixed in a convenient position in front of the operator, is set in motion, and the rise of the thermometer in the petroleum cup is watched. When the temperature has reached about 66°, the operation of testing is to be commenced, the test-flame being applied once for every rise of one degree in the following manner:—

The slide is slowly drawn open while the pendulum performs three oscillations, and is closed during the fourth oscillation.

NOTE.—If it is desired to employ the test-apparatus to determine the flashing-points of oils of very low volatility, the mode of proceeding is to be modified as follows:—

The air-chamber which surrounds the cup is filled with cold water to a depth of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and the heating vessel or water-bath is filled as usual, but also with cold water. The lamp is then placed under the apparatus and kept there during the entire operation. If a very heavy oil is being dealt with, the operation may be commenced with water previously heated to 120°, instead of with cold water.

* This pendulum is two (2) feet in length from the point of suspension to the centre of gravity of the weight.

THE SCHEDULE.

Specification explanatory of the Test Apparatus.

The following is a description of the details of the apparatus:—

The oil-cup consists of a cylindrical vessel 2″ diameter, $2\frac{2}{10}$″ height (internal), with outward projecting rim $\frac{5}{10}$″ wide, $\frac{3}{8}$″ from the top and $1\frac{1}{8}$″ from the bottom of the cup. It is made of gun-metal or brass (17 B. W. G.), tinned inside. A bracket, consisting of a short stout piece of wire, bent upwards and terminating in a point, is fixed to the inside of the cup to serve as a gauge. The distance of the point from the bottom of the cup is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover made of brass (22 B. W. G.) which carries the thermometer and test-lamp. The latter is suspended from two supports from the side by means of trunnions, upon which it may be made to oscillate: it is provided with a spout the mouth of which is $\frac{1}{16}$″ in diameter. The socket which is to hold the thermometer is fixed at such an angle, and its length is so adjusted that the bulb of the thermometer, when inserted to its full depth, shall be $1\frac{1}{2}$″ below the centre of the lid.

The cover is provided with three square holes, one in the centre $\frac{5}{10}$″ by $\frac{4}{10}$″, and two smaller ones, $\frac{3}{10}$″ by $\frac{2}{10}$″, close to the sides and opposite each other. These three holes may be closed and uncovered by means of a slide moving in grooves, and having perforations corresponding to those on the lid.

In moving the slide so as to uncover the holes, the oscillating lamp is caught by a pin fixed in the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. Upon the slide being pushed back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position.

Upon the cover, in front of, and in line with, the mouth of the lamp, is fixed a white bead the dimensions of which represent the size of the test flame to be used.

The bath or heated vessel consists of two flat-bottomed copper cylinders (24 B. W. G.), an inner one of 3″ diameter and $2\frac{1}{2}$″ height, and an outer one of $5\frac{1}{2}$″ diameter and $5\frac{3}{4}$″ height; they are soldered to a circular copper plate (20 B. W. G.) perforated in the centre, which forms the top of the bath, in such a manner as to enclose the space between the two cylinders, but leaving access to the inner cylinder. The top of the bath projects both outwards and inwards about $\frac{3}{8}''$, that is, its diameter is about $\frac{6}{8}''$ greater than that of the body of the bath, while the diameter of the circular opening in the centre is about the same amount less than that of the inner copper cylinder. To the inner projection of the top is fastened, by six small screws, a flat ring of ebonite, the screws being sunk below the surface of the ebonite to avoid metallic contact between the bath and the oil-cup. The exact distance between the sides and bottom of the bath of the oil-lamp is $1\frac{1}{2}''$. A split socket similar to that on the cover of the oil-cup, but set at a right angle, allows a thermometer to be inserted into the space between the two cylinders. The bath is further provided with a funnel, an overflow pipe, and two loop handles.

The bath rests upon a cast-iron tripod stand, to the ring of which is attached a copper cylinder or jacket (24 B. W. G.), flanged at the top, and of such dimensions that the bath, while firmly resting on the iron ring, just touches with its projecting top the inward-turned flange. The diameter of this outer jacket is $6\frac{1}{2}''$. One of the three legs of the stand serves as support for the spirit-lamp, attached to it by means of a small swing bracket. The distance of the wick-holder from the bottom of the bath is $1''$.

Two thermometers are provided with the apparatus, the one for ascertaining the temperature of the bath, the other for determining the flashing-point. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the water has a long bulb and a space at the top. Its range is from about 90° to 190° Fahrenheit. The scale (in degrees of Fahrenheit) is marked on an ivory back fastened to the tube in the usual way; it is fitted with a metal collar fitting the socket, and the part of the tube below the scale should have a length of about $3\frac{1}{2}''$ measured from the lower end of the scale to the end of the bulb. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the oil is fitted with collar and ivory scale in a similar manner to the one described. It has a round bulb, a space at the top, and ranges from about 55° F. to 150° F.; it measures from end of ivory back to bulb $2\frac{1}{4}''$.

NOTE.—A model apparatus is deposited at the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government at Calcutta.

Directions for applying the Test.

1. The test-apparatus is to be placed for use in a position where it is not exposed to currents of air or draughts.

2. The heating vessel or water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the spout of the vessel. The temperature of the water at the commencement of the test is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance either by mixing hot and cold water in the bath, or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or by heating the water with the spirit-lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

If the water has been heated too highly, it is easily reduced to 130° by pouring in cold water little by little (to replace a portion of the warm water) until the thermometer gives the proper reading.

When a test has been completed, this water-bath is again raised to 130° by placing the lamp underneath, and the result is readily obtained while the petroleum cup is being emptied, cooled, and refilled with a fresh sample to be tested. The lamp is then turned on its swivel from under the apparatus, and the next test is proceeded with.

3. The test-lamp is prepared for use by fitting it with a piece of flat plaited candlewick, and filling it with colza or rape-oil up to the lower edge of the opening of the spout or wick-tube. The lamp is trimmed so that when lighted it gives a flame of about 0·15 of an inch diameter, and this size of flame, which is represented by the projecting white bead on the cover of the oil-cup, is readily maintained by simple manipulation from time to time with a small wire trimmer.

When gas is available it may be conveniently used in place of the little oil-lamp, and for this purpose a test-flame arrangement for use with gas may be substituted for the lamp.

4. The bath having been raised to the proper temperature, the oil to be tested is introduced into the petroleum cup, being poured in slowly until the level of the liquid just reaches the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. In warm weather the temperature of the room in which the samples to be tested have been kept should be observed in the first instance, and, if it exceeds 65°, the samples to be tested should be cooled down (to about 60°) by immersing the bottle containing them in cold water, or by any other convenient method. The lid of the cup, with the slide closed, is then put on, and the cup is put into the bath or heating vessel. The thermometer in the lid of the cup has been adjusted so as to have its bulb just immersed in the liquid, and its position is not under any circumstances to be altered. When the cup has been placed in the proper position, the scale of the thermometer faces the operator.

5. The test-lamp is then placed in position upon the lid of the cup, the lead line or pendulum,* which has been fixed in a convenient position in front of the operator, is set in motion, and the rise of the thermometer in the petroleum cup is watched. When the temperature has reached about 66°, the operation of testing is to be commenced, the test-flame being applied once for every rise of one degree in the following manner:—

The slide is slowly drawn open while the pendulum performs three oscillations, and is closed during the fourth oscillation.

NOTE.—If it is desired to employ the test-apparatus to determine the flashing-points of oils of very low volatility, the mode of proceeding is to be modified as follows:—

The air-chamber which surrounds the cup is filled with cold water to a depth of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and the heating vessel or water-bath is filled as usual, but also with cold water. The lamp is then placed under the apparatus and kept there during the entire operation. If a very heavy oil is being dealt with, the operation may be commenced with water previously heated to 120°, instead of with cold water.

* This pendulum is two (2) feet in length from the point of suspension to the centre of gravity of the weight.

RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDHOLDERS AND TENANTS.

Intermediate holders of land at rates unchanged since permanent-settlement.

4. When any permanent and transferable interest in land in a district or a portion of a district which has been permanently settled has been held otherwise than under a terminable lease by any person intermediate between the proprietor of the mahál and the occupants, and by the predecessors in interest of such person, from the time of the permanent-settlement, at the same rate of rent, such person shall have a right to hold such interest at that rate.

Tenants at fixed rates.

5. When any land in a district or portion of a district which is permanently settled has been held by a tenant and his predecessors in interest, from the time of the permanent settlement, at the same rate of rent, such tenant shall have a right of occupancy at that rate.

A tenant having such right is hereinafter called a "tenant at a fixed rate."

Presumption when 20 years' holding at fixed rate is proved.

6. When, in any suit to which the provisions of section 4 or section 5 apply, it is proved that the land has for a period of twenty years next before the institution of the suit been held by the present holder and his predecessors in interest at the same rate of rent, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that it has been held at such rate from the time of the permanent settlement.

Ex-proprietary tenants.

7. Every person who may hereafter lose or part with his proprietary rights in any mahál shall have a right of occupancy in the land held by him as sír in such mahál at the date of such loss or parting, at a rent which shall be four annas in the rupee less than the prevailing rate payable by tenants-at-will for land of similar quality and with similar advantages.

Persons having such rights of occupancy shall be called "ex-proprietary tenants," and shall have all the rights of occupancy-tenants.

If there are two or more sharers in any sír-land and one of them becomes an ex-proprietary tenant, the share which previously belonged to such ex-proprietary tenant shall, on his application or on the application of the person entitled to receive the rent, be divided off by the Collector, and the rights of the ex-proprietary tenant shall be limited to the land comprised in such share.

Occupancy-tenants.

8. Every tenant who has actually occupied or cultivated land continuously for twelve years has a right of occupancy in the land so occupied or cultivated by him.

Such tenants shall be called "occupancy-tenants."

The occupation or cultivating of the father or other person from whom the tenant inherits, shall be deemed to be the occupation or cultivating of the tenant within the meaning of this section:

Tenants barred from right of occupancy.

Provided that no tenant shall acquire, under this section, a right of occupancy—

(a) in land which he holds from an occupancy-tenant, or from an ex-proprietary tenant, or from a tenant at fixed rates;

(b) in sír-land;

(c) in land held by him in lieu of wages.

Time excluded from reckoning period necessary for acquiring right of occupancy.

Provided also that, when a tenant actually occupies or cultivates land under a written lease, without having a right of occupancy in such land, the period of twelve years necessary for acquiring a right of occupancy therein by him or any one claiming under him shall begin on the expiration of the term of such lease. If during the currency of such lease he ceases to occupy the land comprised therein, and sublets it to another, no right of occupancy in such land shall be acquired by the sub-lessee during the currency of the lease.

Rights under sections 7 and 8 when transferable.

9. The right of tenants at fixed rates may devolve by succession or be transferred.

No other right of occupancy shall be transferable in execution of a decree or otherwise than by voluntary transfer between persons in favour of whom as co-sharers such right originally arose or who have become by succession co-sharers therein.

When any person entitled to such last-mentioned right dies, the right shall devolve as if it were land: Provided that no collateral relative of the deceased who did not then share in the cultivation of his holding shall be entitled to inherit under this clause.

Determination of class of tenure of tenant.

10. On the application of any tenant to have his class of tenure determined, the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector shall determine the class to which he belongs, namely—whether he is a tenant at fixed rates,

or an ex-proprietary tenant,

or an occupancy-tenant,

or whether he is a tenant without a right of occupancy.

Bar to enhancement of rent of tenants at fixed rates.

11. The rent paid by tenants at fixed rates shall not be liable to enhancement, except as provided by section 18.

Enhancement in case of ex-proprietary and occupancy-tenants.

12. The rent paid by ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenants shall not be liable to enhancement except—

(a) by a written agreement registered under the Indian Registration Act, 1871, or the Indian Registration Act, 1877, or recorded before the kánúngo: or

(b) by order of a Settlement-officer passed under the law for the time being in force: or

(c) by order under this Act.

(b) or where the rent has been fixed by any such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

(c) or where ten years from the date on which an order fixing the rent has taken effect have expired,

(d) or where by order of the Local Government the assessment of the district has been revised before confirmation,

(e) or where the period of settlement of the district has come to an end, the landholder may apply to enhance the rent of such tenant on one of the following grounds and on no others:—

(f) that the rate of the rent paid by such tenant is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of tenants for land of similar quality with similar advantages;

(g) that the value of the produce has, or the productive powers of the land have, been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant;

(h) that the quantity of land held by the tenant has been proved by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him.

Enhancement of rent of ex-proprietary tenants which has not been fixed by order.

14. (a.) Where the rent of any ex-proprietary tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, or where the rent has been fixed by such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

or where any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e) has occurred, the landholder may apply to enhance or determine the rent of such tenant as if he were an occupancy-tenant: Provided that his rent shall be four annas in the rupee below the prevailing rate for land of a similar quality with similar advantages held by tenants-at-will.

Selection of land for comparison.

(b.) Whenever the district or tahsíl, or other local area in which such land is situated, has been divided by the Settlement-officer into circles of like capacity and soil, the land of similar quality, with similar advantages, shall, for the purposes of this section and section 13, be selected from the same circle.

(c.) When the Settlement-officer has not so divided the district or other local area as aforesaid, the land regarding which the application has been made shall be compared with land of similar quality and with similar advantages, in the same tahsíl or in a tahsíl immediately adjacent.

Abatement in like cases.

15. Where the rent of any ex-proprietary tenant or occupancy-tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, or where the rent has been fixed by such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

or where any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e) has occurred, the tenant may apply for an abatement of his rent on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(a) that the area of the land held by him has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise:

(b) that the value of the produce has, or the productive powers of such land have, been decreased by any cause beyond his power.

Time of enhancement or abatement where rent of ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by order under this Act.

16. Where the rent of any ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by an order under this Act, such rent shall not be liable to be enhanced or abated until the occurrence of any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e), whichever first occurs.

Grounds of enhancement and abatement where his rent has been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer or under this Act.

17. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 16 where the rent of any ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, the landholder may apply to enhance the rent of such tenant during the currency of the term for which the rent has been so fixed, on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(a) that the area of the tenants holding has been increased by alluvion or otherwise:

(b) that the productive powers of the land held by the tenant have, since the date of the order, been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant;

And the tenant may apply for abatement of his rent on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(c) that the area of the land held by him has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise;

(d) that the productive powers of such land have been decreased by any cause beyond his control.

Grounds of enhancement or abatement of rent of tenant at fixed rates.

18. In the case of a tenant at fixed rates, the landholder may apply to enhance his rent on the ground that the area of the land in his holding has been increased by alluvion or otherwise, and the tenant may apply for abatement of his rent on the ground that the area of the land in his holding has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise.

Day before which applications for enhancement or abatement must be made.

19. Applications for enhancement or abatement of rent must be made on or before the thirty-first day of August next before the year commencing on the first day of July from which the rent is to be enhanced or abated,

If the applicant deposits such amount within fifteen days from the date of the order, the Collector of the District shall issue a notice to the other party or parties to the tenancy to show cause, at a time and place specified in such notice, why the survey should not be made; and, if no such cause is so shewn, may, by an order in writing, direct the survey to be made by such person and at such time as he thinks fit.

A copy of such order shall be served on all the parties to the tenancy; and, if any party fails to attend at the appointed time, it shall not thereafter be open to him to question the correctness of the survey made in his absence.

If any party, on being called upon to show cause as aforesaid, makes any objection to the survey and such objection is overruled, he shall be liable to pay the costs (if any) occasioned by such objection.

RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDHOLDERS AND TENANTS.

Intermediate holders of land at rates unchanged since permanent-settlement. 4. When any permanent and transferable interest in land in a district or a portion of a district which has been permanently settled has been held otherwise than under a terminable lease by any person intermediate between the proprietor of the mahál and the occupants, and by the predecessors in interest of such person, from the time of the permanent-settlement, at the same rate of rent, such person shall have a right to hold such interest at that rate.

Tenants at fixed rates. 5. When any land in a district or portion of a district which is permanently settled has been held by a tenant and his predecessors in interest, from the time of the permanent settlement, at the same rate of rent, such tenant shall have a right of occupancy at that rate.

Presumption when 20 years' holding at fixed rate is proved. 6. When, in any suit to which the provisions of section 4 or section 5 apply, it is proved that the land has for a period of twenty years next before the institution of the suit been held by the present holder and his predecessors in interest at the same rate of rent, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that it has been held at such rate from the time of the permanent settlement.

Ex-proprietary tenants. 7. Every person who may hereafter lose or part with his proprietary rights in any mahál shall have a right of occupancy in the land held by him as sír in such mahál at the date of such loss or parting, at a rent which shall be four annas in the rupee less than the prevailing rate payable by tenants-at-will for land of similar quality and with similar advantages.

Persons having such rights of occupancy shall be called "ex-proprietary tenants," and shall have all the rights of occupancy-tenants.

If there are two or more sharers in any sír-land and one of them becomes an ex-proprietary tenant, the share which previously belonged to such ex-proprietary tenant shall, on his application or on the application of the person entitled to receive the rent, be divided off by the Collector, and the rights of the ex-proprietary tenant shall be limited to the land comprised in such share.

Occupancy-tenants. 8. Every tenant who has actually occupied or cultivated land continuously for twelve years has a right of occupancy in the land so occupied or cultivated by him.

Such tenants shall be called "occupancy-tenants."

The occupation or cultivating of the father or other person from whom the tenant inherits, shall be deemed to be the occupation or cultivating of the tenant within the meaning of this section:

Tenants barred from right of occupancy. Provided that no tenant shall acquire, under this section, a right of occupancy—

(a) in land which he holds from an occupancy-tenant, or from an ex-proprietary tenant, or from a tenant at fixed rates;

(b) in sír-land;

(c) in land held by him in lieu of wages.

Time excluded from reckoning period necessary for acquiring right of occupancy. Provided also that, when a tenant actually occupies or cultivates land under a written lease, without having a right of occupancy in such land, the period of twelve years necessary for acquiring a right of occupancy therein by him or any one claiming under him shall begin on the expiration of the term of such lease. If during the currency of such lease he ceases to occupy the land comprised therein, and sublets it to another, no right of occupancy in such land shall be acquired by the sub-lessee during the currency of the lease.

Rights under sections 7 and 8 when transferable. 9. The right of tenants at fixed rates may devolve by succession or be transferred.

No other right of occupancy shall be transferable in execution of a decree or otherwise than by voluntary transfer between persons in favour of whom as co-sharers such right originally arose or who have become by succession co-sharers therein.

When any person entitled to such last-mentioned right dies, the right shall devolve as if it were land: Provided that no collateral relative of the deceased who did not then share in the cultivation of his holding shall be entitled to inherit under this clause.

Determination of class of tenure of tenant. 10. On the application of any tenant to have his class of tenure determined, the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector shall determine the class to which he belongs, namely—whether he is a tenant at fixed rates,

or an ex-proprietary tenant,

or an occupancy-tenant,

or whether he is a tenant without a right of occupancy.

Bar to enhancement of rent of tenants at fixed rates. 11. The rent paid by tenants at fixed rates shall not be liable to enhancement, except as provided by section 18.

Enhancement in case of ex-proprietary and occupancy-tenants. 12. The rent paid by ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenants shall not be liable to enhancement except—

(a) by a written agreement registered under the Indian Registration Act, 1871, or the Indian Registration Act, 1877, or recorded before the kánúngo: or

(b) by order of a Settlement-officer passed under the law for the time being in force: or

(c) by order under this Act.

Grounds of enhancing rent of occupancy-tenants which has not been fixed by order. 13 (a). Where the rent of any occupancy-tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act,

(b) or where the rent has been fixed by any such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

(c) or where ten years from the date on which an order fixing the rent has taken effect have expired,

(d) or where by order of the Local Government the assessment of the district has been revised before confirmation,

(e) or where the period of settlement of the district has come to an end,

the landholder may apply to enhance the rent of such tenant on one of the following grounds and on no others:—

(f) that the rate of the rent paid by such tenant is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of tenants for land of similar quality with similar advantages;

(g) that the value of the produce has, or the productive powers of the land have, been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant;

(h) that the quantity of land held by the tenant has been proved by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him.

Enhancement of rent of ex-proprietary tenants which has not been fixed by order. 14 (a). Where the rent of any ex-proprietary tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act,

or where any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e) has occurred, the landholder may apply to enhance or determine the rent of such tenant as if he were an occupancy-tenant: Provided that his rent shall be four annas in the rupee below the prevailing rate for land of a similar quality with similar advantages held by tenants-at-will.

Selection of land for comparison. (b). Whenever the district or tahsíl, or other local area in which such land is situated, has been divided by the Settlement-officer into circles of like capacity and soil, the land of similar quality, with similar advantages, shall, for the purposes of this section and section 13, be selected from the same circle.

(c). When the Settlement-officer has not so divided the district or other local area as aforesaid, the land regarding which the application has been made shall be compared with land of similar quality and with similar advantages, in the same tahsíl or in a tahsíl immediately adjacent.

Abatement in like cases. 15. Where the rent of any ex-proprietary tenant or occupancy-tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, or where the rent has been fixed by such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

or where any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e) has occurred, the tenant may apply for an abatement of his rent on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(a) that the area of the land held by him has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise:

(b) that the value of the produce has, or the productive powers of such land have, been decreased by any cause beyond his power.

Time of enhancement or abatement where rent of ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by order under this Act. 16. Where the rent of any ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by an order under this Act, such rent shall not be liable to be enhanced or abated until the occurrence of any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e), whichever first occurs.

Grounds of enhancement and abatement where his rent has been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer or under this Act. 17. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 16 where the rent of any ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, the landholder may apply to enhance the rent of such tenant during the currency of the term for which the rent has been so fixed, on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(a) that the area of the tenants holding has been increased by alluvion or otherwise:

(b) that the productive powers of the land held by the tenant have, since the date of the order, been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant:

And the tenant may apply for abatement of his rent on one of the following grounds, and on no others :—

(c) that the area of the land held by him has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise;

(d) that the productive powers of such land have been decreased by any cause beyond his control.

18. In the case of a tenant at fixed rates, the landholder may apply to enhance his rent on the ground that the area of the land in his holding has been increased by alluvion or otherwise, and the tenant may apply for abatement of his rent on the ground that the area of the land in his holding has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise.

19. Applications for enhancement or abatement of rent must be made on or before the thirty-first day of August next before the year commencing on the first day of July from which the rent is to be enhanced or abated,

Day before which applications for enhancement or abatement must be made.

and every order for enhancement or abatement shall take effect from the first day of July next following the date of such order, unless for some reason, to be stated in writing, the Court thinks fit to order otherwise.

and whenever it is found that, by local custom or practice, any class of persons, by reason of their having formerly been proprietors of the soil or otherwise, hold land at favourable rates of rent, the rate shall be determined in accordance with such custom or practice.

21. No tenant-at-will of land shall be liable to pay rent in excess of the rent (if any) payable by him in the previous year ending on the thirtieth day of June, unless the landholder and tenant have agreed as to the rent to be paid to the former by the latter, and such agreement has been recorded by the kánúngo of the pargana in which such land is situate.

22A. When any land is held of a landholder by a tenant, such landholder or tenant may, in the absence of a written contract to the contrary, apply to the Collector of the District to have such land surveyed. The Collector, on receiving such application, may estimate the cost of such survey, and, by order in writing, require the applicant to deposit the amount of such estimate.

Applications to survey land.

If the applicant deposits such amount within fifteen days from the date of the order, the Collector of the District shall issue a notice to the other party or parties to the tenancy to show cause, at a time and place specified in such notice, why the survey should not be made; and, if no such cause is so shewn, may, by an order in writing, direct the survey to be made by such person and at such time as he thinks fit.

A copy of such order shall be served on all the parties to the tenancy; and, if any party fails to attend at the appointed time, it shall not thereafter be open to him to question the correctness of the survey made in his absence.

If any party, on being called upon to show cause as aforesaid, makes any objection to the survey and such objection is overruled, he shall be liable to pay the costs (if any) occasioned by such objection.

Nothing in this section shall affect any power conferred by law to compel the attendance of any person at a survey.

23. Whenever for any cause the Local Government remits or suspends for any period the payment of the whole or any part of the revenue payable in respect of any land, any officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf may, subject to such rules as to appeal, confirmation or otherwise as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Board, order that the rent of such land shall be remitted, or suspended for the period of such suspension of payment of revenue, as the case may be, to an amount which shall be equal to double the amount of the revenue of which the payment has been so remitted or suspended, or shall bear the same proportion to the whole of the rent payable in respect of the land as the revenue of which the payment has been so remitted or suspended bears to the whole of the revenue payable in respect of such land;

(c). No ejectment of a tenant or forfeiture of a lease shall be decreed on account of any act or omission of the tenant—

(1) which is not detrimental to the land in his occupation, or inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let, or Explanation.—In clauses (a) and (b) the word 'tenant' does not include a thékadár and a katkanadár.

If the landholder desires to eject a tenant at fixed rates, an ex-proprietary tenant, an occupancy-tenant or a tenant holding under an unexpired lease, against whom a decree for arrears has been passed and remains unsatisfied, he may, after the expiration of the year, ending on the thirtieth day of June, in which such arrears accrued, apply to the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector to eject the tenant.

Such officer shall, on receiving such application, cause a notice to be served on the tenant, stating the amount due under the decree, and informing him that if he does not pay such amount into Court within fifteen days from receipt of the notice, he will be ejected from his land.

If such amount be not so paid, the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector may eject the tenant.

37. The notice of ejectment shall be written in the vernacular language and character of the district:

it shall specify the land from which the tenant is to be ejected; and it shall inform him that he must vacate such land; or that, if he means to contest the right to eject him, he must apply to the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector for that purpose.

Mode of serving notice.

38. The notice shall be issued and served through the office of the tahsíldár on application made to him between the first day of January and the first day of April in each year, and the landholder shall pay the cost of service: it shall be served personally on the tenant, if practicable; but if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice to his usual place of residence.

39. (a). The tenant, on whom such notice has been served, may, within thirty days next after the service, make an application to the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector, contesting his liability to be ejected.

(b). When such an application is made, the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector shall proceed to determine the question between the parties.

(c). On the determination of such question adversely to the tenant, or, where no application under this section has been made within the said period of thirty days, on the expiration of such period, the tenancy of the land in respect of which the notice has been served shall cease:

Provided that when such question has been determined or such period has expired, as the case may be, before the first day of May next following the making of the application under section 38, the tenancy shall continue until and cease upon that day:

Provided also that the tenancy shall not cease under this section when after the service of the notice, the landholder authorises the tenant to continue in the occupation of the land.

(b) that he has not been authorized by the landholder to continue in occupation;

(c) that the tenant has not made the application mentioned in section 39, clause (a); or

(d) that if such application has been made, the question has been determined adversely to the tenant:

Provided that no such application for the ejectment of a farmer on the determination of a lease shall be received if the lease be of the kind in which an advance has been made by the leaseholder, and the proprietor's right of re-entry at the end of the term is contingent on the re-payment of such advance either in money or by the usufruct of the land. In all such cases the landholder must proceed by suit in the Civil Court.

Notice of ejectment when void.

41. If the landholder expressly authorise the tenant, on whom the notice of ejectment has been served, or against whom any proceedings in ejectment under section 40 have been taken, to remain in occupation of the land, and to prepare it for the harvest, the proceedings shall become void.

RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDHOLDERS AND TENANTS.

Intermediate holders of land at rates unchanged since permanent-settlement. 4. When any permanent and transferable interest in land in a district or a portion of a district which has been permanently settled has been held otherwise than under a terminable lease by any person intermediate between the proprietor of the mahál and the occupants, and by the predecessors in interest of such person, from the time of the permanent-settlement, at the same rate of rent, such person shall have a right to hold such interest at that rate.

Tenants at fixed rates. 5. When any land in a district or portion of a district which is permanently settled has been held by a tenant and his predecessors in interest, from the time of the permanent settlement, at the same rate of rent, such tenant shall have a right of occupancy at that rate.

A tenant having such right is hereinafter called a "tenant at a fixed rate."

Presumption when 20 years' holding at fixed rate is proved. 6. When, in any suit to which the provisions of section 4 or section 5 apply, it is proved that the land has for a period of twenty years next before the institution of the suit been held by the present holder and his predecessors in interest at the same rate of rent, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that it has been held at such rate from the time of the permanent settlement.

Ex-proprietary tenants. 7. Every person who may hereafter lose or part with his proprietary rights in any mahál shall have a right of occupancy in the land held by him as sír in such mahál at the date of such loss or parting, at a rent which shall be four annas in the rupee less than the prevailing rate payable by tenants-at-will for land of similar quality and with similar advantages.

Persons having such rights of occupancy shall be called "ex-proprietary tenants," and shall have all the rights of occupancy-tenants.

If there are two or more sharers in any sír-land and one of them becomes an ex-proprietary tenant, the share which previously belonged to such ex-proprietary tenant shall, on his application or on the application of the person entitled to receive the rent, be divided off by the Collector, and the rights of the ex-proprietary tenant shall be limited to the land comprised in such share.

Occupancy-tenants. 8. Every tenant who has actually occupied or cultivated land continuously for twelve years has a right of occupancy in the land so occupied or cultivated by him.

Such tenants shall be called "occupancy-tenants."

The occupation or cultivating of the father or other person from whom the tenant inherits, shall be deemed to be the occupation or cultivating of the tenant within the meaning of this section:

Tenants barred from right of occupancy. Provided that no tenant shall acquire, under this section, a right of occupancy—

(a) in land which he holds from an occupancy-tenant, or from an ex-proprietary tenant, or from a tenant at fixed rates;

(b) in sír-land;

(c) in land held by him in lieu of wages.

Time excluded from reckoning period necessary for acquiring right of occupancy. Provided also that, when a tenant actually occupies or cultivates land under a written lease, without having a right of occupancy in such land, the period of twelve years necessary for acquiring a right of occupancy therein by him or any one claiming under him shall begin on the expiration of the term of such lease. If during the currency of such lease he ceases to occupy the land comprised therein, and sublets it to another, no right of occupancy in such land shall be acquired by the sub-lessee during the currency of the lease.

Rights under sections 7 and 8 when transferable. 9. The right of tenants at fixed rates may devolve by succession or be transferred.

No other right of occupancy shall be transferable in execution of a decree or otherwise than by voluntary transfer between persons in favour of whom as co-sharers such right originally arose or who have become by succession co-sharers therein.

When any person entitled to such last-mentioned right dies, the right shall devolve as if it were land: Provided that no collateral relative of the deceased who did not then share in the cultivation of his holding shall be entitled to inherit under this clause.

Determination of class of tenure of tenant. 10. On the application of any tenant to have his class of tenure determined, the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector shall determine the class to which he belongs, namely—whether he is a tenant at fixed rates,

or an ex-proprietary tenant,

or an occupancy-tenant,

or whether he is a tenant without a right of occupancy.

Bar to enhancement of rent of tenants at fixed rates. 11. The rent paid by tenants at fixed rates shall not be liable to enhancement, except as provided by section 18.

Enhancement in case of ex-proprietary and occupancy-tenants. 12. The rent paid by ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenants shall not be liable to enhancement except—

(a) by a written agreement registered under the Indian Registration Act, 1871, or the Indian Registration Act, 1877, or recorded before the kánúngo: or

(b) by order of a Settlement-officer passed under the law for the time being in force: or

(c) by order under this Act.

Grounds of enhancing rent of occupancy-tenants which has not been fixed by order. 13 (a). Where the rent of any occupancy-tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act,

(b) or where the rent has been fixed by any such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

(c) or where ten years from the date on which an order fixing the rent has taken effect have expired,

(d) or where by order of the Local Government the assessment of the district has been revised before confirmation,

(e) or where the period of settlement of the district has come to an end,

the landholder may apply to enhance the rent of such tenant on one of the following grounds and on no others:—

(f) that the rate of the rent paid by such tenant is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of tenants for land of similar quality with similar advantages;

(g) that the value of the produce has, or the productive powers of the land have, been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant;

(h) that the quantity of land held by the tenant has been proved by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him.

Enhancement of rent of ex-proprietary tenants which has not been fixed by order. 14 (a). Where the rent of any ex-proprietary tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, or where the rent has been fixed by such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

or where any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e) has occurred, the landholder may apply to enhance or determine the rent of such tenant as if he were an occupancy-tenant: Provided that his rent shall be four annas in the rupee below the prevailing rate for land of a similar quality with similar advantages held by tenants-at-will.

Selection of land for comparison. (b). Whenever the district or tahsíl, or other local area in which such land is situated, has been divided by the Settlement-officer into circles of like capacity and soil, the land of similar quality, with similar advantages, shall, for the purposes of this section and section 13, be selected from the same circle.

(c). When the Settlement-officer has not so divided the district or other local area as aforesaid, the land regarding which the application has been made shall be compared with land of similar quality and with similar advantages, in the same tahsíl or in a tahsíl immediately adjacent.

Abatement in like cases. 15. Where the rent of any ex-proprietary tenant or occupancy-tenant has not been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, or where the rent has been fixed by such order, but the term for which it has been fixed has expired,

or where any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e) has occurred, the tenant may apply for an abatement of his rent on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(a) that the area of the land held by him has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise:

(b) that the value of the produce has, or the productive powers of such land have, been decreased by any cause beyond his power.

Time of enhancement or abatement where rent of ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by order under this Act. 16. Where the rent of any ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by an order under this Act, such rent shall not be liable to be enhanced or abated until the occurrence of any of the events mentioned in section 13, clauses (c), (d) and (e), whichever first occurs.

Grounds of enhancement and abatement where his rent has been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer or under this Act. 17. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 16 where the rent of any ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant has been fixed by order of a Settlement-officer under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, or by an order under this Act, the landholder may apply to enhance the rent of such tenant during the currency of the term for which the rent has been so fixed, on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(a) that the area of the tenants holding has been increased by alluvion or otherwise:

(b) that the productive powers of the land held by the tenant have, since the date of the order, been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant:

And the tenant may apply for abatement of his rent on one of the following grounds, and on no others:—

(c) that the area of the land held by him has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise;

(d) that the productive powers of such land have been decreased by any cause beyond his control.

18. In the case of a tenant at fixed rates, the landholder may apply to enhance his rent on the ground that the area of the land in his holding has been increased by alluvion or otherwise, and the tenant may apply for abatement of his rent on the ground that the area of the land in his holding has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise.

19. Applications for enhancement or abatement of rent must be made on or before the thirty-first day of August next before the year commencing on the first day of July from which the rent is to be enhanced or abated,

Day before which applications for enhancement or abatement must be made.

and every order for enhancement or abatement shall take effect from the first day of July next following the date of such order, unless for some reason, to be stated in writing, the Court thinks fit to order otherwise.

Orders when to take effect.

20. In determining, under this Chapter, the rate of rent payable by any tenant, his caste shall not be taken into consideration, unless it is proved that, by local custom, caste is taken into account in determining such rate; and whenever it is found that, by local custom or practice, any class of persons, by reason of their having formerly been proprietors of the soil or otherwise, hold land at favourable rates of rent, the rate shall be determined in accordance with such custom or practice.

Consideration of caste and class of tenant in determining rate of his rent.

21. No tenant-at-will of land shall be liable to pay rent in excess of the rent (if any) payable by him in the previous year ending on the thirtieth day of June, unless the landholder and tenant have agreed as to the rent to be paid to the former by the latter, and such agreement has been recorded by the kánúngo of the pargana in which such land is situate.

22A. When any land is held of a landholder by a tenant, such landholder or tenant may, in the absence of a written contract to the contrary, apply to the Collector of the District to have such land surveyed. The Collector, on receiving such application, may estimate the cost of such survey, and, by order in writing, require the applicant to deposit the amount of such estimate.

Applications to survey land.

If the applicant deposits such amount within fifteen days from the date of the order, the Collector of the District shall issue a notice to the other party or parties to the tenancy to show cause, at a time and place specified in such notice, why the survey should not be made; and, if no such cause is so shewn, may, by an order in writing, direct the survey to be made by such person and at such time as he thinks fit.

A copy of such order shall be served on all the parties to the tenancy; and, if any party fails to attend at the appointed time, it shall not thereafter be open to him to question the correctness of the survey made in his absence.

If any party, on being called upon to show cause as aforesaid, makes any objection to the survey and such objection is overruled, he shall be liable to pay the costs (if any) occasioned by such objection.

Nothing in this section shall affect any power conferred by law to compel the attendance of any person at a survey.

23. Whenever for any cause the Local Government remits or suspends for any period the payment of the whole or any part of the revenue payable in respect of any land, any officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf may, subject to such rules as to appeal, confirmation or otherwise as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Board, order that the rent of such land shall be remitted, or suspended for the period of such suspension of payment of revenue, as the case may be, to an amount which shall be equal to double the amount of the revenue of which the payment has been so remitted or suspended, or shall bear the same proportion to the whole of the rent payable in respect of the land as the revenue of which the payment has been so remitted or suspended bears to the whole of the revenue payable in respect of such land;

(b) when such land-revenue is on the expiration of such term reduced—be voidable at the option of the tenant, unless the landlord agrees to accept such rent as a Settlement-officer or other person duly empowered in this behalf may, on the application of the tenant, determine to be fair and reasonable.

30. (a) And whereas all grants (whether in writing or otherwise) for holding land exempt from the payment of rent which have been made since the first day of December, 1790, by any authority other than that of the Governor General in Council, were declared by Bengal Regulation XIX of 1793, section 10, to be null and void, and like provisions have been by divers Regulations applied to the several parts of the territories to which this Act extends, and the said Regulation XIX of 1793 also provided that no length of possession should be considered to give validity to any such grant, either with regard to the property in the soil or the rents of it, it is hereby further enacted as follows:—

Resumption of rent-free grants.

(B).—Relinquishment and Ejectment.

31. Every tenant not holding under a lease shall continue liable for the rent of the land in his holding for the ensuing year, unless on or before the first day of May in any year he gives notice in writing to the landholder, or his recognized agent, of his desire to relinquish such land on the thirtieth day of June next ensuing, and relinquishes it accordingly; or unless it is let to any other person by such landholder or agent:

Provided that, whenever an order for the enhancement of the rent of any land held by any such tenant is passed and the tenant within fifteen days of the date of such order gives to the landholder or his recognized agent notice in writing of his desire to relinquish such land at the commencement of the period in respect of which such enhancement takes effect, and relinquishes such land accordingly, he shall not be liable for the rent payable for such land in respect of any period subsequent to such relinquishment.

Explanation.—In clauses (a) and (b) the word 'tenant' does not include a thékadár and a katkanadár.

35. If the landholder desires to eject a tenant at fixed rates, an ex-proprietary tenant, an occupancy-tenant or a tenant holding under an unexpired lease, against whom a decree for arrears has been passed and remains unsatisfied, he may, after the expiration of the year, ending on the thirtieth day of June, in which such arrears accrued, apply to the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector to eject the tenant.

Such officer shall, on receiving such application, cause a notice to be served on the tenant, stating the amount due under the decree, and informing him that if he does not pay such amount into Court within fifteen days from receipt of the notice, he will be ejected from his land.

If such amount be not so paid, the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector may eject the tenant.

Provided as follows:—

(1) the process mentioned in clause (a) shall not be issued against any female, minor, lunatic or idiot;

(2) the processes mentioned in clauses (d), (e), (f) and (g) shall not be enforced without the previous sanction of the Chief Commissioner;

(3) no land shall be sold, and the settlement of no land shall be annulled, on account of an arrear accruing in respect of land whilst it is under attachment, or under charge of the Superintendent of Government Wards, or held under direct management, or let in farm in accordance with any of the provisions of this Act.

The processes specified in clauses (a), (b) and (g) may be enforced either in the district in which the default has been made, or in any other district.

Arrest and imprisonment for recovery of arrear.

95. The process mentioned in section ninety-four, clause (a), may be executed by issuing a warrant directing the officer named therein, if the defaulter fails to pay the arrear by a date to be fixed in the warrant, to bring him to the tahsíl.

If, when the defaulter arrives at the tahsíl, the arrear is still unpaid, the Tahsíldár may order him to be taken before the Deputy Commissioner, or may keep him under personal restraint at the tahsíl for a period not exceeding ten days, unless within such period the arrear is paid, and may then, if the arrear is still unpaid, cause him to be taken before the Deputy Commissioner.

96. If the arrear is not paid when the defaulter arrives before the Deputy Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner may issue an order to the officer in charge of the civil jail of the district, directing him to confine the defaulter in such jail for such period, not exceeding three months from the date of the order, as the Deputy Commissioner may think fit, unless within such period the arrear is paid.

Imprisonment of defaulter in civil jail.

97. Attachments and sales of moveable property made under this chapter shall be conducted as nearly as may be according to the law for the time being in force for the attachment and sale of moveable property under the decree of a Civil Court.

Procedure in sales of moveable property.

98. After causing any attachment to be made under section ninety-four, clause (c), the Deputy Commissioner shall issue a proclamation declaring the attachment to be in force, and shall take the attached mahál, share or land under his own management, or place it under the management of any agent whom he may appoint for the purpose.

Management of mahál, share or land attached under section 94 (c).

99. During the continuance of an attachment under section ninety-eight, the defaulters shall be excluded from possession of the land attached, and the Deputy Commissioner or the agent appointed by him shall have all their rights to manage the land and to realize the rents and profits arising therefrom, and shall be bound by all their liabilities as málguzárs or proprietors to any subordinate proprietors or tenants of such land.

Effect of attachment.

100. The surplus profits of such land, after defraying the cost of attachment and management, shall be applied, first, to the payment of any revenue becoming due in respect of such land during the attachment; and next, to discharging the arrear for the recovery of which the attachment was made.

Profits of land how applied.

101. The attachment shall continue until the arrear is paid or realized from the profits of the land attached, or the Deputy Commissioner reinstates the defaulters in possession:

Attachment when to cease.

Provided that no attachment shall continue beyond five years from the first day of the agricultural year next following its commencement.

102. When it is proposed to execute the process mentioned in section ninety-four, clause (d), the persons to whom the share or land in respect of which the arrear is due is to be transferred shall be required to pay such arrear, or to secure its payment to the satisfaction of the Deputy Commissioner.

Transfer under section 94 (d).

No such transfer shall be made for a term exceeding fifteen years from the first day of the agricultural year next after the date on which it is sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner.

No proceedings taken under this section shall affect the joint and several liability of the málguzárs of the mahál for arrears accruing in respect of such mahál subsequently to the transfer of the share or land except that, as regards all such arrears, the transferee shall stand in the place of the málguzár whose share or land is transferred.

Joint and several liability not affected by transfer.

103. When the Chief Commissioner sanctions the annulment of the settlement of any mahál, the Deputy Commissioner shall proclaim such annulment, and may then exclude the defaulters from the possession of the mahál, and either manage the mahál or any portion thereof himself or through an agent, or let the mahál or any portion thereof in farm for such term and on such conditions as the Chief Commissioner directs:

Procedure after receipt of sanction to annulment of settlement.

Provided that no management or farm under this section shall continue for a longer period than fifteen years from the first day of the agricultural year next after the proclamation of annulment of settlement.

After the date of such proclamation no liabilities shall accrue under the settlement so annulled; but such annulment shall not affect anything done or any liability incurred under the settlement before such date.

104. When a portion only of the mahál is managed or let in farm under section one hundred and three, the rest of such mahal shall be separately resettled with the proprietors thereof for the remainder of the term of settlement.

Case of a portion of a mahál being managed or farmed.

105. As soon as the management or farm of any mahál or portion thereof has come to an end, the Deputy Commissioner shall offer to the persons entitled under section forty-nine to an offer of assessment a new assessment of the land, on such conditions as the Chief Commissioner may direct, for the remainder of the term of the settlement of the mahál; and, if such offer is refused, may, with the previous sanction of the Chief Commissioner, let such mahál or portion in farm for the remainder of the term of settlement to some other person, or manage it himself or through an agent for such period.

Settlement on expiry of management or farm.

106. No leases, liens or other incumbrances created by the defaulters, or by any person through or under whom they claim, of, or upon any land managed or let in farm under this Act, shall, during such management or farm, be binding upon the Deputy Commissioner or Settlement-officer, his agent or lessee.

Effect of annulment of settlement.

107. No defaulter shall be deprived of the possession of his sír-land in the execution of any of the processes mentioned in section ninety-four, clauses (c), (d) and (e); but every such defaulter shall, while such process is being enforced, be entitled to retain possession of, and liable to pay rent for, such land as if he were an absolute occupancy-tenant, at such rent as may be fixed by the Deputy Commissioner.

Saving of rights in sír-land.

108. Unless the Chief Commissioner in sanctioning the sale otherwise directs, a purchaser of any land sold for arrears of revenue due in respect thereof acquires the full proprietorship or superior or inferior proprietorship of it, as the case may be, free of all leases, liens and other incumbrances; and all grants or contracts previously made by any person other than the purchaser in respect of such land shall become void as against such purchaser.

Nature of estate taken by purchaser of land sold for arrears due thereon.

Nothing in this section shall—

(a) affect the rights of any proprietor superior or inferior to the defaulters or of any málik-makbúzá or occupancy-tenant who does not derive his rights as such proprietor, málik-makbúzá or tenant from express contract with such defaulters, or any person through whom they claim; or

(b) apply to lands held under leases at fair rents for the erection thereon of dwelling-houses, places of worship or manufactories, or for working mines, minerals, coals and quarries, or for laying out and maintaining gardens and burial-grounds, or for constructing tanks and canals, so long as the lands continue to be used for the purposes specified in such leases respectively; or

(c) deprive any defaulter whose property is sold of the rights in respect to his sír-land conferred by any law for the time being in force.

The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, determine what rents shall be deemed to be fair rents within the meaning of this section.

109. When immoveable property is sold under this Act, the rules prescribed in sections 287, 288, 293 and 306 to 316, both inclusive, of the Code of Civil Procedure shall be followed, except in the following particulars (that is to say):—

Rules for sale of immoveable property.

(a) The defaulter may pay the arrear in respect of which the land is to be sold at any time before the day fixed for the sale, and on such payment the sale shall be stayed.

(b) The proclamation directed by the said section 287 shall, when the sale is under clause (f), section ninety-four of this Act, declare that, subject to the provisions of section one hundred and eight, the full proprietorship, or superior or inferior proprietorship, as the case may be, is to be sold free from all leases, liens and other incumbrances, and the certificate mentioned in section 316 of the said Code shall contain a similar statement.

(c) The last two clauses of the said section 287 shall not apply.

(d) An appeal from any order under section 312 of the said Code for confirming or setting aside the sale shall lie to the Commissioner of the Division, and an appeal from the Commissioner's order on such appeal shall lie to the Chief Commissioner.

(e) The Deputy Commissioner may, from time to time, postpone any sale which he has proclaimed, reporting such postponement to the Commissioner of the Division.

(f) Section 309 of the said Code shall be read as if, after the words "for such payment," the words "and every sale of such property made after a postponement" were added.

(g) Section 313 of the said Code shall not apply to sales under section ninety-four, clause (f), of this Act.

(h) Section 316 of the said Code shall be read as if the words "The Deputy Commissioner shall place the purchaser in possession of the lands which he has purchased" were added thereto.

110. In the course of a sale under section ninety-four, clause (f), if the property is knocked down to a stranger, the following persons may claim to take it at the sum last bid in the following order:—

Pre-emption at sales.

(a) any málguzár who has paid the revenue which as between him and the other málguzárs is payable by him;

(b) if the superior proprietorship is sold, the inferior proprietor;

(c) if the inferior proprietorship is sold, the superior proprietor:

Provided that such claim is made before the officer conducting the sale closes the sitting at which the sale is held, and that the claimant undertakes to fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on the purchaser.

111. The proceeds of every sale in execution of any process mentioned in section ninety-four shall be applied, first, in satisfaction of the arrear on account of which the sale was held and of the expenses of such sale; secondly, to the payment of any other arrear due to Government by the defaulter; and the surplus, if any, shall then be payable to him, or, where there are more defaulters than one, to such defaulters according to their respective shares in the property sold.

Application of proceeds of sale of immoveable property.

112. The costs of serving a notice of demand under section ninety-three and of enforcing any process mentioned in section ninety-four shall be recoverable as part of the arrear in respect of which the notice was served and the process was issued.

Costs recoverable as part of arrear.

113. The Chief Commissioner may make rules—

Matters as to which Chief Commissioner may make rules.

(a) for the guidance of Revenue-officers in issuing notices of demand under section ninety-three and executing the processes mentioned in section ninety-four;

(b) defining the classes of officers by whom the processes mentioned in section ninety-four, clauses (a) and (b), may be enforced;

(c) prescribing the agency by which any of the processes issued under section ninety-four shall be executed.

114. Notwithstanding anything contained in section ninety-two, when proceedings are taken under this Act for the recovery of an arrear, the person against whom such proceedings are taken may, if he denies that the arrear or any part thereof is due,

Remedies open to person denying that sum demanded as an arrear is due.

Realization of Revenue by Málguzárs.

Limitation of right to set-off, &c., in suit for arrears.

115. In a suit for the recovery of an arrear of revenue not being revenue payable directly to Government, and in a suit brought by a lambardár to recover the amount of any revenue payable to Government through him, the defendant shall not, except with the permission of the Court,—

(a) set-off against the plaintiff's demand any sum of money recoverable by him from the plaintiff; or

(b) claim credit for any payment purporting to have been made on account when such payment was made before the date on which the amount thereof became due.

Recovery of arrear through Deputy Commissioner instead of by suit.

116. Any lambardár or sub-lambardár entitled to recover an arrear, or any málguzár to whom such an arrear is due under a sub-settlement, may, before instituting a suit for the recovery thereof, apply to the Deputy Commissioner to recover such arrear on his behalf as if it were an arrear of revenue payable directly to Government.

The Deputy Commissioner may, if he thinks fit, comply with such application, but shall, before compliance therewith, give to the persons who would be defendants if a suit were instituted for the recovery of such arrear, opportunity to show cause against the order which he proposes to make.

The Deputy Commissioner shall not be made a defendant to any suit instituted under section one hundred and fourteen in respect of an arrear as to which an order has been made under this section.

No person on whose account the Deputy Commissioner proceeds under this section to recover an arrear shall thereby be relieved of his responsibility for such arrear.

Saving of right of málguzár to demand revenue of land assessed to revenue and held free.

117. Nothing in the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and no agreement made after this Act comes into force, shall bar the right of the málguzárs of any mahál assessed with land-revenue to demand revenue in respect of any land which, having been taken into account in such assessment, has been held by any person without payment of revenue.

The Chief Commissioner may, in his discretion, exempt any case from the operation of this section.

Limitation in suits for revenue.

118. No suit for the recovery of revenue payable under a settlement or sub-settlement shall be instituted after three years reckoned from the date on which such revenue becomes payable.

In other respects the limitation of such suits shall be governed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

Interest on Arrears.

Interest on arrears.

119. Interest shall not be charged on an arrear of revenue unless the Chief Commissioner, by general or special order, so directs; provided that the Court may award interest at such rate as it thinks fit on sums payable under a sub-settlement.

CHAPTER IX.

OF REVENUE AND VILLAGE RECORDS.

Correction of record-of-rights.

120. Any entry in the record-of-rights may, after such record has been made over to the Deputy Commissioner, be corrected by the Deputy Commissioner on the application of any person interested, or of his own motion. Such correction may be made on one or more of the following grounds and on no others:—

(a) that all persons interested in such entry wish to have it corrected; or

(b) that by a decree in a suit brought under section eighty-three it has been declared to be erroneous; or

(c) that, being founded on a decree or order of a Civil Court, or on the order of a Revenue or Settlement officer, it is not in accordance with such decree or order; or

(d) that, being founded on such decree or order, the order or decision has subsequently been modified on appeal or review, or has been revised by the Chief Commissioner.

Revision of record in accordance with provision therein contained.

121. The Deputy Commissioner may revise a record-of-rights when such revision is provided for in such record.

Powers of Deputy Commissioner as to correction of entry or revision of record.

122. When the Deputy Commissioner takes proceedings for the correction of any entry in the record-of-rights or for the revision of such record-of-rights, he shall exercise, for the purpose of such correction or revision, all the powers which the Chief Settlement-officer might have exercised if the proceedings had been taken whilst the settlement was in progress.

Power to direct that rule or custom entered in record-of-rights shall be enforced by Government.

123. The Chief Commissioner may, in his discretion, by notification in the official Gazette, direct that any specified rule, custom or condition duly entered in the record-of-rights of any specified village shall be enforced by the Government.

Punishment of violation of such rule or custom.

If any of the persons with whom a settlement or sub-settlement has been made, violate or neglect any rule, custom or condition with respect to which the Chief Commissioner has made a direction under this section, the Deputy Commissioner may, if no penalty is provided by any law for the time being in force for such violation or neglect, recover from such person a penalty not exceeding two hundred rupees.

Suit to set aside proceedings under section 123.

124. Any person against whom proceedings have been taken under section one hundred and twenty-three may institute a suit against Government to set aside such proceedings on the ground that no rule, custom or condition was, in fact, violated or neglected. If the Court finds that no rule, custom or condition has been violated or neglected, it may by its order annul such proceedings, and direct that any penalty paid by the plaintiff be refunded; and may also award to him such costs as he has necessarily incurred in the proceedings, and such further sum as compensation as it thinks fit.

Powers of Chief Commissioner as to registration of changes after preparation of record-of-rights.

125. The Chief Commissioner may—

(a) direct that the mukaddam of each village shall, for the purpose of showing the changes occurring therein subsequently to the preparation of the record-of-rights, prepare, or, where there is a patwárí, cause to be prepared, and furnish, annually for such village, papers in such form, at such time, containing such particulars, and attested in such manner, as the Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, prescribe;

(b) lay down the procedure to be followed in order to ascertain that a change has occurred in the village, and the nature of such change.

All changes referred to in this section shall be recorded in such registers as the Chief Commissioner appoints, and not in the record-of-rights, and the Chief Commissioner may direct that, before any specified changes are recorded, the order of a specified Revenue-officer shall be obtained in this behalf.

Possession of proprietary rights to be notified.

126. All persons lawfully entering into possession of proprietary rights and interests in any land shall, within a reasonable time, give notice of such entry to the Tahsíldár of the tahsíl in which such land is situated.

If any question arises whether any right or interest is a proprietary right or interest within the meaning of this section, the decision thereof by the Chief Commissioner shall be final.

Notice to be given by guardian in case of minority or idiotcy.

If the person so entering is a minor, lunatic or idiot, the guardian or other person who has charge of his property shall give the notice required by this section.

Fine for neglect to give notice of possession.

127. Any person neglecting to give the notice required by section one hundred and twenty-six shall be liable, at the discretion of the Deputy Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner, to fine which may extend to fifty rupees for each day during which such neglect continues.

Obligation to aid in preparation of village-papers.

128. All persons being in possession of proprietary rights in land shall, on being so required by the Deputy Commissioner, prepare, or cause to be prepared, such papers, and furnish such information, as may be required for the preparation of the village-papers prescribed under section one hundred and twenty-five.

Fees for recording changes; from whom leviable.

129. The Chief Commissioner may direct that fees shall be leviable when changes are recorded under the last clause of section one hundred and twenty-five, and may fix the amount of such fees.

All fees so leviable shall be levied from the person in whose favour the change is made.

Annual enquiry regarding land held free from revenue.

130. The Deputy Commissioner shall in each year make enquiry regarding all cases in which land has been granted by Government, conditionally or for a time, free, wholly or in part, from the payment of revenue.

Procedure on breach of conditions of grant.

If it appears to the Deputy Commissioner that the conditions of any grant have been broken by the grantee, he shall report the case through the Commissioner of the Division for the orders of the Chief Commissioner, who may direct that the land be assessed, or may pass such other order as he thinks fit.

Procedure on expiry of term of grant.

If it appears to the Deputy Commissioner that the term of any such grant has expired, or (when the grant is for a life or lives) if the person last entitled to hold the land comprised in the grant, free from revenue, or at less than full revenue-rates, has died, he shall assess the same, and shall report his proceedings through the Commissioner of the Division for the sanction of the Chief Commissioner.

Inspection of revenue-records.

131. All records kept under this Act shall be open to public inspection at such times, and on such conditions as to fees or otherwise, as the Chief Commissioner from time to time directs.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN ADDITIONAL POWERS AND FUNCTIONS OF REVENUE-OFFICERS.

Purposes for which, when settlement is not in progress, Deputy Commissioner shall exercise Settlement-officers' powers.

132. The Deputy Commissioner shall, when a settlement is not in progress, exercise the powers conferred by this Act on Settlement-officers for the following purposes:—

(a) causing boundary-marks to be erected or repaired, and recovering the cost of such erection and repair;

(b) assessing land-revenue on lands which are liable to assessment, but have not been assessed;

(c) declaring any local area to be a mahál;

(d) settling lands from which the proprietors were excluded at settlement and to which they have been or are about to be readmitted;

(e) settling mahals in respect of which an application has been made under the third proviso to section fifty-six;

(f) dealing with claims to hold land wholly or partially free from revenue as against the málguzárs;

(g) assessing lands gained by alluvion;

(h) ascertaining and recording village-cesses which are levied when this Act comes into force, but have not been recorded at the settlement.

Purposes for which officers may be invested with Settlement-officers' powers.

133. The Chief Commissioner may, during the currency of a settlement, invest any officer with the powers conferred on a Settlement-officer by sections forty, forty-one and forty-two; or,

with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, with any other of the powers which are by this Act conferred on a Settlement-officer; but not so as to enable him to enhance the amount of an assessment in force under section fifty-six.

Cognizance of, and penalty for, offence of injuring boundary-marks.

134. Any person wilfully erasing, removing or damaging a boundary-mark may be ordered by the Deputy Commissioner or by a Tahsíldár or Náib Tahsíldár empowered by the Chief Commissioner in this behalf to pay to the officer making the order, in addition to any fine to which such person would be liable under section 434 of the Indian Penal Code, such sum, not exceeding fifty rupees, as may in the opinion of such officer be necessary to defray the expense of restoring the same, and of rewarding the person (if any) who gave information of such erasure, removal or damage.

Procedure when person injuring cannot be found.

135. Whenever the person erasing, removing or damaging such mark cannot be discovered, or if for any other reason it is found impracticable to recover from him the sum which he has been ordered to pay, the mark shall be re-erected or repaired at the cost of the proprietors, mortgagees or farmers of such one or more of the adjoining lands as the Deputy Commissioner thinks fit.

Partition of a mahál into two maháls.

136. Any málguzárs of a mahál who are not co-sharers with the other málguzárs of such mahál in any lands comprised in such mahál, except such lands as are under the law relating to partition for the time being in force indivisible, may apply to the Deputy Commissioner to make the lands held by them separately from such other málguzárs a separate mahál; and the Deputy Commissioner shall thereupon make such lands and the lands held separately by the remaining málguzárs separate maháls, and shall, with the previous sanction of the Commissioner, apportion between the two new maháls thus constituted the entire revenue assessed upon the original mahál.

CHAPTER XI.

VILLAGE-OFFICERS AND PATWÁRIS.

Power to make rules as to officers.

137. The Chief Commissioner may make rules regulating the appointment, remuneration, suspension and removal of lambardárs, sub-lambardárs and mukaddams:

Provided that, except with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, proprietors, other than málik-makbúzás, shall not be liable to pay, on account of the aggregate remuneration of lambardárs or sub-lambardárs and mukaddams, a sum exceeding five per cent. on the land-revenue which is assessed on their land, or which, when their land is free from revenue, would, in the judgment of the Deputy Commissioner, be assessed on their land if it were subject to assessment.

In framing rules for the appointment under this section of lambardárs and sub-lambardárs for any mahál, the Chief Commissioner shall have regard among other matters to local custom and hereditary claims, and to entries on the subject in the record-of-rights of such mahál.

In every village in which there are resident málguzárs, one of such málguzárs shall be the mukaddam.

Duties of lambardárs.

138. It shall be the duty of every lambardár and sub-lambardár—

(a) to collect and pay into the Government Treasury so much of the land-revenue as may under section seventy-one be payable through him, either solely or jointly with other lambardárs or sub-lambardárs;

(b) to collect and pay to the mukaddam, or into the Government Treasury, as the Deputy Commissioner may direct, all sums of money payable through him, either solely or jointly with other lambardárs or sub-lambardárs, by the proprietors whom he represents, on account of the remuneration of the mukaddam, patwáris or village-watchmen, or on account of any expenses which the mukaddam is authorized to recover from the lambardárs or sub-lambardárs of his village;

(c) to assist the mukaddam in obtaining all particulars which he is bound to enter in the annual village-papers, or to report under this Act.

Lambardárs may recover fees and other charges from proprietors.

139. Together with the land-revenue, lambardárs and sub-lambardárs may recover from the proprietors whom they respectively represent—

(a) any remuneration to which they are entitled as such; and

(b) the sum which, under section one hundred and thirty-eight, they are bound to pay to mukaddams:

Provided that no such recovery shall be made from málik-makbúzás paying a percentage which includes remuneration to mukaddams and lambardárs.

Deputy Commissioner may alter channel through which málik-makbúzá pays revenue.

140. On the application of any málik-makbúzá or other like holder of land, or of the lambardár or sub-lambardár through whom such málik-makbúzá or other holder of land pays the revenue assessed on his holding, the Deputy Commissioner may, for sufficient cause shown, order that such revenue be paid through any other lambardár or sub-lambardár, or that it be paid into the Government Treasury.

Effect of order for payment of revenue direct to Government.

When the Deputy Commissioner orders such payment to be made into the Government Treasury, such portion of the percentage fixed under section sixty-four as the Deputy Commissioner, subject to the control of the Chief Commissioner, may determine, shall be so paid, and the málik-makbúzá or other person shall pay the rest to the mukaddams on account of their fees and the other village-expenses.

Duties of mukaddams.

141. It shall be the duty of every mukaddam—

(a) to control and superintend the village-patwári and village-watchmen; to report their deaths or absence from duty; to maintain them in the possession of any lands appertaining to their office; to recover and pay to them any cash allowances to which they may be entitled; and to take such steps as may be necessary to compel them to perform their duties;

(b) to furnish reports regarding the state of his village, at such places and times as the Deputy Commissioner fixes in this behalf;

(c) to report and, if possible, to prevent encroachments on the public paths and roadways in his village;

(d) to preserve such stations and marks erected in his village by Government-surveyors as may be made over to his care;

(e) subject to any rules issued by the Chief Commissioner, to keep his village in good sanitary condition;

(f) to report violations of any rules which the Chief Commissioner may make for the preservation of underwood, forests and trees growing on the village-lands, and for securing to persons entitled to cut wood and enjoy other privileges in the waste-lands of the village the rights to which they are entitled;

(g) to collect, or aid in the collection of, all payments due to Government in his village;

(h) to report all births and deaths taking place in his village.

The Chief Commissioner may make rules—

(1) adding to the list of duties which a mukaddam is required to perform under this section; and

(2) regulating the liability of persons residing in any village for charges necessarily incurred by mukaddams in the performance of the duties specified in clause (c) in respect of such village, and for apportioning such charges among such persons; and

(3) determining the officers to whom reports under this section shall be made.

Liabilities imposed by law on landholders to attach to mukaddams.

142. When, by any enactment for the time being in force, any public duties are imposed on, or public liabilities are declared to attach to, landholders, their managers and agents and the like, such duties shall be deemed to be imposed on, and such liabilities shall be held to attach to, mukaddams appointed under this Act:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall discharge landholders, their managers or agents, or the like, from any liabilities imposed upon them by law.

Power of mukaddams to recover certain expenses incurred.

143. Every mukaddam may recover from the lambardárs or sub-lambardárs of the village to which he is appointed his own remuneration, together with any expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of his duties.

Chief Commissioner may make rules as to patwáris.

144. The Chief Commissioner may make rules—

(a) regulating the manner in which patwáris are to be selected; prescribing the conditions under which they may be appointed; and fixing the limits of their circles and the nature, mode and amount of their remuneration;

(b) prescribing the conditions under which substitutes may be appointed for persons having hereditary claims to the office of patwári, when such persons are unable to act;

(c) prescribing the fines which may be imposed on patwáris and their substitutes for neglect of their duty, and stating the circumstances under which they may be suspended or removed:

Provided that, except with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, no proprietor shall be compelled to pay as remuneration to patwáris a sum exceeding six per cent. on the revenue for the time being assessed on his land, or which, when his land is free from revenue, would, in the judgment of the Deputy Commissioner, be assessable on his land if it were liable to assessment.

Chief Commissioner may make rules for guidance of Deputy Commissioners in certain matters.

145. The Chief Commissioner may make rules for the guidance of Deputy Commissioners in dealing with cases where, at the time of making the settlement next before this Act comes into force, the maintenance of a patwári was made optional, and the persons settled with are unable to agree as to whether a patwári should be maintained, and for dealing with cases where no patwári is, under such option, maintained and the mukaddams or proprietors have made default in the performance of the duties of a patwári.

Such rules may empower the Deputy Commissioner, in the latter class of cases—

(a) to impose fines not exceeding fifty rupees on such mukaddams or proprietors, and therefrom to make provision for the temporary performance of the duties in respect of which they have made default;

(b) to appoint patwáris in the villages of such proprietors, either for the term of the settlement or for any shorter term, and to fix the remuneration of such patwáris.

Nothing in the proviso to section one hundred and forty-four shall apply to patwáris so appointed.

Chief Commissioner may define duties of patwáris.

146. The Chief Commissioner may make rules prescribing the duties of patwáris—

(a) towards the Government; and may in such rules determine the registers, returns or other papers which they shall keep or furnish, the forms and language in which such registers and returns are to be prepared, the mode of their preparation and attestation, and the dates on which they are to be furnished;

(b) towards the members of the village-community; and may in such rules fix the remuneration, if any, other than the fixed emoluments of their office, which the patwáris may demand in respect of the performance of such duties.

Patwáris' papers to be public documents.

All records and papers which patwáris are required to prepare or keep by any rule made by the Chief Commissioner under this section shall be deemed to be public documents within the meaning of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, and to be the property of Government.

Patwáris to produce papers for inspection, and to allow copies to be made.

(a) by arresting the defaulter and imprisoning him in the civil jail;

(b) by attaching and selling his moveable property;

(c) by attaching the mahál in respect of which the arrear has accrued or the share or land of any málguzár who has not paid the portion of the revenue which, as between him and the other málguzárs, is payable by him, and taking the same mahál, share or land under direct management;

(d) by transferring the share or land of any málguzár who has not paid such portion to any málguzár who has paid the same, or if every such málguzár declines to accept such share or land, to any person having a mortgage or charge upon the same, and who consents to accept it;

(e) by annulling the settlement of the mahál in respect of which the arrear has accrued, and taking such mahál under direct management or farming the same;

(f) by selling such mahál, or the share or land of any málguzár who has not paid the portion of the revenue aforesaid;

(g) by selling immoveable property belonging to the defaulter other than the land in respect of which the arrear has accrued.

Provided as follows:—

(1) the process mentioned in clause (a) shall not be issued against any female, minor, lunatic or idiot;

(2) the processes mentioned in clauses (d), (e), (f) and (g) shall not be enforced without the previous sanction of the Chief Commissioner;

(3) no land shall be sold, and the settlement of no land shall be annulled, on account of an arrear accruing in respect of land whilst it is under attachment, or under charge of the Superintendent of Government Wards, or held under direct management, or let in farm in accordance with any of the provisions of this Act.

The processes specified in clauses (a), (b) and (g) may be enforced either in the district in which the default has been made, or in any other district.

Arrest and imprisonment for recovery of arrear.

95. The process mentioned in section ninety-four, clause (a), may be executed by issuing a warrant directing the officer named therein, if the defaulter fails to pay the arrear by a date to be fixed in the warrant, to bring him to the tahsíl.

If, when the defaulter arrives at the tahsíl, the arrear is still unpaid, the Tahsíldár may order him to be taken before the Deputy Commissioner, or may keep him under personal restraint at the tahsíl for a period not exceeding ten days, unless within such period the arrear is paid, and may then, if the arrear is still unpaid, cause him to be taken before the Deputy Commissioner.

Imprisonment of defaulter in civil jail.

96. If the arrear is not paid when the defaulter arrives before the Deputy Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner may issue an order to the officer in charge of the civil jail of the district, directing him to confine the defaulter in such jail for such period, not exceeding three months from the date of the order, as the Deputy Commissioner may think fit, unless within such period the arrear is paid.

Procedure in sales of moveable property.

97. Attachments and sales of moveable property made under this chapter shall be conducted as nearly as may be according to the law for the time being in force for the attachment and sale of moveable property under the decree of a Civil Court.

Management of mahál, share or land attached under section 94 (c).

98. After causing any attachment to be made under section ninety-four, clause (c), the Deputy Commissioner shall issue a proclamation declaring the attachment to be in force, and shall take the attached mahál, share or land under his own management, or place it under the management of any agent whom he may appoint for the purpose.

Effect of attachment.

99. During the continuance of an attachment under section ninety-eight, the defaulters shall be excluded from possession of the land attached, and the Deputy Commissioner or the agent appointed by him shall have all their rights to manage the land and to realize the rents and profits arising therefrom, and shall be bound by all their liabilities as málguzárs or proprietors to any subordinate proprietors or tenants of such land.

Profits of land how applied.

100. The surplus profits of such land, after defraying the cost of attachment and management, shall be applied, first, to the payment of any revenue becoming due in respect of such land during the attachment; and next, to discharging the arrear for the recovery of which the attachment was made.

Attachment when to cease.

101. The attachment shall continue until the arrear is paid or realized from the profits of the land attached, or the Deputy Commissioner reinstates the defaulters in possession:

Provided that no attachment shall continue beyond five years from the first day of the agricultural year next following its commencement.

Transfer under section 94 (d).

102. When it is proposed to execute the process mentioned in section ninety-four, clause (d), the persons to whom the share or land in respect of which the arrear is due is to be transferred shall be required to pay such arrear, or to secure its payment to the satisfaction of the Deputy Commissioner.

No such transfer shall be made for a term exceeding fifteen years from the first day of the agricultural year next after the date on which it is sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner.

Joint and several liability not affected by transfer.

No proceedings taken under this section shall affect the joint and several liability of the málguzárs of the mahál for arrears accruing in respect of such mahál subsequently to the transfer of the share or land except that, as regards all such arrears, the transferee shall stand in the place of the málguzár whose share or land is transferred.

Procedure after receipt of sanction to annulment of settlement.

103. When the Chief Commissioner sanctions the annulment of the settlement of any mahál, the Deputy Commissioner shall proclaim such annulment, and may then exclude the defaulters from the possession of the mahál, and either manage the mahál or any portion thereof himself or through an agent, or let the mahál or any portion thereof in farm for such term and on such conditions as the Chief Commissioner directs:

Provided that no management or farm under this section shall continue for a longer period than fifteen years from the first day of the agricultural year next after the proclamation of annulment of settlement.

After the date of such proclamation no liabilities shall accrue under the settlement so annulled; but such annulment shall not affect anything done or any liability incurred under the settlement before such date.

Case of a portion of a mahál being managed or farmed.

104. When a portion only of the mahál is managed or let in farm under section one hundred and three, the rest of such mahál shall be separately resettled with the proprietors thereof for the remainder of the term of settlement.

Settlement on expiry of management or farm.

105. As soon as the management or farm of any mahál or portion thereof has come to an end, the Deputy Commissioner shall offer to the persons entitled under section forty-nine to an offer of assessment a new assessment of the land, on such conditions as the Chief Commissioner may direct, for the remainder of the term of the settlement of the mahál; and, if such offer is refused, may, with the previous sanction of the Chief Commissioner, let such mahál or portion in farm for the remainder of the term of settlement to some other person, or manage it himself or through an agent for such period.

Effect of annulment of settlement.

106. No leases, liens or other incumbrances created by the defaulters, or by any person through or under whom they claim, of, or upon any land managed or let in farm under this Act, shall, during such management or farm, be binding upon the Deputy Commissioner or Settlement-officer, his agent or lessee.

Saving of rights in sír-land.

107. No defaulter shall be deprived of the possession of his sír-land in the execution of any of the processes mentioned in section ninety-four, clauses (c), (d) and (e); but every such defaulter shall, while such process is being enforced, be entitled to retain possession of, and liable to pay rent for, such land as if he were an absolute occupancy-tenant, at such rent as may be fixed by the Deputy Commissioner.

Nature of estate taken by purchaser of land sold for arrears due thereon.

108. Unless the Chief Commissioner in sanctioning the sale otherwise directs, a purchaser of any land sold for arrears of revenue due in respect thereof acquires the full proprietorship or superior or inferior proprietorship of it, as the case may be, free of all leases, liens and other incumbrances; and all grants or contracts previously made by any person other than the purchaser in respect of such land shall become void as against such purchaser.

Nothing in this section shall—

(a) affect the rights of any proprietor superior or inferior to the defaulters or of any málik-makbúzá or occupancy-tenant who does not derive his rights as such proprietor, málik-makbúzá or tenant from express contract with such defaulters, or any person through whom they claim; or

(b) apply to lands held under leases at fair rents for the erection thereon of dwelling-houses, places of worship or manufactories, or for working mines, minerals, coals and quarries, or for laying out and maintaining gardens and burial-grounds, or for constructing tanks and canals, so long as the lands continue to be used for the purposes specified in such leases respectively; or

(c) deprive any defaulter whose property is sold of the rights in respect to his sír-land conferred by any law for the time being in force.

The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, determine what rents shall be deemed to be fair rents within the meaning of this section.

Rules for sale of immoveable property.

109. When immoveable property is sold under this Act, the rules prescribed in sections 287, 288, 293 and 306 to 316, both inclusive, of the Code of Civil Procedure shall be followed, except in the following particulars (that is to say):—

(a) The defaulter may pay the arrear in respect of which the land is to be sold at any time before the day fixed for the sale, and on such payment the sale shall be stayed.

(b) The proclamation directed by the said section 287 shall, when the sale is under clause (f), section ninety-four of this Act, declare that, subject to the provisions of section one hundred and eight, the full proprietorship, or superior or inferior proprietorship, as the case may be, is to be sold free from all leases, liens and other incumbrances, and the certificate mentioned in section 316 of the said Code shall contain a similar statement.

(c) The last two clauses of the said section 287 shall not apply.

(d) An appeal from any order under section 312 of the said Code for confirming or setting aside the sale shall lie to the Commissioner of the Division, and an appeal from the Commissioner's order on such appeal shall lie to the Chief Commissioner.

(e) The Deputy Commissioner may, from time to time, postpone any sale which he has proclaimed, reporting such postponement to the Commissioner of the Division.

(f) Section 309 of the said Code shall be read as if, after the words "for such payment," the words "and every sale of such property made after a postponement" were added.

(g) Section 313 of the said Code shall not apply to sales under section ninety-four, clause (f), of this Act.

(h) Section 316 of the said Code shall be read as if the words "The Deputy Commissioner shall place the purchaser in possession of the lands which he has purchased" were added thereto.

Pre-emption at sales.

110. In the course of a sale under section ninety-four, clause (f), if the property is knocked down to a stranger, the following persons may claim to take it at the sum last bid in the following order:—

(a) any málguzár who has paid the revenue which as between him and the other málguzárs is payable by him;

(b) if the superior proprietorship is sold, the inferior proprietor;

(c) if the inferior proprietorship is sold, the superior proprietor:

Provided that such claim is made before the officer conducting the sale closes the sitting at which the sale is held, and that the claimant undertakes to fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on the purchaser.

Application of proceeds of sale of immoveable property.

111. The proceeds of every sale in execution of any process mentioned in section ninety-four shall be applied, first, in satisfaction of the arrear on account of which the sale was held and of the expenses of such sale; secondly, to the payment of any other arrear due to Government by the defaulter; and the surplus, if any, shall then be payable to him, or, where there are more defaulters than one, to such defaulters according to their respective shares in the property sold.

Costs recoverable as part of arrear.

112. The costs of serving a notice of demand under section ninety-three and of enforcing any process mentioned in section ninety-four shall be recoverable as part of the arrear in respect of which the notice was served and the process was issued.

Matters as to which Chief Commissioner may make rules.

113. The Chief Commissioner may make rules—

(a) for the guidance of Revenue-officers in issuing notices of demand under section ninety-three and executing the processes mentioned in section ninety-four;

(b) defining the classes of officers by whom the processes mentioned in section ninety-four, clauses (a) and (b), may be enforced;

(c) prescribing the agency by which any of the processes issued under section ninety-four shall be executed.

Remedies open to person denying that sum demanded as an arrear is due.

114. Notwithstanding anything contained in section ninety-two, when proceedings are taken under this Act for the recovery of an arrear, the person against whom such proceedings are taken may, if he denies that the arrear or any part thereof is due, pay the same under protest made at the time of payment and duly signed by him or by his agent, and institute a suit in the Civil Court for the recovery of the amount which he denies to be due.

Realization of Revenue by Málguzárs.

Limitation of right to set-off, &c., in suit for arrears.

115. In a suit for the recovery of an arrear of revenue not being revenue payable directly to Government, and in a suit brought by a lambardár to recover the amount of any revenue payable to Government through him, the defendant shall not, except with the permission of the Court,—

(a) set-off against the plaintiff's demand any sum of money recoverable by him from the plaintiff; or

(b) claim credit for any payment purporting to have been made on account when such payment was made before the date on which the amount thereof became due.

Recovery of arrear through Deputy Commissioner instead of by suit.

116. Any lambardár or sub-lambardár entitled to recover an arrear, or any málguzár to whom such an arrear is due under a sub-settlement, may, before instituting a suit for the recovery thereof, apply to the Deputy Commissioner to recover such arrear on his behalf as if it were an arrear of revenue payable directly to Government.

The Deputy Commissioner may, if he thinks fit, comply with such application, but shall, before compliance therewith, give to the persons who would be defendants if a suit were instituted for the recovery of such arrear, opportunity to show cause against the order which he proposes to make.

The Deputy Commissioner shall not be made a defendant to any suit instituted under section one hundred and fourteen in respect of an arrear as to which an order has been made under this section.

No person on whose account the Deputy Commissioner proceeds under this section to recover an arrear shall thereby be relieved of his responsibility for such arrear.

Saving of right of málguzár to demand revenue of land assessed to revenue and held free.

117. Nothing in the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and no agreement made after this Act comes into force, shall bar the right of the málguzárs of any mahál assessed with land-revenue to demand revenue in respect of any land which, having been taken into account in such assessment, has been held by any person without payment of revenue.

The Chief Commissioner may, in his discretion, exempt any case from the operation of this section.

Limitation in suits for revenue.

118. No suit for the recovery of revenue payable under a settlement or sub-settlement shall be instituted after three years reckoned from the date on which such revenue becomes payable.

In other respects the limitation of such suits shall be governed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

Interest on Arrears.

Interest on arrears.

119. Interest shall not be charged on an arrear of revenue unless the Chief Commissioner, by general or special order, so directs; provided that the Court may award interest at such rate as it thinks fit on sums payable under a sub-settlement.

CHAPTER IX.

OF REVENUE AND VILLAGE RECORDS.

Correction of record-of-rights.

120. Any entry in the record-of-rights may, after such record has been made over to the Deputy Commissioner, be corrected by the Deputy Commissioner on the application of any person interested, or of his own motion. Such correction may be made on one or more of the following grounds and on no others:—

(a) that all persons interested in such entry wish to have it corrected; or

(b) that by a decree in a suit brought under section eighty-three it has been declared to be erroneous; or

(c) that, being founded on a decree or order of a Civil Court, or on the order of a Revenue or Settlement officer, it is not in accordance with such decree or order; or

(d) that, being founded on such decree or order, the order or decision has subsequently been modified on appeal or review, or has been revised by the Chief Commissioner.

Revision of record in accordance with provision therein contained.

121. The Deputy Commissioner may revise a record-of-rights when such revision is provided for in such record.

Powers of Deputy Commissioner as to correction of entry or revision of record.

122. When the Deputy Commissioner takes proceedings for the correction of any entry in the record-of-rights or for the revision of such record-of-rights, he shall exercise, for the purpose of such correction or revision, all the powers which the Chief Settlement-officer might have exercised if the proceedings had been taken whilst the settlement was in progress.

Power to direct that rule or custom entered in record-of-rights shall be enforced by Government.

123. The Chief Commissioner may, in his discretion, by notification in the official Gazette, direct that any specified rule, custom or condition duly entered in the record-of-rights of any specified village shall be enforced by the Government.

Punishment of violation of such rule or custom.

If any of the persons with whom a settlement or sub-settlement has been made, violate or neglect any rule, custom or condition with respect to which the Chief Commissioner has made a direction under this section, the Deputy Commissioner may, if no penalty is provided by any law for the time being in force for such violation or neglect, recover from such person a penalty not exceeding two hundred rupees.

Suit to set aside proceedings under section 123.

124. Any person against whom proceedings have been taken under section one hundred and twenty-three may institute a suit against Government to set aside such proceedings on the ground that no rule, custom or condition was, in fact, violated or neglected. If the Court finds that no rule, custom or condition has been violated or neglected, it may by its order annul such proceedings, and direct that any penalty paid by the plaintiff be refunded; and may also award to him such costs as he has necessarily incurred in the proceedings, and such further sum as compensation as it thinks fit.

Powers of Chief Commissioner as to registration of changes after preparation of record-of-rights.

125. The Chief Commissioner may—

(a) direct that the mukaddam of each village shall, for the purpose of showing the changes occurring therein subsequently to the preparation of the record-of-rights, prepare, or, where there is a patwárí, cause to be prepared, and furnish, annually for such village, papers in such form, at such time, containing such particulars, and attested in such manner, as the Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, prescribe;

(b) lay down the procedure to be followed in order to ascertain that a change has occurred in the village, and the nature of such change.

All changes referred to in this section shall be recorded in such registers as the Chief Commissioner appoints, and not in the record-of-rights, and the Chief Commissioner may direct that, before any specified changes are recorded, the order of a specified Revenue-officer shall be obtained in this behalf.

Possession of proprietary rights to be notified.

126. All persons lawfully entering into possession of proprietary rights and interests in any land shall, within a reasonable time, give notice of such entry to the Tahsíldár of the tahsíl in which such land is situated.

If any question arises whether any right or interest is a proprietary right or interest within the meaning of this section, the decision thereof by the Chief Commissioner shall be final.

Notice to be given by guardian in case of minority or idiotcy.

If the person so entering is a minor, lunatic or idiot, the guardian or other person who has charge of his property shall give the notice required by this section.

Fine for neglect to give notice of possession.

127. Any person neglecting to give the notice required by section one hundred and twenty-six shall be liable, at the discretion of the Deputy Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner, to fine which may extend to fifty rupees for each day during which such neglect continues.

Obligation to aid in preparation of village-papers.

128. All persons being in possession of proprietary rights in land shall, on being so required by the Deputy Commissioner, prepare, or cause to be prepared, such papers, and furnish such information, as may be required for the preparation of the village-papers prescribed under section one hundred and twenty-five.

Fees for recording changes.

129. The Chief Commissioner may direct that fees shall be leviable when changes are recorded under the last clause of section one hundred and twenty-five, and may fix the amount of such fees.

All fees so leviable shall be levied from the person in whose favour the change is made.

Annual enquiry regarding land held free from revenue.

130. The Deputy Commissioner shall in each year make enquiry regarding all cases in which land has been granted by Government, conditionally or for a time, free, wholly or in part, from the payment of revenue.

Procedure on breach of conditions of grant.

If it appears to the Deputy Commissioner that the conditions of any grant have been broken by the grantee, he shall report the case through the Commissioner of the Division for the orders of the Chief Commissioner, who may direct that the land be assessed, or may pass such other order as he thinks fit.

Procedure on expiry of term of grant.

If it appears to the Deputy Commissioner that the term of any such grant has expired, or (when the grant is for a life or lives) if the person last entitled to hold the land comprised in the grant, free from revenue, or at less than full revenue-rates, has died, he shall assess the same, and shall report his proceedings through the Commissioner of the Division for the sanction of the Chief Commissioner.

Inspection of revenue-records.

131. All records kept under this Act shall be open to public inspection at such times, and on such conditions as to fees or otherwise, as the Chief Commissioner from time to time directs.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN ADDITIONAL POWERS AND FUNCTIONS OF REVENUE-OFFICERS.

Purposes for which, when settlement is not in progress, Deputy Commissioner shall exercise Settlement-officers' powers.

132. The Deputy Commissioner shall, when a settlement is not in progress, exercise the powers conferred by this Act on Settlement-officers for the following purposes:—

(a) causing boundary-marks to be erected or repaired, and recovering the cost of such erection and repair;

(b) assessing land-revenue on lands which are liable to assessment, but have not been assessed;

(c) declaring any local area to be a mahál;

(d) settling lands from which the proprietors were excluded at settlement and to which they have been or are about to be readmitted;

(e) settling mahals in respect of which an application has been made under the third proviso to section fifty-six;

(f) dealing with claims to hold land wholly or partially free from revenue as against the málguzárs;

(g) assessing lands gained by alluvion;

(h) ascertaining and recording village-cesses which are levied when this Act comes into force, but have not been recorded at the settlement.

Purposes for which officers may be invested with Settlement-officers' powers.

133. The Chief Commissioner may, during the currency of a settlement, invest any officer with the powers conferred on a Settlement-officer by sections forty, forty-one and forty-two; or,

with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, with any other of the powers which are by this Act conferred on a Settlement-officer; but not so as to enable him to enhance the amount of an assessment in force under section fifty-six.

Cognizance of, and penalty for, offence of injuring boundary-marks.

134. Any person wilfully erasing, removing or damaging a boundary-mark may be ordered by the Deputy Commissioner or by a Tahsíldár or Náib Tahsíldár empowered by the Chief Commissioner in this behalf to pay to the officer making the order, in addition to any fine to which such person would be liable under section 434 of the Indian Penal Code, such sum, not exceeding fifty rupees, as may in the opinion of such officer be necessary to defray the expense of restoring the same, and of rewarding the person (if any) who gave information of such erasure, removal or damage.

Procedure when person injuring cannot be found.

135. Whenever the person erasing, removing or damaging such mark cannot be discovered, or if for any other reason it is found impracticable to recover from him the sum which he has been ordered to pay, the mark shall be re-erected or repaired at the cost of the proprietors, mortgagees, or farmers of such one or more of the adjoining lands as the Deputy Commissioner thinks fit.

Partition of a mahál into two maháls.

136. Any málguzárs of a mahál who are not co-sharers with the other málguzárs of such mahál in any lands comprised in such mahál, except such lands as are under the law relating to partition for the time being in force indivisible, may apply to the Deputy Commissioner to make the lands held by them separately from such other málguzárs a separate mahál; and the Deputy Commissioner shall thereupon make such lands and the lands held separately by the remaining málguzárs separate maháls, and shall, with the previous sanction of the Commissioner, apportion between the two new maháls thus constituted the entire revenue assessed upon the original mahál.

CHAPTER XI.

VILLAGE-OFFICERS AND PATWÁRIS.

Power to make rules as to officers.

137. The Chief Commissioner may make rules regulating the appointment, remuneration, suspension and removal of lambardárs, sub-lambardárs and mukaddams:

Provided that, except with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, proprietors, other than málik-makbúzás, shall not be liable to pay, on account of the aggregate remuneration of lambardárs or sub-lambardárs and mukaddams, a sum exceeding five per cent. on the land-revenue which is assessed on their land, or which, when their land is free from revenue, would, in the judgment of the Deputy Commissioner, be assessed on their land if it were subject to assessment.

In framing rules for the appointment under this section of lambardárs and sub-lambardárs for any mahál, the Chief Commissioner shall have regard among other matters to local custom and hereditary claims, and to entries on the subject in the record-of-rights of such mahál.

In every village in which there are resident málguzárs, one of such málguzárs shall be the mukaddam.

Duties of lambardárs.

138. It shall be the duty of every lambardár and sub-lambardár—

(a) to collect and pay into the Government Treasury so much of the land-revenue as may under section seventy-one be payable through him, either solely or jointly with other lambardárs or sub-lambardárs;

(b) to collect and pay to the mukaddam, or into the Government Treasury, as the Deputy Commissioner may direct, all sums of money payable through him, either solely or jointly with other lambardárs or sub-lambardárs, by the proprietors whom he represents, on account of the remuneration of the mukaddam, patwáris or village-watchmen, or on account of any expenses which the mukaddam is authorized to recover from the lambardárs or sub-lambardárs of his village;

(c) to assist the mukaddam in obtaining all particulars which he is bound to enter in the annual village-papers, or to report under this Act.

Lambardárs may recover fees and other charges from proprietors.

139. Together with the land-revenue, lambardárs and sub-lambardárs may recover from the proprietors whom they respectively represent—

(a) any remuneration to which they are entitled as such; and

(b) the sum which, under section one hundred and thirty-eight, they are bound to pay to mukaddams:

Provided that no such recovery shall be made from málik-makbúzás paying a percentage which includes remuneration to mukaddams and lambardárs.

Deputy Commissioner may alter channel through which málik-makbúzá pays revenue.

140. On the application of any málik-makbúzá or other like holder of land, or of the lambardár or sub-lambardár through whom such málik-makbúzá or other holder of land pays the revenue assessed on his holding, the Deputy Commissioner may, for sufficient cause shown, order that such revenue be paid through any other lambardár or sub-lambardár, or that it be paid into the Government Treasury.

Effect of order for payment of revenue direct to Government.

When the Deputy Commissioner orders such payment to be made into the Government Treasury, such portion of the percentage fixed under section sixty-four as the Deputy Commissioner, subject to the control of the Chief Commissioner, may determine, shall be so paid, and the málik-makbúzá or other person shall pay the rest to the mukaddams on account of their fees and the other village-expenses.

Duties of mukaddams.

141. It shall be the duty of every mukaddam—

(a) to control and superintend the village-patwári and village-watchmen; to report their deaths or absence from duty; to maintain them in the possession of any lands appertaining to their office; to recover and pay to them any cash allowances to which they may be entitled; and to take such steps as may be necessary to compel them to perform their duties;

(b) to furnish reports regarding the state of his village, at such places and times as the Deputy Commissioner fixes in this behalf;

(c) to report and, if possible, to prevent encroachments on the public paths and roadways in his village;

(d) to preserve such stations and marks erected in his village by Government-surveyors as may be made over to his care;

(e) subject to any rules issued by the Chief Commissioner, to keep his village in good sanitary condition;

(f) to report violations of any rules which the Chief Commissioner may make for the preservation of underwood, forests and trees growing on the village-lands, and for securing to persons entitled to cut wood and enjoy other privileges in the waste-lands of the village the rights to which they are entitled;

(g) to collect, or aid in the collection of, all payments due to Government in his village;

(h) to report all births and deaths taking place in his village.

The Chief Commissioner may make rules—

(1) adding to the list of duties which a mukaddam is required to perform under this section; and

(2) regulating the liability of persons residing in any village for charges necessarily incurred by mukaddams in the performance of the duties specified in clause (e) in respect of such village, and for apportioning such charges among such persons; and

(3) determining the officers to whom reports under this section shall be made.

Liabilities imposed by law on landholders to attach to mukaddams.

142. When, by any enactment for the time being in force, any public duties are imposed on, or public liabilities are declared to attach to, landholders, their managers and agents and the like, such duties shall be deemed to be imposed on, and such liabilities shall be held to attach to, mukaddams appointed under this Act:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall discharge landholders, their managers or agents, or the like, from any liabilities imposed upon them by law.

Power of mukaddams to recover certain expenses incurred.

143. Every mukaddam may recover from the lambardárs or sub-lambardárs of the village to which he is appointed his own remuneration, together with any expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of his duties.

Chief Commissioner may make rules as to patwáris.

144. The Chief Commissioner may make rules—

(a) regulating the manner in which patwáris are to be selected; prescribing the conditions under which they may be appointed; and fixing the limits of their circles and the nature, mode and amount of their remuneration;

(b) prescribing the conditions under which substitutes may be appointed for persons having hereditary claims to the office of patwári, when such persons are unable to act;

(c) prescribing the fines which may be imposed on patwáris and their substitutes for neglect of their duty, and stating the circumstances under which they may be suspended or removed:

Provided that, except with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, no proprietor shall be compelled to pay as remuneration to patwáris a sum exceeding six per cent. on the revenue for the time being assessed on his land, or which, when his land is free from revenue, would, in the judgment of the Deputy Commissioner, be assessable on his land if it were liable to assessment.

Chief Commissioner may make rules for guidance of Deputy Commissioners in certain matters.

145. The Chief Commissioner may make rules for the guidance of Deputy Commissioners in dealing with cases where, at the time of making the settlement next before this Act comes into force, the maintenance of a patwári was made optional, and the persons settled with are unable to agree as to whether a patwári should be maintained, and for dealing with cases where no patwári is, under such option, maintained and the mukaddams or proprietors have made default in the performance of the duties of a patwári.

Such rules may empower the Deputy Commissioner, in the latter class of cases—

(a) to impose fines not exceeding fifty rupees on such mukaddams or proprietors, and therefrom to make provision for the temporary performance of the duties in respect of which they have made default;

(b) to appoint patwáris in the villages of such proprietors, either for the term of the settlement or for any shorter term, and to fix the remuneration of such patwáris.

Nothing in the provisions of section one hundred and forty-three shall apply to patwáris so appointed.

Chief Commissioner may define duties of patwáris.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th December, 1880, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 21 OF 1880.

A Bill to empower the Government of Madras to alter the local limits of the Coroner's Jurisdiction, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS under the Coroners' Act, 1871, the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Coroner of Madras are made co-extensive with the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Madras;

and whereas it is expedient to empower the Governor of Fort St. George in Council to alter the local limits of the said Coroner's jurisdiction;

and whereas it is also expedient to correct an error in section nine of Madras Act No. VIII of 1867 (an Act to incorporate the Police of the Town of Madras with the general Police of the Madras Presidency and for other purposes) as amended by the Code of Criminal Procedure; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Power to alter local limits of jurisdiction of Coroner of Madras.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Fort St. George Gazette, alter the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Coroner of Madras :

Provided that such limits shall not extend beyond the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Madras.

Sections 133 to 135 of Act X of 1872 to extend to area excluded from Coroner's jurisdiction.

2. When, in exercise of the power conferred by section one, any area within the local limits of the said ordinary original civil jurisdiction is excluded from the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction, sections 133 to 135 (both inclusive) of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall extend to such area while so excluded, and all functions assigned to a Magistrate by those sections shall be discharged by the Commissioner of Police.

New section substituted for section 9 of Madras Act VIII of 1867.

3. For section nine of the said Madras Act No. VIII of 1867, the following section shall be substituted :—

Law to govern Town Police.

"9. The Town Police shall be governed by all the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, contained in sections 89, 91 to 103 (both inclusive), 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 116, 117 (first part), 118, 119, 120, 123, 124, 125, 127, 128, 129, 131, 136, 139, 140, 141, 142, 144, 147, chapter XII, sections 159, 161, 163 to 170 (both inclusive), 174 to 185 (both inclusive), chapter XXVII (except section 385), sections 415 to 420 (both inclusive), 480, so far as they are applicable :

"Provided always, that the officer in charge of a Police-station shall not be required to bind over the prosecutor and witnesses as directed in section 123 of the said Code, if their immediate attendance can be procured without recognizances."

Act X of 1872, schedule V, in part repealed.

4. The portion of Schedule V of the Code of Criminal Procedure, under the heading "Acts of the Governor of Madras in Council," shall be read as if the letter and figure "s. 9" in the first column, and all the words and figures in the second and third columns opposite the said letter and figure, were omitted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER Act No. IV of 1871 (The Coroners' Act, 1871), the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Coroners in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay are made co-extensive with the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay, respectively, no power to alter them being conferred. In Madras, these limits comprise twenty-seven square miles and include twenty-three agricultural villages. This area having of late years, owing to the increase in the number of inquests to be held, become too large for one Coroner, it is proposed that the Governor in Council should be empowered to restrict the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction by excluding from them the non-urban portion which differs but little from the adjoining mufassal district. To give effect to this proposal, the present Bill has been prepared. It empowers the Governor in Council, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to alter the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction, as may be from time to time convenient, provided that these limits are never extended beyond the present ones.

2. In the event of the powers conferred by the Bill being exercised and the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction restricted, the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to enquiries by the Police into unnatural and sudden deaths will (section 2) extend to the tract excluded from the jurisdiction of the Coroner, and the Commissioner of Police will discharge the functions of the Magistrate under those provisions.

3. The present opportunity has been taken to correct an error (the result of an oversight) in section 9 of the Madras Police Act (Madras Act No. VIII of 1867) as amended by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

8. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, make rules to regulate or prohibit in any fairway in any of the seas adjacent to British India, the placing of fishing stakes, the casting or throwing of ballast, rubbish, or any other thing likely to give rise to a bank or shoal, or the doing of any other act which will, in his opinion, cause or be likely to cause obstruction or danger to navigation. Whoever is guilty of any act or omission in contravention of the rules made under section eight, may be tried for such offence in any district or Presidency-town in which he is found, and shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both. 40 & 41 Vic., c. 16, s. 8.

10. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent the exercise by the Government of any other powers possessed by it in this behalf. Saving of other powers possessed by Government.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to empower the Government to remove obstructions to navigation which may exist in fairways situate in seas adjacent to British India, and to prohibit the creation of such obstructions for the future. The advantages of having such a law have been impressed upon the Government by certain recent cases. In one of these a question has been raised as to the power of the Government to remove the fishing stakes which are annually placed during the fine season in the sea off the port of Bombay, and which, having recently been advanced into the approach to the harbour, are now a source of serious danger to vessels frequenting that port. In another case which related to the deposit of ballast by ship-masters, at the mouth of the Rangoon river, a practice which, if permitted, might cause serious impediment and danger to the navigation of the approaches to the port of Rangoon, the need for some further preventive powers than those which Government now possesses, has been made apparent.

There can be no doubt that it is extremely desirable that the powers of Government officers, and the procedure to be followed by them, in relation to matters of this nature, should be clearly defined, and as the Indian Statute-Book, as it now stands, does not deal adequately with the subject, the present Bill has been prepared. A precedent for such legislation will be found in the Imperial Statute 40 & 41 Vic., c. 16 (the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877). The Bill, while following generally the lines of the statute, goes beyond it in two material respects. The power to remove obstructions conferred by it is not confined, as in the statute, to the case of obstructions caused by wrecks, but extends also to fishing stakes, ballast and any other thing which may form an obstruction or danger to navigation. The other point in which the Bill goes beyond the statute is that, in addition to giving power to remove existing obstructions, it enables the Government to prevent the wilful creation of obstructions in the future. With this object the Governor General in Council is empowered (section 7) to make rules to regulate or prohibit in any fairway the placing of fishing stakes, the casting of ballast, or the doing of any other act which will, in his opinion, cause or be likely to cause danger or obstruction to navigation.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th December, 1880, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 23 OF 1880.

A Bill to amend Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (the Cess Act, 1880).

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (the Cess Act, 1880); It is hereby enacted as follows :— Preamble.

1. In the said Act, after section sixty-four, the following sections shall be inserted, and shall be deemed to have been so inserted on and from the date on which such Act came into force. Amendment of Bengal Act No. IX of 1880.

"64A. All sums due to the holder of any estate or tenure under the provisions of this chapter, in respect of any land held rent-free, may be recovered by such holder from any owner or holder of such rent-free land, or from any occupier of the same, by any means and any process by which the amount might be recovered if it were due on account of rent of a transferable tenure or holding, and subject to the same rules as to limitation : Holders of estates, &c., how to recover from holders of rent-free lands.

"Provided that, if any such objection as is mentioned in section 53, has been made before the Collector, no proceedings shall be commenced, and no proceedings which have been commenced shall be continued, for recovery of cess in respect of the lands which are the subject of such objection, until such objection shall have been disposed of by the Collector.

"64B. In every suit for the recovery of any such sum, the person to whom the sum is due may proceed at his option either against the owner or holder of the rent-free land in respect of which such amount is due, or against the occupier thereof; and any decree obtained in such suit against any occupier of such land shall have the same effect and be followed by the same consequences in respect of the execution of such decree against the owner or holder of such land, and in respect of the sale of such land in such execution, as if the suit had been brought and the decree given against such owner or holder of such land, but shall have effect against such occupier personally so long only as he remains in occupation of such land, and no longer." Owner, holder or occupier of rent-free lands may be sued. Decree against occupier tantamount to decree against owner.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

WHEN the Bill, which has since become Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (The Cess Act, 1880), was submitted, for the first time, by the Government of Bengal for the assent of the Governor General, His Excellency, though approving of the policy of the Bill, was unable to give his assent, as he was advised that two of its sections were ultra vires of the Bengal Legislative Council. Section 65 was ultra vires, inasmuch as it extended to suits the parties to which were not landholder and tenant, the special procedure which the provincial legislature is, by section 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure, permitted to prescribe only in suits between landholder and tenant; and section 66 also appeared to be ultra vires, as it was inconsistent with the same Code, in enacting that a decree might be executed against a person who was neither a party or privy.

Though, however, feeling compelled for these reasons to withhold his assent from the Bill in its then form, His Excellency intimated to the Government of Bengal that he would be willing to give his assent to the measure if it was re-enacted with the omission of the provisions to which exception had been taken, and further, that if the Lieutenant-Governor should think these provisions were indispensable, a Bill would be introduced into the Council of the Governor General incorporating them, and drawn so as to come in force simultaneously with the Bengal Bill when re-enacted.

In accordance with this intimation, the Government of Bengal re-submitted the Bill with the omission of the objectionable provisions, and His Excellency has given his assent to the measure as thus amended. But, as the Local Government has expressed at the same time a strong opinion that the omitted sections are essential to their scheme of legislation, the present Bill has been prepared in fulfilment of the promise made by His Excellency. It simply re-enacts the provisions to which exception was taken, and incorporates them in the Bengal Act, by inserting them retrospectively in that enactment from the date on which it became law.

A precedent for such legislation will be found in the Imperial Statute 40 & 41 Vic., c. 16 (the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877). The Bill, while following generally the lines of the statute, goes beyond it in two material respects. The power to remove obstructions conferred by it is not confined, as in the statute, to the case of obstructions caused by wrecks, but extends also to fishing stakes, ballast and any other thing which may form an obstruction or danger to navigation. The other point in which the Bill goes beyond the statute is that, in addition to giving power to remove existing obstructions, it enables the Government to prevent the wilful creation of obstructions in the future. With this object the Governor General in Council is empowered (section 7) to make rules to regulate or prohibit in any fairway the placing of fishing stakes, the casting of ballast, or the doing of any other act which will, in his opinion, cause or be likely to cause danger or obstruction to navigation.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th December, 1880, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 23 OF 1880.

A Bill to amend Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (the Cess Act, 1880).

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (the Cess Act, 1880); It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Amendment of Bengal Act No. IX of 1880.

1. In the said Act, after section sixty-four, the following sections shall be inserted, and shall be deemed to have been so inserted on and from the date on which such Act came into force.

Holders of estates, &c., how to recover from holders of rent-free lands.

"64A. All sums due to the holder of any estate or tenure under the provisions of this chapter, in respect of any land held rent-free, may be recovered by such holder from any owner or holder of such rent-free land, or from any occupier of the same, by any means and any process by which the amount might be recovered if it were due on account of rent of a transferable tenure or holding, and subject to the same rules as to limitation :

"Provided that, if any such objection as is mentioned in section 53, has been made before the Collector, no proceedings shall be commenced, and no proceedings which have been commenced shall be continued, for recovery of cess in respect of the lands which are the subject of such objection, until such objection shall have been disposed of by the Collector.

Decree against occupier tantamount to decree against owner.

"64B. In every suit for the recovery of any such sum, the person to whom the sum is due may proceed at his option either against the owner or holder of the rent-free land in respect of which such amount is due, or against the occupier thereof; and any decree obtained in such suit against any occupier of such land shall have the same effect and be followed by the same consequences in respect of the execution of such decree against the owner or holder of such land, and in respect of the sale of such land in such execution, as if the suit had been brought and the decree given against such owner or holder of such land, but shall have effect against such occupier personally so long only as he remains in occupation of such land, and no longer."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

WHEN the Bill, which has since become Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (The Cess Act, 1880), was submitted, for the first time, by the Government of Bengal for the assent of the Governor General, His Excellency, though approving of the policy of the Bill, was unable to give his assent, as he was advised that two of its sections were ultra vires of the Bengal Legislative Council. Section 65 was ultra vires, inasmuch as it extended to suits the parties to which were not landholder and tenant, the special procedure which the provincial legislature is, by section 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure, permitted to prescribe only in suits between landholder and tenant; and section 66 also appeared to be ultra vires, as it was inconsistent with the same Code, in enacting that a decree might be executed against a person who was neither a party or privy.

Though, however, feeling compelled for these reasons to withhold his assent from the Bill in its then form, His Excellency intimated to the Government of Bengal that he would be willing to give his assent to the measure if it was re-enacted with the omission of the provisions to which exception had been taken, and further, that if the Lieutenant-Governor should think these provisions were indispensable, a Bill would be introduced into the Council of the Governor General incorporating them, and drawn so as to come in force simultaneously with the Bengal Bill when re-enacted.

In accordance with this intimation, the Government of Bengal re-submitted the Bill with the omission of the objectionable provisions, and His Excellency has given his assent to the measure as thus amended. But, as the Local Government has expressed at the same time a strong opinion that the omitted sections are essential to their scheme of legislation, the present Bill has been prepared in fulfilment of the promise made by His Excellency. It simply re-enacts the provisions to which exception was taken, and incorporates them in the Bengal Act, by inserting them retrospectively in that enactment from the date on which it became law,

SCHEDULE.

(See section 1.)

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

Number and year of Act or Regulation.	Title.	Extent of repeal.
Act VII of 1865...	An Act to give effect to rules for the management and preservation of Government forests.	So much as has not been repealed.
Act VII of 1869...	An Act to give validity to certain rules relating to forests in British Burma.	The whole.
Act XIII of 1873	An Act to amend the law relating to timber floated down the rivers of British Burma.	So much as has not been repealed.
Regulation IX of 1874.	The Arakan Hill District Laws Regulation, 1874.	So far as it relates to Acts VII of 1865 and VII of 1869.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The necessity for placing forest-legislation in British Burma upon a satisfactory footing has been felt for a considerable time. The present state of the law is as follows:—

The Government Forests Act (Act No. VII of 1865) is in force, but it does not provide for all requirements. That Act gave power to make rules, having the force of law, for the management and preservation of the Government forests and for the control of the timber floated down rivers. Accordingly in August, 1865, rules for the administration of forests in British Burma were promulgated. These rules, though purporting to have been made under the Government Forest Act, were not covered by its provisions, and accordingly they were legalized by Act No. VII of 1869.

In 1873 it was deemed advisable to amend and consolidate the law relating to timber floated down the rivers of Burma. Accordingly the Burma Timber Act (No. XIII of 1873) was passed. This Act repealed Act No. VII of 1869 and the rules legalized by that Act as far as they related to duty on timber floated down the rivers of British Burma.

The rules of August, 1865, related only to a portion of the Government forests, as defined in the rules, and it became necessary to provide by another set of rules for the administration of the forests thus excluded. This was done by rules made under Act No. VII of 1865, which were promulgated in Burma in March, 1876, together with a notification defining the areas to which they were applicable.

Thus the administration of the Government forests in Burma and the management of the timber floated down its rivers is governed by three different enactments and two sets of rules having the force of law. Yet these enactments and rules leave several of the most important matters unprovided for, and hence it is necessary both to consolidate and to complete them.

Experience has shown that the only practical method to ensure the objects aimed at by forest-administration is to set apart and demarcate selected areas of Government forests, to liberate these areas as far as possible from rights of private persons, and to guard against the growth by prescription of fresh rights in forests thus set apart and demarcated.

Forests thus set apart and demarcated are called reserved forests, and the formation of such reserved forests in British Burma has proceeded steadily during the last five years. The formation of such reserved forests is preceded by a thorough and complete enquiry by a Settlement-officer into the rights and requirements of the people residing in and in the immediate vicinity of these areas. The guiding principle followed in this enquiry is, that such arrangements are made as will enable the people to provide for their requirements in the matter of forest-produce, either outside the reserved forests, or, under suitable rules, within their boundaries. And in the case of the tribes whose custom it is to carry on the shifting kind of cultivation by cutting and burning the forest which is called Toungya cultivation, defined areas are assigned to them where they may practice this kind of cultivation. Under these arrangements the formation of Government forest domains has been commenced, and their area aggregated, on 31st March last, 1,442 square miles.

The practical result of these proceedings is that the forests thus set apart and demarcated can be effectively protected and steadily improved, so that eventually a limited area will yield all the timber and other forest-produce required for home consumption and export, while the remainder can be thrown open for the use of the people and the extension of cultivation. The system here sketched enables Government to concentrate forest-conservancy upon limited areas, instead of attempting to enforce restrictions over the whole of the forests.

The procedure, however, hitherto followed in this respect in Burma, in some particulars, wants legal sanction, and hence the action of Government in setting apart reserved forests is not final, and may be called in question. The object of the present Bill is to legalize what has been done in this respect, and to lay down a procedure for the future.

3. The Indian Forest Act, which was passed in 1878, had the same object, and it must now be explained why it was not considered advisable to make the provisions of the Indian Forest Act applicable to Burma. One reason is that the procedure followed in the enquiry into, and the settlement of, forest-rights and in the demarcation of forests, as it has been developed by practical experience, is somewhat different from that prescribed by the Indian Forest Act. But this is a minor matter. The chief reason for special forest-legislation in Burma, consists in the provisions of the Burma Land and Revenue Act (Act No. II of 1876). Section 6 of that Act defines the rights in land subject to the second part of that Act, which are recognized by law, and clause (b) recognizes rights acquired under sections 27 and 28 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871. The rights thus recognized are "easements" in the ordinary English acceptation of that term, including the use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, but not any prescriptive right by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate, for his own profit, any part of the soil belonging to another, or, anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another.

The Indian Limitation Act of 1877 extended the definition of the term "easement" including in it all rights of the latter class. But it has been held that this did not affect the construction of the Burma Land and Revenue Act, and consequently the practical effect of section 6 of that Act is to deny the existence of all prescriptive rights of user of forest-produce in the forests of Burma.

But as a matter of fact there is no doubt that such rights existed in the Burma forests before the Burma Land and Revenue Act was passed, and their existence has been recognized in the enquiries which have preceded the demarcation of the existing reserved forests.

No forest-legislation for Burma could ignore these rights, and in framing the present Bill it was necessary to save them.

4. Several other important subjects have also been treated differently from the Indian Forest Act.

Thus the penalties for offences committed in reserved forests are all uniform in the Indian Forest Act, while in the present Bill it has been thought better to classify offences into two classes, and to assign to each class separate limits of punishment.

5. Again, as regards reserved forests which have already been demarcated it is proposed, having regard to the careful investigations made at the time they were reserved, that they should be placed by the direct operation of the Act in the position of reserved forests made under the Act, instead of leaving it to the local Government, as the Indian Forest Act does, to class them as such.

6. The provisions relating to village-forests differ from the corresponding provisions in the Indian Forest Act, in as far as they give power to constitute any forest which is at the disposal of Government, a village-forest, and not only such as have already been declared reserved forests.

7. A fundamental difference between the present Bill and the Indian Forest Act is in the chapter which deals with the protection of forests on Government lands not included in reserved or village-forests. The Indian Forest Act attempts to solve this question by authorizing the constitution of protected forests. These protected forests are intended to be defined areas in which the rights of Government and of private persons are enquired into and recorded.

In Burma, where a large portion (in many districts more than three-fourths of the area) is forest, this plan would be unnecessary. It would also be impracticable. Hence the present Bill only contemplates the formation of two classes of forests—reserved forests and village-forests. The object of the former class is to furnish timber and other useful produce for the consumption of the Province and for export, while the object of the village-forests is to ensure a permanent supply of pasture and of wood and bamboos to the villages to which such forests are assigned. And while the first step is the formation of the State forest domains, which are styled reserved forests, it is intended that the formation of village-forests shall be taken in hand gradually as the growth of population and the clearing of the forests for cultivation may render necessary the setting apart of a certain area for the use of villages.

Outside these two classes of forests the great object in Burma must be to facilitate the extension of cultivation as much as possible. Hence it would not be expedient in any way to impede or limit the extension of cultivation by the establishment of a third class analogous to the protected forests of the Indian Forest Act. What is required is, outside the reserved forests and village-forests, to give a certain protection to the teak tree and to a few other reserved kinds, and to realize revenue from the timber, bamboos and other forest-produce used for purposes of trade.

These provisions must be maintained until the demarcation of the State (reserved) and village-forests has been completed, and until the forests of these two classes have been brought to such a condition by efficient protection and steadily-continued works of improvement, that they are capable of furnishing the timber and forest-produce required for the agricultural population, for the Province generally, and for export.

This aim cannot be expected to be accomplished for many years to come. But as it is accomplished in one district after another, the restrictions imposed upon the use of the forests outside the State and village-forests may be abolished in such districts.

8. That chapter of the Indian Forest Act which authorizes Government to exercise control in certain cases, for the public good, over forests which are not the property of Government is not required in Burma, and has therefore been omitted.

9. The power to impose a duty on foreign timber (section 36) is taken from the Indian Forest Act, and the duty imposed by section 37 on timber produced in certain forests in our own territory is one which has been levied for the last thirty years.

10. In the concluding chapters, which relate to the control of timber in transit, to the collection of drift or stranded timber, to penalties, cattle trespass, forest officers and to miscellaneous matters, the Bill follows generally the Indian Forest Act.

Briefly, it may be said that the Bill now published is the Indian Forest Act of 1878, with such changes as were necessary to adapt it to the peculiar circumstances of British Burma.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th December, 1880, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 21 OF 1880.

A Bill to empower the Government of Madras to alter the local limits of the Coroner's Jurisdiction, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS under the Coroners' Act, 1871, the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Coroner of Madras are made co-extensive with the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Madras;

and whereas it is expedient to empower the Governor of Fort St. George in Council to alter the local limits of the said Coroner's jurisdiction;

and whereas it is also expedient to correct an error in section nine of Madras Act No. VIII of 1867 (an Act to incorporate the Police of the Town of Madras with the general Police of the Madras Presidency and for other purposes) as amended by the Code of Criminal Procedure; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Power to alter local limits of jurisdiction of Coroner of Madras.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Fort St. George Gazette, alter the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Coroner of Madras :

Provided that such limits shall not extend beyond the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Madras.

Sections 133 to 135 of Act X of 1872 to extend to area excluded from Coroner's jurisdiction.

2. When, in exercise of the power conferred by section one, any area within the local limits of the said ordinary original civil jurisdiction is excluded from the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction, sections 133 to 135 (both inclusive) of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall extend to such area while so excluded, and all functions assigned to a Magistrate by those sections shall be discharged by the Commissioner of Police.

New section substituted for section 9 of Madras Act VIII of 1867.

3. For section nine of the said Madras Act No. VIII of 1867, the following section shall be substituted :—

Law to govern Town Police.

"9. The Town Police shall be governed by all the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, contained in sections 89, 91 to 103 (both inclusive), 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 116, 117 (first part), 118, 119, 120, 123, 124, 125, 127, 128, 129, 131, 136, 139, 140, 141, 142, 144, 147, chapter XII, sections 159, 161, 163 to 170 (both inclusive), 174 to 185 (both inclusive), chapter XXVII (except section 385), sections 415 to 420 (both inclusive), 480, so far as they are applicable :

"Provided always, that the officer in charge of a Police-station shall not be required to bind over the prosecutor and witnesses as directed in section 123 of the said Code, if their immediate attendance can be procured without recognizances."

Act X of 1872, schedule V, in part repealed.

4. The portion of Schedule V of the Code of Criminal Procedure, under the heading "Acts of the Governor of Madras in Council," shall be read as if the letter and figure "s. 9" in the first column, and all the words and figures in the second and third columns opposite the said letter and figure, were omitted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER Act No. IV of 1871 (The Coroners' Act, 1871), the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Coroners in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay are made co-extensive with the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay, respectively, no power to alter them being conferred. In Madras, these limits comprise twenty-seven square miles and include twenty-three agricultural villages. This area having of late years, owing to the increase in the number of inquests to be held, become too large for one Coroner, it is proposed that the Governor in Council should be empowered to restrict the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction by excluding from them the non-urban portion which differs but little from the adjoining mufassal district. To give effect to this proposal, the present Bill has been prepared. It empowers the Governor in Council, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to alter the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction, as may be from time to time convenient, provided that these limits are never extended beyond the present ones.

2. In the event of the powers conferred by the Bill being exercised and the local limits of the Coroner's jurisdiction restricted, the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to enquiries by the Police into unnatural and sudden deaths will (section 2) extend to the tract excluded from the jurisdiction of the Coroner, and the Commissioner of Police will discharge the functions of the Magistrate under those provisions.

3. The present opportunity has been taken to correct an error (the result of an oversight) in section 9 of the Madras Police Act (Madras Act No. VIII of 1867) as amended by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

throwing of ballast, rubbish, or any other thing likely to give rise to a bank or shoal, or the doing of any other act which will, in his opinion, cause or be likely to cause obstruction or danger to navigation.

Penalty for breach of such rules.

9. Whoever is guilty of any act or omission in contravention of the rules made under section eight, may be tried for such offence in any district or Presidency-town in which he is found, and shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Saving of other powers possessed by Government.

40 & 41 Vic., c. 16, s. 8.

10. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent the exercise by the Government of any other powers possessed by it in this behalf.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to empower the Government to remove obstructions to navigation which may exist in fairways situate in seas adjacent to British India, and to prohibit the creation of such obstructions for the future. The advantages of having such a law have been impressed upon the Government by certain recent cases. In one of these a question has been raised as to the power of the Government to remove the fishing stakes which are annually placed during the fine season in the sea off the port of Bombay, and which, having recently been advanced into the approach to the harbour, are now a source of serious danger to vessels frequenting that port. In another case which related to the deposit of ballast by ship-masters, at the mouth of the Rangoon river, a practice which, if permitted, might cause serious impediment and danger to the navigation of the approaches to the port of Rangoon, the need for some further preventive powers than those which Government now possesses, has been made apparent.

There can be no doubt that it is extremely desirable that the powers of Government officers, and the procedure to be followed by them, in relation to matters of this nature, should be clearly defined, and as the Indian Statute-Book, as it now stands, does not deal adequately with the subject, the present Bill has been prepared. A precedent for such legislation will be found in the Imperial Statute 40 & 41 Vic., c. 16 (the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877). The Bill, while following generally the lines of the statute, goes beyond it in two material respects. The power to remove obstructions conferred by it is not confined, as in the statute, to the case of obstructions caused by wrecks, but extends also to fishing stakes, ballast and any other thing which may form an obstruction or danger to navigation. The other point in which the Bill goes beyond the statute is that, in addition to giving power to remove existing obstructions, it enables the Government to prevent the wilful creation of obstructions in the future. With this object the Governor General in Council is empowered (section 7) to make rules to regulate or prohibit in any fairway the placing of fishing stakes, the casting of ballast, or the doing of any other act which will, in his opinion, cause or be likely to cause danger or obstruction to navigation.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th December, 1880, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 23 OF 1880.

A Bill to amend Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (the Cess Act, 1880).

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (the Cess Act, 1880); It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Amendment of Bengal Act No. IX of 1880.

1. In the said Act, after section sixty-four, the following sections shall be inserted, and shall be deemed to have been so inserted on and from the date on which such Act came into force.

Holders of estates, &c., how to recover from holders of rent-free lands.

"64A. All sums due to the holder of any estate or tenure under the provisions of this chapter, in respect of any land held rent-free, may be recovered by such holder from any owner or holder of such rent-free land, or from any occupier of the same, by any means and any process by which the amount might be recovered if it were due on account of rent of a transferable tenure or holding, and subject to the same rules as to limitation :

"Provided that, if any such objection as is mentioned in section 53, has been made before the Collector, no proceedings shall be commenced, and no proceedings which have been commenced shall be continued, for recovery of cess in respect of the lands which are the subject of such objection, until such objection shall have been disposed of by the Collector.

Owner, holder or occupier of rent-free lands may be sued.

Decree against occupier tantamount to decree against owner.

"64B. In every suit for the recovery of any such sum, the person to whom the sum is due may proceed at his option either against the owner or holder of the rent-free land in respect of which such amount is due, or against the occupier thereof; and any decree obtained in such suit against any occupier of such land shall have the same effect and be followed by the same consequences in respect of the execution of such decree against the owner or holder of such land, and in respect of the sale of such land in such execution, as if the suit had been brought and the decree given against such owner or holder of such land, but shall have effect against such occupier personally so long only as he remains in occupation of such land, and no longer."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

WHEN the Bill, which has since become Bengal Act No. IX of 1880 (The Cess Act, 1880), was submitted, for the first time, by the Government of Bengal for the assent of the Governor General, His Excellency, though approving of the policy of the Bill, was unable to give his assent, as he was advised that two of its sections were ultra vires of the Bengal Legislative Council. Section 65 was ultra vires, inasmuch as it extended to suits the parties to which were not landholder and tenant, the special procedure which the provincial legislature is, by section 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure, permitted to prescribe only in suits between landholder and tenant; and section 66 also appeared to be ultra vires, as it was inconsistent with the same Code, in enacting that a decree might be executed against a person who was neither a party or privy.

Though, however, feeling compelled for these reasons to withhold his assent from the Bill in its then form, His Excellency intimated to the Government of Bengal that he would be willing to give his assent to the measure if it was re-enacted with the omission of the provisions to which exception had been taken, and further, that if the Lieutenant-Governor should think these provisions were indispensable, a Bill would be introduced into the Council of the Governor General incorporating them, and drawn so as to come in force simultaneously with the Bengal Bill when re-enacted.

In accordance with this intimation, the Government of Bengal re-submitted the Bill with the omission of the objectionable provisions, and His Excellency has given his assent to the measure as thus amended. But, as the Local Government has expressed at the same time a strong opinion that the omitted sections are essential to their scheme of legislation, the present Bill has been prepared in fulfilment of the promise made by His Excellency. It simply re-enacts the provisions to which exception was taken, and incorporates them in the Bengal Act, by inserting them retrospectively in that enactment from the date on which it became law.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

Number and year of Act or Regulation.	Title.	Extent of repeal.
Act VII of 1865 ...	An Act to give effect to rules for the management and preservation of Government forests.	So much as has not been repealed.
Act VII of 1869...	An Act to give validity to certain rules relating to forests in British Burma.	The whole.
Act XIII of 1873	An Act to amend the law relating to timber floated down the rivers of British Burma.	So much as has not been repealed.
Regulation IX of 1874.	The Arakan Hill District Laws Regulation, 1874.	So far as it relates to Acts VII of 1865 and VII of 1869.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The necessity for placing forest-legislation in British Burma upon a satisfactory footing has been felt for a considerable time. The present state of the law is as follows:—

The Government Forests Act (Act No. VII of 1865) is in force, but it does not provide for all requirements. That Act gave power to make rules, having the force of law, for the management and preservation of the Government forests and for the control of the timber floated down rivers. Accordingly in August, 1865, rules for the administration of forests in British Burma were promulgated. These rules, though purporting to have been made under the Government Forest Act, were not covered by its provisions, and accordingly they were legalized by Act No. VII of 1869.

In 1873 it was deemed advisable to amend and consolidate the law relating to timber floated down the rivers of Burma. Accordingly the Burma Timber Act (No. XIII of 1873) was passed. This Act repealed Act No. VII of 1869 and the rules legalized by that Act as far as they related to duty on timber floated down the rivers of British Burma.

The rules of August, 1865, related only to a portion of the Government forests, as defined in the rules, and it became necessary to provide by another set of rules for the administration of the forests thus excluded. This was done by rules made under Act No. VII of 1865, which were promulgated in Burma in March, 1876, together with a notification defining the areas to which they were applicable.

Thus the administration of the Government forests in Burma and the management of the timber floated down its rivers is governed by three different enactments and two sets of rules having the force of law. Yet these enactments and rules leave several of the most important matters unprovided for, and hence it is necessary both to consolidate and to complete them.

Experience has shown that the only practical method to ensure the objects aimed at by forest-administration is to set apart and demarcate selected areas of Government forests, to liberate these areas as far as possible from rights of private persons, and to guard against the growth by prescription of fresh rights in forests thus set apart and demarcated.

Forests thus set apart and demarcated are called reserved forests, and the formation of such reserved forests in British Burma has proceeded steadily during the last five years. The formation of such reserved forests is preceded by a thorough and complete enquiry by a settlement-officer into the rights and requirements of the people residing in and in the immediate vicinity of these areas. The guiding principle followed in this enquiry is that such arrangements are made as will enable the people to provide for their requirements in the matter of forest-produce, either outside the reserved forests, or, under suitable rules, within their boundaries. And in the case of the tribes whose custom it is to carry on the shifting kind of cultivation by cutting and burning the forest which is called toungya cultivation, defined areas are assigned to them where they may practise this kind of cultivation. Under these arrangements the formation of Government forest domains has been commenced, and their area aggregated, on 31st March last, 1,442 square miles.

The practical result of these proceedings is that the forests thus set apart and demarcated can be effectively protected and steadily improved, so that eventually a limited area will yield all the timber and other forest-produce required for home consumption and export, while the remainder can be thrown open for the use of the people and the extension of cultivation. The system here sketched enables Government to concentrate forest-conservancy upon limited areas, instead of attempting to enforce restrictions over the whole of the forests.

The procedure, however, hitherto followed in this respect in Burma, in some particulars, wants legal sanction, and hence the action of Government in setting apart reserved forests is not final, and may be called in question. The object of the present Bill is to legalize what has been done in this respect, and to lay down a procedure for the future.

3. The Indian Forest Act, which was passed in 1878, had the same object, and it must now be explained why it was not considered advisable to make the provisions of the Indian Forest Act applicable to Burma. One reason is that the procedure followed in the enquiry into, and the settlement of, forest-rights and in the demarcation of forests, as it has been developed by practical experience, is somewhat different from that prescribed by the Indian Forest Act. But this is a minor matter. The chief reason for special forest-legislation in Burma, consists in the provisions of the Burma Land and Revenue Act (Act No. II of 1876). Section 6 of that Act defines the rights in land subject to the second part of that Act, which are recognized by law, and clause (b) recognizes rights acquired under sections 27 and 28 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871. The rights thus recognized are "easements" in the ordinary English acceptation of that term, including the use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, but not any prescriptive right by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate, for his own profit, any part of the soil belonging to another, or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another.

The Indian Limitation Act of 1877 extended the definition of the term "easement" including in it all rights of the latter class. But it has been held that this did not affect the construction of the Burma Land and Revenue Act, and consequently the practical effect of section 6 of that Act is to deny the existence of all prescriptive rights of user of forest-produce in the forests of Burma.

But as a matter of fact there is no doubt that such rights existed in the Burma forests before the Burma Land and Revenue Act was passed, and their existence has been recognized in the enquiries which have preceded the demarcation of the existing reserved forests.

No forest-legislation for Burma could ignore these rights, and in framing the present Bill it was necessary to save them.

4. Several other important subjects have also been treated differently from the Indian Forest Act.

Thus the penalties for offences committed in reserved forests are all uniform in the Indian Forest Act, while in the present Bill it has been thought better to classify offences into two classes, and to assign to each class separate limits of punishment.

5. Again, as regards reserved forests which have already been demarcated, it is proposed, having regard to the careful investigations made at the time they were reserved, that they should be placed by the direct operation of the Act in the position of reserved forests made under the Act, instead of leaving it to the local Government, as the Indian Forest Act does, to class them as such.

6. The provisions relating to village-forests differ from the corresponding provisions in the Indian Forest Act, in as far as they give power to constitute any forest which is at the disposal of Government, a village-forest, and not only such as have already been declared reserved forests.

7. A fundamental difference between the present Bill and the Indian Forest Act is in the chapter which deals with the protection of forests on Government lands not included in reserved or village-forests. The Indian Forest Act attempts to solve this question by authorizing the constitution of protected forests. These protected forests are intended to be defined areas in which the rights of Government and of private persons are enquired into and recorded.

In Burma, where a large portion (in many districts more than three-fourths of the area) is forest, this plan would be unnecessary. It would also be impracticable. Hence the present Bill only contemplates the formation of two classes of forests—reserved forests and village-forests. The object of the former class is to furnish timber and other useful produce for the consumption of the Province and for export, while the object of the village-forests is to ensure a permanent supply of pasture and of wood and bamboos to the villages to which such forests are assigned. And while the first step is the formation of the State forest domains, which are styled reserved forests, it is intended that the formation of village-forests shall be taken in hand gradually as the growth of population and the clearing of the forests for cultivation may render necessary the setting apart of a certain area for the use of villages.

Outside these two classes of forests the great object in Burma must be to facilitate the extension of cultivation as much as possible. Hence it would not be expedient in any way to impede or limit the extension of cultivation by the establishment of a third class analogous to the protected forests of the Indian Forest Act. What is required is, outside the reserved forests and village-forests, to give a certain protection to the teak tree and to a few other reserved kinds, and to realize revenue from the timber, bamboos and other forest-produce used for purposes of trade.

These provisions must be maintained until the demarcation of the State (reserved) and village-forests has been completed, and until the forests of these two classes have been brought to such a condition by efficient protection and steadily-continued works of improvement, that they are capable of furnishing the timber and forest-produce required for the agricultural population, for the Province generally, and for export.

This aim cannot be expected to be accomplished for many years to come. But as it is accomplished in one district after another, the restrictions imposed upon the use of the forests outside the State and village-forests may be abolished in such districts.

8. That chapter of the Indian Forest Act which authorizes Government to exercise control in certain cases, for the public good, over forests which are not the property of Government is not required in Burma, and has therefore been omitted.

9. The power to impose a duty on foreign timber (section 36) is taken from the Indian Forest Act, and the duty imposed by section 37 on timber produced in certain forests in our own territory is one which has been levied for the last thirty years.

10. In the concluding chapters, which relate to the control of timber in transit, to the collection of drift or stranded timber, to penalties, cattle trespass, forest officers and to miscellaneous matters, the Bill follows generally the Indian Forest Act.

Briefly, it may be said that the Bill now published is the Indian Forest Act of 1878, with such changes as were necessary to adapt it to the peculiar circumstances of British Burma.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide for the punishment of certain petty offences when committed within the limits of Fort William. At present the Garrison Quarter-master of the Fort is in the habit of punishing camp-followers and other Natives connected with the Fort who are guilty of certain offences against the garrison rules; but the jurisdiction of this officer, though it has been long exercised, has recently been called in question. As it is necessary, on sanitary grounds and for the maintenance of order, that there should be some officer within the Fort legally empowered to punish persons guilty of acts or omissions of the nature of those now punished by the Garrison Quarter-master, the present Bill has been prepared. It is based on a draft submitted by the Government of Bengal, and comprises two main provisions: first, it empowers the Local Government to lay down rules with light penalties attached in respect of certain matters which correspond generally with the matters to which the present garrison rules relate; secondly, it provides for the appointment of a commissioned officer (to be called the Fort Magistrate) with power to try persons guilty of breaches of these rules. The other provisions of the Bill are subsidiary to these. Those that appear to call for notice here are section 7, under which the present jurisdiction of the Presidency Magistrates is saved, and section 9, which validates all punishments which may have been heretofore inflicted by the Garrison Quarter-master. Lastly, the Bill exempts from its operation all persons subject to military law as it is thought that such persons can be more fittingly punished under such law.

2. We propose, in accordance with the opinion now expressed by the Government of Bengal, to do away with the distinction between first and second class petroleum introduced by the Bengal Committee. This distinction appears to us unnecessary, and its abolition will much simplify the measure by reducing the classes of petroleum to be dealt with to two, as in England, namely, dangerous petroleum and ordinary petroleum.

3. The flashing point of dangerous petroleum, as originally fixed in accordance with the recommendation of the Bengal Committee at 83° F. by Abel's test, has been objected to in many quarters as unnecessarily and inconveniently high. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal now proposes to reduce it to 78°; and on fully considering the papers submitted to us, we are prepared to reduce it even lower. There can be no doubt that the circumstance that the temperature of the air in most parts of India is throughout a great portion of the year higher than that which prevails in England, would, all other things being equal, make a petroleum flashing at a temperature between 70° and 80° F. more dangerous here than in England; but against this must be set off the greater openness and airiness of Indian buildings and the comparative absence of carpets, curtains and other such articles likely to catch fire; and, though at times serious accidents have occurred in this country, it can hardly be said that there is evidence to show that the danger is so serious as to warrant our extending the severe restrictions which the Bill imposes on dangerous petroleum to any petroleum flashing above the point, which has, after full consideration, been fixed upon in England and which has hitherto been adopted in Bengal. We have accordingly fixed the flashing point of dangerous petroleum at 73° F. by Abel's test equal to 100° F. by the old test.

4. We have made some other amendments in the Bill, with a view to relaxing in certain particulars the restrictions it imposes; thus, in order to avoid the delay, to which ships bringing petroleum to our ports might have been subjected if the samples furnished had to be tested before the petroleum was landed, we have altered the wording of the Bill so as to allow of the petroleum being landed directly the samples are delivered. We think that the control which the Bill gives over the petroleum when landed will be amply sufficient to secure the object in view.

5. Again, we have confined the provision of the Bill which requires petroleum to be kept in indelibly marked vessels, to dangerous petroleum, and we have reduced the maximum penalty for illegally importing, possessing or transporting petroleum from three months' imprisonment and one thousand rupees fine, to one month's imprisonment and five hundred rupees fine.

6. The power given by the Bill to extend the Act to other inflammable substances appears to be unnecessarily large, and we have therefore confined it to cases in which those substances are fluid.

7. The only other alterations we have made which are of sufficient importance to call for notice here are the insertion of a provision in section 7 of the Bill as now amended, empowering the Government to fix ports at which only petroleum may be imported, the addition of a clause to section 12 entitling a dealer, whose petroleum is tested under the Act, to a copy of the certificate of the result of the testing, free of charge, the insertion in section 16 of words providing that the tins or other vessels in which confiscated petroleum is contained may be confiscated with it, and the addition of a provision in section 18 requiring all rules made under the Act to be published for a month before they take effect.

8. The Bill, with its Statement of Objects and Reasons, has been published in English, in the local official Gazettes, except those of the Central Provinces and Assam. Its publication in the vernacular Gazettes has been reported by the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Chief Commissioner of Mysore. It has met with considerable opposition on account of its stringency, but, if the important mitigations of its provisions which we now recommend are approved by the Council, we think it may safely be passed without being again re-published. The measure having been now before the public for six months, it can hardly be said that timely notice of it has not been given to all concerned; but in order to guard against the possibility of hardship to holders or consignees of dangerous petroleum, we propose that it should not come into force till the 1st of July.

Local extent. The provisions of this Act relating to dangerous petroleum, and the importation of petroleum, extend to the whole of British India. The rest of this Act extends only to such local areas as the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, direct.

Repeal of enactments. 2. The Indian Ports Act, 1875, section thirty-seven, and Bengal Act No. III of 1865 (to make better provision for the prevention of injury from fire in Ports, and to provide for the safe keeping of Inflammable Oils in Ports and places within the Provinces under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal) are hereby repealed.

Interpretation-clause. 3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 3, with additions from Committee's report. "Petroleum." "Petroleum" includes also the liquids commonly known by the names of rock oil, Rangoon oil, Burma oil, kerosine, paraffine oil, mineral oil, petroline, gasoline, benzol, benzoline, benzine and any inflammable liquid that is made from petroleum, coal, schist, shale, peat or any other bituminous substance, or from any products of petroleum, Committee's recommendations, para. 3. but it does not include any oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes, and having its flashing point at or above two hundred and fifty degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer.

Committee's recommendations, para. 4. Explanation.—The flashing point of petroleum means the lowest temperature at which the petroleum yields a vapour which will furnish a momentary flash or flame when tested with the apparatus and in the manner described in the Schedule hereto annexed.

"Dangerous petroleum." "Dangerous petroleum" means petroleum having its flashing point below seventy-three degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer:

"Import." "Import" means to bring into British India by sea or land:

and "importation" means the bringing into British India as aforesaid.

"Transport." "Transport" means to remove from one place to another within British India:

Dangerous Petroleum.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities exceeding 40 gallons. 4. No quantity of dangerous petroleum exceeding forty gallons shall be imported or transported, or kept by any one person or on the same premises, except under, and in accordance with the conditions of, a license from the Local Government granted as next hereinafter provided.

Application for license to import, transport or possess such petroleum. Every application for such a license shall be in writing, and shall declare—

(a) the quantity of such petroleum which it is desired to import, transport or possess, as the case may be;

(b) the purpose for which the applicant believes that such petroleum will be used; and

(c) that petroleum other than dangerous petroleum cannot be used for such purpose.

Power to grant license. If the Local Government sees reason to believe that such petroleum will be used for such purpose, and that no petroleum other than dangerous petroleum can be used for such purpose, it may grant such license for the importation, transport or possession (as the case may be) of such petroleum, absolutely or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities not exceeding 40 gallons. 5. No quantity of dangerous petroleum equal to or less than forty gallons shall be kept or transported without a license:

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply in any case when the quantity of such petroleum kept by any one person or on the same premises, or transported, does not exceed three gallons, and such petroleum is placed in separate glass, earthenware or metal vessels, each of which contains not more than a pint and is securely stopped. 34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 7.

Vessels containing dangerous petroleum to be marked. 6. All dangerous petroleum— 34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 6.

(a) which is kept at any place after seven days from the date on which it is imported, or shall be contained in vessels which shall bear an indelible mark or a label in conspicuous characters, stating the nature of the contents thereof. Cf. Act I of 1878, s. 9.

(b) which is transported, or

(c) which is sold or exposed for sale,

THE SCHEDULE.

Specification explanatory of the Test Apparatus.

Committee's recommendations, para. 5, and 42 & 43 Vic., c. 47.

The following is a description of the details of the apparatus:—

The oil-cup consists of a cylindrical vessel 2″ diameter, $2\frac{2}{10}$″ height (internal), with outward projecting rim $\frac{5}{10}$″ wide, $\frac{3}{8}$″ from the top and $1\frac{1}{8}$″ from the bottom of the cup. It is made of gun metal or brass (17 B. W. G.), tinned inside. A bracket, consisting of a short stout piece of wire, bent upwards and terminating in a point, is fixed to the inside of the cup to serve as a gauge. The distance of the point from the bottom of the cup is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover made of brass (22 B. W. G.) which carries the thermometer and test lamp. The latter is suspended from two supports from the side by means of trunnions, upon which it may be made to oscillate: it is provided with a spout the mouth of which is $\frac{1}{10}$″ in diameter. The socket which is to hold the thermometer is fixed at such an angle, and its length is so adjusted that the bulb of the thermometer, when inserted to its full depth, shall be $1\frac{1}{2}$″ below the centre of the lid.

The cover is provided with three square holes, one in the centre $\frac{6}{10}$″ by $\frac{4}{10}$″, and two smaller ones, $\frac{3}{10}$″ by $\frac{2}{10}$″, close to the sides and opposite each other. These three holes may be closed and uncovered by means of a slide moving in grooves, and having perforations corresponding to those on the lid.

In moving the slide so as to uncover the holes, the oscillating lamp is caught by a pin fixed in the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. Upon the slide being pushed back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position.

Upon the cover, in front of, and in line with, the mouth of the lamp, is fixed a white bead the dimensions of which represent the size of the test flame to be used.

The bath or heated vessel consists of two flat-bottomed copper cylinders (24 B. W. G.), an inner one of 3″ diameter and $2\frac{1}{2}$″ height, and an outer one of $5\frac{1}{2}$″ diameter and $5\frac{3}{4}$″ height; they are soldered to a circular copper plate (20 B. W. G.) perforated in the centre, which forms the top of the bath, in such a manner as to enclose the space between the two cylinders, but leaving access to the inner cylinder. The top of the bath projects both outwards and inwards about $\frac{3}{8}$″, that is, its diameter is about $\frac{3}{8}$″ greater than that of the body of the bath, while the diameter of the circular opening in the centre is about the same amount less than that of the inner copper cylinder. To the inner projection of the top is fastened by six small screws, a flat ring of ebonite, the screws being sunk below the surface of the ebonite to avoid metallic contact between the bath and the oil cup. The exact distance between the sides and bottom of the bath of the oil lamp is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. A split socket similar to that on the cover of the oil cup, but set at a right angle, allows a thermometer to be inserted into the space between the two cylinders. The bath is further provided with a funnel, an overflow pipe, and two loop handles.

The bath rests upon a cast-iron tripod stand, to the ring of which is attached a copper cylinder or jacket (24 B. W. G.), flanged at the top, and of such dimensions that the bath, while firmly resting on the iron ring, just touches with its projecting top the inward-turned flange. The diameter of this outer jacket is $6\frac{1}{2}$″. One of the three legs of the stand serves as support for the spirit lamp, attached to it by means of a small swing bracket. The distance of the wick holder from the bottom of the bath is 1″.

Two thermometers are provided with the apparatus, the one for ascertaining the temperature of the bath, the other for determining the flashing point. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the water has a long bulb and a space at the top. Its range is from about 90° to 190° Fahrenheit. The scale (in degrees of Fahrenheit) is marked on an ivory back fastened to the tube in the usual way; it is fitted with a metal collar fitting the socket, and the part of the tube below the scale should have a length of about $3\frac{1}{2}$″ measured from the lower end of the scale to the end of the bulb. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the oil is fitted with collar and ivory scale in a similar manner to the one described. It has a round bulb, a space at the top, and ranges from about 55° F. to 150° F.; it measures from end of ivory back to bulb $2\frac{1}{4}$″.

NOTE.—A model apparatus is deposited at the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government at Calcutta.

Directions for applying the Test.

1. The test apparatus is to be placed for use in a position where it is not exposed to currents of air or draughts.

2. The heating vessel or water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the spout of the vessel. The temperature of the water at the commencement of the test is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance either by mixing hot and cold water in the bath, or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or by heating the water with the spirit lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

If the water has been heated too highly, it is easily reduced to 130° by pouring in cold water little by little (to replace a portion of the warm water) until the thermometer gives the proper reading.

When a test has been completed, this water-bath is again raised to 130° by placing the lamp underneath, and the result is readily obtained while the petroleum cup is being emptied, cooled, and refilled with a fresh sample to be tested. The lamp is then turned on its swivel from under the apparatus, and the next test is proceeded with.

3. The test lamp is prepared for use by fitting it with a piece of flat plaited candlewick, and filling it with colza or rape oil up to the lower edge of the opening of the spout or wick tube. The lamp is trimmed so that when lighted it gives a flame of about 0·15 of an inch diameter, and this size of flame which is represented by the projecting white bead on the cover of the oil cup is readily maintained by simple manipulation from time to time with a small wire trimmer.

When gas is available it may be conveniently used in place of the little oil lamp, and for this purpose a test flame arrangement for use with gas may be substituted for the lamp.

4. The bath having been raised to the proper temperature, the oil to be tested is introduced into the petroleum cup, being poured in slowly until the level of the liquid just reaches the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. In warm weather the temperature of the room in which the samples to be tested have been kept should be observed in the first instance, and if it exceeds 65°, the samples to be tested should be cooled down (to about 60°) by immersing the bottle containing them in cold water, or by any other convenient method. The lid of the cup, with the slide closed, is then put on, and the cup is put into the bath or heating vessel. The thermometer in the lid of the cup has been adjusted so as to have its bulb just immersed in the liquid, and its position is not under any circumstances to be altered. When the cup has been placed in the proper position, the scale of the thermometer faces the operator.

5. The test lamp is then placed in position upon the lid of the cup, the lead line or pendulum,* which has been fixed in a convenient position in front of the operator, is set in motion, and the rise of the thermometer in the petroleum cup is watched. When the temperature has reached about 66°, the operation of testing is to be commenced, the test flame being applied once for every rise of one degree in the following manner:—

The slide is slowly drawn open while the pendulum performs three oscillations, and is closed during the fourth oscillation.

NOTE.—If it is desired to employ the test apparatus to determine the flashing points of oils of very low volatility, the mode of proceeding is to be modified as follows:—

The air chamber which surrounds the cup is filled with cold water, to a depth of 1½ inches, and the heating vessel or water-bath is filled as usual, but also with cold water. The lamp is then placed under the apparatus and kept there during the entire operation. If a very heavy oil is being dealt with, the operation may be commenced with water previously heated to 120°, instead of with cold water.

Secy. to the Govt of India.

* This pendulum is two (2) feet in length from the point of suspension to the centre of gravity of the weight.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

Number and year of Act or Regulation.	Title.	Extent of repeal.
Act VII of 1865...	An Act to give effect to rules for the management and preservation of Government forests.	So much as has not been repealed.
Act VII of 1869...	An Act to give validity to certain rules relating to forests in British Burma.	The whole.
Act XIII of 1873	An Act to amend the law relating to timber floated down the rivers of British Burma.	So much as has not been repealed.
Regulation IX of 1874.	The Arakan Hill District Laws Regulation, 1874.	So far as it relates to Acts VII of 1865 and VII of 1869.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The necessity for placing forest-legislation in British Burma upon a satisfactory footing has been felt for a considerable time. The present state of the law is as follows:—

The Government Forests Act (Act No. VII of 1865) is in force, but it does not provide for all requirements. That Act gave power to make rules, having the force of law, for the management and preservation of the Government forests and for the control of the timber floated down rivers. Accordingly in August, 1865, rules for the administration of forests in British Burma were promulgated. These rules, though purporting to have been made under the Government Forest Act, were not covered by its provisions, and accordingly they were legalized by Act No. VII of 1869.

In 1873 it was deemed advisable to amend and consolidate the law relating to timber floated down the rivers of Burma. Accordingly the Burma Timber Act (No. XIII of 1873) was passed. This Act repealed Act No. VII of 1869 and the rules legalized by that Act as far as they related to duty on timber floated down the rivers of British Burma.

The rules of August, 1865, related only to a portion of the Government forests, as defined in the rules, and it became necessary to provide by another set of rules for the administration of the forests thus excluded. This was done by rules made under Act No. VII of 1865, which were promulgated in Burma in March, 1876, together with a notification defining the areas to which they were applicable.

Thus the administration of the Government forests in Burma and the management of the timber floated down its rivers is governed by three different enactments and two sets of rules having the force of law. Yet these enactments and rules leave several of the most important matters unprovided for, and hence it is necessary both to consolidate and to complete them.

Experience has shown that the only practical method to ensure the objects aimed at by forest-administration is to set apart and demarcate selected areas of Government forests, to liberate these areas as far as possible from rights of private persons, and to guard against the growth by prescription of fresh rights in forests thus set apart and demarcated.

Forests thus set apart and demarcated are called reserved forests, and the formation of such reserved forests in British Burma has proceeded steadily during the last five years. The formation of such reserved forests is preceded by a thorough and complete enquiry by a settlement-officer into the rights and requirements of the people residing in and in the immediate vicinity of these areas. The guiding principle followed in this enquiry is that such arrangements are made as will enable the people to provide for their requirements in the matter of forest-produce, either outside the reserved forests, or, under suitable rules, within their boundaries. And in the case of the tribes whose custom it is to carry on the shifting kind of cultivation by cutting and burning the forest which is called toungya cultivation, defined areas are assigned to them where they may practise this kind of cultivation. Under these arrangements the formation of Government forest domains has been commenced, and their area aggregated, on 31st March last, 1,442 square miles.

The practical result of these proceedings is that the forests thus set apart and demarcated can be effectively protected and steadily improved, so that eventually a limited area will yield all the timber and other forest-produce required for home consumption and export, while the remainder can be thrown open for the use of the people and the extension of cultivation. The system here sketched enables Government to concentrate forest-conservancy upon limited areas, instead of attempting to enforce restrictions over the whole of the forests.

The procedure, however, hitherto followed in this respect in Burma, in some particulars, wants legal sanction, and hence the action of Government in setting apart reserved forests is not final, and may be called in question. The object of the present Bill is to legalize what has been done in this respect, and to lay down a procedure for the future.

3. The Indian Forest Act, which was passed in 1878, had the same object, and it must now be explained why it was not considered advisable to make the provisions of the Indian Forest Act applicable to Burma. One reason is that the procedure followed in the enquiry into, and the settlement of, forest-rights and in the demarcation of forests, as it has been developed by practical experience, is somewhat different from that prescribed by the Indian Forest Act. But this is a minor matter. The chief reason for special forest-legislation in Burma, consists in the provisions of the Burma Land and Revenue Act (Act No. II of 1876). Section 6 of that Act defines the rights in land subject to the second part of that Act, which are recognized by law, and clause (b) recognizes rights acquired under sections 27 and 28 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871. The rights thus recognized are "easements" in the ordinary English acceptation of that term, including the use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, but not any prescriptive right by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate, for his own profit, any part of the soil belonging to another, or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another.

The Indian Limitation Act of 1877 extended the definition of the term "easement" including in it all rights of the latter class. But it has been held that this did not affect the construction of the Burma Land and Revenue Act, and consequently the practical effect of section 6 of that Act is to deny the existence of all prescriptive rights of user of forest-produce in the forests of Burma.

But as a matter of fact there is no doubt that such rights existed in the Burma forests before the Burma Land and Revenue Act was passed, and their existence has been recognized in the enquiries which have preceded the demarcation of the existing reserved forests.

No forest-legislation for Burma could ignore these rights, and in framing the present Bill it was necessary to save them.

4. Several other important subjects have also been treated differently from the Indian Forest Act.

Thus the penalties for offences committed in reserved forests are all uniform in the Indian Forest Act, while in the present Bill it has been thought better to classify offences into two classes, and to assign to each class separate limits of punishment.

5. Again, as regards reserved forests which have already been demarcated, it is proposed, having regard to the careful investigations made at the time they were reserved, that they should be placed by the direct operation of the Act in the position of reserved forests made under the Act, instead of leaving it to the local Government, as the Indian Forest Act does, to class them as such.

6. The provisions relating to village-forests differ from the corresponding provisions in the Indian Forest Act, in as far as they give power to constitute any forest which is at the disposal of Government, a village-forest, and not only such as have already been declared reserved forests.

7. A fundamental difference between the present Bill and the Indian Forest Act is in the chapter which deals with the protection of forests on Government lands not included in reserved or village-forests. The Indian Forest Act attempts to solve this question by authorizing the constitution of protected forests. These protected forests are intended to be defined areas in which the rights of Government and of private persons are enquired into and recorded.

In Burma, where a large portion (in many districts more than three-fourths of the area) is forest, this plan would be unnecessary. It would also be impracticable. Hence the present Bill only contemplates the formation of two classes of forests—reserved forests and village-forests. The object of the former class is to furnish timber and other useful produce for the consumption of the Province and for export, while the object of the village-forests is to ensure a permanent supply of pasture and of wood and bamboos to the villages to which such forests are assigned. And while the first step is the formation of the State forest domains, which are styled reserved forests, it is intended that the formation of village-forests shall be taken in hand gradually as the growth of population and the clearing of the forests for cultivation may render necessary the setting apart of a certain area for the use of villages.

Outside these two classes of forests the great object in Burma must be to facilitate the extension of cultivation as much as possible. Hence it would not be expedient in any way to impede or limit the extension of cultivation by the establishment of a third class analogous to the protected forests of the Indian Forest Act. What is required is, outside the reserved forests and village-forests, to give a certain protection to the teak tree and to a few other reserved kinds, and to realize revenue from the timber, bamboos and other forest-produce used for purposes of trade.

These provisions must be maintained until the demarcation of the State (reserved) and village-forests has been completed, and until the forests of these two classes have been brought to such a condition by efficient protection and steadily-continued works of improvement, that they are capable of furnishing the timber and forest-produce required for the agricultural population, for the Province generally, and for export.

This aim cannot be expected to be accomplished for many years to come. But as it is accomplished in one district after another, the restrictions imposed upon the use of the forests outside the State and village-forests may be abolished in such districts.

8. That chapter of the Indian Forest Act which authorizes Government to exercise control in certain cases, for the public good, over forests which are not the property of Government is not required in Burma, and has therefore been omitted.

9. The power to impose a duty on foreign timber (section 36) is taken from the Indian Forest Act, and the duty imposed by section 37 on timber produced in certain forests in our own territory is one which has been levied for the last thirty years.

10. In the concluding chapters, which relate to the control of timber in transit, to the collection of drift or stranded timber, to penalties, cattle trespass, forest officers and to miscellaneous matters, the Bill follows generally the Indian Forest Act.

Briefly, it may be said that the Bill now published is the Indian Forest Act of 1878, with such changes as were necessary to adapt it to the peculiar circumstances of British Burma.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide for the punishment of certain petty offences when committed within the limits of Fort William. At present the Garrison Quarter-master of the Fort is in the habit of punishing camp-followers and other Natives connected with the Fort who are guilty of certain offences against the garrison rules; but the jurisdiction of this officer, though it has been long exercised, has recently been called in question. As it is necessary, on sanitary grounds and for the maintenance of order, that there should be some officer within the Fort legally empowered to punish persons guilty of acts or omissions of the nature of those now punished by the Garrison Quarter-master, the present Bill has been prepared. It is based on a draft submitted by the Government of Bengal, and comprises two main provisions: first, it empowers the Local Government to lay down rules with light penalties attached in respect of certain matters which correspond generally with the matters to which the present garrison rules relate; secondly, it provides for the appointment of a commissioned officer (to be called the Fort Magistrate) with power to try persons guilty of breaches of these rules. The other provisions of the Bill are subsidiary to these. Those that appear to call for notice here are section 7, under which the present jurisdiction of the Presidency Magistrates is saved, and section 9, which validates all punishments which may have been heretofore inflicted by the Garrison Quarter-master. Lastly, the Bill exempts from its operation all persons subject to military law as it is thought that such persons can be more fittingly punished under such law.

2. We propose, in accordance with the opinion now expressed by the Government of Bengal, to do away with the distinction between first and second class petroleum introduced by the Bengal Committee. This distinction appears to us unnecessary, and its abolition will much simplify the measure by reducing the classes of petroleum to be dealt with to two, as in England, namely, dangerous petroleum and ordinary petroleum.

3. The flashing point of dangerous petroleum, as originally fixed in accordance with the recommendation of the Bengal Committee at 83° F. by Abel's test, has been objected to in many quarters as unnecessarily and inconveniently high. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal now proposes to reduce it to 78°; and on fully considering the papers submitted to us, we are prepared to reduce it even lower. There can be no doubt that the circumstance that the temperature of the air in most parts of India is throughout a great portion of the year higher than that which prevails in England, would, all other things being equal, make a petroleum flashing at a temperature between 70° and 80° F. more dangerous here than in England; but against this must be set off the greater openness and airiness of Indian buildings and the comparative absence of carpets, curtains and other such articles likely to catch fire; and, though at times serious accidents have occurred in this country, it can hardly be said that there is evidence to show that the danger is so serious as to warrant our extending the severe restrictions which the Bill imposes on dangerous petroleum to any petroleum flashing above the point, which has, after full consideration, been fixed upon in England and which has hitherto been adopted in Bengal. We have accordingly fixed the flashing point of dangerous petroleum at 73° F. by Abel's test equal to 100° F. by the old test.

4. We have made some other amendments in the Bill, with a view to relaxing in certain particulars the restrictions it imposes; thus, in order to avoid the delay, to which ships bringing petroleum to our ports might have been subjected if the samples furnished had to be tested before the petroleum was landed, we have altered the wording of the Bill so as to allow of the petroleum being landed directly the samples are delivered. We think that the control which the Bill gives over the petroleum when landed will be amply sufficient to secure the object in view.

5. Again, we have confined the provision of the Bill which requires petroleum to be kept in indelibly marked vessels, to dangerous petroleum, and we have reduced the maximum penalty for illegally importing, possessing or transporting petroleum from three months' imprisonment and one thousand rupees fine, to one month's imprisonment and five hundred rupees fine.

6. The power given by the Bill to extend the Act to other inflammable substances appears to be unnecessarily large, and we have therefore confined it to cases in which those substances are fluid.

7. The only other alterations we have made which are of sufficient importance to call for notice here are the insertion of a provision in section 7 of the Bill as now amended, empowering the Government to fix ports at which only petroleum may be imported, the addition of a clause to section 12 entitling a dealer, whose petroleum is tested under the Act, to a copy of the certificate of the result of the testing, free of charge, the insertion in section 16 of words providing that the tins or other vessels in which confiscated petroleum is contained may be confiscated with it, and the addition of a provision in section 18 requiring all rules made under the Act to be published for a month before they take effect.

8. The Bill, with its Statement of Objects and Reasons, has been published in English, in the local official Gazettes, except those of the Central Provinces and Assam. Its publication in the vernacular Gazettes has been reported by the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Chief Commissioner of Mysore. It has met with considerable opposition on account of its stringency, but, if the important mitigations of its provisions which we now recommend are approved by the Council, we think it may safely be passed without being again re-published. The measure having been now before the public for six months, it can hardly be said that timely notice of it has not been given to all concerned; but in order to guard against the possibility of hardship to holders or consignees of dangerous petroleum, we propose that it should not come into force till the 1st of July.

Repeal of enactments. 2. The Indian Ports Act, 1875, section thirty-seven, and Bengal Act No. III of 1865 (to make better provision for the prevention of injury from fire in Ports, and to provide for the safe keeping of Inflammable Oils in Ports and places within the Provinces under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal) are hereby repealed.

Interpretation-clause. 3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 3, with additions from Committee's report. "Petroleum." "Petroleum" includes also the liquids commonly known by the names of rock oil, Rangoon oil, Burma oil, kerosine, paraffine oil, mineral oil, petroline, gasoline, benzol, benzoline, benzine and any inflammable liquid that is made from petroleum, coal, schist, shale, peat or any other bituminous substance, or from any products of petroleum,

(b) the purpose for which the applicant believes that such petroleum will be used; and

(c) that petroleum other than dangerous petroleum cannot be used for such purpose.

If the Local Government sees reason to believe that such petroleum will be used for such purpose, and that no petroleum other than dangerous petroleum can be used for such purpose, it may grant such license for the importation, transport or possession (as the case may be) of such petroleum, absolutely or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit.

Power to grant license.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities not exceeding 40 gallons. 5. No quantity of dangerous petroleum equal to or less than forty gallons shall be kept or transported without a license:

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply in any case when the quantity of such petroleum kept by any one person or on the same premises, or transported, does not exceed three gallons, and such petroleum is placed in separate glass, earthenware or metal vessels, each of which contains not more than a pint and is securely stopped. 34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 7.

The Governor General in Council may by a like notification cancel any notification issued under this section.

THE SCHEDULE.

Specification explanatory of the Test Apparatus.

Committee's recommendations, para. 5, and 42 & 43 Vic., c. 47.

The following is a description of the details of the apparatus:—

The oil-cup consists of a cylindrical vessel 2″ diameter, $2\frac{2}{10}$″ height (internal), with outward projecting rim $\frac{5}{10}$″ wide, $\frac{3}{8}$″ from the top and $1\frac{7}{8}$″ from the bottom of the cup. It is made of gun metal or brass (17 B. W. G.), tinned inside. A bracket, consisting of a short stout piece of wire, bent upwards and terminating in a point, is fixed to the inside of the cup to serve as a gauge. The distance of the point from the bottom of the cup is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover made of brass (22 B. W. G.) which carries the thermometer and test lamp. The latter is suspended from two supports from the side by means of trunnions, upon which it may be made to oscillate: it is provided with a spout the mouth of which is $\frac{1}{16}$″ in diameter. The socket which is to hold the thermometer is fixed at such an angle, and its length is so adjusted that the bulb of the thermometer, when inserted to its full depth, shall be $1\frac{1}{2}$″ below the centre of the lid.

The cover is provided with three square holes, one in the centre $\frac{5}{10}$″ by $\frac{4}{10}$″, and two smaller ones, $\frac{3}{10}$″ by $\frac{2}{10}$″, close to the sides and opposite each other. These three holes may be closed and uncovered by means of a slide moving in grooves, and having perforations corresponding to those on the lid.

In moving the slide so as to uncover the holes, the oscillating lamp is caught by a pin fixed in the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. Upon the slide being pushed back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position.

Upon the cover, in front of, and in line with, the mouth of the lamp, is fixed a white bead the dimensions of which represent the size of the test flame to be used.

The bath or heated vessel consists of two flat-bottomed copper cylinders (24 B. W. G.), an inner one of 3″ diameter and $2\frac{1}{2}$″ height, and an outer one of $5\frac{1}{4}$″ diameter and $5\frac{3}{4}$″ height; they are soldered to a circular copper plate (20 B. W. G.) perforated in the centre, which forms the top of the bath, in such a manner as to enclose the space between the two cylinders, but leaving access to the inner cylinder. The top of the bath projects both outwards and inwards about $\frac{3}{8}$″, that is, its diameter is about $\frac{6}{8}$″ greater than that of the body of the bath, while the diameter of the circular opening in the centre is about the same amount less than that of the inner copper cylinder. To the inner projection of the top is fastened by six small screws, a flat ring of ebonite, the screws being sunk below the surface of the ebonite to avoid metallic contact between the bath and the oil cup. The exact distance between the sides and bottom of the bath of the oil lamp is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. A split socket similar to that on the cover of the oil cup, but set at a right angle, allows a thermometer to be inserted into the space between the two cylinders. The bath is further provided with a funnel, an overflow pipe, and two loop handles.

The bath rests upon a cast-iron tripod stand, to the ring of which is attached a copper cylinder or jacket (24 B. W. G.), flanged at the top, and of such dimensions that the bath, while firmly resting on the iron ring, just touches with its projecting top the inward-turned flange. The diameter of this outer jacket is $6\frac{1}{2}$″. One of the three legs of the stand serves as support for the spirit lamp, attached to it by means of a small swing bracket. The distance of the wick holder from the bottom of the bath is 1″.

Two thermometers are provided with the apparatus, the one for ascertaining the temperature of the bath, the other for determining the flashing point. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the water has a long bulb and a space at the top. Its range is from about 90° to 190° Fahrenheit. The scale (in degrees of Fahrenheit) is marked on an ivory back fastened to the tube in the usual way; it is fitted with a metal collar fitting the socket, and the part of the tube below the scale should have a length of about $3\frac{1}{2}$″ measured from the lower end of the scale to the end of the bulb. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the oil is fitted with collar and ivory scale in a similar manner to the one described. It has a round bulb, a space at the top, and ranges from about 55° F. to 150° F.; it measures from end of ivory back to bulb $2\frac{1}{4}$″.

NOTE.—A model apparatus is deposited at the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government at Calcutta.

Directions for applying the Test.

1. The test apparatus is to be placed for use in a position where it is not exposed to currents of air or draughts.

2. The heating vessel or water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the spout of the vessel. The temperature of the water at the commencement of the test is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance either by mixing hot and cold water in the bath, or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or by heating the water with the spirit lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

If the water has been heated too highly, it is easily reduced to 130° by pouring in cold water little by little (to replace a portion of the warm water) until the thermometer gives the proper reading.

When a test has been completed, this water-bath is again raised to 130° by placing the lamp underneath, and the result is readily obtained while the petroleum cup is being emptied, cooled, and refilled with a fresh sample to be tested. The lamp is then turned on its swivel from under the apparatus, and the next test is proceeded with.

3. The test lamp is prepared for use by fitting it with a piece of flat plaited candlewick, and filling it with colza or rape oil up to the lower edge of the opening of the spout or wick tube. The lamp is trimmed so that when lighted it gives a flame of about 0·15 of an inch diameter, and this size of flame which is represented by the projecting white bead on the cover of the oil cup is readily maintained by simple manipulation from time to time with a small wire trimmer.

When gas is available it may be conveniently used in place of the little oil lamp, and for this purpose a test flame arrangement for use with gas may be substituted for the lamp.

4. The bath having been raised to the proper temperature, the oil to be tested is introduced into the petroleum cup, being poured in slowly until the level of the liquid just reaches the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. In warm weather the temperature of the room in which the samples to be tested have been kept should be observed in the first instance, and if it exceeds 65°, the samples to be tested should be cooled down (to about 60°) by immersing the bottle containing them in cold water, or by any other convenient method. The lid of the cup, with the slide closed, is then put on, and the cup is put into the bath or heating vessel. The thermometer in the lid of the cup has been adjusted so as to have its bulb just immersed in the liquid, and its position is not under any circumstances to be altered. When the cup has been placed in the proper position, the scale of the thermometer faces the operator.

5. The test lamp is then placed in position upon the lid of the cup, the lead line or pendulum,* which has been fixed in a convenient position in front of the operator, is set in motion, and the rise of the thermometer in the petroleum cup is watched. When the temperature has reached about 66°, the operation of testing is to be commenced, the test flame being applied once for every rise of one degree in the following manner:—

The slide is slowly drawn open while the pendulum performs three oscillations, and is closed during the fourth oscillation.

NOTE.—If it is desired to employ the test apparatus to determine the flashing points of oils of very low volatility, the mode of proceeding is to be modified as follows:—

The air chamber which surrounds the cup is filled with cold water, to a depth of 1½ inches, and the heating vessel or water-bath is filled as usual, but also with cold water. The lamp is then placed under the apparatus and kept there during the entire operation. If a very heavy oil is being dealt with, the operation may be commenced with water previously heated to 120°, instead of with cold water.

Secy. to the Govt of India.

* This pendulum is two (2) feet in length from the point of suspension to the centre of gravity of the weight.

9. The precautions to be taken against fire.	ib., Nos. 39, 40.
10. The keeping of animals.	ib., Nos. 42, 44, 45.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide for the punishment of certain petty offences when committed within the limits of Fort William. At present the Garrison Quarter-master of the Fort is in the habit of punishing camp-followers and other Natives connected with the Fort who are guilty of certain offences against the garrison rules; but the jurisdiction of this officer, though it has been long exercised, has recently been called in question. As it is necessary, on sanitary grounds and for the maintenance of order, that there should be some officer within the Fort legally empowered to punish persons guilty of acts or omissions of the nature of those now punished by the Garrison Quarter-master, the present Bill has been prepared. It is based on a draft submitted by the Government of Bengal, and comprises two main provisions: first, it empowers the Local Government to lay down rules with light penalties attached in respect of certain matters which correspond generally with the matters to which the present garrison rules relate; secondly, it provides for the appointment of a commissioned officer (to be called the Fort Magistrate) with power to try persons guilty of breaches of these rules. The other provisions of the Bill are subsidiary to these. Those that appear to call for notice here are section 7, under which the present jurisdiction of the Presidency Magistrates is saved, and section 9, which validates all punishments which may have been heretofore inflicted by the Garrison Quarter-master. Lastly, the Bill exempts from its operation all persons subject to military law as it is thought that such persons can be more fittingly punished under such law.

Telegram from Government of Bombay, dated 7th December, 1880 [Papers No. 14].

2. We propose, in accordance with the opinion now expressed by the Government of Bengal, to do away with the distinction between first and second class petroleum introduced by the Bengal Committee. This distinction appears to us unnecessary, and its abolition will much simplify the measure by reducing the classes of petroleum to be dealt with to two, as in England, namely, dangerous petroleum and ordinary petroleum.

3. The flashing point of dangerous petroleum, as originally fixed in accordance with the recommendation of the Bengal Committee at 83° F. by Abel's test, has been objected to in many quarters as unnecessarily and inconveniently high. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal now proposes to reduce it to 78°; and on fully considering the papers submitted to us, we are prepared to reduce it even lower. There can be no doubt that the circumstance that the temperature of the air in most parts of India is throughout a great portion of the year higher than that which prevails in England, would, all other things being equal, make a petroleum flashing at a temperature between 70° and 80° F. more dangerous here than in England; but against this must be set off the greater openness and airiness of Indian buildings and the comparative absence of carpets, curtains and other such articles likely to catch fire; and, though at times serious accidents have occurred in this country, it can hardly be said that there is evidence to show that the danger is so serious as to warrant our extending the severe restrictions which the Bill imposes on dangerous petroleum to any petroleum flashing above the point which has, after full consideration, been fixed upon in England, and which has hitherto been adopted in Bengal. We have accordingly fixed the flashing point of dangerous petroleum at 73° F. by Abel's test equal to 100° F. by the old test.

4. We have made some other amendments in the Bill, with a view to relaxing in certain particulars the restrictions it imposes; thus, in order to avoid the delay to which ships bringing petroleum to our ports might have been subjected if the samples furnished had to be tested before the petroleum was landed, we have altered the wording of the Bill so as to allow of the petroleum being landed directly the samples are delivered. We think that the control which the Bill gives over the petroleum when landed will be amply sufficient to secure the object in view.

5. Again, we have confined the provision of the Bill which requires petroleum to be kept in indelibly marked vessels, to dangerous petroleum, and we have reduced the maximum penalty for illegally importing, possessing or transporting petroleum from three months' imprisonment and one thousand rupees fine, to one month's imprisonment and five hundred rupees fine.

6. The power given by the Bill to extend the Act to other inflammable substances appears to be unnecessarily large, and we have therefore confined it to cases in which those substances are fluid.

7. The only other alterations we have made which are of sufficient importance to call for notice here are the insertion of a provision in section 7 of the Bill as now amended, empowering the Government to fix ports at which only petroleum may be imported, the addition of a clause to section 12 entitling a dealer, whose petroleum is tested under the Act, to a copy of the certificate of the result of the testing, free of charge, the insertion in section 16 of words providing that the tins or other vessels in which confiscated petroleum is contained may be confiscated with it, and the addition of a provision in section 18 requiring all rules made under the Act to be published for a month before they take effect.

8. The Bill, with its Statement of Objects and Reasons, has been published in English, in the local official Gazettes, except those of the Central Provinces and Assam. Its publication in the vernacular Gazettes has been reported by the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Chief Commissioner of Mysore. It has met with considerable opposition on account of its stringency, but, if the important mitigations of its provisions which we now recommend are approved by the Council, we think it may safely be passed without being again re-published. The measure having been now before the public for six months, it can hardly be said that timely notice of it has not been given to all concerned; but in order to guard against the possibility of hardship to holders or consignees of dangerous petroleum, we propose that it should not come into force till the 1st of July.

Repeal of enactments. 2. The Indian Ports Act, 1875, section thirty-seven, and Bengal Act No. III of 1865 (to make better provision for the prevention of injury from fire in Ports, and to provide for the safe keeping of Inflammable Oils in Ports and places within the Provinces under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal) are hereby repealed.

Interpretation-clause. 3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"Petroleum" includes also the liquids commonly known by the names of rock oil, Rangoon oil, Burma oil, kerosine, paraffine oil, mineral oil, petroline, gasoline, benzol, benzoline, benzine and any inflammable liquid that is made from petroleum, coal, schist, shale, peat or any other bituminous substance, or from any products of petroleum, but it does not include any oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes, and having its flashing point at or above two hundred and fifty degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer. Committee's recommendations, para. 3.

Explanation.—The flashing point of petroleum means the lowest temperature at which the petroleum yields a vapour which will furnish a momentary flash or flame when tested with the apparatus and in the manner described in the Schedule hereto annexed. Committee's recommendations, para. 4.

"Dangerous petroleum" means petroleum having its flashing point below seventy-three degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer:

"Dangerous petroleum."

"Import" means to bring into British India by sea or land:

"Import."

and "importation" means the bringing into British India as aforesaid.

"Transport" means to remove from one place to another within British India.

"Transport."

Dangerous Petroleum.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities exceeding 40 gallons. 4. No quantity of dangerous petroleum exceeding forty gallons shall be imported or transported, or kept by any one person or on the same premises, except under, and in accordance with the conditions of, a license from the Local Government granted as next hereinafter provided.

Application for license to import, transport or possess such petroleum. Every application for such a license shall be in writing, and shall declare—

(a) the quantity of such petroleum which it is desired to import, transport or possess, as the case may be;

(b) the purpose for which the applicant believes that such petroleum will be used; and

(c) that petroleum other than dangerous petroleum cannot be used for such purpose.

Power to grant license. If the Local Government see reason to believe that such petroleum will be used for such purpose, and that no petroleum other than dangerous petroleum can be used for such purpose, it may grant such license for the importation, transport or possession (as the case may be) of such petroleum, absolutely or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities not exceeding 40 gallons. 5. No quantity of dangerous petroleum equal to or less than forty gallons shall be kept or transported without a license:

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply in any case when the quantity of such petroleum kept by any one person or on the same premises, or transported, does not exceed three gallons, and such petroleum is placed in separate glass, earthenware or metal vessels, each of which contains not more than a pint and is securely stopped. 34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 7.

Vessels containing dangerous petroleum to be marked. 6. All dangerous petroleum— 34 & 35 Vic., c. 105, s. 6.

(a) which is kept at any place after seven days from the date on which it is imported, or

(b) which is transported, or

(c) which is sold or exposed for sale,

shall be contained in vessels which shall bear an indelible mark or a label in conspicuous characters, stating the nature of the contents thereof. Cf. Act I of 1878, s. 9.

Petroleum generally.

Power to make rules as to the importation of petroleum. 7. The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act to regulate the importation of petroleum and in particular— Committee's recommendations, paras. 12 to 20.

(a) for ascertaining the quantity and description of any petroleum on board a ship;

(b) to provide for the delivery, by the master of a ship or the consignees of the cargo, of samples of petroleum before such petroleum is landed from such ship, and for the testing thereof;

(c) to determine the ports at which only petroleum may be imported; and

(d) to regulate the time and mode of, and the precautions to be taken on, landing or transhipping any petroleum.

In this section—

"Ship" includes anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or property:

"Ship."

"Master" includes every person (except a Pilot or Harbour Master) having for the time being the charge or control of a ship.

"Master."

Possession and transport of petroleum. 8. No quantity of petroleum exceeding five hundred gallons, shall be kept by any one person or on the same premises or shall be transported except under and in accordance with the conditions of a license granted under this Act.

Power to make rules as to such possession and transport. 9. The Local Government may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act as to the granting of licenses to possess or transport petroleum in cases where such licenses are by law required.

Such rules may provide for the following among other matters, that is to say—in the case of licenses to possess petroleum—

(a) the nature and situation of the premises for which they may be granted, and Power to inspect and require dealer to sell samples.

Ibid.

11. When any such officer has, in exercise of the powers conferred by section ten, or by purchase, obtained a sample of petroleum in the possession of a dealer, he may give a notice in writing to such dealer informing him that he is about to test such sample or cause the same to be tested with the apparatus and in the manner described in the schedule hereto annexed, at a time and place to be fixed in such notice, and that such person or his Agent may be present at such testing.

Notice to be given when officer proposes to test samples.

Ibid.

12. On any such testing if it appears to the officer or other person so testing that the petroleum from which such sample has been taken is or is not dangerous petroleum, such officer or other person may certify such fact, and the certificate so given shall be receivable as evidence in any proceedings which may be taken under this Act against the dealer in whose possession such petroleum was found, and shall, until the contrary is proved, be evidence of the fact stated therein; and a certified copy of such certificate shall be given gratis to the dealer at his request.

THE SCHEDULE.

Specification explanatory of the Test Apparatus.

Committee's recommendations, para. 5, and 42 & 43 Vic., c. 47.

The following is a description of the details of the apparatus:—

The oil-cup consists of a cylindrical vessel 2″ diameter, $2\frac{2}{10}$″ height (internal), with outward projecting rim $\frac{5}{10}$″ wide, $\frac{3}{8}$″ from the top and $1\frac{7}{8}$″ from the bottom of the cup. It is made of gun metal or brass (17 B. W. G.), tinned inside. A bracket, consisting of a short stout piece of wire, bent upwards and terminating in a point, is fixed to the inside of the cup to serve as a gauge. The distance of the point from the bottom of the cup is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover made of brass (22 B. W. G.) which carries the thermometer and test lamp. The latter is suspended from two supports from the side by means of trunnions, upon which it may be made to oscillate: it is provided with a spout the mouth of which is $\frac{1}{16}$″ in diameter. The socket which is to hold the thermometer is fixed at such an angle, and its length is so adjusted that the bulb of the thermometer, when inserted to its full depth, shall be $1\frac{1}{2}$″ below the centre of the lid.

The cover is provided with three square holes, one in the centre $\frac{5}{10}$″ by $\frac{4}{10}$″, and two smaller ones, $\frac{3}{10}$″ by $\frac{2}{10}$″, close to the sides and opposite each other. These three holes may be closed and uncovered by means of a slide moving in grooves, and having perforations corresponding to those on the lid.

In moving the slide so as to uncover the holes, the oscillating lamp is caught by a pin fixed in the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. Upon the slide being pushed back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position.

Upon the cover, in front of, and in line with, the mouth of the lamp, is fixed a white bead the dimensions of which represent the size of the test flame to be used.

The bath or heated vessel consists of two flat-bottomed copper cylinders (24 B. W. G.), an inner one of 3″ diameter and $2\frac{1}{2}$″ height, and an outer one of $5\frac{1}{2}$″ diameter and $5\frac{3}{4}$″ height; they are soldered to a circular copper plate (20 B. W. G.) perforated in the centre, which forms the top of the bath, in such a manner as to enclose the space between the two cylinders, but leaving access to the inner cylinder. The top of the bath projects both outwards and inwards about $\frac{3}{8}$″, that is, its diameter is about $\frac{3}{8}$″ greater than that of the body of the bath, while the diameter of the circular opening in the centre is about the same amount less than that of the inner copper cylinder. To the inner projection of the top is fastened by six small screws, a flat ring of ebonite, the screws being sunk below the surface of the ebonite to avoid metallic contact between the bath and the oil cup. The exact distance between the sides and bottom of the bath of the oil lamp is $1\frac{1}{2}$″. A split socket similar to that on the cover of the oil cup, but set at a right angle, allows a thermometer to be inserted into the space between the two cylinders. The bath is further provided with a funnel, an overflow pipe, and two loop handles.

The bath rests upon a cast-iron tripod stand, to the ring of which is attached a copper cylinder or jacket (24 B. W. G.), flanged at the top, and of such dimensions that the bath, while firmly resting on the iron ring, just touches with its projecting top the inward-turned flange. The diameter of this outer jacket is $6\frac{1}{2}$″. One of the three legs of the stand serves as support for the spirit lamp, attached to it by means of a small swing bracket. The distance of the wick holder from the bottom of the bath is 1″.

Two thermometers are provided with the apparatus, the one for ascertaining the temperature of the bath, the other for determining the flashing point. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the water has a long bulb and a space at the top. Its range is from about 90° to 190° Fahrenheit. The scale (in degrees of Fahrenheit) is marked on an ivory back fastened to the tube in the usual way; it is fitted with a metal collar fitting the socket, and the part of the tube below the scale should have a length of about $3\frac{1}{2}$″ measured from the lower end of the scale to the end of the bulb. The thermometer for ascertaining the temperature of the oil is fitted with collar and ivory scale in a similar manner to the one described. It has a round bulb, a space at the top, and ranges from about 55° F. to 150° F.; it measures from end of ivory back to bulb $2\frac{1}{4}$″.

NOTE.—A model apparatus is deposited at the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government at Calcutta.

Directions for applying the Test.

1. The test apparatus is to be placed for use in a position where it is not exposed to currents of air or draughts.

2. The heating vessel or water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the spout of the vessel. The temperature of the water at the commencement of the test is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance either by mixing hot and cold water in the bath, or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or by heating the water with the spirit lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

If the water has been heated too highly, it is easily reduced to 130° by pouring in cold water little by little (to replace a portion of the warm water) until the thermometer gives the proper reading.

When a test has been completed, this water-bath is again raised to 130° by placing the lamp underneath, and the result is readily obtained while the petroleum cup is being emptied, cooled, and refilled with a fresh sample to be tested. The lamp is then turned on its swivel from under the apparatus, and the next test is proceeded with.

3. The test lamp is prepared for use by fitting it with a piece of flat plaited candlewick, and filling it with colza or rape oil up to the lower edge of the opening of the spout or wick tube. The lamp is trimmed so that when lighted it gives a flame of about 0·15 of an inch diameter, and this size of flame which is represented by the projecting white bead on the cover of the oil cup is readily maintained by simple manipulation from time to time with a small wire trimmer.

When gas is available it may be conveniently used in place of the little oil lamp, and for this purpose a test flame arrangement for use with gas may be substituted for the lamp.

4. The bath having been raised to the proper temperature, the oil to be tested is introduced into the petroleum cup, being poured in slowly until the level of the liquid just reaches the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. In warm weather the temperature of the room in which the samples to be tested have been kept should be observed in the first instance, and if it exceeds 65°, the samples to be tested should be cooled down (to about 60°) by immersing the bottle containing them in cold water, or by any other convenient method. The lid of the cup, with the slide closed, is then put on, and the cup is put into the bath or heating vessel. The thermometer in the lid of the cup has been adjusted so as to have its bulb just immersed in the liquid, and its position is not under any circumstances to be altered. When the cup has been placed in the proper position, the scale of the thermometer faces the operator.

5. The test lamp is then placed in position upon the lid of the cup, the lead line or pendulum,* which has been fixed in a convenient position in front of the operator, is set in motion, and the rise of the thermometer in the petroleum cup is watched. When the temperature has reached about 66°, the operation of testing is to be commenced, the test flame being applied once for every rise of one degree in the following manner:—

The slide is slowly drawn open while the pendulum performs three oscillations, and is closed during the fourth oscillation.

NOTE.—If it is desired to employ the test apparatus to determine the flashing points of oils of very low volatility, the mode of proceeding is to be modified as follows:—

The air chamber which surrounds the cup is filled with cold water, to a depth of 1½ inches, and the heating vessel or water-bath is filled as usual, but also with cold water. The lamp is then placed under the apparatus and kept there during the entire operation. If a very heavy oil is being dealt with, the operation may be commenced with water previously heated to 120°, instead of with cold water.

D. FITZPATRICK,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

* This pendulum is two (2) feet in length from the point of suspension to the centre of gravity of the weight.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st January, 1881:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Promissory Notes, Bills of Exchange and Cheques was referred, have had the report of the Indian Law Commissioners, 1879, duly communicated to us. We have carefully considered so much of it as relates to the present Bill, as well as the papers noted in the margin, and, in compliance with the wish of the Secretary of State for India, as expressed in his despatch (Legislative), No. 37, dated 7th October, 1880, we have the honour to submit this our fourth report.

From Secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Madras, dated 1st August, 1878, and enclosure [Papers No. 56]
„ Acting Chief Secretary to Government, Madras, No. 299, dated 14th February, 1879, and enclosures [Papers No. 58].
„ Ditto, ditto, ditto, No. 1343, dated 7th June, 1879, and enclosures [Papers No. 59].
„ J. Crawfurd, Esq., Registrar, High Court, Calcutta, No. 1123, dated 27th June, 1879 [Paper No. 60].
Note by Sir Charles Turner, Chief Justice, Madras, dated 22nd January, 1880 [Paper No. 61].
From Seth Lachman Dás, Muttra, dated 1st January, 1881 [Paper No. 62].

2. We agree with the Commissioners that uniformity of practice is particularly desirable in matters relating to negotiable paper, and, to facilitate the assimilation of the practice of shroffs to that of European merchants, we have declared (section 1) that local usages may be excluded by any words in the body of the instrument which indicate an intention that the legal relations of the parties thereto shall be governed by the proposed Act.

3. We have inserted explanations calculated to prevent doubts as to when a promise or order to pay is "conditional," when the sum payable is "certain," and when the person to whom the direction is given or payment is to be made is "a certain person," within the meaning of sections 4 and 5.

4. We have re-drawn section 20 as to inchoate stamped instruments, so as to make it express more accurately what we conceive to be the law on this subject.

5. We have also re-drawn sections 47 and 48 (as follows):—

Negotiable instrument made, &c., without consideration.

"43. A negotiable instrument made, drawn, accepted, endorsed or transferred without consideration, or for a consideration which fails, creates no obligation of payment between the parties to the transaction. But if any such party has transferred the instrument with or without endorsement to a holder for consideration, such holder, and every subsequent holder deriving title from him, may recover the amount due on such instrument from the transferor for consideration or any prior party thereto.

"Exception I.—No party for whose accommodation a negotiable instrument has been made, drawn, accepted or indorsed, can, if he have paid the amount thereof, recover thereon such amount from any person who became a party to such instrument for his accommodation.

"Exception II.—No party to the instrument who has induced any other party to make, draw, accept, indorse or transfer the same to him for a consideration which he has failed to pay or perform in full, shall recover thereon an amount exceeding the value of the consideration (if any) which he has actually paid or performed."

6. We have prefixed to the sections relating to negotiation clauses (section 46) relating to delivery generally, and to the effect recommended by the Commissioners.

7. We think the section (67, now 63) relating to the drawee's time for deliberation should provide that the holder of a bill "must, if so required by the drawee," allow him twenty-four hours (exclusive of public holidays) to consider whether he will accept, and we have amended this section accordingly.

8. We have made (section 76) presentment for payment unnecessary as against any party sought to be charged, if he has engaged to pay notwithstanding non-presentment.

9. We have in section 90 (now 86) substituted "qualified" for "conditional" and added a paragraph shewing when an acceptance is qualified.

10. We have provided (section 90) for the extinguishment of rights of action on a negotiated bill held, at or after maturity, by the acceptor in his own right.

11. We agree with Sir C. Turner that section 108 of the Bill in its fourth form—as to reasonable time for presentment—should be omitted. It seems inconsistent with section 107 (now 105), and declares a rule which is not only stricter than the existing law, but would, in our opinion, be highly inconvenient.

12. We have inserted a statement of the procedure in the case of an acceptance supra protest, and to section 112 (now 109) we have prefixed a clause shewing how acceptance for honour must be made.

13. We have declared (section 116) that a drawee in case of need may accept and pay the bill without previous protest.

14. We have made it appear that inland (as well as foreign) bills may be drawn in sets, and altered Chapter XIV (now XV) accordingly. We have made the exception to section 126 (now 132) run thus:—

"Exception.—When a person accepts or indorses different parts of the bill in favour of different persons, he and the subsequent indorser of each part are liable on such part as if it were a separate bill."

15. We have amended the second clause of section 125 (now 130, 131) (as to the non-liability of a banker who has received payment for a customer of a crossed cheque) in accordance with Matthiessen v. London and County Banking Company, 48 L. J. C. P. 529.
