14. When right to a way of necessity is created under section thirteen, the transferor, the legal representative of the testator, or the owner of the share over which the right is exercised, as the case may be, is entitled to set out the way; but it must be reasonably convenient for the dominant owner.

Direction of way of necessity.

When the person so entitled to set out the way refuses or neglects to do so, the dominant owner may set it out.

Act XV of 1877, s. 26.

Angus v. Dalton.

15. Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, and as of right without interruption, and for twenty years, and where support from one person's land, or things affixed thereto, has been peaceably received by another person's land subjected to artificial pressure, or by things affixed thereto, as an easement, and as of right without interruption, and for twenty years, Limitation 37 & 38 Vic., Cap. 57.

Acquisition by prescription.

and where a right of way or any other easement has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto, as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, support, or other easement shall be absolute.

Explanation I.—Nothing is an enjoyment within the meaning of this section when it has been had in pursuance of an agreement with the owner or occupier of the property over which the right is claimed, and it is apparent from the agreement that such right has not been granted as an easement, or, if granted as an easement, that it has been granted for a limited period, or subject to a condition on the fulfilment of which it is to cease.

I. L. R. 1 Calc. 480.

Explanation II.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section unless where there is an actual cessation of the enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Explanation III.—Suspension of enjoyment in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners is not an interruption within the meaning of this section.

Explanation IV.—In the case of an easement to pollute water, the said period of twenty years begins when the pollution first prejudices perceptibly the servient heritage.

Illustrations.

(a) A suit is brought in 1883 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction, but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, from 1st January, 1862, to 1st January, 1882. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that for a year of that time the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the servient heritage as lessee thereof and enjoyed the right as such lessee. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as an easement" for twenty years.

(c) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff on one occasion during the twenty years had admitted that the user was not of right and asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as of right" for twenty years.

(d) A builds on his land adjoining to B's land two houses. One of these is of ordinary stability and of reasonable construction. The other, owing to some defect or peculiarity in its construction, requires a greater amount of support from B's land than B can reasonably be expected to be aware of and provide for. B excavates his land so that both houses fall down. A sues him for compensation for their destruction, and proves that he has enjoyed the support of B's land for both houses as an easement peaceably and without interruption for twenty years. As regards the former house he also proves that the enjoyment has been 'as of right.' As to this house A is entitled to judgment, for his right to support for it has become absolute. As to the latter house the suit must be dismissed; for under the circumstances A cannot prove that the enjoyment has been "as of right."

Act XV of 1877, s. 27.

16. Provided that, when any land or water upon, over or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term shall be excluded in the computation of the said last-mentioned period of twenty years, in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land or water.

Exclusion in favour of reversioner or servient heritage.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C had a life-interest in the land; that on C's death B became entitled to the land; and that within two years after C's death's he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

17. Easements acquired under section fifteen are said to be acquired by prescription, and are called prescriptive rights.

Rights which cannot be acquired by prescription.

Potts v. Smith, L. R. 6 Eq. Ca. 311.

(a) a right which would tend to the total destruction of the subject of the right, or the property on which, if the acquisition were made, liability would be imposed;

(b) a right to the free passage of light or air to an open space of ground;

(c) a right to surface-water not flowing in a stream and not permanently collected in a pool, tank or otherwise;

(d) a right to underground water not passing in a defined channel.

18. An easement may be acquired in virtue of a local custom. Such easements are called customary easements.

Customary easements.

Illustrations.

(a) By the custom of a certain village every cultivator of village land is entitled, as such, to graze his cattle on the common pasture. A having become the tenant of a plot of uncultivated land in the village breaks up and cultivates that plot. He thereby acquires an easement to graze his cattle in accordance with the custom.

(b) By the custom of a certain town no owner or occupier of a house can open a new window therein so as substantially to invade his neighbour's privacy. A builds a house in the town near B's house. A thereupon acquires an easement that B shall not open new windows in his house so as to command a view of the portions of A's house which are ordinarily excluded from observation, and B acquires a like easement with respect to A's house.

19. Where the dominant heritage is transferred or devolves, by act of parties or by operation of law, the transfer or devolution shall, unless a contrary intention appears, be deemed to pass the easement to the person in whose favour the transfer or devolution takes place.

Transfer of dominant heritage passes easement.

Illustration.

A has certain land to which a right of way is annexed. A lets the land to B for twenty years. The right of way vests in B and his legal representative so long as the lease continues.

CHAPTER III.—THE INCIDENTS OF EASEMENTS.

20. The rules contained in this chapter are controlled by any contract between the dominant and servient owners relating to the servient heritage, and by the provisions of the instrument or decree, if any, by which the easement referred to was imposed.

Rules controlled by contract or title.

And when any incident of any customary easement is inconsistent with such rules, nothing in this chapter shall affect such incident.

Incidents of customary easements.

21. An easement must not be used for any purpose not connected with the enjoyment of the dominant heritage.

Use to be unconnected with enjoyment.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as owner of a farm Y, has a right of way over B's land to Y. Lying beyond Y, A has another farm Z, the beneficial enjoyment of which is not necessary for the beneficial enjoyment of Y. He must not use the easement for the purpose of passing to and from Z.

(b) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way to and from it. For the purpose of passing to and from the house, the right may be used, not only by A, but by the members of his family, his guests, lodgers, servants, workmen, visitors and customers; for this is a purpose connected with the enjoyment of the dominant heritage. So, if A lets the house, he may use the right of way for the purpose of collecting the rent and seeing that the house is kept in repair.

22. The dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner; and when the exercise of an easement can without detriment to the dominant owner be confined to a determinate part of the servient heritage, such exercise shall, at the request of the servient owner, be so confined.

Exercise of easement.

Confinement of exercise of easement.

Illustrations.

(a) A has a right of way over B's field. A must enter the way at either end, and not at any intermediate point.

(b) A has a right annexed to his house to cut thatching-grass in B's swamp. A, when exercising his easement, must cut the grass so that the plants may not be destroyed.

23. Subject to the provisions of section twenty-two, the dominant owner may, from time to time, alter the mode and place of enjoying the easement, provided that he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

Right to alter mode of enjoyment.

Exception.—The dominant owner of a right of way cannot vary his line of passage at pleasure, even though he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage. Panjáb Record, 1867, p. 156.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the owner of a saw-mill, has a right to a flow of water sufficient to work the mill. He may convert the saw-mill into a corn-mill, provided that it can be worked by the same amount of water.

(b) A has a right to discharge on B's land the rain-water from the eaves of A's house. This does not entitle A to advance his eaves if, by so doing, he imposes a greater burden on B's land.

(c) A, as the owner of a paper-mill, acquires a right to pollute a stream by pouring in the refuse-liquor produced by making in the mill paper from rags. He may pollute the stream by pouring in similar liquor produced by making in the mill paper by a new process from bamboos provided that he does not substantially increase the amount, or injuriously change the nature, of the pollution.

(d) A, a riparian owner, acquires, as against the lower riparian owners, a prescriptive right to pollute a stream by throwing sawdust into it. This does not entitle A to pollute the stream by discharging into it poisonous liquor.

24. The dominant owner is entitled, as against the servient owner, to do all acts necessary to secure the full enjoyment of the easement; but such acts must be done at such time and in such manner as, without detriment to the dominant owner, to cause the servient owner as little inconvenience as possible; and the dominant owner must repair, as far as practicable, the damage (if any) caused by the act to the servient heritage.

Right to do acts necessary to secure enjoyment.

Right to do acts necessary to secure the full enjoyment of an easement are called accessory rights.

Accessory rights.

Illustrations.

(a) A has an easement to lay pipes in B's land to convey water to A's cistern. A may enter and dig the land in order to mend the pipes, but he must restore the surface to its original state.

(b) A has an easement of a drain through B's land. The sewer with which the drain communicates is altered. A may enter upon B's land and alter the drain, to adapt it to the new sewer, provided that he does not thereby impose any additional burden on B's land.

(c) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way over B's land. The way is out of repair, or a tree is blown down and falls across it. A may enter on B's land and repair the way or remove the tree from it.

(d) A, as owner of a certain field, has a right of way over B's land. B renders the way impassable. A may deviate from the way and pass over the adjoining land of B, provided that the deviation is reasonable.

(e) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way over B's field. A may remove rocks to make the way.

(f) A has an easement of support from B's wall. The wall gives way. A may enter upon B's land and repair the wall.

(g) A has an easement to have his land flooded by means of a dam in B's stream. The dam is half swept away by an inundation. A may enter upon B's land and repair the dam.

25. The expenses incurred in constructing works, or making repairs, or doing any other act necessary for the use or preservation of an easement, must be defrayed by the dominant owner.

Liability for expenses necessary for preservation of easement.

26. Where an easement is enjoyed by means of an artificial work, the dominant owner is liable to make compensation for any damage to the servient heritage arising from the want of repair of such work.

Liability for damage from want of repair.

27. The servient owner is not bound to do anything for the benefit of the dominant heritage, and he is entitled, as against the dominant owner, to use the servient heritage in any way consistent with the enjoyment of the easement: but he must not do any act tending to restrict the easement or to render its exercise less convenient. N. W. P. (1867), p. 191.

Servient owner not bound to do anything.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as owner of a house, has a right to lead water and send sewage through B's land. B is not bound as servient owner to clear the watercourse or scour the sewer.

(b) A grants a right of way through his land to B as owner of a field. A may feed his cattle on grass growing on the way, provided that B's right of way is not thereby obstructed; but he must not build a wall at the end of his land so as to prevent B from going beyond it, nor must he narrow the way so as to render the exercise of the right less easy than it was at the date of the grant.

(c) A, in respect of his house, is entitled to an easement of support from B's wall. B is not bound as servient owner to keep the wall standing and in repair. But he must not pull down or weaken the wall so as to make it incapable of rendering the necessary support.

(d) A, in respect of his mill, is entitled to a watercourse through B's land. B must not drive stakes so as to obstruct the watercourse.

(e) A, in respect of his house, is entitled to a certain quantity of light passing over B's land. B must not plant trees so as to obstruct the passage to A's windows of that quantity of light.

28. With respect to the extent of easements and the mode of their enjoyment, the following provisions shall take effect:—

Extent of easements.

An easement of necessity is co-extensive with the necessity as it existed when the easement was imposed. Mayor of London v. Rigge, 49, L. J. Chanc. 297.

Easement of necessity.

The extent of any other easement and the mode of its enjoyment must be fixed with reference to the probable intention of the parties, and the purpose for which the right was imposed or acquired.

Other easements.

In the absence of evidence as to such intention and purpose—

(a) a right of way of any one kind does not include a right of way of any other kind:

Right of way.

(b) the extent of a right to the passage of light or air to a certain window, door or other opening, imposed by assurance or will, is the quantity of light or air that entered the opening at the time the assurance was made or the testator died:

Right to light or air acquired by grant.

(c) the extent of a prescriptive right to the passage of light or air to a certain window, door or other opening is that quantity of light or air which has been accustomed to enter that opening during the whole of the prescriptive period irrespectively of the purposes for which it has been used:

Prescriptive right to light or air.

(d) the extent of a prescriptive right to pollute air or water is the extent of the pollution at the commencement of the period of user on completion of which the right arose: and

Prescriptive right to pollute air and water.

(e) the extent of every other prescriptive right and the mode of its enjoyment must be determined by the accustomed user of the right.

Other prescriptive rights.

29. The dominant owner cannot, by merely altering or adding to the dominant heritage, substantially increase an easement.

Increase of easement.

Where an easement has been granted or bequeathed so that its extent shall be proportionate to the extent of the dominant heritage, if the dominant heritage is increased by alluvion, the easement is proportionately increased, and if the dominant heritage is diminished by diluvion, the easement is proportionately diminished.

Save as aforesaid, no easement is affected by any change in the extent of the dominant or the servient heritage.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the owner of a mill, has acquired a prescriptive right to divert to his mill part of the water of a stream. A alters the machinery of his mill. He cannot thereby increase his right to divert water.

(b) A has acquired an easement to pollute a stream by carrying on a manufacture on its banks by which a certain quantity of foul matter is discharged into it. A extends his works and thereby increases the quantity discharged. He is responsible to the lower riparian owners for injury done by such increase.

(c) A, as the owner of a farm, has a right to take, for the purpose of manuring his farm, leaves which have fallen from the trees on B's land. A buys a field and unites it to his farm. A is not thereby entitled to take leaves to manure this field.

30. Where a dominant heritage is divided between two or more persons, the easement becomes annexed to each of the shares, but not so as to increase substantially the burden on the servient heritage: provided that such annexation is consistent with the terms of the instrument, decree or revenue proceeding (if any) under which the division was made, and in the case of prescriptive rights, with the user during the prescriptive period.

Partition of dominant heritage.

Illustrations.

(a) A house to which a right of way by a particular path is annexed is divided into two parts, one of which is granted to A, the other to B. Each is entitled, in respect of his part, to a right of way by the same path.

(b) A house to which is annexed the right of drawing water from a well to the extent of fifty buckets a day is divided into two distinct heritages, one of which is granted to A, the other to B. A and B are each entitled, in respect of his heritage, to draw from the well fifty buckets a day; but the amount drawn by both must not exceed fifty buckets a day.

(c) A, having in respect of his house an easement of light, divides the house into three distinct heritages. Each of these continues to have the right to have its windows unobstructed.

31. In the case of excessive user of an easement the servient owner may, without prejudice to any other remedies to which he may be entitled, obstruct the user, but only on the servient heritage: provided that such user cannot be obstructed when the obstruction would interfere with the lawful enjoyment of the easement.

Obstruction in case of excessive user.

Illustration.

A, having a right to the free passage over B's land of light to four windows six feet by four, increases their size and number. It is impossible to obstruct the passage of light to the new windows without also obstructing the passage of light to the ancient windows. B cannot obstruct the excessive user.

CHAPTER IV.—THE DISTURBANCE OF EASEMENTS.

32. The owner or occupier of the dominant heritage is entitled to enjoy the easement without disturbance by any other person.

Right to enjoyment without disturbance.

Illustration.

A, as owner of a house, has a right of way over B's land. C unlawfully enters on B's land, and obstructs A in his right of way. A may sue C for compensation, not for the entry, but for the obstruction.

33. The owner of any interest in the dominant heritage, or the occupier of such heritage, may institute a suit for compensation for the disturbance of the easement or of any right accessory thereto; provided that the disturbance has actually caused substantial damage to the plaintiff.

Suit for disturbance of easement.

Explanation I.—The doing of any act likely to injure the plaintiff by affecting the evidence of the easement, or by materially diminishing the value of the dominant heritage, is substantial damage within the meaning of this section and section thirty-four.

Explanation II.—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of light passing to the openings in a house, no damage is substantial within the meaning of this section unless it falls within the first Explanation, or interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, or prevents him from carrying on his accustomed business in the dominant heritage as beneficially as he had done previous to instituting the suit.

15 Bom. 68. Explanation III.—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of air to the openings in a house, damage is substantial within the meaning of this section if it interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, though it is not injurious to his health.

Illustration.

(a) A places a permanent obstruction in a path over which B, as tenant of C's house, has a right of way. This is substantial damage to C, for it may affect the evidence of his reversionary right to the easement.

1 Calc. 425. (b) A, as owner of a house, has a right to walk along one side of B's house. B builds a verandah overhanging the way about ten feet from the ground, and so as not to occasion any inconvenience to foot-passengers using the way. This is not substantial damage to A.

Act XV of 1877, s. 34. 34. The removal of the means of support to which a dominant owner is entitled does not give rise to a right to recover compensation unless and until substantial damage is actually sustained.

When cause of action arises for removal of support.

35. Subject to the provisions of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, sections 52 to 57 (both inclusive), an injunction may be granted to restrain the disturbance of an easement—

Injunction to restrain disturbance.

(a) if the easement is actually disturbed,—when compensation for such disturbance might be recovered under this chapter:

(b) if the disturbance is only threatened or intended,—when the act threatened or intended must necessarily, if performed, disturb the easement.

36. Notwithstanding the provisions of section twenty-four, the dominant owner cannot himself abate a wrongful obstruction of an easement.

7 Mad. H. C. Ruling, XXXV.

CHAPTER V.—THE EXTINCTION, SUSPENSION AND REVIVAL OF EASEMENTS.

37. When, from a cause which preceded the imposition of an easement, the person by whom it was imposed ceases to have any right in the servient heritage, the easement is extinguished.

Extinction by dissolution of right of servient owner.

Exception.—Nothing in this section applies to an easement lawfully imposed by a mortgagor in accordance with section ten.

Illustrations.

(a) A transfers Sultánpur to B on condition that he does not marry C. B imposes an easement on Sultánpur. Then B marries C. B's interest in Sultánpur ends, and with it the easement is extinguished.

(b) A, in 1860, lets Sultánpur to B for thirty years from the date of the lease. B, in 1861, imposes an easement on the land in favour of C, who enjoys the easement peaceably and openly as an easement without interruption for twenty-nine years. B's interest in Sultánpur then ends, and with it C's easement.

(c) A and B, tenants of C, have permanent transferable interests in their respective holdings. A imposes on his holding an easement to draw water from a tank for the purpose of irrigating B's land. B enjoys the easement for twenty years. Then A's rent falls into arrear and his interest is sold. B's easement is extinguished.

(d) A mortgages Sultánpur to B, and lawfully imposes an easement on the land in favour of C in accordance with the provisions of section ten. The land is sold to D in satisfaction of the mortgage-debt. The easement is not thereby extinguished.

38. An easement is extinguished when the dominant owner releases it, expressly or impliedly, to the servient owner.

Extinction by release.

Such release can be made only in the circumstances and to the extent in and to which the dominant owner can alienate the dominant heritage.

An easement may be released as to part only of the servient heritage.

Explanation I.—An easement is impliedly released—

(a) where the dominant owner expressly authorizes an act of a permanent nature to be done on the servient heritage, the necessary consequence of which is to prevent his future enjoyment of the easement, and such act is done in pursuance of such authority;

(b) where any permanent alteration is made in the dominant heritage of such a nature as to show that the dominant owner intended to cease to enjoy the easement in future.

Explanation II.—Mere non-user of an easement is not an implied release within the meaning of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A, B and C are co-owners of a house to which an easement is annexed. A, without the consent of B and C, releases the easement. This release is effectual only as against A and his legal representative.

(b) A grants B an easement over A's land for the beneficial enjoyment of his house. B assigns the house to C. B then purports to release the easement. The release is ineffectual.

(c) A, having the right to discharge his cavesdroppings into B's yard, expressly authorizes B to build over this yard to a height which will interfere with the discharge. B builds accordingly. A's easement is extinguished to the extent of the interference.

(d) A, having an easement of light to a window, builds up that window with bricks and mortar so as to manifest an intention to abandon the easement permanently. The easement is impliedly released.

(e) A, having a projecting roof by means of which he enjoys an easement to discharge cavesdroppings on B's land permanently alters the roof, so as to direct the rain-water into a different channel and discharge it on C's land. The easement is impliedly released.

39. An easement is extinguished when the servient owner, in exercise of a power reserved in this behalf, revokes the easement.

Extinction by revocation.

40. An easement is extinguished where it has been imposed for a limited period, or acquired on condition that it shall become void on the performance or non-performance of a specified act, and the period expires or the condition is fulfilled.

Extinction on expiration of limited period or happening of dissolving condition.

41. An easement of necessity is extinguished when the necessity comes to an end.

Illustration.

A grants B a field inaccessible except by passing over A's adjoining land. B afterwards purchases a part of that land over which he can pass to his field. The right of way over A's land which B had acquired is extinguished.

42. An easement is extinguished when it becomes incapable of being at any time and under any circumstances beneficial to the dominant owner.

Extinction of useless easement.

43. Where by any permanent change in the dominant heritage the burden on the servient heritage is materially increased and cannot be reduced by the servient owner without interfering with the lawful enjoyment of the easement, the easement is extinguished, unless—

Extinction by permanent change in dominant heritage.

(a) it was intended for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, to whatever extent the easement should be used; or

(b) the injury caused to the servient owner by the change is so slight that no reasonable person would complain of it; or

(c) the easement is an easement of necessity.

44. An easement is extinguished where the servient heritage is by superior force so permanently altered that the dominant owner can no longer exercise his right:

Extinction on permanent alteration of servient heritage by superior force.

Provided that, where a way of necessity is destroyed by superior force, the dominant owner has a right to another way over the servient heritage; and the provisions of section fourteen apply to such way.

Illustrations.

(a) A grants to B, as the owner of a certain house, a right to fish in a river running through A's land. The river changes its course permanently and runs through C's land. B's easement is extinguished.

(b) Access to a path over which A has a right of way is permanently cut off by an earthquake. A's right is extinguished.

45. An easement is extinguished when either the dominant or the servient heritage is completely destroyed.

Extinction by destruction of either heritage.

Illustration.

A has a right of way over a road running along the foot of a sea-cliff. The road is washed away by a permanent encroachment of the sea. A's easement is extinguished.

46. An easement is extinguished when the same person becomes entitled to the absolute ownership of the whole of the dominant and servient heritages. Bom. 365.

Extinction by unity of ownership.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as the owner of a house, has a right of way over B's field. A mortgages his house, and B mortgages his field to C. Then C forecloses both mortgages and becomes thereby absolute owner of both house and field. The right of way is extinguished.

(b) The dominant owner acquires only part of the servient heritage: the easement is not extinguished, except in the case illustrated in section forty-one.

(c) The servient owner acquires the dominant heritage in connection with a third person: the easement is not extinguished.

(d) The separate owners of two separate dominant heritages jointly acquire the heritage which is servient to the two separate heritages: the easements are not extinguished.

(e) The joint owners of the dominant heritage jointly acquire the servient heritage: the easement is extinguished.

(f) A single right of way exists over two servient heritages for the beneficial enjoyment of a single dominant heritage. The dominant owner acquires one only of the servient heritages. The easement is not extinguished.

(g) A has a right of way over B's road. B dedicates the road to the public. A's right of way is not extinguished.

47. A continuous easement is extinguished when it totally ceases to be enjoyed as such for an unbroken period of twenty years.

Extinction by non-enjoyment.

A discontinuous easement is extinguished when, for a like period, it has not been enjoyed, or the dominant owner has not registered, under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, a declaration of his intention to retain the easement.

Such period shall be reckoned, in the case of a continuous easement, from the day on which its enjoyment was obstructed by the servient owner, or rendered impossible by the dominant owner; and, in the case of a discontinuous easement, from the day on which it was last enjoyed by any person as dominant owner, or the day on which the dominant owner registered the said declaration.

Where an easement can be enjoyed only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, its enjoyment during the said period at another place, or at other times, or between other hours, or for another purpose, does not prevent its extinction under this section.

The circumstance that, during the said period, no one was in possession of the servient heritage, or that the easement could not be enjoyed, or that a right accessory thereto was enjoyed, or that the dominant owner was not aware of its existence, or that he enjoyed it in ignorance of his right to do so, does not prevent its extinction under this section.

An easement is not extinguished under this section—

(a) where the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners;

(b) where the dominant heritage is held in co-ownership, and one of the co-owners enjoys the easement within the said period, or

(c) where the easement is a necessary easement.

Where several heritages are respectively subject to rights of way for the benefit of a single heritage, and the ways are continuous, such rights shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a single easement.

Illustration.

A has, as annexed to his house, rights of way from the high road thither over the heritages X and Z and the intervening heritage Y. Before the twenty years expire, A exercises his right of way over X. His rights of way over Y and Z are not extinguished.

48. When an easement is extinguished, the rights (if any) accessory thereto are also extinguished.

Extinction of accessory rights.

Illustration.

A has an easement to draw water from B's well. As accessory thereto, he has a right of way over B's land to and from the well. The easement to draw water is extinguished under section forty-seven. The right of way is also extinguished.

49. An easement is suspended when the dominant owner becomes entitled to possession of the servient heritage for a limited interest therein, or when the servient owner becomes entitled to possession of the dominant heritage for a limited interest therein.

Suspension of easement.

50. The servient owner has no right to require that an easement be continued; and, notwithstanding the provisions of section twenty-six, he is not entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of the extinguishment or suspension of the easement, if the dominant owner has given to the servient owner such notice as will enable him, without unreasonable expense, to protect the servient heritage from such damage.

Servient owner not entitled to require continuance.

Where such notice has not been given, the servient owner is entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of such extinguishment or suspension.

Compensation for damage caused by extinguishment.

Illustration.

A, in exercise of an easement, diverts to his canal the water of B's stream. The diversion continues for many years, and during that time the bed of the stream partly fills up. A then abandons his easement, and restores the stream to its ancient course. B's land is consequently flooded. B sues A for compensation for the damage caused by the flooding. It is proved that A gave B a month's notice of his intention to abandon the easement, and that such notice was sufficient to enable B, without unreasonable expense, to have prevented the damage. The suit must be dismissed.

51. An easement extinguished under section forty-five revives (a) when the destroyed heritage is, before twenty years have expired, restored by the deposit of alluvion; (b) when the destroyed heritage is a servient building and before twenty years have expired such building is rebuilt upon the same site; and (c) when the destroyed heritage is a dominant building and before twenty years have expired such building is rebuilt upon the same site and in such a manner as not to impose a greater burden on the servient heritage.

N.-W. P. 1866), p. 197.

An easement extinguished under section forty-six revives when the grant or bequest by which the unity of ownership was produced is set aside by the decree of a competent Court. A necessary easement extinguished under the same section revives when the unity of ownership ceases from any other cause.

A suspended easement revives if the cause of suspension is removed before the right is extinguished under section forty-seven.

Illustration.

A, as the absolute owner of field Y, has a right of way thither over B's field Z. A obtains from B a lease of Z for twenty years. The easement is suspended so long as A remains lessee of Z. But when A assigns the lease to C, or surrenders it to B, the right of way revives.

CHAPTER VI.—LICENSES.

52. Where one person grants to another, or to a definite number of other persons, a right to do, or continue to do, in or upon the immoveable property of the grantor, something which would, in the absence of such right, be unlawful, and such right does not amount to an easement or an interest in the property, the right is called a license.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

NUMEROUS suggestions for the amendment of the Indian Emigration Act, 1871, have from time to time been received by the Government. Many of these which it appears desirable to adopt deal with minor and, comparatively speaking, unimportant points; but some propose substantial changes which would materially alter the working of the existing law. It has, moreover, been found that the form and arrangement of the Act are susceptible of improvement. Under these circumstances, it has been thought advisable to repeal the Act, and re-enact it with all the requisite amendments. Of these amendments the more important are the following.

2. In the preliminary chapter "emigrate," "emigrant" and "emigration" have been so defined as to cover not only persons leaving India under a contract to labour, but also dependents of such persons. It is obvious that, for all purposes of the control of recruiters and depôts, the regulation of emigrant vessels, &c., it is as necessary to take count of dependents as of the persons who contract to labour.

3. Section 5, which corresponds to section 26 of the Act of 1871, has been amplified so as to give the Governor General in Council power to establish ports other than those of the three Presidency-towns as ports of embarkation.

4. In a recent correspondence it has been brought to notice that the effect of the Contract Act of 1872 has been to make it impossible for persons under the legal age of majority (in most cases 18) to engage to emigrate. The limit of sixteen years at or above which an emigrant may himself enter into a contract to emigrate has been adopted in sections 34 and 35 of the Bill from the Bengal Labour Districts Emigration Act (Bengal Act VII of 1873); and it has been provided that minors below that age and above the age of six years may contract through their guardians, power being reserved to the minor to rescind the contract at any time within the thirty days next following the completion of his age of eighteen years.

5. Section 33 requires all agreements to emigrate to be in writing, and, if entered into within the limits of any port from which emigration is lawful, to be made with the Emigration Agent at such port, and executed in the presence of the Protector; if entered into elsewhere, to be made with a recruiter and executed in the presence of a Magistrate. Section 36 lays down what such agreements must contain. At present, there is much confusion in the law as to what constitutes the contract to emigrate; and it is not absolutely necessary that any terms of service should be settled before the emigrant leaves India. Most, if not all, colonies have already introduced written contracts, so that there will be no hardship in requiring their general use; the conventions with France and Holland expressly stipulate that a written contract must first be executed in India, and there will thus be no difficulty with those powers. The requirement of a contract, moreover, marks distinctly the stage at which an emigrant becomes liable for breach of contract—a point which under the present law is somewhat uncertain. Lastly, the provision exists (in substance) in the Burma and Straits Settlements Emigration Laws. The material stipulations mentioned in section 36 are all actually adopted by the colonies which receive Indian emigrants.

6. The remaining amendments are for the most part in matters of detail, and may be shortly stated as follows.

7. For the present definition of Magistrate and section 85 of the existing Act, the definition in Act V of 1877 (The Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877), which allows of the appointment of any person as a Magistrate for the purposes of the Act, has been substituted.

8. Chapter II.—Ports from which, and places to which, Emigration is lawful.—This is a new chapter, which brings together under one head, in an amended form, the provisions of sections 23 to 26 and sections 57 to 61 of the Act of 1871.

9. Sections 7 to 10.—In the present law sections 57 and 61 overlap, and one of them is clearly unnecessary. The opportunity has accordingly been taken to re-draft the sections, amalgamating them and specifying more clearly the reasons for which emigration may be suspended. Excessive mortality, neglect to enforce in the colony the contracts made in India and omission to furnish the Government of India with the information necessary to enable it to judge how Indian immigrants are treated have been added to the reasons mentioned in sections 57 and 61 of the present Act. This last is in accordance with the recommendation of Sir G. Campbell.

10. Section 8 defines more clearly the extraordinary power which, under section 61 of the present Act, can be exercised by the Local Government on a pressing emergency; and this power has been restricted to a single case—the outbreak of plague or other epidemic disease dangerous to life in the colony.

11. Chapter III.—Emigration Agents.—No change has been made in this chapter, which corresponds with Part II of the present Act, except a slight amendment of section 4 of the present law, defining the effect of the notification of appointment of an Emigration Agent by the Local Government and giving that Government power to withdraw its approval of the appointment of such Agent.

12. Chapter IV.—Protectors of Emigrants and Medical Inspectors.—The wording of this chapter, which corresponds with a portion of Part III of the present Act, has been revised, and power has been given to the Local Government to appoint, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, Protectors of Emigrants for local areas beyond the territories subject to its administration.

13. Chapter V.—Emigration Depôts.—This chapter corresponds with a portion of Part III of the present Act; but the second clauses of sections 18 and 21, which are based on Act III of 1876, section 25, are new.

14. Chapter VI.—Recruiters and Sub-Agents of Emigration.—Several modifications and additions have been made in the portion of this chapter relating to recruiters, all of which have been strongly urged on the attention of the Government of India at various times, and the expediency of most of which has already been recognized in Acts III of 1876 and V of 1877. The first of these is the requirement in section 23 that the local area within which the recruiter is to work shall be specified in the license: this is taken from Act V of 1877, section 12. The next is the omission of section 20 of the present Act, which requires every recruiter to wear a badge. The badge has been objected to by many authorities, as investing the recruiter, in the eyes of the people, with the appearance of a Government officer. It is clearly necessary, on the other hand, that every recruiter should be furnished with an authentic statement of the terms he is authorized to offer; and section 25 of the Bill accordingly requires that he should be furnished with such a statement. The next amendment calling for notice is in the second paragraph of section 26. At present, the Magistrate has no option in countersigning a recruiter's license, but must add his signature, if the period of the license is unexpired; it is obvious that he should refuse to do so if the recruiter bears a bad character. At present, the Protector is required, under executive instructions, to satisfy himself, by enquiry from the Magistrate of the district where the recruiter is known, that there is nothing against him before granting the license; but this is a circuitous method of procedure, and often leads to great delay. The principle of this amendment has already been fully admitted in Acts III of 1876, section 12, and V of 1877, section 13, from which it is borrowed. The other provisions of this paragraph, and the provisions of section 27 as to the regulation of places of accommodation to be provided in the recruiting districts for intending emigrants, are also new. At the places referred to many abuses are practised in connection with recruiting, and the necessity of supervising such places has several times been pressed on the Government of India as urgently necessary. Sections 28 and 29 are also new. They are the complement of section 26, and are taken from Acts III of 1876, section 12, and V of 1877, section 13. Section 28 empowers the Magistrate, under certain circumstances, to cancel his countersignature or to impound the license and send it to the Protector for cancellation; and section 29 requires all refusals and cancellations of countersignature by Magistrates to be at once reported to the Protector.

15. The last three sections of this chapter (30 to 32), relating to Sub-Agents, are new, and provide some much-needed clauses for the control of the local agency through which it is the practice of Emigration Agents to conduct recruiting operations. All Sub-Agents must be licensed by the Local Government; and the license, for which a fee of Rs. 30 (double that for a recruiter's license) is fixed, may be revoked on proof of misconduct. It is further provided that the remuneration of Sub-Agents must, like that of Emigration Agents (under section 5 of the present Act), be a fixed sum, and not in the form of head-money.

16. Chapter VII.—Agreements with Emigrants.—The provisions of this chapter are new, and make certain important additions to the existing law.

17. Chapter VIII—Attestation of Agreements and Registration of Emigrants.—In this chapter, which corresponds with Part VI of the present Act, modifications have been introduced—

(1) to provide for the agreement with the emigrant being executed before and attested by the Magistrate or the Protector (section 38);

(2) to alter the particulars required to be entered in the register (section 38);

(3) to state more clearly the reasons for which a registering officer may refuse to attest a contract (section 39);

(4) to provide for the examination of dependents as to their dependence upon the contracting emigrants and as to their willingness to accompany such emigrants (section 40);

(5) to provide for a medical examination of intending emigrants, where necessary, previous to their being registered under section 38 (section 42);

(6) to revise the table of fees (section 45).

18. The effect of the first of these amendments will be to bind the emigrant more closely, and so place an obstacle in the way of his desertion. On the other hand, it will give the emigrant, if rejected by the Agent, a claim which can be enforced in the Courts on his behalf by the Protector (section 104).

19. The second matter is dealt with by adding to the particulars at present required the following:—

(a) the name of the recruiter or agent to whom the emigrant has been engaged;

(b) the caste and occupation of the emigrant; and

(c) the persons who, if he were to die at once, would be entitled to succeed to his property (so that any savings he may have collected in the colony may be duly delivered).

On the other hand, as a copy of the contract is to be placed on record in the Protector's office, the rate of wages and period of service will no longer be entered in the register.

20. As regards the third matter, power has been given, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, to refuse attestation (in the absence of sufficient explanation) when the emigrant is a resident of a place beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate before whom he appears. This is a necessary precaution, as it is common for unscrupulous recruiters to convey intending emigrants long distances from their homes, to involve them in debt for maintenance during their journey, and thus to remove the temptation, and at the same time deprive them of the power, to return. It also often happens that an emigrant whose registration is refused by one Magistrate is taken before another in the next district, where it is hoped that the officer will be more compliant. Power has also been given to refuse registration of a person who, if he quits his home, will leave his family destitute, and of a married woman without the consent of her husband.

21. The fourth point has been provided for as in Act V of 1877, section 19.

22. As regards the fifth point, it is not intended that the power to order a medical examination of an emigrant recruited in a district beyond the port of embarkation shall be universally enforced. The examination is only to be directed to testing the emigrant's fitness to undertake the journey to the depôt and not his fitness to labour, for which the Emigration Agent is responsible. It will only be necessary to require a medical examination in special cases, as, for instance, when the condition of the emigrating class is reduced by famine, or when the distance to be travelled to the depôt is great.

23. The fees fixed by section 31 of the present Act can be taken, under the definition of "emigrant" and the operation of the Contract Act, only for adult emigrants. It seems desirable to require a fee for the registration of every contracting emigrant, allowing dependents who do not contract, and are only entered in the register, to be registered without a fee. This matter recently formed the subject of correspondence with Local Governments, and the scale adopted is generally in accordance with their recommendations. The present provision for the refund of the fee on desertion has, in accordance with the precedents of Acts III of 1876 and V of 1877 and the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, been omitted. The fee is a payment for the work of registration, and that work is not affected by the subsequent desertion of the emigrant.

24. Chapter IX.—Conveyance of Emigrants to Depôts.—In this chapter a provision has been added which enables the Magistrate to order the Emigration Agent or recruiter to pay such sum as is necessary to enable an emigrant, who has been rejected before arriving at the port of embarkation, or the dependent of such emigrant, to return to his home.

25. Chapter X.—Procedure on arrival at the Depôt of Emigrants from Up-country.—The provisions of this chapter have been re-arranged and revised, the corresponding provisions of Act V of 1877 being generally followed. The operation of the chapter has been expressly restricted to the case of emigrants from up-country, for whom alone it appears to be intended. Section 51 as amended expresses what has always been understood by the Government of India to be the responsibility of its officers in respect of the fitness of emigrants for the emigrate: fitness for labour and life in the colony is a matter for which [illegible] is responsible. Sections 55 and 56 have been adopted with some modifications from Act V of 1877, sections 28, 29 and 30.

26. Chapter XI.—Emigrant Vessels.—The amendments in this chapter, which corresponds with Part IX of the present Act, are slight. There is a change in the wording of paragraph 3 of section 58 and some alterations in the dimensions specified in section 60. The principal differences, as compared with the present law, are—(1) that the height of the accommodation for emigrants is raised from 5½ to 6 feet; (2) that all children under ten, instead of only those from one to ten years of age, are counted at the rate of two to one adult; and (3), that the space required for each child under ten is fixed at half that required for an adult, instead of, as now, two-thirds for children between two and ten. These changes were recommended by the Government of Bengal in 1873, and are required chiefly to improve the accommodation for infants, among whom much mortality occasionally occurs. "Compounders, interpreters and female nurses" have been added in section 63 also, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government of Bengal.

27. Chapter XII.—Embarkation and Departure.—Section 67 is in accordance with a recommendation made by the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta, who considers it a precaution necessary "not only to afford the opportunity of ascertaining the freedom of emigrants from latent and communicable diseases which have distinct periods of incubation, but to give such as are ill-nourished and have been recruited in famine-stricken districts some time to rest and recover themselves after their journey, and prior to undertaking what proves in all cases a trying voyage to Indian emigrants generally."

28. Section 68 embodies the present views of the Government of India regarding the seasons at which embarkation should be allowed. This matter has been the subject of much discussion. The conventions allow the French and Dutch colonies a longer period than the Act allows the corresponding British colonies; and, in the case of the latter, it has been represented that even the period allowed by the Act is too long, since emigrants shipped late in the season for the West Indies arrive there at a very unhealthy season of the year, and are liable to great mortality in consequence.

When the provisions of the existing law were framed, the embarkation seasons were settled with reference to one point only, viz., the necessity for avoiding the stormy weather encountered in the neighbourhood of the Cape of Good Hope during the Antarctic winter; consequently no impediment was offered to the shipment of emigrants at any time of the year for colonies east of the Cape. But hurricanes prevail in the neighbourhood of Réunion between the months of November and April; and they are also prevalent in the Fiji Islands during the same season. Moreover, the necessity for landing emigrants in their place of destination at a healthy season of the year is another consideration which makes it necessary carefully to regulate the period of despatch.

In the Bill, therefore, power has been taken to enable the Governor General in Council to regulate the departure of all emigrant vessels, whether bound for places to the east or west of the Cape of Good Hope.

The present limits, the 31st July to the 1st March, for places west of the Cape of Good Hope, however, have been [illegible] of emigrant vessels allowed to be despatched after the 1st March, as well as heavy mortality during such voyages, have occurred, and it is thought inexpedient to continue the concession.

The special privilege of carrying emigrants at any time of the year now enjoyed by steamers has also been done away with, as being inconsistent with the regulation of the season for departure with reference to that of arrival in the colony; but as a concession to the superiority of such vessels over sailing vessels, the time within which they may depart for places west of the Cape of Good Hope is extended from the 1st to the 15th March.

29. The penalty clause in section 45 of the present Act, to which section 71 of the Bill corresponds, has been removed to its proper place in chapter XIV (section 99).

In section 72 the number of copies of the list has been reduced from five to four, which, according to the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta, are all that are required.

Section 78, requiring the Emigration Agent to furnish the Master with the contracts, is new, but needs no comment.

30. Sections 82 and 83 are new. They express the substance of the conclusions come to in a correspondence which passed in 1877 regarding the action which should be taken on the occurrence of cases of an infectious disease, or an outbreak of cholera in an epidemic form, on board an emigrant vessel proceeding down the Hugli.

31. Section 55 of the present Act has been omitted, as no emigration has ever gone on to Seychelles, and the colony was included in that Act by a mistake.

32. Chapter XIII.—Supplementary Powers.—In section 85 a few additions have been made to the matters regarding which rules may be framed (clauses c, d, f, g and h), and the proviso authorizing the Local Government to permit the despatch of a vessel with less than the prescribed proportion of women has been struck out.

33. Section 86 relates to fees, and modifies section 62 of the present Act. The object of levying fees is to maintain therefrom the necessary protective establishments in India; such fees should accordingly be just sufficient to cover the cost of such establishments, neither more nor less. It may sometimes happen (more especially, as at present, in the case of foreign colonies) that the Government of India has to meet in respect of some particular colony a special expenditure, which it would be unfair to cast (as is now done) on the income from fees contributed by all colonies; a proviso has accordingly been added enabling such expenditure to be met by enhanced fees on emigration to the particular colony in respect of which it is incurred.

34. Chapter XIV.—Offences.—This part has been generally redrawn. The penalties provided in the present Act, sections 72 to 75, are merely fine extending to 500 rupees. It appears necessary to add imprisonment, as in Act V of 1877.

35. Section 90 has been introduced to cover the case of unlicensed persons acting as Sub-Agents.

36. Section 96 is new; it has been adopted from Act V of 1877, section 44.

37. Section 98 is also new; it provides for the punishment of emigrants who desert after a contract has been duly entered into with the recruiter before a Magistrate. The present law provides no punishment for this offence, the only liability being to a civil suit for breach of contract—a proceeding which is, of course, useless in most cases of the kind. There is no doubt that, in view of the class of men who work as recruiters and the many risks of deception and ill-treatment to which intending emigrants are exposed at their hands, it is necessary to guard the power to inflict a penalty for desertion in such cases most carefully. Still cases have arisen, and may easily arise, of impudent deception on the part of persons who profess willingness to emigrate, and under such profession obtain board and lodging in the Mufassal, and free conveyance to the port of embarkation, where they desert or refuse to emigrate. To meet such cases, the section has been devised, and it has been so drawn as to require the sanction of the Protector of Emigrants to every prosecution instituted under it.

38. Section 99 has been substituted for the second clause of section 45 of the present Act, which clause, it may here be observed, is practically inoperative in Calcutta, because it requires the complaint to be laid before a Magistrate of Police in a Presidency-town, and the depôts are situated outside the limits of Calcutta, and therefore outside of the local jurisdiction of such Magistrates. The penalty, instead of being stated by reference to section 492 of the Penal Code, is mentioned in express terms; and the sanction of the Protector to a prosecution under the section is, as in section 98, required.

39. Section 102 is an amendment of section 82 of Act VII of 1871. At present special authority is required to institute prosecutions for all offences under the existing Act; there seems to be no good reason why such sanction should be required in the case of the offences mentioned in sections 87 to 91.

40. Chapter XV.—Miscellaneous.—Section 105 corresponds with section 88 of the present Act, which has been re-drawn to admit of the probable length of voyages being modified from time to time as may be found necessary on the receipt of fuller information, or the establishment of improved means of communication. Section 84 of the present Act is incorporated with section 105.

41. A new form of recruiter's license (chiefly taken from Act V of 1877) has been substituted for the form in Schedule II of the present Act.

42. In the third schedule of the Bill opportunity has been taken to correct a clerical error as to the length of the voyage from Calcutta to French Guiana. In section 83, Act VII of 1871, twenty-six weeks is said to be the length of this voyage, whereas it should be twenty weeks.

43. The "special provisions as to French colonies" (Part XII, sections 63—70 of the present Act) have been omitted as unnecessary, it being considered that all emigration, whether to British or Foreign colonies, should be conducted on one system. It may be observed that no such special provisions have been found necessary in the case of emigration to Surinam, which has been carried on under a convention with the Netherlands Government similar to that with France. The convention with France is now about to be amended, and if in its amended form it should be found to include any points requiring a deviation in matters of detail from the general procedure of the Bill, such points, together with the question of the adaptation of the Bill to emigration from French ports, can be left for consideration to the Select Committee to which it is proposed to refer the Bill.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th July, 1881:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Private Trusts and Trustees was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill, the Report of the Indian Law Commissioners on the Bill, and the papers noted in the schedule to the present report.

2. The Government of India has no desire to bring this Bill into operation in any part of India against the wishes of the Local Government. We have therefore made the Bill to extend in the first instance only to the territories respectively administered by the Governor of Madras in Council, the Lieutenant-Governors of the North-Western Provinces and the Panjáb, and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces and Assam; and we have given power to the other Local Governments to extend it by notification to any part of the territories respectively under their administration.

3. In section 13 (as to the duty of the trustee to protect the trust-property), before the words "amount or value," we have inserted the words "nature and," inasmuch as it is obviously necessary to have regard to the nature of the property, as well as to its amount or value, in order to determine what steps are reasonably requisite for its preservation.

4. Section 20, in accordance with a suggestion of the Bombay High Court, enumerates the securities on which trustees may properly invest trust-funds. The learned Chief Justice of Bombay has pointed out that the most ordinary and popular investment, among Native trustees (at least in the Bombay mufassal), is an investment of money with the firms of shroffs or merchants of good repute to run at interest. To proscribe this form of investment, as the Bill as introduced practically does, would, in Sir M. Westropp's opinion, cause much inconvenience. Similar kinds of investment may also occur in other parts of India. We have therefore in section 20, clause (f), provided that money held in trust may be invested on any security expressly authorized by any rule which the High Court may from time to time prescribe in this behalf. The rule in clause (e) forbidding trustees (in the absence of an express authority) to advance more than one-half of the value of property consisting of freehold houses has been objected to as over-stringent by the learned Advocate General of Bengal. But, considering the sudden and rapid deterioration to which, in this country, house-property is liable, our only doubt is whether the rule in question is as stringent as it ought to be.

5. We have struck out section 22, which provided for the transfer of the trust-property to the beneficiary on the completion of the purpose of the trust, as we consider that the case is sufficiently provided for by section 55.

6. In section 23 we have set out the circumstances under which a trustee committing a breach of trust is liable to pay interest and the cases in which that interest is compound. The law on this point was left too much to be gathered from the illustrations.

7. In the second paragraph of section 27 (as to the liability of co-trustees committing a breach of trust) we have added after the words "or his legal representative" the words "to the extent of the assets he has received."

8. The provisions of section 54 which declares that "the beneficiary has a right to the rents and profits of the trust-property," appear to us to be too general. We have, therefore, limited them by making them expressly subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust.

9. We have omitted the proviso to section 55, as we consider it, in view of the provisions of the section, unnecessary; and we have amended the last clause of that section and the last clause of section 67 so as to bring them into conformity with the last clause of section 57.

10. The subject-matter of section 64 (as to the wrongful employment of trust-funds in trade) being sufficiently provided for by the additions we have made to section 23, we have struck out the former section.

11. The illustration to section 77 relates to the case of a trust inter vivos for the payment of debts; but as no provision was made for such a case in the section, we have added a clause, (c), containing the accepted law on the subject.

12. To section 81 (as to benámi transactions) we have added, at the suggestion of the learned Advocate General of Bengal, a clause saving the Code of Civil Procedure, section 317, and section 36 of Act XI of 1859.

13. We have amended the first illustration to section 82 so as to show that the section provides for the case where a trust is incapable of being executed in consequence of the beneficiary's renunciation of his interest.

14. Section 86 of the Bill as introduced provides for cases of transfer in fraud of the creditors of the transferor. This, we consider, is a matter which more properly belongs to the Transfer of Property Bill, and it is, in fact, provided for by section 53 of that Bill. We have, therefore, struck out the former section, and omitted from the schedule the statute (13 Eliz., cap. 5) dealing with such cases.

15. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb has suggested that the powers conferred by the Bill on a principal Civil Court of Original Jurisdiction should be exercisable only by such officers as may be specially empowered in that behalf by the Local Government. We are however of opinion that the adoption of this proposal might lead to heart-burning in the case of judges not so empowered, and would certainly cause inconvenience to the public, as, without referring to the notifications in the Gazette, it would be impossible to know what Courts were, or were not, competent to exercise powers under the Act. Moreover, District Judges are now empowered, under the Indian Companies Act, 1866, to wind up companies and have also jurisdiction under the Divorce Act. As the Legislature has deemed them competent to perform these important functions, we cannot hold them incompetent to exercise the much less difficult and delicate jurisdiction conferred by the Trusts Bill. For these reasons we have not accepted His Honour's suggestion.

16. It will be seen that we have left the Bill in substance as it was settled by the Indian Law Commission. We recommend that it be passed as now amended, but it should first be republished in the Gazette of India with this report; and, in obedience to the orders of the Secretary of State, it must also be sent to him, published in the local Gazettes, and translated into the vernacular languages.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CREATION OF TRUSTS.

9 Beng. 377: Act IX of 1872, s. 23. Beng. Reg. II of 1793, s. 19, forbids Collectors to make

4. A trust may be created for any lawful purpose. The purpose of a trust is lawful unless it is (a) forbidden by law, or (b) is of such a nature that, if permitted, it would defeat the provisions of any law, or (c) is fraudulent, or (d) involves or implies injury to the person or property of another, or (e) the Court regards it as immoral or opposed to public policy.

their subordinates their trustees. Perpetuity, 14 Beng. 175.

Every trust of which the purpose is unlawful is void. And where a trust is created for two purposes, of which one is lawful and the other unlawful, and the two purposes cannot be separated, the whole trust is void.

Explanation.—In this section, the expression "law" includes, where the trust-property is immoveable and situate in a foreign country, the law of such country.

See Nelson v. Bridport, 8 Beav. 547.

Illustrations.

(a) A conveys property to B in trust to apply the profits to the nurture of female foundlings to be trained up as prostitutes. The trust is void.

(b) A bequeathes property to B in trust for C for his life, and after his death to D for his life, and after D's death to such of the sons of D as shall first attain the age of twenty-five. A, B, C and D are persons to whom the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applies. The trust after D's death is void.

Act X of 1865, s. 101.

(c) A bequeathes property to B in trust to employ it in carrying on a smuggling business, and out of the profits thereof to support A's children. The trust is void.

(d) A, while in insolvent circumstances, transfers property to B in trust for A during his life, and after his death for B. A is declared an insolvent. The trust for A is invalid as against his creditors.

Trust of immoveable property.

5. No trust in relation to immoveable property is valid unless declared by a non-testamentary instrument in writing signed by the author of the trust or the trustee and registered, or by the will of the author of the trust or of the trustee.

Trust of moveable property.

No trust in relation to moveable property is valid unless declared as aforesaid or unless the ownership of the property is transferred to the trustee.

These rules do not apply where they would operate so as to effectuate a fraud.

Creation of trust.

6. Subject to the provisions of section five, a trust is created when the author of the trust indicates with reasonable certainty by any words or acts (a) an intention on his part to create thereby a trust, (b) the purpose of the trust, (c) the beneficiary, and (d) the trust-property, and (unless the trust is declared by will or the author of the trust is himself to be the trustee) transfers the trust-property to the trustee.

Whether voluntary declaration of trust is binding against Hindú declarant, 4 Mad. 462. Transmutation of possession unnecessary, 2 Bom. 148 (a Parsí case).

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeathes certain property to B, "having the fullest confidence that he will dispose of it for the benefit of" C. This creates a trust so far as regards A and C.

See 7 Bom. A. C. J. 149.

(b) A bequeathes certain property to B, "hoping he will continue it in the family." This does not create a trust, as the beneficiary is not indicated with reasonable certainty.

(c) A bequeathes certain property to B, requesting him to distribute it amongst such members of C's family as B should think most deserving. This does not create a trust, for the beneficiaries are not indicated with reasonable certainty.

(d) A bequeathes certain property to B, desiring him to divide the bulk of it among C's children. This does not create a trust, for the trust-property is not indicated with sufficient certainty.

(e) A bequeathes a shop and stock-in-trade to B, on condition that he pays A's debts and a legacy to C. This is a condition, not a trust for A's creditors and C.

Who may create trusts.

7. A trust may be created—

Cf. Act IX of 1872, ss. 11 & 12.

(a) by every person competent to contract, and

(b) with the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, by or on behalf a minor;

but subject in each case to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which the author of the trust may dispose of the trust-property.

8. The subject-matter of a trust must be property transferable to the beneficiary.

Subject of trust.

It must not be a merely beneficial interest under a subsisting trust.

9. Every person capable of holding property may be a beneficiary.

Who may be beneficiary.

A proposed beneficiary may renounce his interest under the trust by disclaimer addressed to the trustee, or by setting up, with notice of the trust, a claim inconsistent therewith.

Disclaimer by beneficiary.

Act IX of 1872, s. 11.

10. Every person capable of holding property may be a trustee; but where the trust involves the exercise of discretion, he cannot execute it unless he is competent to contract.

Who may be trustee.

No one is bound to accept a trust.

No one bound to accept trust.

A trust is accepted by any words or acts of the trustee indicating with reasonable certainty such acceptance.

Acceptance of trust.

Instead of accepting a trust, the intended trustee may, within a reasonable period, disclaim it, and such disclaimer shall prevent the trust-property from vesting in him.

Disclaimer of trust.

A disclaimer by one of two or more co-trustees vests the trust-property in the other or others and makes him or them sole trustee or trustees from the date of the creation of the trust.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeathes certain property to B and C, his executors, as trustees for D. B and C prove A's will. This is in itself an acceptance of the trust, and B and C hold the property in trust for D.

(b) A transfers certain property to B in trust to sell it and to pay out of the proceeds A's debts. B accepts the trust and sells the property. So far as regards B, a trust of the proceeds is created for A's creditors.

(c) A bequeathes a lákh of rupees to B upon certain trusts and appoints him his executor. B severs the lákh from the general assets and appropriates it to the specific purpose. This is an acceptance of the trust.

CHAPTER III.

OF THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF TRUSTEES.

11. The trustee is bound to fulfil the purpose of the trust, and to obey the directions of the author of the trust given at the time of its creation, except as modified by the consent of all the beneficiaries being competent to contract.

Trustee to execute trust.

Where the beneficiary is incompetent to contract, his consent may, for the purposes of this section, be given by a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a trustee to obey any direction when to do so would be impracticable, illegal or manifestly injurious to the beneficiaries.

Explanation.—Unless a contrary intention be expressed, the purpose of a trust for the payment of debts shall be deemed to be (a) to pay only the debts of the author of the trust existing and recoverable at the date of the instrument of trust, or, when such instrument is a will, at the date of his death, and (b) in the case of debts not bearing interest, to make such payment without interest.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a trustee, is simply authorized to sell certain land by public auction. He cannot sell the land by private contract.

(b) A, a trustee of certain land for X, Y and Z, is authorized to sell the land to B for a specified sum. X, Y and Z, being competent to contract, consent that A may sell the land to C for a less sum. A may sell the land accordingly.

(c) A, a trustee for B and her children, is directed by the author of the trust to lend, on B's request, trust-property to B's husband, C, on the security of his bond. C becomes insolvent, and B requests A to make the loan. A may refuse to make it.

12. A trustee is bound to acquaint himself, as soon as possible, with the nature and circumstances of the trust-property; to obtain where necessary, a transfer of the trust-property to himself; and (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) to get in trust-moneys invested on insufficient or hazardous security.

Trustee to inform himself of state of trust-property.

Illustrations.

(a) The trust-property is a debt outstanding on personal security. The instrument of trust gives the trustee no discretionary power to leave the debt so outstanding. The trustee's duty is to recover the debt without unnecessary delay. 4 Moo. I. A. 452.

(b) The trust-property is money in the hands of one of two co-trustees. No discretionary power is given by the instrument of trust. The other co-trustee must not allow the former to retain the money for a longer period than the circumstances of the case require. Bai Jadav v. Trikhwandas, 9 Bom. 383.

13. A trustee is bound to maintain and defend all such suits, and (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) to take such other steps as, regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the trust-property, may be reasonably requisite for the preservation of the trust-property and the assertion or protection of the title thereto.

Trustee to protect title to trust-property.

Illustration.

The trust-property is immoveable property which has been given to the author of the trust by an unregistered instrument. Subject to the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, the trustee's duty is to cause the instrument to be registered.

14. The trustee must not for himself or another set-up or aid any title to the trust-property adverse to the interest of the beneficiary.

Trustee not to set-up title adverse to beneficiary.

15. A trustee is bound to deal with the trust-property as carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would deal with such property if it were his own; and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, a trustee so dealing is not responsible for the loss, destruction or deterioration of the trust-property.

Care required from trustee.

Act IX of 1872, ss. 152.

Illustrations.

(a) A, living in Calcutta, is a trustee for B, living in Bombay. A remits trust-funds to B by bills drawn by a person of undoubted credit in favour of the trustee as such, and payable at Bombay. The bills are dishonoured. A is not bound to make good the loss.

(b) A, a trustee of leasehold property, directs the tenant to pay the rents on account of the trust to a banker, B, then in credit. The rents are accordingly paid to B, and A leaves the money with B only till wanted. Before the money is drawn out, B becomes insolvent. A, having had no reason to believe that B was in insolvent circumstances, is not bound to make good the loss.

(c) A, a trustee of two debts for B, releases one and compounds the other, in good faith, and reasonably believing that it is for B's interest to do so. A is not bound to make good any loss caused thereby to B.

(d) A, a trustee directed to sell the trust-property by auction, sells the same, but does not advertise the sale and otherwise fails in reasonable diligence in inviting competition. A is bound to make good the loss caused thereby to the beneficiary.

(e) A, a trustee for B, in execution of his trust, sells the trust-property, but from want of due diligence on his part fails to receive part of the purchase-money. A is bound to make good the loss thereby caused to B.

(f) A, a trustee for B of a policy of insurance, has funds in hand for payment of the premiums. A neglects to pay the premiums, and the policy is consequently forfeited. A is bound to make good the loss to B.

(g) A bequeathes certain monies to B and C as trustees and authorizes them to continue trust-moneys upon the personal security of a certain firm in which A had himself invested them. A dies, and a change takes place in the firm. B and C must not permit the monies to remain upon the personal security of the new firm.

(h) A, a trustee for B, allows the trust to be executed solely by his co-trustee, C. C misapplies the trust-property. A is personally answerable for the loss resulting to B.

16. Where the trust is created for the benefit of several persons in succession, and the trust-property is of a wasting nature or a future or reversionary interest, the trustee is bound, unless an intention to the contrary may be inferred from the instrument of trust, to convert the property into property of a permanent and immediately profitable character.

Conversion of perishable property.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeathes to B all his property in trust for C during his life, and on his death for D, and on D's death for E. A's property consists of three leasehold houses, and there is nothing in A's will to show that he intended the houses to be enjoyed in specie. B should sell the houses, and invest the proceeds in accordance with section twenty.

(b) A bequeathes to B his three leasehold houses in Calcutta and all the furniture therein in trust for C during his life, and on his death for D, and on D's death for E. Here an intention that the houses and furniture should be enjoyed in specie appears clearly, and B should not sell them.

17. Where there are more beneficiaries than one, the trustee is bound to be impartial, and must not execute the trust for the advantage of one at the expense of another.

Trustee to be impartial.

Where the trustee has a discretionary power, nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the Court to control the exercise reasonably and in good faith of such discretion.

Illustration.

A, a trustee for B, C and D, is empowered to choose between several specified modes of investing the trust-property. A in good faith chooses one of these modes. The Court will not interfere, although the result of the choice may be to vary the relative rights of B, C and D.

18. Where the trust is created for the benefit of several persons in succession and one of them is in possession of the trust-property, if he commits, or threatens to commit, any act which is destructive or permanently injurious thereto, the trustee is bound to take measures to prevent such act.

Trustee to prevent waste.

19. A trustee is bound (a) to keep clear and accurate accounts of the trust-property, and (b), at all reasonable times, at the request of the beneficiary, to furnish him with full and accurate information as to the amount and state of the trust-property.

Accounts and information.

20. Where the trust-property consists of money and cannot be applied immediately or at an early date to the purposes of the trust, the trustee is bound (subject to any direction contained in the instrument of trust) to invest the money on the following securities, and on no others:—

Investment of trust-money.

Act XXVIII of 1866, ss. 5 and 32.

As to the necessity of some such provisions, see DeSouza v. DeSouza, 12 Bom 184.

(a) in promissory notes, debentures, stock or other securities of the Government of India, or of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland;

Cf. 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, s. 25.

(b) in bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India;

(c) in stock or debentures of, or shares in, Railway or other Companies the interest whereon shall have been guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council;

Cf. 32 & 33 Vic., c. 132, s. 2.

(d) in debentures or other securities for money issued by, or on behalf of, any municipal body under the authority of any Act of a legislature established in British India;

Cf. 34 & 35 Vic., c. 47, s. 13.

(e) on a first mortgage of immoveable property situate in British India: Provided that the property is not a leasehold for a term of years and that the value of the property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money; or

(f) upon any other security expressly authorized by the instrument of trust, or by any rule which the High Court may from time to time prescribe in this behalf.

Provided that, where there is a person competent to contract and entitled in possession to receive the income of the trust-property for his life, or for any greater estate, no investment on any security mentioned or referred to in clauses (d), (e) and (f) shall be made without his consent in writing.

The Statute excepts investment on Consols.

21. Nothing in section twenty shall apply to investments made before this Act comes into force, or shall be deemed to preclude an investment on a mortgage of immoveable property already pledged as security for an advance under the Land Improvement Act, 1871, or, in case the trust-money does not exceed three thousand rupees, a deposit thereof in a Government Savings Bank.

Mortgage of land pledged to Government under Act XXVI of 1871.

Deposit in Government Savings Bank.

27 & 28 Vic., c. 114, s. 61.

22. Where a trustee directed to sell within a specified time extends such time, the burden of proving, as between himself and the beneficiary, that the latter is not prejudiced by the extension lies upon the trustee, unless the extension has been authorized by a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.

Sale by trustee directed to sell within specified time.

Illustration.

A bequeathes property to B, directing him with all convenient speed and within five years to sell it, and apply the proceeds for the benefit of C. In the exercise of reasonable discretion, B postpones the sale for six years. The sale is not thereby rendered invalid, but C, alleging that he has been injured by the postponement, institutes a suit against B to obtain compensation. In such suit the burden of proving that C has not been injured lies on B.

23. Where the trustee commits a breach of trust, he is liable to make good the loss which the trust-property or the beneficiary has thereby sustained, unless the beneficiary has by fraud induced the trustee to commit the breach, or the beneficiary being competent to contract, has himself, without coercion or undue influence having been brought to bear on him, concurred in the breach, or subsequently acquiesced therein, with full knowledge of the facts of the case and of his rights as against the trustee.

Liability for breach of trust.

A trustee committing a breach of trust is not liable to pay interest except in the following cases:—

(a) where he has actually received interest:

(b) where the breach consists in unreasonable delay in paying trust-money to the beneficiary:

(c) where the trustee ought to have received interest, but has not done so:

(d) where he may be fairly presumed to have received interest.

He is liable in case (a) to account for the interest actually received, and, in cases (b), (c) and (d), to account for simple interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, unless the Court otherwise directs.

(e) Where the breach consists in failure to invest trust-money and to accumulate the interest or dividends thereon, he is liable to account for compound interest (with half-yearly rests) at the same rate.

(f) Where the breach consists in the employment of trust-property or the proceeds thereof in trade or business, he is liable to account, at the option of the beneficiary, either for compound interest (with half-yearly rests) at the same rate, or for the net profits made by such employment.

Illustrations.

(a) A trustee improperly leaves trust-property outstanding, and it is consequently lost: he is liable to make good the property lost, but he is not liable to pay interest thereon.

(b) A bequeathes a house to B in trust to sell it and pay the proceeds to C. B neglects to sell the house for a great length of time, whereby the house is deteriorated and its market price falls. B is answerable to C for the loss.

(c) A trustee is guilty of unreasonable delay in investing trust-money in accordance with section twenty, or in paying it to the beneficiary. The trustee is liable to pay interest thereon for the period of the delay.

(d) The duty of the trustee is to invest trust-money in any of the securities mentioned in section twenty, clause (a), (b), (c) or (d). Instead of so doing, he retains the money in his hands. He is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, to be charged either with the amount of the principal money and interest, or with the amount of such securities which he might have purchased with the trust-money when the investment should have been made, and the intermediate dividends and interest thereon.

(e) The instrument of trust directs the trustee to invest trust-money either in any of such securities or on mortgage of immoveable property. The trustee does neither. He is liable for the principal money and interest.

(f) The instrument of trust directs the trustee to invest trust-money in any of such securities and to accumulate the dividends thereon. The trustee disregards the direction. He is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, to be charged either with the amount of the principal money and compound interest, or with the amount of such securities which he might have purchased with the trust-money when the investment should have been made, together with the amount of the accumulations which would have arisen from a proper investment of the intermediate dividends.

(g) Trust-property is invested in one of the securities mentioned in section twenty, clause (a) (b), (c) or (d). The trustee sells such security for some purpose not authorized by the terms of the instrument of trust. He is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, either to replace the security with the intermediate dividends and interest thereon, or to account for the proceeds of the sale with interest thereon.

(h) The trust-property consists of land. The trustee sells the land to a purchaser for a consideration without notice of the trust. The trustee is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, to purchase other land of equal value to be settled upon the like trust, or to be charged with the proceeds of the sale with interest.

24. A trustee who is liable for a loss occasioned by a breach of trust in respect of one portion of the trust-property cannot set-off against his liability a gain which has accrued to another portion of the trust-property through another and distinct breach of trust.

No set-off allowed to trustee.

25. Where a trustee succeeds another, he is not, as such, liable for the acts or defaults of his predecessor.

Non-liability for predecessor's default.

26. Subject to the provisions of sections thirteen and fifteen, one trustee is not, as such, liable for a breach of trust committed by his co-trustee:

Non-liability for co-trustee's default.

Provided that, in the absence of an express declaration to the contrary in the instrument of trust, a trustee is so liable—

(a) where he has delivered trust-property to his co-trustee without seeing to its proper application: Act I of 1877, s. 54, ill. (b).

(b) where he allows his co-trustee to receive trust-property and fails to make due enquiry as to the co-trustee's dealings therewith, or allows him to retain it longer than the circumstances of the case reasonably require:

(c) where he becomes aware of a breach of trust committed or intended by his co-trustee, and either actively conceals it or does not within a reasonable time take proper steps to protect the beneficiary's interest.

A co-trustee who joins in signing a receipt for trust-property and proves that he has not received the same is not answerable, by reason of such signature only, for loss or misapplication of the property by his co-trustee.

Joining in receipt for conformity.

Illustration.

A bequeathes certain property to B and C, and directs them to sell it and invest the proceeds for the benefit of D. B and C accordingly sell the property, and the purchase-money is received by B and retained in his hands. C pays no attention to the matter for two years and then calls on B to make the investment. B is unable to do so, becomes insolvent, and the purchase-money is lost. C may be compelled to make good the amount.

27. Where co-trustees jointly commit a breach of trust, or where one of them by his neglect enables the other to commit a breach of trust, each is liable to the beneficiary for the whole of the loss occasioned by such breach.

Several liability of co-trustees.

But as between the trustees themselves, if one be less guilty than another and has had to refund the loss, the former may compel the latter, or his legal representative to the extent of the assets he has received, to make good such loss; and if all be equally guilty, any one or more of the trustees who has had to refund the loss may compel the others to contribute.

Contribution as between co-trustees.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize a trustee who has been guilty of fraud to institute a suit to compel contribution.

28. When any beneficiary's interest becomes vested in another person, and the trustee, not having notice of the vesting, pays or delivers trust-property to the person who would have been entitled thereto in the absence of such vesting, the trustee is not liable for the property so paid or delivered.

Non-liability of trustee paying without notice of transfer by beneficiary.

29. When the beneficiary's interest is forfeited or awarded by legal adjudication to Government, the trustee is bound to hold the trust-property to the extent of such interest for the benefit of such person in such manner as the Government may direct in this behalf.

Liability of trustee where beneficiary's interest is forfeited to Government.

30. Subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust and of sections twenty-three and twenty-six, trustees shall be respectively chargeable only for such moneys, stocks, funds and securities as they respectively actually receive, and shall not be answerable the one for the other of them, nor for any banker, broker or other person in whose hands any trust-property may be placed, nor for the insufficiency or deficiency of any stocks, funds or securities, nor otherwise for involuntary losses.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 37, shortened. See sections 15 & 26 supra.

Indemnity of trustees.

OF THE RIGHTS AND POWERS OF TRUSTEES.

31. A trustee is entitled to have in his possession the instrument of trust and (if any) relating solely to the trust-property.

Right to title-deeds.

32. In addition to the powers expressly conferred by this Act and by the instrument of trust, and subject to the restrictions, if any, contained in such instrument, and to the provisions of section seventeen, a trustee may do all acts which are reasonable and proper for the realization, protection or benefit of the trust-property, and for the protection or support of a beneficiary who is not competent to contract.

General authority of trustee.

Every trustee in the actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of land as defined in the Land Improvement Act, 1871, shall, for the purposes of that Act, be deemed to be a landlord in possession.

27 & 28 Vic. c. 114.

Except with the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, no trustee shall lease trust-property for a term exceeding twenty-one years from the date of executing the lease, nor without reserving the best yearly rent that can be reasonably gotten.

33. A person other than a trustee who has gained an advantage from a breach of trust must indemnify the trustee to the extent of the amount actually received by such person under the breach; and where he is a beneficiary the trustee has a charge on his interest for such amount.

Right to indemnity from gainer by breach of trust.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle a trustee to be indemnified who has, in committing the breach of trust, been guilty of fraud.

34. Any trustee may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction for its opinion, advice or direction on any present questions respecting the management or administration of the trust-property other than questions of detail, difficulty or importance, not proper for summary disposal.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 43.

Right to apply to Court for opinion in management of trust-property.

A copy of such petition shall be served upon, and the hearing thereof may be attended by, such of the persons interested in the application as the Court thinks fit.

The trustee stating in good faith the facts in such petition and acting upon the opinion, advice or direction given by the Court shall be deemed, so far as regards his own responsibility, to have discharged his duty as such trustee in the subject-matter of the application.

The costs of every application under this section shall be in the discretion of the Court to which it is made.

35. When the duties of a trustee, as such, are completed, he is entitled to have the accounts of his administration of the trust-property examined and settled; and where nothing is due to the beneficiary under the trust, to an acknowledgment in writing to that effect.

Right to settlement of accounts.

36. Every trustee may reimburse himself, or pay or discharge out of the trust-property, all expenses properly incurred in or about the execution of the trust, or the realization, preservation or benefit of the trust-property, or the protection or support of the beneficiary.

Right to reimbursement of expenses.

If he pays such expenses out of his own pocket he has a first charge upon the trust-property for such expenses and interest thereon; but such charge (unless the expenses have been incurred with the sanction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction) shall be enforced only by prohibiting any disposition of the trust-property without previous payment of such expenses and interest.

If the trust-property fail, the trustee is entitled to recover from the beneficiary personally on whose behalf he acted, and at whose request, expressed or implied, he made the payment, the amount of such expenses.

Where a trustee has by mistake made an over-payment to the beneficiary, he may reimburse the trust-property out of the beneficiary's interest. If such interest fail, the trustee is entitled to recover from the beneficiary personally the amount of such over-payment.

Right to be recouped for erroneous overpayment.

37. Where the trustee is empowered to sell any trust-property, he may sell the same either together or in lots, and either by public auction or private contract, and either at one time or at several times, unless the instrument of trust otherwise directs.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 2, extended to moveables.

Power to sell in lots, and either by public auction or private contract.

Power to buy-in and re-sell.

Where a trustee is directed to sell trust-property or to invest trust-money in the purchase of property, he may exercise a reasonable discretion as to the time of effecting the sale or purchase.

Time allowed for selling trust-property.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeathes property to B, directing him to sell it with all convenient speed and pay the proceeds to C. This does not render an immediate sale imperative.

(b) A bequeathes property to B, directing him to sell it at such time and in such manner as he shall think fit and invest the proceeds for the benefit of C. This does not authorize B, as between him and C, to postpone the sale to an indefinite period.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 4.

39. For the purpose of completing any such sale, the trustee shall have power to convey or otherwise dispose of the property sold in such manner as may be necessary.

Power to convey.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 32.

40. A trustee may, at his discretion, call in any trust-property invested in any security and invest the same on any of the securities mentioned in section twenty, and from time to time vary any such investments for others of the same nature:

Power to vary investments.

Provided that, where there is a person competent to contract and entitled at the time to receive the income of the trust-property for his life, or for any greater estate, no such change of investment shall be made without his consent in writing.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 33.

41. Where any property is held by a trustee in trust for a minor, such trustee may, at his discretion, pay to the guardians (if any) of such minor, or otherwise apply for or towards his maintenance or education or advancement in life, or the reasonable expenses of his marriage or funeral, the whole or any part of the income to which he may be entitled in respect of such property; and such trustee shall accumulate all the residue of such income by way of compound interest, by investing the same and the resulting income thereof from time to time in any of the securities mentioned or referred to in section twenty, for the benefit of the person who shall ultimately become entitled to the property from which such accumulations have arisen: Provided that such trustee may, at any time, if he thinks fit, apply the whole or any part of such accumulations as if the same were part of the income arising in the then current year.

Power to apply property of minors, &c., for their maintenance, &c.

Where the income of the trust-property is insufficient for the minor's maintenance or education or advancement in life, or the reasonable expenses of his marriage or funeral, the trustee may, with the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, but not otherwise, apply the whole or any part of such property for or towards such maintenance, education, advancement or expenses.

See Acts XL of 1858, XX of 1864 and XIII of 1874.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any local law for the time being in force relating to the persons and property of minors.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 36, shortened.

42. A trustee may give a receipt in writing for any money paid or property transferred to him by reason or in the exercise of any trust reposed in him, and, in the absence of fraud, such receipt shall discharge the person paying or transferring the same therefrom, and from seeing to the application thereof or being accountable for any loss or misapplication thereof.

Power to give receipts.

43. When an authority to deal with the trust-property is given to several trustees and one of them disclaims or dies, the authority may be exercised by the continuing trustees, unless from the terms of the instrument of trust it is apparent that the authority is to be exercised by a number in excess of the number of the remaining trustees.

Power to several trustees of whom one disclaims or dies.

44. Where a decree has been made in a suit for the execution of a trust, the trustee must not exercise any of his powers except in conformity with such decree, or with the sanction of the Court by which the decree has been made, or, where an appeal against the decree is pending, of the Appellate Court.

Suspension of trustee's powers by decree.

CHAPTER V.

OF THE DISABILITIES OF TRUSTEES.

45. A trustee who has accepted the trust cannot afterwards renounce it except (a) with the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, or (b), if the beneficiary is competent to contract, with his consent, or (c) by virtue of a special power in the instrument of trust.

Trustee cannot renounce after acceptance.

3 Calc. Rep.

46. A trustee cannot delegate his office or any of his duties either to a co-trustee or to a stranger, unless (a) the instrument of trust so provides, or (b) the delegation is in the regular course of business, or (c) the delegation is necessary, or (d) the beneficiary, being competent to contract, consents to the delegation.

Trustee cannot delegate.

Explanation.—The appointment of an attorney or proxy to do an act merely ministerial and involving no independent discretion is not a delegation within the meaning of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeathes certain property to B and C on certain trusts to be executed by them or the survivor of them or the assigns of such survivor. B dies. C may bequeath the trust-property to D and E upon the trusts of A's will.

(b) A is a trustee of certain property with power to sell the same. A may employ an auctioneer to effect the sale.

(c) A bequeathes to B fifty houses let at monthly rents in trust to collect the rents and pay them to C. B may employ a proper person to collect these rents.

47. When there are more trustees than one, all must join in the execution of the trust, except where the instrument of trust otherwise provides.

Co-trustees cannot act singly.

48. Where a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is not exercised reasonably and in good faith, such power may be controlled by a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.

Control of discretionary power.

6 Beng. 278.

49. In the absence of express directions to the contrary contained in the instrument of trust or of a contract to the contrary entered into with the beneficiary or the Court at the time of accepting the trust, a trustee has no right to remuneration for his trouble, skill and loss of time in executing the trust.

Trustee may not charge for services.

As to them, see Acts XVII of 1864, II of 1874, XX of 1858, and XX of 1864.

Nothing in this section applies to any Official Trustee, Administrator General, Public Curator, or person holding a certificate of administration.

50. A trustee may not use or deal with the trust-property for his own profit or for any other purpose unconnected with the trust.

Trustee may not use trust-property for his own profit.

51. No trustee whose duty it is to sell trust-property, and no agent employed by such trustee for the purpose of the sale, may, directly or indirectly, buy the same or any interest therein, on his own account or as agent for a third person.

Trustee for sale or his agent may not buy.

52. No trustee, and no person who has recently ceased to be a trustee, may, without the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, buy or become mortgagee or lessee of the trust-property or any part thereof; and such permission shall not be given unless the proposed purchase, mortgage or lease is manifestly for the advantage of the beneficiary.

Trustee may not buy beneficiary's interest without permission.

And no trustee whose duty it is to buy or to obtain a mortgage or lease of particular property for the beneficiary may buy it, or any part thereof, or obtain a mortgage or lease of it, or any part thereof, to invest trust-money on mortgage or personal security must not invest it on a mortgage by, or on the personal security of, himself or one of his co-trustees.

Trustee for purchase.

Co-trustees may not lend to one of themselves.

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF THE BENEFICIARY.

Lewin 576, 586.

54. The beneficiary has, subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust, a right to the rents and profits of the trust-property.

Rights to rents and profits.

Act I of 1877, s. 12, cl. (a).

55. The beneficiary is entitled to have the intention of the author of the trust specifically executed to the extent of the beneficiary's interest; and where there is only one beneficiary and he is competent to contract, or where there are several beneficiaries and they are competent to contract and all of one mind, he or they may require the trustee to transfer the trust-property to him or them, or to such person as he or they may direct.

Right to specific execution.

3 Beng. A. C. J. 409: 3 Beng. O. C. J. 92.

Right to transfer of possession.

When property has been transferred or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of her beneficial interest, nothing in the second clause of this section applies to such property during her marriage.

Illustrations.

(a) Certain Government securities are given to trustees upon trust to accumulate the interest until A attains the age of 24, and then to transfer the gross amount to him. A on attaining majority may, as the person exclusively interested in the trust-property, require the trustees to transfer it immediately to him.

(b) A bequeathes Rs. 10,000 to trustees upon trust to purchase an annuity for B, who has attained his majority and is otherwise competent to contract. B may claim the Rs. 10,000.

(c) A transfers certain property to B and directs him to sell or invest it for the benefit of C, who is competent to contract. C may elect to take the property in its original character.

56. The beneficiary has a right as against the trustee and all persons claiming under him with notice of the trust to inspect and take copies of the instrument of trust, the documents of title relating solely to the trust-property, the accounts of the trust-property and the vouchers (if any) by which they are supported, and the cases submitted and opinions taken by the trustee for his guidance in the discharge of his duty.

Right to inspect and take copies of instrument of trust, accounts, &c.

57. The beneficiary, if competent to contract, may transfer his interest, but subject to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which he may dispose of such interest:

Right to transfer beneficial interest.

Provided that when property is transferred or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of her beneficial interest, nothing in this section shall authorize her to transfer such interest during her marriage.

58. Where no trustees are appointed or all the trustees die, disclaim or are [illegible] or becomes impracticable, the beneficiary may institute a suit for the execution of the trust, and the trust shall, so far as may be possible, be executed by the Court until the appointment of a trustee or new trustee.

Right to sue for execution of a trust by the Court.

59. The beneficiary has a right (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) that the trust-property shall be properly protected and held and administered by proper persons and by a proper number of such persons.

Right to proper trustees.

Explanation I.—The following are not proper persons within the meaning of this section:—

A person domiciled abroad: an alien enemy: a person having an interest inconsistent with that of the beneficiary: a person in insolvent circumstances; and, unless the personal law of the beneficiary allows otherwise, a married woman and a minor.

Explanation II.—When the administration of the trust involves the receipt and custody of money, the number of trustees should be two at least.

Illustrations.

(a) A, one of several beneficiaries, proves that B, the trustee, has improperly disposed of part of the trust-property, or that the property is in danger from B's being in insolvent circumstances, or that he is incapacitated from acting as trustee. A may obtain a receiver of the trust-property.

(b) A bequeathes certain jewels to B in trust for C. B dies during A's lifetime; then A dies. C is entitled to have the property conveyed to a trustee for him.

(c) A conveys certain property to four trustees in trust for B. Three of the trustees die. B may institute a suit to have three new trustees appointed in the place of the deceased trustees.

(d) A conveys certain property to three trustees in trust for B. All the trustees disclaim. B may institute a suit to have three trustees appointed in place of the trustees so disclaiming.

(e) A, a trustee for B, refuses to act, or goes to reside permanently out of British India, or is declared an insolvent or compounds with his creditors, or suffers a co-trustee to commit a breach of trust. B may institute a suit to have A removed and a new trustee appointed in his room.

Act I of 1877, s. 54.

60. The beneficiary has a right that his trustee shall be compelled to perform any particular act of his duty as such, and restrained from committing any contemplated or probable breach of trust.

Right to compel to any act of duty.

Illustrations.

(a) A contracts with B to pay him monthly Rs. 100 for the benefit of C. B writes and signs a letter declaring that he will hold in trust for C the money so to be paid. A fails to pay the money in accordance with his contract. C may compel B on a proper indemnity to allow C to sue on the contract in B's name.

Act I of 1877, s. 54, ill. (f).

(b) A is trustee of certain land, with a power to sell the same and pay the proceeds to B and C equally. A is about to make an improvident sale of the land. B may sue on behalf of himself and C for an injunction to restrain A from making the sale.

61. Where a trustee has wrongfully bought trust-property, the beneficiary has a right to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred by the trustee, if it remains in his hands unsold, or, if it has been bought from him by any person with notice of the trust, by such person. But in such case the beneficiary must repay the purchase-money paid by the trustee, with interest, and such other expenses (if any) as he has properly incurred in connection with the purchase, and the trustee or purchaser must (a) account for the net profits of the property, (b) be charged with an occupation-rent, if he has been in actual possession of the property, and (c) allow the beneficiary to deduct a proportionate part of the purchase-money if the property has been deteriorated by the acts or omissions of the trustee or purchaser.

Wrongful purchase by trustee.

Nothing in this section—

(a) impairs the rights of lessees and others who, before the institution of a suit to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred, have contracted in good faith with the trustee or purchaser; or

(b) entitles the beneficiary to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred where he, being competent to contract, has himself, without coercion or undue influence having been brought to bear on him, ratified the sale to the trustee with full knowledge of the facts of the case and of his rights as against the trustee.

6 Ben. O. C. 1; 10 I. L. R. 3 Bom. 397.

62. Where trust property comes into the hands of a third person inconsistently with the trust, the beneficiary may require him to admit formally, or may institute a suit for a declaration, that the property is comprised in the trust.

Following trust-property—into the hands of third persons;

Where the trustee has disposed of trust-property and the money or other property which he has received therefor can be traced in his hands, or the hands of his legal representative or legatee, the beneficiary has, in respect thereof, rights as nearly as may be the same as his rights in respect of the original trust-property.

into that into which it has been converted.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a trustee for B of Rs. 10,000, wrongfully invests the Rs. 10,000 in the purchase of certain land. B is entitled to the land.

(b) A, a trustee, wrongfully purchases land in his own name, partly with his own money, partly with money subject to a trust for B. B is entitled to a charge on the land for the amount of the trust-money so misemployed.

63. Nothing in section sixty-two entitles the beneficiary to any right in respect of property in the hands of—

Saving of rights of certain transferees.

As to movables, see Act IX of 1872, s. 108.

(a) a transferee in good faith for consideration without having notice of the trust, either when the purchase-money was paid, or when the conveyance was executed, or—

5 W. R. 120: W. R. 1864, p. 225.

(b) a transferee for consideration from such a transferee.

A judgment-creditor of the trustee attaching and purchasing trust-property is not a transferee for consideration within the meaning of this section.

Nothing in section sixty-two applies to money, currency notes and negotiable instruments in the hands of a bonâ fide holder to whom they have passed in circulation, or shall be deemed to affect the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 108, or the liability of a person to whom a debt or charge is transferred.

64. Where a trustee wrongfully sells or otherwise transfers trust-property and afterwards buys it, he is bound to convey the property to the purchaser and the trust, notwithstanding any want of notice on the part of intervening transferees in good faith for consideration.

Acquisition by trustee of trust-property wrongfully sold.

65. Where the trustee wrongfully mingles the trust-property with his own, the beneficiary is entitled to a charge on the whole fund for the amount due to him.

Cf. Contract Act, s. 157.

Right in case of blended property.

66. If a partner, being a trustee, wrongfully employs trust-property in the business or on the account of the partnership, no other partner is liable therefor in his personal capacity to the beneficiaries, unless he had notice of the breach of trust.

Wrongful employment by partner-trustee of trust-property for partnership purposes.

The partners having such notice are jointly and severally liable for the breach of trust.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B are partners. A dies, having bequeathed all his property to B in trust for Z, and appointed B his sole executor. B, instead of winding-up the affairs of the partnership, retains all the assets in the business. Z may compel him, as partner, to account for so much of the profits as are derived from A's share of the capital. B is also answerable to Z for the improper employment of A's assets.

(b) A, a trader, bequeaths his property to B in trust for C, appoints B his sole executor, and dies. B enters into partnership with X and Y in the same trade, and employs A's assets in the partnership-business. B gives an indemnity to X and Y against the claims of C. Here X and Y are jointly liable with B to C as having knowingly become parties to the breach of trust committed by B.

67. Where one of several beneficiaries—

Liability of beneficiary joining in breach of trust.

(a) joins in committing breach of trust, or

(b) knowingly obtains any advantage therefrom, without the consent of the other beneficiaries, or

(c) becomes aware of a breach of trust committed or intended to be committed, and either actually conceals it, or does not within a reasonable time take proper steps to protect the interests of the other beneficiaries, or the other beneficiaries are entitled to have all his beneficial interest impounded as against him and all who claim under him (otherwise than as transferees for consideration without notice of the breach) until the loss caused by the breach has been compensated.

(d) has deceived the trustee and thereby induced him to commit a breach of trust,

When property has been transferred or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of her beneficial interest, nothing in this section applies to such property during her marriage.

68. Every person to whom a beneficiary transfers his interest has the rights, and is subject to the liabilities, of the beneficiary in respect of such interest at the date of the transfer.

Rights and liabilities of beneficiary's transferee.

CHAPTER VII.

OF VACATING THE OFFICE OF TRUSTEE.

69. The office of a trustee [illegible] only as follows:—

'under express authority conferred by.'

Discharge of trustee.

(a) by the extinction of the trust;

(b) by the completion of his duties under the trust;

(c) by such means as may be prescribed by the instrument of trust;

(d) by appointment under this Act of a new trustee in his place;

(e) by consent of himself and the beneficiary, or, where there are more beneficiaries than one, all the beneficiaries being competent to contract, or

(f) by the Court to which a petition for his discharge is presented under this Act.

71. Notwithstanding the provisions of section eleven, every trustee may apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction to be discharged from his office; and, if the Court finds that there is sufficient reason for such discharge, it may discharge him accordingly, and direct his costs to be paid out of the trust-property. But where there is no such reason, the Court shall not discharge him, unless a proper person can be found to take his place.

Petition to be discharged from trust.

Act XXVIII of 1866, s. 24; 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, s. 27.

72. Whenever any person appointed a trustee disclaims, or any trustee dies, or is for a continuous period of six months absent from British India, or leaves British India for the purpose of residing abroad, or is declared an insolvent, or desires to be discharged from the trust, or refuses or becomes, in the opinion of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, unfit or personally incapable to act in the trust, or accepts an inconsistent trust, a new trustee may be appointed in his place by—Appointment of new trustees on death, &c.

(a) the person nominated for that purpose by the instrument of trust (if any), or

(b) if there be no such person, or no such person able and willing to act, the author of the trust if he be alive and competent to contract, or the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee for the time being, or legal representative of the last surviving and continuing trustee, or the retiring trustees, if they all retire simultaneously, or the last retiring trustee. 5 Beng. 184.

Every such appointment shall be by writing under the hand of the person making it.

The Official Trustee may, with his consent and by the order of the Court, be appointed under this section, in any case in which only one trustee is to be appointed and such trustee is to be the sole trustee.

For the purposes of this section, any refusing or retiring trustee shall, if willing to act in the execution of the power, be considered a continuing trustee.

73. Whenever any such vacancy or disqualification occurs and it is found impracticable to appoint a new trustee under section seventy-two, the beneficiary may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction for the appointment of a trustee or a [illegible] and the Court may appoint a trustee Appointment by Court.

In appointing new trustees, the Court shall have regard (a) to the wishes of the author of the trust as expressed in or to be inferred from the instrument of trust; (b) to the wishes of the person, if any, empowered to appoint new trustees; (c) to the question whether the appointment will promote or impede the execution of the trust, and (d) where there are more beneficiaries than one, to the interests of all such beneficiaries.

Rule for selecting new trustees.

74. Whenever any new trustee is appointed under section seventy-two or section seventy-three, all the trust-property for the time being vested in the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or in the legal representative of any trustee, shall become vested in such new trustee, either solely or jointly with the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee as the case may require.

Vesting of trust-property in new trustees.

Every new trustee so appointed, and every trustee appointed by a Court either before or after the passing of this Act, shall have the same powers, authorities and discretions, and shall in all respects act, as if he had been originally nominated a trustee by the author of the trust.

Powers of new trustees.

75. On the death or discharge of one of several co-trustees, the trust survives, and the trust property passes to the others, unless the instrument of trust expressly declares otherwise.

Survival of trust.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE EXTINCTION OF TRUSTS.

Trust how extinguished.

76. A trust is extinguished—

(a) when its purpose is completely fulfilled; or

(b) when its purpose becomes unlawful; or

(c) when the fulfilment of its purpose becomes impossible by destruction of the trust-property or otherwise; or

(d) when the trust, being revocable, is expressly revoked.

Revocation of trust.

77. A trust created by will may be revoked at the pleasure of the testator.

A trust otherwise created can be revoked only—

Jijibhai v. Sonabhai, 2 Bom. 139. N. W. P., 1870, p. 420.

(a) where all the beneficiaries are competent to contract—by their consent;

(b) where the trust has been declared by a non-testamentary instrument or by word of mouth—in exercise of a power of revocation expressly reserved to the author of the trust; or

(c) where the trust is for the payment of the debts of the author of the trust, and has not been communicated to the creditors—at the pleasure of the author of the trust.

Illustration.

A conveys property to B in trust to sell the same and pay out of the proceeds the claims of A's creditors. A reserves no power of revocation. If no communication has been made to the creditors, A may revoke the trust. But if the creditors are parties to the arrangement, the trust cannot be revoked without their consent.

Effect what trustees have duly done.

78. No trust can be revoked by the author of the trust so as to defeat or prejudice acts which the trustees may have duly done in execution of the trust.

CHAPTER IX.

OF CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS IN THE NATURE OF TRUSTS.

Where obligation in nature of trust is created.

79. An obligation in the nature of a trust is created in the following cases.

Where it does not appear that transferor intended to dispose of beneficial interest.

80. Where the owner of property transfers or bequeathes it and it cannot be inferred consistently with the attendant circumstances that he intended to dispose of the beneficial interest therein, the transferee or legatee must hold such property for the benefit of the owner or his legal representative.

Illustrations.

(a) A conveys land to B without consideration and declares no trust of any part. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in the land. B holds the land for the benefit of A.

(b) A conveys to B two fields, Y and Z, and declares a trust of Y, but says nothing about Z. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in Z. B holds Z for the benefit of A.

(c) A transfers certain stock into the joint names of himself and B. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in the stock during his life. A and B hold the stock for the benefit of A during his life.

(d) A makes a gift of certain land to his wife B. She takes the beneficial interest in the land free from any trust in favour of A, for it may be inferred from the circumstances that the gift was for B's benefit.

Transfer to one for consideration paid by another.

81. Where property is transferred to one person for a consideration paid or provided by another person, and it appears that such other person did not intend to pay or provide such consideration for the benefit of the transferee, the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the person paying or providing the consideration.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Code of Civil Procedure, section 317, or Act No. XI of 1859 (to improve the law relating to sales of land for arrears of revenue in the Lower Provinces under the Bengal Presidency), section 36.

Trust incapable of execution or executed without exhausting trust-property.

I. L. R. 2 Bom. 410.

82. Where a trust is incapable of being executed, or where the trust is completely executed without exhausting the trust-property, the trustee, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, must hold the trust-property, or so much thereof as is unexhausted, for the benefit of the author of the trust or his legal representative.

Illustrations.

(a) A conveys certain land to B—
"upon trust," and no trust is declared, or "upon trust to be thereafter declared," and no such declaration is ever made; or upon trusts that are too vague to be executed; upon trusts that become incapable of taking effect; or
"in trust for C," and C renounces his interest under the trust.

In each of these cases B holds the land for the benefit of A.

(b) A transfers Rs. 10,000 in the four per cents. to B, in trust to pay the interest annually accruing due to C for her life. A dies. Then C dies. B holds the fund for the benefit of A.

(c) A conveys land to B upon trust for the maintenance of the worship of an idol. B sells the land, but the charitable purposes wholly fail, and the maintenance of the worship does not exhaust the second moiety of the proceeds. B holds the first moiety and the part unapplied of the second moiety for the benefit of A or his legal representative.

(d) A bequeathes Rs. 10,000 to B, to be laid out in buying land to be conveyed for purposes which either wholly or partially fail to take effect. B holds for the benefit of A's legal representative the undisposed of interest in the money or land if purchased.

Transfer for illegal purpose.

83. Where the owner of property transfers it to another for an illegal purpose and such purpose is not carried into execution, or the transferor is not as guilty as the transferee, or the effect of permitting the transferee to retain the property might be to defeat the provisions of any law, the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the transferor.

Bequest for illegal purpose.

84. Where a testator bequeathes certain property upon trust and the purpose of the trust appears on the face of the will to be unlawful, or during the testator's lifetime the legatee agrees with him to apply the property for an unlawful purpose, the legatee must hold the property for the benefit of the testator's legal representative.

Bequest of which revocation is prevented by coercion.

Where property is bequeathed and the revocation of the bequest is prevented by coercion, the legatee must hold the property for the benefit of the testator's legal representative.

See Act I of 1877, s. 35.

Transfer pursuant to rescindible contract.

85. Where property is transferred in pursuance of a contract which is liable to rescission or induced by fraud or mistake, the transferee must, on receiving notice to that effect, hold the property for the benefit of the transferor, subject to repayment by the latter of the consideration actually paid.

Debtor becoming creditor's representative.

86. Where a debtor becomes the executor or other legal representative of his creditor, he must hold the debt for the benefit of the persons interested therein.

Act I of 1877, s. 3, ills. (b), (c), (e). L. R. 2 Ind. App. 18.

Advantage gained by fiduciary.

87. Where a trustee, executor, partner, agent, director of a company, legal adviser, or other person bound in a fiduciary character to protect the interests of another person, by availing himself of his character, gains for himself any pecuniary advantage, or where any person so bound enters into any dealings under circumstances in which his own interests are, or may be, adverse to those of such other person and thereby gains for himself a pecuniary advantage, he must hold for the benefit of such other person the advantage so gained.

Illustrations.

(a) A, an executor, buys at an undervalue from B, a legatee, his claim under the will. B is ignorant of the value of the bequest. A must hold for the benefit of B the difference between the price and value.

(b) A, a trustee, uses the trust-property for the purpose of his own business. A holds for the benefit of his beneficiary the profits arising from such user.

(c) A, a trustee, retires from his trust in consideration of his successor paying him a sum of money. A holds such money for the benefit of his beneficiary.

(d) A, a partner, buys land in his own name with funds belonging to the partnership. A holds such land for the benefit of the partnership.

(e) A, a partner, employed on behalf of himself and his co-partners in negotiating the terms of a lease, clandestinely stipulates with the lessor for payment to himself of a lákh of rupees. A holds the lákh for the benefit of the partnership.

(f) A and B are partners. A dies. B, instead of winding up the affairs of the partnership, retains all the assets in the business. B must account to A's legal representative for the profits arising from A's share of the capital.

(g) A, an agent employed to obtain a lease for B, obtains the lease for himself. A holds the lease for the benefit of B.

(h) A, a guardian, buys up for himself incumbrances on his ward B's estate at an undervalue. A holds for the benefit of B the incumbrances so bought, and can only charge him with what he has actually paid.

Advantage gained by exercise of undue influence.

88. Where by the exercise of undue influence any advantage is gained in derogation of the interests of another, the person gaining such advantage without consideration or with notice that such influence has been exercised must hold the advantage for the benefit of the person whose interests have been so prejudiced.

Act I of 1877, s. 3, ill. (g). Cf. 5 Beng. L. R. 353, mortgagee buying equity of redemption.

Advantage gained by qualified owner.

89. Where a tenant for life, co-owner, mortgagee or other qualified owner of any property, by availing himself of his position as such, gains an advantage in derogation of the rights of the other persons interested in the property, or where any such owner, as representing all persons interested in such property, gains any advantage, he must hold, for the benefit of all persons so interested, the advantage so gained, but subject to repayment by such persons of their due share of the expenses properly incurred, and to an indemnity by the same persons against liabilities properly contracted, in gaining such advantage.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the tenant for life of leasehold property, renews the lease in his own name and for his own benefit. A holds the renewed lease for the benefit of all those interested in the old lease.

(b) A village belongs to a Hindú family. A, one of its members, pays nazrána to Government and thereby procures his name to be entered as the inámdár of the village. A holds the village for the benefit of himself and the other members.

(c) A mortgages land to B, who enters into possession. B allows the Government revenue to fall into arrear with a view to the land being put up for sale and his becoming himself the purchaser of it. The land is accordingly sold to B. Subject to the repayment of the amount due on the mortgage and of his expenses properly incurred as mortgagee, B holds the land for the benefit of A. 10 Moo. I. A. 322: 14 Moo. I. A. 305.

Act I of 1877, s. 3, ills. (g), (k).

Property acquired with notice of existing contract.

90. Where a person acquires property with notice that another person has entered into an existing contract affecting that property, of which specific performance could be enforced, the former must hold the property for the benefit of the latter to the extent necessary to give effect to the contract.

Purchase by person contracting to buy property to be held on trust.

91. Where a person contracts to buy property to be held on trust for certain beneficiaries and buys the property accordingly, he must hold the property for their benefit to the extent necessary to give effect to the contract.

Advantage secretly gained by one of several compounding creditors.

92. Where creditors compound the debts due to them, and one of such creditors, by a secret arrangement with the debtor, gains an undue advantage over his co-creditors, he must hold for the benefit of such creditors the advantage so gained.

Constructive trusts in cases not expressly provided for.

93. In any case not coming within the scope of any of the preceding sections, where there is no trust, but the person having possession of property has not the whole beneficial interest therein, he must hold the property for the benefit of the persons having such interest, or the residue thereof (as the case may be), to the extent necessary to satisfy their just demands.

Illustrations.

(a) A, an executor, distributes the assets of his testator B to the legatees without having paid the whole of B's debts. The legatees hold for the benefit of B's creditors, to the extent necessary to satisfy their just demands, the assets so distributed.

(b) A by mistake assumes the character of a trustee for B, and under colour of the trust receives certain moneys. B may compel him to account for such moneys.

(c) A makes a gift of a lákh of rupees to B, reserving to himself, with B's assent, power to revoke at pleasure the gift as to Rs. 10,000. The gift is void as to Rs. 10,000, and B holds that sum for the benefit of A.

Obligor's duties, liabilities and disabilities.

94. The person holding property in accordance with any of the preceding sections of this chapter must, so far as may be, perform the same duties, and is subject, so far as may be, to the same liabilities and disabilities, as if he were a trustee of the property for the person for whose benefit he holds it:

Provided that (a) where he rightfully cultivates the property or employs it in trade or business, he is entitled to reasonable remuneration for his trouble, skill and loss of time in such cultivation or employment; and (b) where he holds the property by virtue of a contract with the person for whose benefit he holds it, or with any one through whom such person claims, he may, without the permission of the Court, buy or become lessee or mortgagee of the property or any part thereof.

95. Nothing contained in this chapter shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration, or create an obligation in evasion of any law for the time being in force.

Saving of rights of bond fide purchasers.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th July, 1881:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Easements and Licenses was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill, the portions of the report of the Indian Law Commission relating to the Bill, and the papers noted in the schedule annexed to this report.

2. As the Government of India does not wish to put the Bill in force in any territory against the wishes of the Local Government, we have made it apply, in the first instance, only to the Presidency of Madras, Coorg and the Central Provinces, and, as regards the rest of British India, made it extendible to such areas as the respective Local Governments think fit.

3. We have left out the section (5) relating to affirmative and negative easements, as its provisions were only required to explain the use of those terms in section 15, and it does not appear necessary to use them in that section.

4. In section 15, paragraph 2, which provides for the period within which a right to support can be acquired by prescription, we have inserted the words "as of right." We consider that this easement should not be acquired except in cases where the owner of the land from which the support is enjoyed has an opportunity of resisting its acquisition. No doubt, the natural secrecy of the enjoyment often makes it difficult to shew that the servient owner has been aware of the user. But where the dominant house is so constructed, or the manner of imposing the pressure is so manifest, that the servient owner may reasonably be held to have notice of the support, there seems no reason why this easement should not be acquired in the same manner as any other.

5. Paragraph 5 of section 15 of the Bill as introduced follows the existing law, as contained in section 26 of Act No. XV of 1877 (the Indian Limitation Act). It provides that the period of twenty years, the period fixed by the section for the acquisition of easements by prescription, shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested. The effect is that, in a suit in which the right to an easement is contested, the party claiming the easement must not only prove a twenty years' enjoyment, but must also prove that the enjoyment has continued within two years [illegible] of the suit. This provision was necessary when the Indian Limitation Act was passed, because there was no law to regulate the extinction of easements by non-enjoyment; but now that section 49 of the Bill (section 47 of the Bill as amended) defines the law on this subject, the rule contained in paragraph 5 of section 15 appears to be no longer required, and we have therefore omitted it. This omission has the further advantage of rendering it unnecessary to apply the doctrine contained in the recent decision of the Privy Council in the case of Raj Roop Koer v. Abdool Hoossein.

6. For explanation IV to section 15, we have substituted an illustration suggested by the case of Angus v. Dalton.

7. The provisions of clause (b), section 17, of the Bill as introduced contain a doctrine which is based on the theory of presumed grants—a theory not recognised by the Bill. We have therefore omitted this clause, and modified the explanation accordingly.

8. Section 35 of the Bill as introduced provides (in accordance with the decision in the case of the St. Helen's Smelting Company) that the fact that air or water is already polluted by a person who enjoys an easement of which the air or water is the subject does not give others the right to add to the pollution; and section 36 of the Bill as introduced declares that the continued disturbance of an easement, after compensation has been recovered for an original disturbance, gives a right to recover compensation for the continuance. We have omitted these sections, as the former does not seem likely to be of practical utility, and the latter contains an elementary rule which will more fitly find a place in a code of the law of torts.

9. We have redrawn section 45 (now 43) as to the extinction of an easement by changes in the dominant heritage, so as to express more clearly what we take to be the existing law on the subject.

10. We have also made a few verbal amendments, but the Bill in substance remains the same as settled by the Indian Law Commission. We do not see how it can be further shortened or simplified. We therefore recommend that it be passed as now amended, but that, in obedience to the orders of the Secretary of State for India, it be republished in the Gazette of India with this report; it must also be sent to the Secretary of State, published in the local Gazettes, and translated into the vernacular languages.

A Bill to define and amend the law relating to Easements and Licenses.

WHEREAS it is expedient to define and amend the law relating to Easements and Licenses; It is hereby enacted as follows: Preamble.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Easements Act, 1882": Short title.

It extends in the first instance to the territories respectively administered by the Governor of Madras in Council and the Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces and Coorg, and the Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, extend it to any other part of British India; Local extent.

and it shall come into force on the first day of March 1882. Commencement.

2. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any law not hereby expressly repealed; or to derogate from— Savings.

(a) any right of the Government to regulate the collection, retention and distribution of the water of rivers and streams flowing in natural channels, and of natural lakes and ponds, or of the water flowing, collected, retained or distributed in or by any channel or other work constructed at the public expense for irrigation;

(b) any customary or other right (not being a license) in or over immoveable property which the Government, the public or any person may possess irrespective of other immoveable property; or

(c) any right acquired, or arising out of a relation created, before this Act comes into force.

3. Sections 26 and 27 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and the definition of "easement" contained in that Act, are hereby repealed. All references to the said sections, or to sections 27 and 28 of Act No. IX of 1871, shall be read as made to sections fifteen and sixteen of this Act. Repeal of Act XV of 1877, sections 26 and 27.

CHAPTER I.—OF EASEMENTS GENERALLY.

4. An easement is a right which the owner or occupier of certain land possesses, as such, for the beneficial enjoyment of that land, to do and continue to do something, or to prevent and continue to prevent something being done, in or upon, or in respect of, certain other land not his own. "Easement" defined.

The land for the beneficial enjoyment of which the right exists is called the dominant heritage, and the owner or occupier thereof the dominant owner; the land on which the liability is imposed is called the servient heritage, and the owner or occupier thereof the servient owner. Dominant and servient heritages and owners.

Explanation.—In the first and second clauses of this section, the expression "land" includes also things permanently attached to the earth: the expression "beneficial enjoyment" includes also possible convenience, remote advantage, and even a mere amenity; and the expression "to do something" includes removal and appropriation by the dominant owner, for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, of any part of the soil of the servient heritage or anything growing or subsisting thereon.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as the owner of a certain house, has a right of way thither over his neighbour B's land for purposes connected with the beneficial enjoyment of the house. This is an easement.

(b) A, as the owner of a certain house, has the right to go on his neighbour B's land, and to take water for the purposes of his household out of a spring therein. This is an easement.

(c) A, as the owner of a certain house, has the right to conduct water from B's stream to supply the fountains in the garden attached to the house. This is an easement.

(d) A, as the owner of a certain house and farm, has the right to graze a certain number of his own cattle on B's field, or to take, for the purpose of being used in the house, by himself, his family, guests, lodgers and servants, water, or fish out of C's tank, or timber out of D's wood, or to use, for the purpose of manuring his land, the leaves which have fallen from the trees on E's land. These are easements.

(e) A dedicates to the public the right to occupy the surface of certain land for the purpose of passing and repassing. This right is not an easement.

(f) A is bound to cleanse a watercourse running through his land and keep it free from obstruction for the benefit of B, a lower riparian owner. This is not an easement.

5. Easements are either continuous or discontinuous, apparent or non-apparent. Continuous and discontinuous, apparent and non-apparent, easements.

A continuous easement is one whose exercise is or may be continual without the act of man.

A discontinuous easement is one that needs the act of man for its exercise.

An apparent easement is one that has some permanent sign of its existence, which, upon careful inspection by a competent person, would be visible to him. Pyer v. Carter, 1 H. & N. 922.

A non-apparent easement is one that has no such sign.

Illustrations.

(a) A right annexed to B's house to receive light by the windows without obstruction by his neighbour A. This is a continuous easement.

(b) A right of way annexed to A's house over B's land. This is a discontinuous easement.

(c) Rights annexed to A's land to lead water thither across B's land by an aqueduct and to draw off water thence by a drain. The drain would be discovered upon careful inspection by a person conversant with such matters. These are apparent easements.

(d) A right annexed to A's house to prevent B from building on his own land. This is a non-apparent easement.

6. An easement may be permanent, or for a term of years or other limited period, or subject to periodical interruption, or exercisable only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, or on condition that it shall commence or become void or voidable on the happening of a specified event or the performance or non-performance of a specified act. Easement for limited time or on condition.

7. Easements are restrictions of one or other of the following rights (namely) :— Easements restrictive of certain rights.

(a) The exclusive right of every owner of immoveable property (subject to any law for the time being in force) to enjoy and dispose of the same and all products thereof and accessions thereto. Exclusive right to enjoy.

(b) The right of every owner of immoveable property (subject to any law for the time being in force) to enjoy without disturbance by another the natural advantages arising from its situation. Rights to advantages arising from situation.

Illustrations of the rights above referred to.

I. W. P. (1870). pp. 139, 139. (a) The exclusive right of every owner of land in a town to build thereon, subject to any municipal law for the time being in force.

(b) The right of every owner of land that the air passing thereto shall not be unreasonably polluted by other persons.

Recognised by the High Court, N. W. P. No. 1143 of 1878, 28th November, 1878, Mahadeo Misser v. Phaikoo Singh. (c) The right of every owner of a house that his physical comfort shall not be interfered with materially and unreasonably by noise or vibration caused by any other person.

(d) The right of every owner of land to so much light and air as pass vertically thereto.

Mayor of Birmingham v. Allen, 46 L. J. Ch. (e) The right of every owner of land that such land, in its natural condition, shall have the support naturally rendered by the subjacent soil of another person.

Explanation.—Land is in its natural condition when it is not excavated and not subjected to artificial pressure; and the "subjacent and adjacent soil" mentioned in this illustration means such soil only as in its natural condition would support the dominant heritage in its natural condition.

(f) The right of every owner of land that, within his own limits, the water which naturally passes or percolates by, over or through his land shall not, before so passing or percolating, be unreasonably polluted by other persons.

(g) The right of every owner of land to collect and dispose within his own limits of all water under the land and all water on its surface which does not pass in a defined channel. Marshall 506.

(h) The right of every owner of land that the water of every natural stream which passes by, through or over his land in a defined natural channel shall be allowed by other persons to flow within such owner's limits without interruption and without material alteration in quantity, direction, force or temperature; the right of every owner of land abutting on a natural lake or pond into or out of which a natural stream flows, that the water of such lake or pond shall be allowed by other persons to remain within such owner's limits without material alteration in quantity or temperature. L. R. 6 Ind. App. 33 : 3 W. R. 218 : 13 W. R. 48 : 8 W. R. 525.

(i) The right of every owner of upper land that water naturally rising in, or falling on, such land, and not passing in defined channels, shall be allowed by the owner of adjacent lower land to run naturally thereto. 20 W. R. 287.

(j) The right of every owner of land abutting on a natural stream, lake or pond to use and consume its water for drinking, household purposes and watering his cattle and sheep; and the right of every such owner to use and consume the water for irrigating such land, and for the purposes of any manufactory situate thereon, provided that he does not thereby cause material injury to other like owners. 11 W. R. 254.

Explanation.—A natural stream is a stream, whether permanent or intermittent, tidal or tideless, on the surface of land or underground, which flows by the operation of nature only and in a natural and known course.

CHAPTER II.—THE IMPOSITION, ACQUISITION AND TRANSFER OF EASEMENTS.

8. An easement may be imposed by any one in the circumstances, and to the extent in, and to which he may transfer his interest in the heritage on which the liability is to be imposed. Who may impose

Illustrations.

(a) A is tenant of B's land under a lease for an unexpired term of twenty years, and has power to transfer his interest under the lease. A may impose an easement on the land to continue during the time that the lease exists or for any shorter period.

(b) A is tenant for his life of certain land with remainder to B absolutely. A cannot, unless with B's consent, impose an easement thereon which will continue after the determination of his life-interest.

(c) A, B and C are co-owners of certain land. A cannot, without the consent of B and C impose an easement on the land or on any part thereof.

(d) A and B are lessees of the same lessor, A of a field X for a term of five years, and B of a field Y for a term of ten years. A's interest under his lease is transferable; B's is not. A may impose on X, in favour of B, a right of way terminable with A's lease.

(e) A is the trustee of certain land for the benefit of B. A cannot, without the consent of B, impose an easement on the trust property.

9. Subject to the provisions of section eight, a servient owner may impose on the servient heritage any easement that does not lessen the utility of the existing easement. But he cannot, without the consent of the dominant owner, impose an easement on the servient heritage which would lessen such utility. Servient owners.

Illustrations.

(a) A has, in respect of his mill, a right to the uninterrupted flow thereto, from sunrise to noon, of the water of B's stream. B may grant to C the right to divert the water of the stream from noon to sunset: provided that A's supply is not thereby diminished.

(b) A has, in respect of his house, a right of way over B's land. B may grant to C, as the owner of a neighbouring farm, the right to feed his cattle on the grass growing on the way: provided that A's right of way is not thereby obstructed.

10. Subject to the provisions of section eight, a lessor may impose, on the property leased, any easement that does not derogate from the rights of the lessee as such, and a mortgagor may impose, on the property mortgaged, any easement that does not render the security insufficient. But a lessor or mortgagor cannot, without the consent of the lessee or mortgagee, impose any other easement on such property, unless it be to take effect on the termination of the lease or the redemption of the mortgage.

Lessor and mortgagor.

Explanation.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one-half, the amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

11. No lessee or other person having a derivative interest may impose on the property held by him as such an easement to take effect after the expiration of his own interest or in derogation of the right of the lessor or the superior proprietor.

Lessee.

12. An easement may be acquired by the owner of the immoveable property for the beneficial enjoyment of which the right is created, or on his behalf, by any person in possession of the same.

Who may acquire easements.

One of two or more co-owners of immoveable property may, as such, with or without the consent of the other or others, acquire an easement for the beneficial enjoyment of such property.

7 Mad. 64. No lessee of immoveable property can acquire for the beneficial enjoyment of other immoveable property of his own an easement in or over the property comprised in his lease.

13. Where one person transfers or bequeathes immoveable property to another,—

Easements of necessity and quasi-easements.

Mayor of London v. Riggs, 49 L. J. Chan. Div. 297. (a) if an easement in other immoveable property of the transferor or testator is absolutely necessary for enjoying the subject of the transfer or bequest, the transferee or legatee shall be entitled to such easement; or

Morgan v. Kirby, I. L. R. 2 Mad. 46 (b) if such an easement is apparent and continuous and necessary for enjoying the said subject as it was enjoyed when the transfer or bequest took effect, the transferee or legatee shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, be entitled to such easement;

(c) if an easement in the subject of the transfer or bequest is absolutely necessary for enjoying other immoveable property of the transferor or testator, the transferor or the legal representative of the testator shall be entitled to such easement; or

(d) if such an easement is apparent and continuous and necessary for enjoying the said property as it was enjoyed when the transfer or bequest took effect, the transferor, or the legal representative of the testator, shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, be entitled to such easement.

Bom. 181. Where a partition is made of the joint property of several persons,—

(e) if an easement over the share of one of them is absolutely necessary for enjoying the share of another of them, the latter shall be entitled to such easement, or

(f) if such an easement is apparent and continuous and necessary for enjoying the share of the latter as it was enjoyed when the partition took effect, he shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, be entitled to such easement.

The easements mentioned in this section, clauses (a), (c) and (e), are called easements of necessity.

Where immoveable property passes by operation of law, the persons from and to whom it so passes are, for the purpose of this section, to be deemed, respectively, the transferor and transferee.

Illustrations.

(a) A sells B a field then used for agricultural purposes only. It is inaccessible except by passing over A's adjoining land, or by trespassing on the land of a stranger. B is entitled to a right of way, for agricultural purposes only, over A's adjoining land to the field sold.

(b) A, the owner of two fields, sells one to B, and retains the other. The field retained was at the date of the sale used for agricultural purposes only and is inaccessible except by passing over the field sold to B. A is entitled to a right of way, for agricultural purposes only, over B's field to the field retained.

(c) A sells B a house with windows overlooking A's land, which A retains. The light which passes over A's land to the windows is necessary for enjoying the house as it was enjoyed when the grant took effect. B is entitled to the light, and A cannot afterwards obstruct it by building on his land.

(d) A sells B a house with windows overlooking A's land. The light passing over A's land to the windows is necessary for enjoying the house as it was enjoyed when the grant took effect. Afterwards A sells the land to C. Here C cannot obstruct the light by building on the land, for he takes it subject to the burdens to which it was subject in A's hand.

(e) A is the owner of a house and adjoining land. The house has windows overlooking the land. A simultaneously sells the house to B and the land to C. The light passing over the land is necessary for enjoying the house as it was enjoyed when the sale was made. Here A impliedly grants B a right to the light, and C takes the land subject to the restriction that he may not build so as to obstruct such light.

Contra England, Allen v. Tagg, 16, L. R. Ch. p. 353. (f) A is the owner of a house and adjoining land. The house has windows overlooking the land. A, retaining the house, sells the land to B, without expressly reserving any easement. The light passing over the land is necessary for enjoying the house as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect. A is entitled to the light, and B cannot build on the land so as to obstruct such light.

(g) A sells B a factory. B is entitled, as against A, to pollute the air, when necessary, with smoke and vapours from the factory.

(h) A, the owner of two adjoining houses, Y and Z, sells Y to B, and retains Z. B is entitled to the benefit of all the gutters and drains common to the two houses and necessary for enjoying Y as it was enjoyed when the sale was made, and A is entitled to the benefit of all the gutters and drains common to the two houses and necessary for enjoying Z as it was enjoyed when the sale was made.

(i) A, the owner of two adjoining buildings, sells one to B, retaining the other. B is entitled to a right to lateral support from A's building, and A is entitled to a right to lateral support from B's building.

(j) A, the owner of two adjoining buildings, sells one to B, and the other to C. C is entitled to lateral support from B's building, and B is entitled to lateral support from C's building.

(k) A grants land to B for the purpose of building a house thereon. B is entitled to such amount of lateral and subjacent support from A's land as is necessary for the safety of the house.

(l) Under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, a Railway Company compulsorily acquires a portion of B's land for the purpose of making a siding. The Company is entitled to such amount of lateral support from B's adjoining land as is essential for the safety of the siding.

(m) Owing to the partition of joint property, A becomes the owner of an upper room in a building and B becomes the owner of the portion of the building immediately beneath it. A is entitled to such amount of vertical support from B's portion as is essential for the safety of the upper room.

(n) A lets a house and grounds to B for a particular business. B has no access to them other than by crossing A's land. B is entitled to a right of way over that land suitable to the business to be carried on by B in the house and grounds.

Bolton v. Bolton, 11 Chan. Div. 968. 14. When right to a way of necessity is created under section thirteen, the transferor, the legal representative of the testator, or the owner of the share over which the right is exercised, as the case may be, is entitled to set out the way; but it must be reasonably convenient for the dominant owner.

Direction of way of necessity.

When the person so entitled to set out the way refuses or neglects to do so, the dominant owner may set it out.

Act XV of 1877, s. 26. 15. Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years,

Acquisition by prescription.

Angus v. Dalton. and where support from one person's land, or things affixed thereto, has been peaceably received by another person's land subjected to artificial pressure, or by things affixed thereto, as an easement, and as of right without interruption, and for twenty years,

Limitation 37 & 38 Vic., Cap. 57. and where a right of way or any other easement has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto, as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, support, or other easement shall be absolute.

Explanation I.—Nothing is an enjoyment within the meaning of this section when it has been had in pursuance of an agreement with the owner or occupier of the property over which the right is claimed, and it is apparent from the agreement that such right has not been granted as an easement, or, if granted as an easement, that it has been granted for a limited period, or subject to a condition on the fulfilment of which it is to cease.

I. L. R. 1 Calc. 480. Explanation II.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section unless where there is an actual cessation of the enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Explanation III.—Suspension of enjoyment in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners is not an interruption within the meaning of this section.

Explanation IV.—In the case of an easement to pollute water, the said period of twenty years begins when the pollution first prejudices perceptibly the servient heritage.

Illustrations.

(a) A. suit is brought in 1883 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction, but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, from 1st January, 1862, to 1st January, 1882. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that for a year of that time the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the servient heritage as lessee thereof and enjoyed the right as such lessee. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as an easement" for twenty years.

(c) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff on one occasion during the twenty years had admitted that the user was not of right and asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as of right" for twenty years.

(d) A builds on his land adjoining to B's land two houses. One of these is of ordinary stability and of reasonable construction. The other, owing to some defect or peculiarity in its construction, requires a greater amount of support from B's land than B can reasonably be expected to be aware of and provide for. B excavates his land so that both houses fall down. A sues him for compensation for their destruction, and proves that he has enjoyed the support of B's land for both houses as an easement peaceably and without interruption for twenty years. As regards the former house he also proves that the enjoyment has been 'as of right.' As to this house A is entitled to judgment, for his right to support for it has become absolute. As to the latter house the suit must be dismissed; for under the circumstances A cannot prove that the enjoyment has been "as of right."

Act XV of 1877, s. 27. 16. Provided that, when any land or water upon, over or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term shall be excluded in the computation of the said last-mentioned period of twenty years, in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land or water.

Exclusion in favour of reversioner or servient heritage.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C had a life-interest in the land; that on C's death B became entitled to the land; and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

17. Easements acquired under section fifteen are said to be acquired by prescription, and are called prescriptive rights.

Rights which cannot be acquired by prescription.

None of the following rights can be so acquired:—

Potts v. Smith, L. R. 6 Eq. Ca. 311. (a) a right which would tend to the total destruction of the subject of the right, or the property on which, if the acquisition were made, liability would be imposed;

(b) a right to the free passage of light or air to an open space of ground;

(c) a right to surface-water not flowing in a stream and not permanently collected in a pool, tank or otherwise;

(d) a right to underground water not passing in a defined channel.

18. An easement may be acquired in virtue of a local custom. Such easements are called customary easements.

Customary easements.

Illustrations.

(a) By the custom of a certain village every cultivator of village land is entitled, as such, to graze his cattle on the common pasture. A having become the tenant of a plot of uncultivated land in the village breaks up and cultivates that plot. He thereby acquires an easement to graze his cattle in accordance with the custom.

(b) By the custom of a certain town no owner or occupier of a house can open a new window therein so as substantially to invade his neighbour's privacy. A builds a house in the town near B's house. A thereupon acquires an easement that B shall not open new windows in his house so as to command a view of the portions of A's house which are ordinarily excluded from observation, and B acquires a like easement with respect to A's house.

19. Where the dominant heritage is transferred or devolves, by act of parties or by operation of law, the transfer or devolution shall, unless a contrary intention appears, be deemed to pass the easement to the person in whose favour the transfer or devolution takes place.

Transfer of dominant heritage passes easement.

Illustration.

A has certain land to which a right of way is annexed. A lets the land to B for twenty years. The right of way vests in B and his legal representative so long as the lease continues.

CHAPTER III.—THE INCIDENTS OF EASEMENTS.

20. The rules contained in this chapter are controlled by any contract between the dominant and servient owners relating to the servient heritage, and by the provisions of the instrument or decree, if any, by which the easement referred to was imposed.

Rules controlled by contract or title.

And when any incident of any customary easement is inconsistent with such rules, nothing in this chapter shall affect such incident.

Incidents of customary easements.

21. An easement must not be used for any purpose not connected with the enjoyment of the dominant heritage.

Bar to use unconnected with enjoyment.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as owner of a farm Y, has a right of way over B's land to Y. Lying beyond Y, A has another farm Z, the beneficial enjoyment of which is not necessary for the beneficial enjoyment of Y. He must not use the easement for the purpose of passing to and from Z.

(b) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way to and from it. For the purpose of passing to and from the house, the right may be used, not only by A, but by the members of his family, his guests, lodgers, servants, workmen, visitors and customers; for this is a purpose connected with the enjoyment of the dominant heritage. So, if A lets the house, he may use the right of way for the purpose of collecting the rent and seeing that the house is kept in repair.

22. The dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner; and when the exercise of an easement can without detriment to the dominant owner be confined to a determinate part of the servient heritage, such exercise shall, at the request of the servient owner, be so confined.

Exercise of easement.

Confinement of exercise of easement.

Illustrations.

(a) A has a right of way over B's field. A must enter the way at either end, and not at any intermediate point.

(b) A has a right annexed to his house to cut thatching-grass in B's swamp. A, when exercising his easement, must cut the grass so that the plants may not be destroyed.

23. Subject to the provisions of section twenty-two, the dominant owner may, from time to time, alter the mode and place of enjoying the easement, provided that he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

Right to alter mode of enjoyment.

Exception.—The dominant owner of a right of way cannot vary his line of passage at pleasure, even though he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

Panjáb Record, 1867, p. 156.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the owner of a saw-mill, has a right to a flow of water sufficient to work the mill. He may convert the saw-mill into a corn-mill, provided that it can be worked by the same amount of water.

(b) A has a right to discharge on B's land the rain-water from the eaves of A's house. This does not entitle A to advance his eaves if, by so doing, he imposes a greater burden on B's land.

(c) A, as the owner of a paper-mill, acquires a right to pollute a stream by pouring in the refuse-liquor produced by making in the mill paper from rags. He may pollute the stream by pouring in similar liquor produced by making in the mill paper by a new process from bamboos provided that he does not substantially increase the amount, or injuriously change the nature, of the pollution.

(d) A, a riparian owner, acquires, as against the lower riparian owners, a prescriptive right to pollute a stream by throwing sawdust into it. This does not entitle A to pollute the stream by discharging into it poisonous liquor.

24. The dominant owner is entitled, as against the servient owner, to do all acts necessary to secure the full enjoyment of the easement; but such acts must be done at such time and in such manner as, without detriment to the dominant owner, to cause the servient owner as little inconvenience as possible; and the dominant owner must repair, as far as practicable, the damage (if any) caused by the act to the servient heritage.

Right to do acts to secure enjoyment.

Right to do acts necessary to secure the full enjoyment of an easement are called accessory rights.

Accessory rights.

Illustrations.

(a) A has an easement to lay pipes in B's land to convey water to A's cistern. A may enter and dig the land in order to mend the pipes, but he must restore the surface to its original state.

(b) A has an easement of a drain through B's land. The sewer with which the drain communicates is altered. A may enter upon B's land and alter the drain, to adapt it to the new sewer, provided that he does not thereby impose any additional burden on B's land.

(c) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way over B's land. The way is out of repair, or a tree is blown down and falls across it. A may enter on B's land and repair the way or remove the tree from it.

(d) A, as owner of a certain field, has a right of way over B's land. B renders the way impassable. A may deviate from the way and pass over the adjoining land of B, provided that the deviation is reasonable.

(e) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way over B's field. A may remove rocks to make the way.

(f) A has an easement of support from B's wall. The wall gives way. A may enter upon B's land and repair the wall.

(g) A has an easement to have his land flooded by means of a dam in B's stream. The dam is half swept away by an inundation. A may enter upon B's land and repair the dam.

25. The expenses incurred in constructing works, or making repairs, or doing any other act necessary for the use or preservation of an easement, must be defrayed by the dominant owner.

Liability for expenses necessary for preservation of easement.

26. Where an easement is enjoyed by means of an artificial work, the dominant owner is liable to make compensation for any damage to the servient heritage arising from the want of repair of such work.

Liability for damage from want of repair.

27. The servient owner is not bound to do anything for the benefit of the dominant heritage, and he is entitled, as against the dominant owner, to use the servient heritage in any way consistent with the enjoyment of the easement: but he must not do any act tending to restrict the easement or to render its exercise less convenient.

Servient owner not bound to do anything.

N. W. P. (1867), p. 191.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as owner of a house, has a right to lead water and send sewage through B's land. B is not bound as servient owner to clear the watercourse or scour the sewer.

(b) A grants a right of way through his land to B as owner of a field. A may feed his cattle on grass growing on the way, provided that B's right of way is not thereby obstructed; but he must not build a wall at the end of his land so as to prevent B from going beyond it, nor must he narrow the way so as to render the exercise of the right less easy than it was at the date of the grant.

(c) A, in respect of his house, is entitled to an easement of support from B's wall. B is not bound as servient owner to keep the wall standing and in repair, but he must not pull down or weaken the wall so as to make it incapable of rendering the necessary support.

(d) A, in respect of his mill, is entitled to a watercourse through B's land. B must not drive stakes so as to obstruct the watercourse.

(e) A, in respect of his house, is entitled to a certain quantity of light passing over B's land. B must not plant trees so as to obstruct the passage to A's windows of that quantity of light.

28. With respect to the extent of easements and the mode of their enjoyment, the following provisions shall take effect:—

Extent of easements.

An easement of necessity is co-extensive with the necessity as it existed when the easement was imposed.

Easement of necessity.

Mayor of London v. Riggs, 49, L. J. Chanc. 297.

The extent of any other easement and the mode of its enjoyment must be fixed with reference to the probable intention of the parties, and the purpose for which the right was imposed or acquired.

Other easements.

In the absence of evidence as to such intention and purpose—

(a) a right of way of any one kind does not include a right of way of any other kind:

Right of way.

(b) the extent of a right to the passage of light or air to a certain window, door or other opening, imposed by assurance or will, is the quantity of light or air that entered the opening at the time the assurance was made or the testator died:

Right to light or air acquired by grant.

(c) the extent of a prescriptive right to the passage of light or air to a certain window, door or other opening is that quantity of light or air which has been accustomed to enter that opening during the whole of the prescriptive period irrespectively of the purposes for which it has been used:

Prescriptive right to light or air.

(d) the extent of a prescriptive right to pollute air or water is the extent of the pollution at the commencement of the period of user on completion of which the right arose: and

Prescriptive right to pollute air and water.

(e) the extent of every other prescriptive right and the mode of its enjoyment must be determined by the accustomed user of the right.

Other prescriptive rights.

29. The dominant owner cannot, by merely altering or adding to the dominant heritage, substantially increase an easement.

Increase of easement.

Where an easement has been granted or bequeathed so that its extent shall be proportionate to the extent of the dominant heritage, if the dominant heritage is increased by alluvion, the easement is proportionately increased, and if the dominant heritage is diminished by diluvion, the easement is proportionately diminished.

Save as aforesaid, no easement is affected by any change in the extent of the dominant or the servient heritage.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the owner of a mill, has acquired a prescriptive right to divert to his mill part of the water of a stream. A alters the machinery of his mill. He cannot thereby increase his right to divert water.

(b) A has a prescriptive easement to pollute a stream by carrying on a manufacture on its banks by which a certain quantity of foul matter is discharged into it. A extends his works and thereby increases the quantity discharged. He is responsible to the lower riparian owners for injury done by such increase.

(c) A, as the owner of a farm, has a right to take, for the purpose of manuring his farm, leaves which have fallen from the trees on B's land. A buys a field and unites it to his farm. A is not thereby entitled to take leaves to manure this field.

30. Where a dominant heritage is divided between two or more persons, the easement becomes annexed to each of the shares, but not so as to increase substantially the burden on the servient heritage: provided that such annexation is consistent with the terms of the instrument, decree or revenue proceeding (if any) under which the division was made, and in the case of prescriptive rights, with the user during the prescriptive period.

Partition of dominant heritage.

Illustrations.

(a) A house to which a right of way by a particular path is annexed is divided into two parts, one of which is granted to A, the other to B. Each is entitled, in respect of his part, to a right of way by the same path.

(b) A house to which is annexed the right of drawing water from a well to the extent of fifty buckets a day is divided into two distinct heritages, one of which is granted to A, the other to B. A and B are each entitled, in respect of his heritage, to draw from the well fifty buckets a day; but the amount drawn by both must not exceed fifty buckets a day.

(c) A, having in respect of his house an easement of light, divides the house into three distinct heritages. Each of these continues to have the right to have its windows unobstructed.

31. In the case of excessive user of an easement the servient owner may, without prejudice to any other remedies to which he may be entitled, obstruct the user, but only on the servient heritage: provided that such user cannot be obstructed when the obstruction would interfere with the lawful enjoyment of the easement.

Obstruction in case of excessive user.

Illustration.

A, having a right to the free passage over B's land of light to four windows six feet by four, increases their size and number. It is impossible to obstruct the passage of light to the new windows without also obstructing the passage of light to the ancient windows. B cannot obstruct the excessive user.

CHAPTER IV.—THE DISTURBANCE OF EASEMENTS.

32. The owner or occupier of the dominant heritage is entitled to enjoy the easement without disturbance by any other person.

Right to enjoyment without disturbance.

Illustration.

A, as owner of a house, has a right of way over B's land. C unlawfully enters on B's land, and obstructs A in his right of way. A may sue C for compensation, not for the entry, but for the obstruction.

33. The owner of any interest in the dominant heritage, or the occupier of such heritage, may institute a suit for compensation for the disturbance of the easement or of any right accessory thereto; provided that the disturbance has actually caused substantial damage to the plaintiff.

Suit for disturbance of easement.

Explanation I.—The doing of any act likely to injure the plaintiff by affecting the evidence of the easement, or by materially diminishing the value of the dominant heritage, is substantial damage within the meaning of this section and section thirty-four.

Explanation II.—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of light passing to the openings in a house, no damage is substantial within the meaning of this section unless it falls within the first Explanation, or interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, or prevents him from carrying on his accustomed business in the dominant heritage as beneficially as he had done previous to instituting the suit.

15 Bom. 68. Explanation III.—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of air to the openings in a house, damage is substantial within the meaning of this section if it interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, though it is not injurious to his health.

Illustration.

(a) A places a permanent obstruction in a path over which B, as tenant of C's house, has a right of way. This is substantial damage to C, for it may affect the evidence of his reversionary right to the easement.

1 Calc. 425. (b) A, as owner of a house, has a right to walk along one side of B's house. B builds a verandah overhanging the way about ten feet from the ground, and so as not to occasion any inconvenience to foot-passengers using the way. This is not substantial damage to A.

34. The removal of the means of support to which a dominant owner is entitled does not give rise to a right to recover compensation, unless and until substantial damage is actually sustained.

When cause of action arises for removal of support.

35. Subject to the provisions of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, sections 52 to 57 (both inclusive), an injunction may be granted to restrain the disturbance of an easement—

Injunction to restrain disturbance.

(a) if the easement is actually disturbed,—when compensation for such disturbance might be recovered under this chapter:

(b) if the disturbance is only threatened or intended,—when the act threatened or intended must necessarily, if performed, disturb the easement.

36. Notwithstanding the provisions of section twenty-four, the dominant owner cannot himself abate a wrongful obstruction of an easement.

7 Mad. H. C. Ruling, XXXV.

CHAPTER V.—THE EXTINCTION, SUSPENSION AND REVIVAL OF EASEMENTS.

37. When, from a cause which preceded the imposition of an easement, the person by whom it was imposed ceases to have any right in the servient heritage, the easement is extinguished.

Extinction by dissolution of right of servient owner.

Exception.—Nothing in this section applies to an easement lawfully imposed by a mortgagor in accordance with section ten.

Illustrations.

(a) A transfers Sultánpur to B on condition that he does not marry C. B imposes an easement on Sultánpur. Then B marries C. B's interest in Sultánpur ends, and with it the easement is extinguished.

(b) A, in 1860, lets Sultánpur to B for thirty years from the date of the lease. B, in 1861, imposes an easement on the land in favour of C, who enjoys the easement peaceably and openly as an easement without interruption for twenty-nine years. B's interest in Sultánpur then ends, and with it C's easement.

(c) A and B, tenants of C, have permanent transferable interests in their respective holdings. A imposes on his holding an easement to draw water from a tank for the purpose of irrigating B's land. B enjoys the easement for twenty years. Then A's rent falls into arrear and his interest is sold. B's easement is extinguished.

(d) A mortgages Sultánpur to B, and lawfully imposes an easement on the land in favour of C in accordance with the provisions of section ten. The land is sold to D in satisfaction of the mortgage-debt. The easement is not thereby extinguished.

38. An easement is extinguished when the dominant owner releases it, expressly or impliedly, to the servient owner.

Extinction by release.

Such release can be made only in the circumstances and to the extent in and to which the dominant owner can alienate the dominant heritage.

An easement may be released as to part only of the servient heritage.

Explanation I.—An easement is impliedly released—

(a) where the dominant owner expressly authorizes an act of a permanent nature to be done on the servient heritage, the necessary consequence of which is to prevent his future enjoyment of the easement, and such act is done in pursuance of such authority;

(b) where any permanent alteration is made in the dominant heritage of such a nature as to show that the dominant owner intended to cease to enjoy the easement in future.

Explanation II.—Mere non-user of an easement is not an implied release within the meaning of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A, B and C are co-owners of a house to which an easement is annexed. A, without the consent of B and C, releases the easement. This release is effectual only as against A and his legal representative.

(b) A grants B an easement over A's land for the beneficial enjoyment of his house. B assigns the house to C. B then purports to release the easement. The release is ineffectual.

(c) A, having the right to discharge his eavesdroppings into B's yard, expressly authorizes B to build over this yard to a height which will interfere with the discharge. B builds accordingly. A's easement is extinguished to the extent of the interference.

(d) A, having an easement of light to a window, builds up that window with bricks and mortar so as to manifest an intention to abandon the easement permanently. The easement is impliedly released.

(e) A, having a projecting roof by means of which he enjoys an easement to discharge eavesdroppings on B's land permanently alters the roof, so as to direct the rain-water into a different channel and discharge it on C's land. The easement is impliedly released.

39. An easement is extinguished when the servient owner, in exercise of a power reserved in this behalf, revokes the easement.

Extinction by revocation.

40. An easement is extinguished where it has been imposed for a limited period, or acquired on condition that it shall become void on the performance or non-performance of a specified act, and the period expires or the condition is fulfilled.

Extinction on expiration of limited period or happening of dissolving condition.

41. An easement of necessity is extinguished when the necessity comes to an end.

Illustration.

A grants B a field inaccessible except by passing over A's adjoining land. B afterwards purchases a part of that land over which he can pass to his field. The right of way over A's land which B had acquired is extinguished.

42. An easement is extinguished when it becomes incapable of being at any time and under any circumstances beneficial to the dominant owner.

Extinction of useless easement.

43. Where by any permanent change in the dominant heritage the burden on the servient heritage is materially increased and cannot be reduced by the servient owner without interfering with the lawful enjoyment of the easement, the easement is extinguished, unless—

Extinction by permanent change in dominant heritage.

(a) it was intended for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, to whatever extent the easement should be used; or

(b) the injury caused to the servient owner by the change is so slight that no reasonable person would complain of it; or

(c) the easement is an easement of necessity.

44. An easement is extinguished where the servient heritage is by superior force so permanently altered that the dominant owner can no longer exercise his right:

Extinction on permanent alteration of servient heritage by superior force.

Provided that, where a way of necessity is destroyed by superior force, the dominant owner has a right to another way over the servient heritage; and the provisions of section fourteen apply to such way.

Illustrations.

(a) A grants to B, as the owner of a certain house, a right to fish in a river running through A's land. The river changes its course permanently and runs through C's land. B's easement is extinguished.

(b) Access to a path over which A has a right of way is permanently cut off by an earthquake. A's right is extinguished.

45. An easement is extinguished when either the dominant or the servient heritage is completely destroyed.

Extinction by destruction of either heritage.

Illustration.

A has a right of way over a road running along the foot of a sea-cliff. The road is washed away by a permanent encroachment of the sea. A's easement is extinguished.

46. An easement is extinguished when the same person becomes entitled to the absolute ownership of the whole of the dominant and servient heritages. Bom. 365.

Extinction by unity of ownership.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as the owner of a house, has a right of way over B's field. A mortgages his house, and B mortgages his field to C. Then C forecloses both mortgages and becomes thereby absolute owner of both house and field. The right of way is extinguished.

(b) The dominant owner acquires only part of the servient heritage: the easement is not extinguished, except in the case illustrated in section forty-one.

(c) The servient owner acquires the dominant heritage in connection with a third person: the easement is not extinguished.

(d) The separate owners of two separate dominant heritages jointly acquire the heritage which is servient to the two separate heritages: the easements are not extinguished [illegible] the heritages the easement is extinguished.

(f) A single right of way exists over two servient heritages for the beneficial enjoyment of a single dominant heritage. The dominant owner acquires one only of the servient heritages. The easement is not extinguished.

(g) A has a right of way over B's road. B dedicates the road to the public. A's right of way is not extinguished.

47. A continuous easement is extinguished when it totally ceases to be enjoyed as such for an unbroken period of twenty years.

Extinction by non-enjoyment.

A discontinuous easement is extinguished when, for a like period, it has not been enjoyed, or the dominant owner has not registered, under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, a declaration of his intention to retain the easement.

Such period shall be reckoned, in the case of a continuous easement, from the day on which its enjoyment was obstructed by the servient owner, or rendered impossible by the dominant owner; and, in the case of a discontinuous easement, from the day on which it was last enjoyed by any person as dominant owner, or the day on which the dominant owner registered the said declaration.

Where an easement can be enjoyed only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, its enjoyment during the said period at another place, or at other times, or between other hours, or for another purpose, does not prevent its extinction under this section.

The circumstance that, during the said period, no one was in possession of the servient heritage, or that the easement could not be enjoyed, or that a right accessory thereto was enjoyed, or that the dominant owner was not aware of its existence, or that he enjoyed it in ignorance of his right to do so, does not prevent its extinction under this section.

An easement is not extinguished under this section—

(a) where the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners;

(b) where the dominant heritage is held in co-ownership, and one of the co-owners enjoys the easement within the said period, or

(c) where the easement is a necessary easement.

Where several heritages are respectively subject to rights of way for the benefit of a single heritage, and the ways are continuous, such rights shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a single easement.

Illustration.

A has, as annexed to his house, rights of way from the high road thither over the heritages X and Z and the intervening heritage Y. Before the twenty years expire, A exercises his right of way over X. His rights of way over Y and Z are not extinguished.

48. When an easement is extinguished, the rights (if any) accessory thereto are also extinguished.

Extinction of accessory rights.

Illustration.

A has an easement to draw water from B's well. As accessory thereto, he has a right of way over B's land to and from the well. The easement to draw water is extinguished under section forty-seven. The right of way is also extinguished.

49. An easement is suspended when the dominant owner becomes entitled to possession of the servient heritage for a limited interest therein, or when the servient owner becomes entitled to possession of the dominant heritage for a limited interest therein.

Suspension of easement.

50. The servient owner has no right to require that an easement be continued; and, notwithstanding the provisions of section twenty-six, he is not entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of the extinguishment or suspension of the easement, if the dominant owner has given to the servient owner such notice as will enable him, without unreasonable expense, to protect the servient heritage from such damage.

Servient owner not entitled to require continuance.

Where such notice has not been given, the servient owner is entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of such extinguishment or suspension.

Compensation for damage caused by extinguishment.

Illustration.

A, in exercise of an easement, diverts to his canal the water of B's stream. The diversion continues for many years, and during that time the bed of the stream partly fills up. A then abandons his easement, and restores the stream to its ancient course. B's land is consequently flooded. B sues A for compensation for the damage caused by the flooding. It is proved that A gave B a month's notice of his intention to abandon the easement, and that such notice was sufficient to enable B, without unreasonable expense, to have prevented the damage. The suit must be dismissed.

51. An easement extinguished under section forty-five revives (a) when the destroyed heritage is, before twenty years have expired, restored by the deposit of alluvion; (b) when the destroyed heritage is a servient building and before twenty years have expired such building is rebuilt upon the same site; and (c) when the destroyed heritage is a dominant building and before twenty years have expired such building is rebuilt upon the same site and in such a manner as not to impose a greater burden on the servient heritage.

Revival of easements.

An easement extinguished under section forty-six revives when the grant or bequest by which the unity of ownership was produced is set aside by the decree of a competent Court. A necessary easement extinguished under the same section revives when the unity of ownership ceases from any other cause.

A suspended easement revives if the cause of suspension is removed before the right is extinguished under section forty-seven.

Illustration.

A, as the absolute owner of field Y, has a right of way thither over B's field Z. A obtains from B a lease of Z for twenty years. The easement is suspended so long as A remains lessee of Z. But when A assigns the lease to C, or surrenders it to B, the right of way revives.

CHAPTER VI.—LICENSES.

52. Where one person grants to another, or to a definite number of other persons, a right to do, or continue to do, in or upon the immoveable property of the grantor, something which would, in the absence of such right, be unlawful, and such right does not amount to an easement or an interest in the property, the right is called a license.

"License" defined.

53. A license may be granted by any one in the circumstances and to the extent in and to which he may transfer his interests in the property affected by the license.

Who may grant license.

54. The grant of a license may be express or implied from the conduct of the grantor, and an agreement purporting to create an easement, which is ineffectual for that purpose, may operate to create a license.

Grant may be express or implied.

55. All licenses necessary for the enjoyment of any interest, or the exercise of any right, are implied in the constitution of such interest or right. Such licenses are called accessory licenses.

Accessory licenses annexed by law.

Illustration.

A sells the trees growing on his land to B. B is entitled to go on the land and take away the trees.

56. Unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, a license to attend a place of public entertainment may be transferred by the licensee; but, save as aforesaid, a license cannot be transferred by the licensee or exercised by his servants or agents.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Emigration Act, 1881"; and shall come into force at once. Short title. Commencement. Act VII of 1871, s. 1.

It extends to the whole of British India; Local extent.

But nothing in this Act or in any rule made hereunder shall apply to any vessel belonging to or hired by Her Majesty or the Secretary of State for India in Council. Exemption of certain vessels. Act VII of 1871, s. 86

2. The Indian Emigration Act, 1871, and Act No. XIV of 1872 (to exempt the Straits Settlements from the Indian Emigration Act, 1871) are hereby repealed. Repeal of Acts. Act VII of 1871, s. 2.

All notifications issued, contracts entered into, rules and appointments made and licenses granted under the former Act and now in force shall (so far as they are consistent herewith) be deemed to have been respectively issued, entered into, made and granted under this Act. Notifications, &c., under Act VII of 1871.

3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,— Act VII of 1871, s. 3.

"Emigrate" denotes the departure by sea out of British India of a native of India under a contract to labour for hire otherwise than as a menial servant in some country beyond the limits of India, other than the island of Ceylon or the Straits Settlements, and it also denotes the departure by sea out of British India of dependents of persons so departing. "Emigrate:"

"Emigrant" means any native of India emigrating, or intending to emigrate, or who has emigrated, within the meaning of the above definition: and "Emigrant";

"Emigration" means the act of emigrating within the meaning of the above definition: "Emigration";

"Master" means any person (except a Pilot or Harbour Master) having for the time being the charge or control of a vessel. "Master." New.

And all words defined in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, and used in this Act shall have the meanings respectively assigned to them by that Act. Words to be understood as defined in Contract Act.

CHAPTER II.

PORTS FROM WHICH, AND PLACES TO WHICH, EMIGRATION IS LAWFUL.

New.

4. No person shall emigrate except from such ports and to such places as under this Act and the notifications issued hereunder are for the time being ports from which and places to which emigration is lawful.

Emigration unlawful except from and to certain ports and places.

Act VII of 1871, s. 26, amended with Act V of 1877, s. 3.

5. Emigration shall be lawful from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and from such other ports as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, by a notification in the Gazette of India, declare to be ports from which emigration under this Act shall be lawful.

From what ports emigration lawful.

The Governor General in Council may at any time, by a like notification, revoke any notification issued under this section.

Act VII of 1871, s. 23.

6. Emigration shall be lawful to the places specified in the first schedule hereto annexed and to such other places as the Governor General in Council may from time to time, by a notification in the Gazette of India, declare to be places to which emigration under this Act shall be lawful:

To what places emigration lawful.

Act VII of 1871, s. 24.

Provided that every such notification shall contain a declaration that the Governor General in Council has been duly certified that the Government of the place to which the notification refers has made such laws and other provisions as the Governor General in Council thinks sufficient for the protection of emigrants to such place during their residence therein.

Act VII of 1871, ss. 57, 58 & 61, redrawn and amalgamated.

7. Whenever the Governor General in Council has reason to believe that any of the grounds, hereinafter mentioned, for prohibiting emigration to any place to which emigration is lawful exists, he may, by a notification published in the Gazette of India, declare that emigration to such place shall cease to be lawful from a day specified in such notification; and from such day emigration to such place shall accordingly cease to be lawful.

Power to prohibit emigration to place to which it is lawful.

The said grounds are—

(a) that the plague or any other epidemic disease dangerous to human life has broken out in such place;

New.

(b) that the mortality among emigrants in such place is excessive;

(c) that proper measures have not been taken for the protection of emigrants immediately upon their arrival in such place, or during their residence therein;

(d) that the contracts made with emigrants, as such, before their departure from India are not duly enforced by the Government of such place; and

New.

(e) that the Governor General in Council, having, either directly or through the Secretary of State for India in Council, addressed the Government of such place with a view to obtain information regarding the condition or treatment of emigrants in such place, has not within a reasonable time received such information.

8. Whenever the Local Government has reason to believe that, in any place to which emigration is lawful, the plague or other epidemic disease dangerous to human life has broken out, and that emigrants, if allowed to emigrate to such place, would be exposed to serious risk of life on arrival there, it may, by notification published in the official Gazette, declare that emigration to such place from any port in the territories administered by such Local Government shall cease to be lawful pending a reference to the Governor General in Council.

A new section taken from 61 of Act VII of 1871.

New.

Power to suspend emigration pending reference to Governor General in Council.

The Local Government shall at once report the publication of such notification, with the reasons for the same, to the Governor General in Council, who shall thereupon publish a notification in the Gazette of India confirming or cancelling the notification so published by the Local Government.

9. Whenever the Governor General in Council is satisfied that the ground on which a notification has been published by him under section seven, prohibiting emigration to any place, or under section eight, confirming such a prohibition, has ceased to exist, he may, by a notification published in the Gazette of India, declare that emigration to such place shall again be lawful from a day to be specified in such notification.

Act VII of 1871, s. 60, redrawn.

Revocation of prohibition.

10. The publication of a notification under section seven, section eight or section nine shall not affect any act done, offence committed or proceedings commenced before such publication.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

NUMEROUS suggestions for the amendment of the Indian Emigration Act, 1871, have from time to time been received by the Government. Many of these which it appears desirable to adopt deal with minor and, comparatively speaking, unimportant points; but some propose substantial changes which would materially alter the working of the existing law. It has, moreover, been found that the form and arrangement of the Act are susceptible of improvement. Under these circumstances, it has been thought advisable to repeal the Act, and re-enact it with all the requisite amendments. Of these amendments the more important are the following.

2. In the preliminary chapter "emigrate," "emigrant" and "emigration" have been so defined as to cover not only persons leaving India under a contract to labour, but also dependents of such persons. It is obvious that, for all purposes of the control of recruiters and depôts, the regulation of emigrant vessels, &c., it is as necessary to take count of dependents as of the persons who contract to labour.

3. Section 5, which corresponds to section 26 of the Act of 1871, has been amplified so as to give the Governor General in Council power to establish ports other than those of the three Presidency-towns as ports of embarkation.

4. In a recent correspondence it has been brought to notice that the effect of the Contract Act of 1872 has been to make it impossible for persons under the legal age of majority (in most cases 18) to engage to emigrate. The limit of sixteen years at or above which an emigrant may himself enter into a contract to emigrate has been adopted in sections 34 and 35 of the Bill from the Bengal Labour Districts Emigration Act (Bengal Act VII of 1873); and it has been provided that minors below that age and above the age of six years may contract through their guardians, power being reserved to the minor to rescind the contract at any time within the thirty days next following the completion of his age of eighteen years.

5. Section 33 requires all agreements to emigrate to be in writing, and, if entered into within the limits of any port from which emigration is lawful, to be made with the Emigration Agent at such port, and executed in the presence of the Protector; if entered into elsewhere, to be made with a recruiter and executed in the presence of a Magistrate. Section 36 lays down what such agreements must contain. At present, there is much confusion in the law as to what constitutes the contract to emigrate; and it is not absolutely necessary that any terms of service should be settled before the emigrant leaves India. Most, if not all, colonies have already introduced written contracts, so that there will be no hardship in requiring their general use; the conventions with France and Holland expressly stipulate that a written contract must first be executed in India, and there will thus be no difficulty with those powers. The requirement of a contract, moreover, marks distinctly the stage at which an emigrant becomes liable for breach of contract—a point which under the present law is somewhat uncertain. Lastly, the provision exists (in substance) in the Burma and Straits Settlements Emigration Laws. The material stipulations mentioned in section 36 are all actually adopted by the colonies which receive Indian emigrants.

6. The remaining amendments are for the most part in matters of detail, and may be shortly stated as follows.

7. For the present definition of Magistrate and section 85 of the existing Act, the definition in Act V of 1877 (The Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877), which allows of the appointment of any person as a Magistrate for the purposes of the Act, has been substituted.

8. Chapter II.—Ports from which, and places to which, Emigration is lawful.—This is a new chapter, which brings together under one head, in an amended form, the provisions of sections 23 to 26 and sections 57 to 61 of the Act of 1871.

9. Sections 7 to 10.—In the present law sections 57 and 61 overlap, and one of them is clearly unnecessary. The opportunity has accordingly been taken to re-draft the sections, amalgamating them and specifying more clearly the reasons for which emigration may be suspended. Excessive mortality, neglect to enforce in the colony the contracts made in India and omission to furnish the Government of India with the information necessary to enable it to judge how Indian immigrants are treated have been added to the reasons mentioned in sections 57 and 61 of the present Act. This last is in accordance with the recommendation of Sir G. Campbell.

10. Section 8 defines more clearly the extraordinary power which, under section 61 of the present Act, can be exercised by the Local Government on a pressing emergency; and this power has been restricted to a single case—the outbreak of plague or other epidemic disease dangerous to life in the colony.

11. Chapter III.—Emigration Agents.—No change has been made in this chapter, which corresponds with Part II of the present Act, except a slight amendment of section 4 of the present law, defining the effect of the notification of appointment of an Emigration Agent by the Local Government and giving that Government power to withdraw its approval of the appointment of such Agent.

12. Chapter IV.—Protectors of Emigrants and Medical Inspectors.—The wording of this chapter, which corresponds with a portion of Part III of the present Act, has been revised, and power has been given to the Local Government to appoint, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, Protectors of Emigrants for local areas beyond the territories subject to its administration.

13. Chapter V.—Emigration Depôts.—This chapter corresponds with a portion of Part III of the present Act; but the second clauses of sections 18 and 21, which are based on Act III of 1876, section 25, are new.

14. Chapter VI.—Recruiters and Sub-Agents of Emigration.—Several modifications and additions have been made in the portion of this chapter relating to recruiters, all of which have been strongly urged on the attention of the Government of India at various times, and the expediency of most of which has already been recognized in Acts III of 1876 and V of 1877. The first of these is the requirement in section 23 that the local area within which the recruiter is to work shall be specified in the license: this is taken from Act V of 1877, section 12. The next is the omission of section 20 of the present Act, which requires every recruiter to wear a badge. The badge has been objected to by persons visiting the recruiter, in the eyes of the people, with [illegible]. It is clearly necessary, on the other hand, that every recruiter should be furnished with an authentic statement of the terms he is authorized to offer; and section 25 of the Bill accordingly requires that he should be furnished with such a statement. The next amendment calling for notice is in the second paragraph of section 26. At present, the Magistrate has no option in countersigning a recruiter's license, but must add his signature, if the period of the license is unexpired; it is obvious that he should refuse to do so if the recruiter bears a bad character. At present, the Protector is required, under executive instructions, to satisfy himself, by enquiry from the Magistrate of the district where the recruiter is known, that there is nothing against him before granting the license; but this is a circuitous method of procedure, and often leads to great delay. The principle of this amendment has already been fully admitted in Acts III of 1876, section 12, and V of 1877, section 13, from which it is borrowed. The other provisions of this paragraph, and the provisions of section 27 as to the regulation of places of accommodation to be provided in the recruiting districts for intending emigrants, are also new. At the places referred to many abuses are practised in connection with recruiting, and the necessity of supervising such places has several times been pressed on the Government of India as urgently necessary. Sections 28 and 29 are also new. They are the complement of section 26, and are taken from Acts III of 1876, section 12, and V of 1877, section 13. Section 28 empowers the Magistrate, under certain circumstances, to cancel his countersignature or to impound the license and send it to the Protector for cancellation, and section 29 requires all refusals and cancellations of countersignature by Magistrates to be at once reported to the Protector.

15. The last three sections of this chapter (30 to 32), relating to Sub-Agents, are new, and provide some much-needed clauses for the control of the local agency through which it is the practice of Emigration Agents to conduct recruiting operations. All Sub-Agents must be licensed by the Local Government; and the license, for which a fee of Rs. 30 (double the fee for a recruiter's license) is fixed, may be revoked on proof of misconduct. It is further provided that the remuneration of Sub-Agents must, like that of Emigration Agents (under section 5 of the present Act), be a fixed sum, and not in the form of head-money.

16. Chapter VII.—Agreements with Emigrants.—The provisions of this chapter are new, and make certain important additions to the existing law.

17. Chapter VIII.—Attestation of Agreements and Registration of Emigrants.—In this chapter, which corresponds with Part VI of the present Act, modifications have been introduced—

(1) to provide for the agreement with the emigrant being executed before and attested by the Magistrate or the Protector (section 38);

(2) to alter the particulars required to be entered in the register (section 38);

(3) to state more clearly the reasons for which a registering officer may refuse to attest a contract (section 39);

(4) to provide for the examination of dependents as to their dependence upon the contracting emigrants and as to their willingness to accompany such emigrants (section 40);

(5) to provide for a medical examination of intending emigrants, where necessary, previous to their being registered under section 38 (section 42);

(6) to revise the table of fees (section 45).

18. The effect of the first of these amendments will be to bind the emigrant more closely, and so place an obstacle in the way of his desertion. On the other hand, it will give the emigrant, if rejected by the Agent, a claim which can be enforced in the Courts on his behalf by the Protector (section 104).

19. The second matter is dealt with by adding to the particulars at present required the following:—

(a) the name of the recruiter or agent to whom the emigrant has been engaged;

(b) the caste and occupation of the emigrant; and

(c) the persons who, if he were to die at once, would be entitled to succeed to his property (so that any savings he may have collected in the colony may be duly delivered).

On the other hand, as a copy of the contract is to be placed on record in the Protector's office, the rate of wages and period of service will no longer be entered in the register.

20. As regards the third matter, power has been given, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, to refuse attestation (in the absence of sufficient explanation) when the emigrant is a resident of a place beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate before whom he appears. This is a necessary precaution, as it is common for unscrupulous recruiters to convey intending emigrants long distances from their homes, to involve them in debt for maintenance during their journey, and [illegible] temptation, and at the same time deprive them of the power [illegible] that an emigrant whose registration is refused by one Magistrate [illegible] next district, where it is hoped that the officer will be more compliant. Power has also been given to refuse registration of a person who, if he quits his home, will leave his family destitute, and of a married woman without the consent of her husband.

21. The fourth point has been provided for as in Act V of 1877, section 19.

22. As regards the fifth point, it is not intended that the power to order a medical examination of an emigrant recruited in a district beyond the port of embarkation shall be universally enforced. The examination is only to be directed to testing the emigrant's fitness to undertake the journey to the depôt and not his fitness to labour, for which the Emigration Agent is responsible. It will only be necessary to require a medical examination in special cases; as, for instance, when the condition of the emigrating class is reduced by famine, or when the distance to be travelled to the depôt is great.

23. The fees fixed by section 31 of the present Act can be taken, under the definition of "emigrant" and the exception of the Contract Act, only for adult emigrants. It seems desirable to require a fee for the registration of every contracting emigrant, allowing dependents who do not contract, and are only entered in the register, to be registered without a fee. This matter recently formed the subject of correspondence with Local Governments, and the scale adopted is generally in accordance with their recommendations. The present provision for the refund of the fee on desertion has, in accordance with the precedents of Acts III of 1876 and V of 1877 and the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, been omitted. The fee is a payment for the work of registration, and that work is not affected by the subsequent desertion of the emigrant.

24. Chapter IX.—Conveyance of Emigrants to Depôts.—In this chapter a provision has been added which enables the Magistrate to order the Emigration Agent or recruiter to pay such sum as is necessary to enable an emigrant, who has been rejected before arriving at the port of embarkation, or the dependent of such emigrant, to return to his home.

25. Chapter X.—Procedure on arrival at the Depôt of Emigrants from Up-country.—The provisions of this chapter have been re-arranged and revised, the corresponding provisions of Act V of 1877 being generally followed. The operation of the chapter has been expressly restricted to the case of emigrants from up-country, for whom alone it appears to be intended. Section 51 as amended expresses what has always been understood by the Government of India to be the responsibility of its officers in respect of the fitness of emigrants to emigrate: fitness for labour and life in the colony is a matter for which the Emigration Agent is responsible. Sections 55 and 56 have been adopted with some modifications from Act V of 1877, sections 28, 29 and 30.

26. Chapter XI.—Emigrant Vessels.—The amendments in this chapter, which corresponds with Part IX of the present Act, are slight. There is a change in the wording of paragraph 3 of section 58 and some alterations in the dimensions specified in section 60. The principal differences, as compared with the present law, are—(1) that the height of the accommodation for emigrants is raised from 5½ to 6 feet; (2) that all children under ten, instead of only those from one to ten years of age, are counted at the rate of two to one adult; and (3), that the space required for each child under ten is fixed at half that required for an adult, instead of, as now, two-thirds for children between two and ten. These changes were recommended by the Government of Bengal in 1873, and are required chiefly to improve the accommodation for infants, among whom much mortality occasionally occurs. "Compounders, interpreters and female nurses" have been added in section 63 also, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government of Bengal.

27. Chapter XII.—Embarkation and Departure.—Section 67 is in accordance with a recommendation made by the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta, who considers it a precaution necessary "not only to afford the opportunity of ascertaining the freedom of emigrants from latent and communicable diseases which have distinct periods of incubation, but to give such as are ill-nourished and have been recruited in famine-stricken districts some time to rest and recover themselves after their journey, and prior to undertaking what proves in all cases a trying voyage to Indian emigrants generally."

28. Section 68 embodies the present views of the Government of India regarding the seasons at which embarkation should be allowed. This matter has been the subject of much discussion. The conventions allow the French and Dutch colonies a longer period than the Act allows the corresponding British colonies; and, in the case of the latter, it has been represented that even the period allowed by the Act is too long, since emigrants shipped late in the season for the West Indies arrive there at a very unhealthy season of the year, and are liable to great mortality in consequence.

When the provisions of the existing law were framed, the embarkation seasons were settled with reference to one point only, viz., the necessity for avoiding the stormy weather encountered in the neighbourhood of the Cape of Good Hope during the Antarctic winter; consequently no impediment was offered to the shipment of emigrants at any time of the year for colonies east of the Cape. But hurricanes prevail in the neighbourhood of Réunion between the months of November and April; and they are also prevalent in the Fiji Islands during the same season. Moreover, the necessity for landing emigrants in their place of destination at a healthy season of the year is another consideration which makes it necessary carefully to regulate the period of despatch.

The present limits, the 31st July to the 1st March, for places west of the Cape of Good Hope, however, have been retained as a maximum; and the provision in the present Act (section 46, last clause) permitting departure for such places on an emergency up to the 1st April has been struck out. Cases of loss of emigrant vessels allowed to be despatched after the 1st March, as well as heavy mortality during such voyages, have occurred, and it is thought inexpedient to continue the concession.

The special privilege of carrying emigrants at any time of the year now enjoyed by steamers has also been done away with, as being inconsistent with the regulation of the season for departure with reference to that of arrival in the colony; but as a concession to the superiority of such vessels over sailing vessels, the time within which they may depart for places west of the Cape of Good Hope is extended from the 1st to the 15th March.

29. The penalty clause in section 45 of the present Act, to which section 71 of the Bill corresponds, has been removed to its proper place in chapter XIV (section 99).

In section 72 the number of copies of the list has been reduced from five to four, which, according to the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta, are all that are required.

Section 75, requiring the Emigration Agent to furnish the Master with the contracts, is new, but needs no comment.

30. Sections 83 and 84 are new. They express the substance of the arrangements made in a correspondence which passed in 1877 regarding the action which should be taken on the occurrence of cases of an infectious disease, or an outbreak of cholera in an epidemic form, on board an emigrant vessel proceeding down the Hugli.

31. Section 85 of the present Act has been omitted, as no emigration has ever gone on to Seychelles, and the colony was included in that Act by a mistake.

32. Chapter XIII.—Supplementary Powers.—In section 85 a few additions have been made to the matters regarding which rules may be framed (clauses c, d, f, g and h), and the proviso authorizing the Local Government to permit the despatch of a vessel with less than the prescribed proportion of women has been struck out.

33. Section 86 relates to fees, and modifies section 62 of the present Act. The object of levying fees is to maintain therefrom the necessary protective establishments in India; such fees should accordingly be just sufficient to cover the cost of such establishments, neither more nor less. It may sometimes happen (more especially, as at present, in the case of foreign colonies) that the Government of India has to meet in respect of some particular colony a special expenditure, which it would be unfair to cast (as is now done) on the income from fees contributed by all colonies; a proviso has accordingly been added enabling such expenditure to be met by enhanced fees on emigration to the particular colony in respect of which it is incurred.

34. Chapter XIV.—Offences.—This part has been generally redrawn. The penalties provided in the present Act, sections 72 to 75, are merely fine extending to 500 rupees. It appears necessary to add imprisonment, as in Act V of 1877.

35. Section 90 has been introduced to cover the case of unlicensed persons acting as Sub-Agents.

36. Section 96 is new; it has been adopted from Act V of 1877, section 44.

37. Section 98 is also new; it provides for the punishment of emigrants who desert after a contract has been duly entered into with the recruiter before a Magistrate. The present law provides no punishment for this offence, the only liability being to a civil suit for breach of contract—a proceeding which is, of course, useless in most cases of the kind. There is no doubt that, in view of the class of men who work as recruiters and the many risks of deception and ill-treatment to which intending emigrants are exposed at their hands, it is necessary to guard the power to inflict a penalty for desertion in such cases most carefully. Still cases have arisen, and may easily arise, of impudent deception on the part of persons who profess willingness to emigrate, and under such profession obtain board and lodging in the Mufassal, and free conveyance to the port of embarkation, where they desert or refuse to emigrate. To meet such cases, the section has been devised, and it has been so drawn as to require the sanction of the Protector of Emigrants to every prosecution instituted under it.

38. Section 99 has been substituted for the second clause of section 45 of the present Act, which clause, it may here be observed, is practically inoperative in Calcutta, because it requires the complaint to be laid before a Magistrate of Police in a Presidency-town, and the depôts are situated outside the limits of Calcutta, and therefore outside of the local jurisdiction of such Magistrates. The penalty, instead of being stated by reference to section 492 of the Penal Code, is mentioned in express terms; and the sanction of the Protector to a prosecution under the section is, as in section 98, required.

39. Section 102 is an amendment of section 82 of Act VII of 1871. At present special authority is required to institute prosecutions for all offences under the existing Act; there seems to be no good reason why such sanction should be required in the case of the offences mentioned in sections 87 to 91.

40. Chapter XV.—Miscellaneous.—Section 105 corresponds with section 83 of the present Act, which has been re-drawn to admit of the probable length of voyages being modified from time to time as may be found necessary on the receipt of fuller information, or the establishment of improved means of communication. Section 84 of the present Act is incorporated with section 105.

41. A new form of recruiter's license (chiefly taken from Act V of 1877) has been substituted for the form in Schedule II of the present Act.

42. In the third schedule of the Bill opportunity has been taken to correct a clerical error as to the length of the voyage from Calcutta to French Guiana. In section 88, Act VII of 1871, twenty-six weeks is said to be the length of this voyage, whereas it should be twenty weeks.

43. The "special provisions as to French colonies" (Part XII, sections 63—70 of the present Act) have been omitted as unnecessary, it being considered that all emigration, whether to British or Foreign colonies, should be conducted on one system. It may be observed that no such special provisions have been found necessary in the case of emigration to Surinam, which has been carried on under a convention with the Netherlands Government similar to that with France. The convention with France is now about to be amended, and if in its amended form it should be found to include any points requiring a deviation in matters of detail from the general procedure of the Bill, such points, together with the question of the adaptation of the Bill to emigration from French ports, can be left for consideration to the Select Committee to which it is proposed to refer the Bill.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

NUMEROUS suggestions for the amendment of the Indian Emigration Act, 1871, have from time to time been received by the Government. Many of these which it appears desirable to adopt deal with minor and, comparatively speaking, unimportant points; but some propose substantial changes which would materially alter the working of the existing law. It has, moreover, been found that the form and arrangement of the Act are susceptible of improvement. Under these circumstances, it has been thought advisable to repeal the Act, and re-enact it with all the requisite amendments. Of these amendments the more important are the following.

2. In the preliminary chapter "emigrate," "emigrant" and "emigration" have been so defined as to cover not only persons leaving India under a contract to labour, but also dependents of such persons. It is obvious that, for all purposes of the control of recruiters and depôts, the regulation of emigrant vessels, &c., it is as necessary to take count of dependents as of the persons who contract to labour.

3. Section 5, which corresponds to section 26 of the Act of 1871, has been amplified so as to give the Governor General in Council power to establish ports other than those of the three Presidency-towns as ports of embarkation.

4. In a recent correspondence it has been brought to notice that the effect of the Contract Act of 1872 has been to make it impossible for persons under the legal age of majority (in most cases 18) to engage to emigrate. The limit of sixteen years at or above which an emigrant may himself enter into a contract to emigrate has been adopted in sections 34 and 35 of the Bill from the Bengal Labour Districts Emigration Act (Bengal Act VII of 1873); and it has been provided that minors below that age and above the age of six years may contract through their guardians, power being reserved to the minor to rescind the contract at any time within the thirty days next following the completion of his age of eighteen years.

5. Section 33 requires all agreements to emigrate to be in writing, and, if entered into within the limits of any port from which emigration is lawful, to be made with the Emigration Agent at such port, and executed in the presence of the Protector; if entered into elsewhere, to be made with a recruiter and executed in the presence of a Magistrate. Section 36 lays down what such agreements must contain. At present, there is much confusion in the law as to what constitutes the contract to emigrate; and it is not absolutely necessary that any terms of service should be settled before the emigrant leaves India. Most, if not all, colonies have already introduced written contracts, so that there will be no hardship in requiring their general use; the conventions with France and Holland expressly stipulate that a written contract must first be executed in India, and there will thus be no difficulty with those powers. The requirement of a contract, moreover, marks distinctly the stage at which an emigrant becomes liable for breach of contract—a point which under the present law is somewhat uncertain. Lastly, the provision exists (in substance) in the Burma and Straits Settlements Emigration Laws. The material stipulations mentioned in section 36 are all actually adopted by the colonies which receive Indian emigrants.

6. The remaining amendments are for the most part in matters of detail, and may be shortly stated as follows.

7. For the present definition of Magistrate and section 85 of the existing Act, the definition in Act V of 1877 (The Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877), which allows of the appointment of any person as a Magistrate for the purposes of the Act, has been substituted.

8. Chapter II.—Ports from which, and places to which, Emigration is lawful.—This is a new chapter, which brings together under one head, in an amended form, the provisions of sections 23 to 26 and sections 57 to 61 of the Act of 1871.

9. Sections 7 to 10.—In the present law sections 57 and 61 overlap, and one of them is clearly unnecessary. The opportunity has accordingly been taken to re-draft the sections, amalgamating them and specifying more clearly the reasons for which emigration may be suspended. Excessive mortality, neglect to enforce in the colony the contracts made in India and omission to furnish the Government of India with the information necessary to enable it to judge how Indian immigrants are treated have been added to the reasons mentioned in sections 57 and 61 of the present Act. This last is in accordance with the recommendation of Sir G. Campbell.

10. Section 8 defines more clearly the extraordinary power which, under section 61 of the present Act, can be exercised by the Local Government on a pressing emergency; and this power has been restricted to a single case—the outbreak of plague or other epidemic disease dangerous to life in the colony.

11. Chapter III.—Emigration Agents.—No change has been made in this chapter, which corresponds with Part II of the present Act, except a slight amendment of section 4 of the present law, defining the effect of the notification of appointment of an Emigration Agent by the Local Government and giving that Government power to withdraw its approval of the appointment of such Agent.

12. Chapter IV.—Protectors of Emigrants and Medical Inspectors.—The wording of this chapter, which corresponds with a portion of Part III of the present Act, has been revised, and power has been given to the Local Government to appoint, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, Protectors of Emigrants for local areas beyond the territories subject to its administration.

13. Chapter V.—Emigration Depôts.—This chapter corresponds with a portion of Part III of the present Act; but the second clauses of sections 18 and 21, which are based on Act III of 1876, section 25, are new.

14. Chapter VI.—Recruiters and Sub-Agents of Emigration.—Several modifications and additions have been made in the portion of this chapter relating to recruiters, all of which have been strongly urged on the attention of the Government of India at various times, and the expediency of most of which has already been recognized in Acts III of 1876 and V of 1877. The first of these is the requirement in section 23 that the local area within which the recruiter is to work shall be specified in the license; this is taken from Act V of 1877, section 12. The next is the omission of section 20 of the present Act, which requires every recruiter to wear a badge. The badge has been objected to by many authorities, as investing the recruiter, in the eyes of the people, with the appearance of a Government chaprási. It is clearly necessary, on the other hand, that every recruiter should be furnished with an authentic statement of the terms he is authorized to offer; and section 25 of the Bill accordingly requires that he should be furnished with such a statement. The next amendment calling for notice is in the second paragraph of section 26. At present, the Magistrate has no option in countersigning a recruiter's license, but must add his signature, if the period of the license is unexpired; it is obvious that he should refuse to do so if the recruiter bears a bad character. At present, the Protector is required, under executive instructions, to satisfy himself, by enquiry from the Magistrate of the district where the recruiter is known, that there is nothing against him before granting the license; but this is a circuitous method of procedure, and often leads to great delay. The principle of this amendment has already been fully admitted in Acts III of 1876, section 12, and V of 1877, section 13, from which it is borrowed. The other provisions of this paragraph, and the provisions of section 27 as to the regulation of places of accommodation to be provided in the recruiting districts for intending emigrants, are also new. At the places referred to many abuses are practised in connection with recruiting, and the necessity of supervising such places has several times been pressed on the Government of India as urgently necessary. Sections 28 and 29 are also new. They are the complement of section 26, and are taken from Acts III of 1876, section 12, and V of 1877, section 13. Section 28 empowers the Magistrate, under certain circumstances, to cancel his countersignature or to impound the license and send it to the Protector for cancellation; and section 29 requires all refusals and cancellations of countersignature by Magistrates to be at once reported to the Protector.

15. The last three sections of this chapter (30 to 32), relating to Sub-Agents, are new, and provide some much-needed clauses for the control of the local agency through which it is the practice of Emigration Agents to conduct recruiting operations. All Sub-Agents must be licensed by the Local Government; and the license, for which a fee of Rs. 30 (double that for a recruiter's license) is fixed, may be revoked on proof of misconduct. It is further provided that the remuneration of Sub-Agents must, like that of Emigration Agents (under section 5 of the present Act), be a fixed sum, and not in the form of head-money.

16. Chapter VII.—Agreements with Emigrants.—The provisions of this chapter are new, and make certain important additions to the existing law.

17. Chapter VIII.—Attestation of Agreements and Registration of Emigrants.—In this chapter, which corresponds with Part VI of the present Act, modifications have been introduced—

(1) to provide for the agreement with the emigrant being executed before and attested by the Magistrate or the Protector (section 38);

(2) to alter the particulars required to be entered in the register (section 38);

(3) to state more clearly the reasons for which a registering officer may refuse to attest a contract (section 39);

(4) to provide for the examination of dependents as to their dependence upon the contracting emigrants and as to their willingness to accompany such emigrants (section 40);

(5) to provide for a medical examination of intending emigrants, where necessary, previous to their being registered under section 38 (section 42);

(6) to revise the table of fees (section 45).

18. The effect of the first of these amendments will be to bind the emigrant more closely, and so place an obstacle in the way of his desertion. On the other hand, it will give the emigrant, if rejected by the Agent, a claim which can be enforced in the Courts on his behalf by the Protector (section 104).

19. The second matter is dealt with by adding to the particulars at present required the following:—

(a) the name of the recruiter or agent to whom the emigrant has been engaged;

(b) the caste and occupation of the emigrant; and

(c) the persons who, if he were to die at once, would be entitled to succeed to his property (so that any savings he may have collected in the colony may be duly delivered).

On the other hand, as a copy of the contract is to be placed on record in the Protector's office, the rate of wages and period of service will no longer be entered in the register.

20. As regards the third matter, power has been given, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, to refuse attestation (in the absence of sufficient explanation) when the emigrant is a resident of a place beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate before whom he appears. This is a necessary precaution, as it is common for unscrupulous recruiters to convey intending emigrants long distances from their homes, to involve them in debt for maintenance during their journey, and thus to remove the temptation, and at the same time deprive them of the power, to return. It also often happens that an emigrant whose registration is refused by one Magistrate is taken before another in the next district, where it is hoped that the officer will be more compliant. Power has also been given to refuse registration of a person who, if he quits his home, will leave his family destitute, and of a married woman without the consent of her husband.

21. The fourth point has been provided for as in Act V of 1877, section 19.

22. As regards the fifth point, it is not intended that the power to order a medical examination of an emigrant recruited in a district beyond the port of embarkation shall be universally enforced. The examination is only to be directed to testing the emigrant's fitness to undertake the journey to the depôt and not his fitness to labour, for which the Emigration Agent is responsible. It will only be necessary to require a medical examination in special cases, as, for instance, when the condition of the emigrating class is reduced by famine, or when the distance to be travelled to the depôt is great.

23. The fees fixed by section 31 of the present Act can be taken, under the definition of "emigrant" and the operation of the Contract Act, only for adult emigrants. It seems desirable to require a fee for the registration of every contracting emigrant, allowing dependents who do not contract, and are only entered in the register, to be registered without a fee. This matter recently formed the subject of correspondence with Local Governments, and the scale adopted is generally in accordance with their recommendations. The present provision for the refund of the fee on desertion has, in accordance with the precedents of Acts III of 1876 and V of 1877 and the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, been omitted. The fee is a payment for the work of registration, and that work is not affected by the subsequent desertion of the emigrant.

24. Chapter IX.—Conveyance of Emigrants to Depôts.—In this chapter a provision has been added which enables the Magistrate to order the Emigration Agent or recruiter to pay such sum as is necessary to enable an emigrant, who has been rejected before arriving at the port of embarkation, or the dependent of such emigrant, to return to his home.

25. Chapter X.—Procedure on arrival at the Depôt of Emigrants from Up-country.—The provisions of this chapter have been re-arranged and revised, the corresponding provisions of Act V of 1877 being generally followed. The operation of the chapter has been expressly restricted to the case of emigrants from up-country, for whom alone it appears to be intended. Section 51 as amended expresses what has always been understood by the Government of India to be the responsibility of its officers in respect of the fitness of emigrants to emigrate: fitness for labour and life in the colony is a matter for which the Emigration Agent is responsible. Sections 55 and 56 have been adopted with some modifications from Act V of 1877, sections 28, 29 and 30.

26. Chapter XI.—Emigrant Vessels.—The amendments in this chapter, which corresponds with Part IX of the present Act, are slight. There is a change in the wording of paragraph 3 of section 58 and some alterations in the dimensions specified in section 60. The principal differences, as compared with the present law, are—(1) that the height of the accommodation for emigrants is raised from 5½ to 6 feet; (2) that all children under ten, instead of only those from one to ten years of age, are counted at the rate of two to one adult; and (3), that the space required for each child under ten is fixed at half that required for an adult, instead of, as now, two-thirds for children between two and ten. These changes were recommended by the Government of Bengal in 1873, and are required chiefly to improve the accommodation for infants, among whom much mortality occasionally occurs. "Compounders, interpreters and female nurses" have been added in section 63 also, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government of Bengal.

27. Chapter XII.—Embarkation and Departure.—Section 67 is in accordance with a recommendation made by the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta, who considers it a precaution necessary "not only to afford the opportunity of ascertaining the freedom of emigrants from latent and communicable diseases which have distinct periods of incubation, but to give such as are ill-nourished and have been recruited in famine-stricken districts some time to rest and recover themselves after their journey, and prior to undertaking what proves in all cases a trying voyage to Indian emigrants generally."

28. Section 68 embodies the present views of the Government of India regarding the seasons at which embarkation should be allowed. This matter has been the subject of much discussion. The conventions allow the French and Dutch colonies a longer period than the Act allows the corresponding British colonies; and, in the case of the latter, it has been represented that even the period allowed by the Act is too long, since emigrants shipped late in the season for the West Indies arrive there at a very unhealthy season of the year, and are liable to great mortality in consequence.

When the provisions of the existing law were framed, the embarkation seasons were settled with reference to one point only, viz., the necessity for avoiding the stormy weather encountered in the neighbourhood of the Cape of Good Hope during the Antarctic winter; consequently no impediment was offered to the shipment of emigrants at any time of the year for colonies east of the Cape. But hurricanes prevail in the neighbourhood of Réunion between the months of November and April; and they are also prevalent in the Fiji Islands during the same season. Moreover, the necessity for landing emigrants in their place of destination at a healthy season of the year is another consideration which makes it necessary carefully to regulate the period of despatch.

In the Bill, therefore, power has been taken to enable the Governor General in Council to regulate the departure of all emigrant vessels, whether bound for places to the east or west of the Cape of Good Hope.

The present limits, the 31st July to the 1st March, for places west of the Cape of Good Hope, however, have been retained as a maximum; and the provision in the present Act (section 46, last clause) permitting departure for such places on an emergency up to the 1st April has been struck out. Cases of loss of emigrant vessels allowed to be despatched after the 1st March, as well as heavy mortality during such voyages, have occurred, and it is thought inexpedient to continue the concession.

The special privilege of carrying emigrants at any time of the year now enjoyed by steamers has also been done away with, as being inconsistent with the regulation of the season for departure with reference to that of arrival in the colony; but as a concession to the superiority of such vessels over sailing vessels, the time within which they may depart for places west of the Cape of Good Hope is extended from the 1st to the 15th March.

29. The penalty clause in section 45 of the present Act, to which section 71 of the Bill corresponds, has been removed to its proper place in chapter XIV (section 99).

In section 72 the number of copies of the list has been reduced from five to four, which, according to the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta, are all that are required.

Section 78, requiring the Emigration Agent to furnish the Master with the contracts, is new, but needs no comment.

30. Sections 82 and 83 are new. They express the substance of the conclusions come to in a correspondence which passed in 1877 regarding the action which should be taken on the occurrence of cases of an infectious disease, or an outbreak of cholera in an epidemic form, on board an emigrant vessel proceeding down the Hugli.

31. Section 55 of the present Act has been omitted, as no emigration has ever gone on to Seychelles, and the colony was included in that Act by a mistake.

32. Chapter XIII.—Supplementary Powers.—In section 85 a few additions have been made to the matters regarding which rules may be framed (clauses c, d, f, g and h), and the proviso authorizing the Local Government to permit the despatch of a vessel with less than the prescribed proportion of women has been struck out.

33. Section 86 relates to fees, and modifies section 62 of the present Act. The object of levying fees is to maintain therefrom the necessary protective establishments in India; such fees should accordingly be just sufficient to cover the cost of such establishments, neither more nor less. It may sometimes happen (more especially, as at present, in the case of foreign colonies) that the Government of India has to meet in respect of some particular colony a special expenditure, which it would be unfair to cast (as is now done) on the income from fees contributed by all colonies; a proviso has accordingly been added enabling such expenditure to be met by enhanced fees on emigration to the particular colony in respect of which it is incurred.

34. Chapter XIV.—Offences.—This part has been generally redrawn. The penalties provided in the present Act, sections 72 to 75, are merely fine extending to 500 rupees. It appears necessary to add imprisonment, as in Act V of 1877.

35. Section 90 has been introduced to cover the case of unlicensed persons acting as Sub-Agents.

36. Section 96 is new; it has been adopted from Act V of 1877, section 44.

37. Section 98 is also new; it provides for the punishment of emigrants who desert after a contract has been duly entered into with the recruiter before a Magistrate. The present law provides no punishment for this offence, the only liability being to a civil suit for breach of contract—a proceeding which is, of course, useless in most cases of the kind. There is no doubt that, in view of the class of men who work as recruiters and the many risks of deception and ill-treatment to which intending emigrants are exposed at their hands, it is necessary to guard the power to inflict a penalty for desertion in such cases most carefully. Still cases have arisen, and may easily arise, of impudent deception on the part of persons who profess willingness to emigrate, and under such profession obtain board and lodging in the Mufassal, and free conveyance to the port of embarkation, where they desert or refuse to emigrate. To meet such cases, the section has been devised, and it has been so drawn as to require the sanction of the Protector of Emigrants to every prosecution instituted under it.

38. Section 99 has been substituted for the second clause of section 45 of the present Act, which clause, it may here be observed, is practically inoperative in Calcutta, because it requires the complaint to be laid before a Magistrate of Police in a Presidency-town, and the depôts are situated outside the limits of Calcutta, and therefore outside of the local jurisdiction of such Magistrates. The penalty, instead of being stated by reference to section 492 of the Penal Code, is mentioned in express terms; and the sanction of the Protector to a prosecution under the section is, as in section 98, required.

39. Section 102 is an amendment of section 82 of Act VII of 1871. At present special authority is required to institute prosecutions for all offences under the existing Act; there seems to be no good reason why such sanction should be required in the case of the offences mentioned in sections 87 to 91.

40. Chapter XV.—Miscellaneous.—Section 105 corresponds with section 88 of the present Act, which has been re-drawn to admit of the probable length of voyages being modified from time to time as may be found necessary on the receipt of fuller information, or the establishment of improved means of communication. Section 84 of the present Act is incorporated with section 105.

41. A new form of recruiter's license (chiefly taken from Act V of 1877) has been substituted for the form in Schedule II of the present Act.

42. In the third schedule of the Bill opportunity has been taken to correct a clerical error as to the length of the voyage from Calcutta to French Guiana. In section 83, Act VII of 1871, twenty-six weeks is said to be the length of this voyage, whereas it should be twenty weeks.

43. The "special provisions as to French colonies" (Part XII, sections 63—70 of the present Act) have been omitted as unnecessary, it being considered that all emigration, whether to British or Foreign colonies, should be conducted on one system. It may be observed that no such special provisions have been found necessary in the case of emigration to Surinam, which has been carried on under a convention with the Netherlands Government similar to that with France. The convention with France is now about to be amended, and if in its amended form it should be found to include any points requiring a deviation in matters of detail from the general procedure of the Bill, such points, together with the question of the adaptation of the Bill to emigration from French ports, can be left for consideration to the Select Committee to which it is proposed to refer the Bill.

Provided that, if, in the case of a remand in appeal, the order of remand does not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the suit, the certificate so granted shall not authorize the appellant to receive back more than so much fee as would have been originally payable on the part or parts of such subject-matter in respect whereof the suit has been remanded.

Act VII of 1870, s. 14.

14. Where an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the ninetieth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day.

Refund of fee on application for review of judgment.

15. 16. When any appeal is presented to a Civil Court, not against the whole of a decision, but only against so much thereof as relates to a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, and, on the hearing of such appeal, the respondent takes, under section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an objection to any part of the said decision other than the part appealed against, the Court shall not hear such objection until the respondent has paid the additional fee which would have been payable had the appeal comprised the part of the decision so objected to.

Relief where too high a Court-fee has been paid on probate or letters of administration.

within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained, such person produces the probate or letters to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority of the province in which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to such Authority a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation, and if such Authority is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required,

the said Authority may—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled;

(b) substitute another stamp for denoting the Court-fee which should have been paid thereon; and

(c) make an allowance for the difference between them as in the case of spoiled stamps, or repay the same in money, at his discretion.

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

Relief where debts due from a deceased person have been paid out of his estate.

21. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of such Authority that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less Court-fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act, such Authority may return the difference, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters.

But whenever, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the said Authority may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

Ibid.

Relief in case of several grants.

22. Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable hereunder when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate;

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates.

Probates declared valid as to trust-property though not covered by Court-fee.

23. The probate of the will, or the letters of administration of the effects, of any person deceased heretofore or hereafter granted shall be deemed valid and available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring or assigning any moveable or immoveable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a Court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration.

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

Provision for case where too low a Court-fee has been paid on probates, &c.

24. Where any person on applying for probate or letters of administration has estimated the estate of the deceased to be of less value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has in consequence paid too low a Court-fee thereon, the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority of the province in which the probate or letters has or have been granted may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full Court-fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper Court-fee, without any deduction of the Court-fee originally paid on such probate or letters:

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a Court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the said Authority is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper Court-fee, the said Authority may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

Ibid.

Administrator to give proper security before letters stamped under section 24.

25. In case of letters of administration on which too low a Court-fee has been paid at first, the said Authority shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in manner aforesaid until the Administrator has given such security to the Court by which the letters of administration have been granted as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had been then ascertained.

Ibid.

Executors, &c., not paying full Court-fee on probates, &c., within six months after discovery of underpayment.

26. Where too low a Court-fee has been paid on any probate or letters of administration in consequence of any mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said Authority and pay what is wanting to make up the Court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent. on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper Court-fee.

If the property so recovered or realized exceed the amount of debts or other property as sworn to by the person to whom the certificate is granted, the Court may cancel the same and order such person to take out a fresh certificate and pay the fee prescribed by this Act for such excess.

In default of filing such statement within the time allowed, the Court may cancel the certificate.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In the year 1879 Mr. F. R. Cockerell was instructed by the Government of India to place himself on his arrival in England in communication with Messrs. De La Rue & Co., the eminent stamp-manufacturers. He was to bring before them the whole question of the stamp forgeries recently discovered in Oudh and the North-Western Provinces and to submit, for their inspection and examination, some specimens of those forgeries, together with the apparatus employed, or supposed to have been employed, in the manufacture of the forged labels. He was then, in consultation with Messrs. De La Rue and with the aid of their practical experience, to devise some kind of stamping machinery which would protect the revenue against the fraudulent practices by which its security has been menaced from time to time, and to submit, as the result of this conference, his conclusions on the whole question, and any recommendations for the alteration of the existing system of collecting fees, stating at the same time how far these conclusions and recommendations had the concurrence of that firm.

2. Mr. Cockerell has now submitted his report. The principal question for consideration was whether adhesive labels were to be retained for the collection of Court-fees wholly or partly.

3. The frauds to which the use of adhesive stamps has given rise are of two kinds:—

1st—Abstraction of the labels from the papers to which they have been affixed and re-use of such labels.

2nd—The production as genuine of counterfeit labels and making them pass current.

4. Messrs. De La Rue were of opinion that from the stamp-manufacturers' point of view there is no way of preventing such attempts at counterfeiting adhesive labels as had been recently discovered, or rendering their accomplishment more difficult. The Government of India had therefore to choose between persevering with the adhesive stamps and a partial or complete recourse to the use of stamped papers in lieu of the labels. Messrs. De La Rue advocated a complete re-introduction of stamped papers for the collection of Court-fees generally. They were of opinion that it is more profitable for forgers to work upon labels of the smaller values, as they pass with less scrutiny than labels of the higher values, and that the forgeries discovered were of so clumsy and inaccurate a nature that they should have been detected at once with ordinary care. The real difficulty and danger to the revenue, Messrs. De La Rue considered, arose out of the other kind of fraud, namely, the abstraction and re-use of the adhesive labels.

5. On the other hand, Mr. Cockerell was of opinion that the wisest course, under the present circumstances, would be a partial substitution of stamped papers for adhesive labels. If after a fair trial of such a measure it was found necessary to go further in the direction of the discontinuance of the use of adhesive labels, such progressive action would not have been rendered more difficult by the adoption of what he proposed, inasmuch as his proposals did not involve any considerable initial outlay, the value of which would be lost in the event of any closely following change of system. Mr. Cockerell also thought that, considering the great difficulty which forgers have in this country, owing to deficient mechanical appliances, in manufacturing forged stamps rapidly, and the great expense incurred in paying persons to pass the counterfeit labels, it was unlikely that forgers would work upon the smaller values. With regard to the abstraction and re-use of adhesive labels, he thought that an inquiry into the cases in which such frauds have been committed showed that they might have been prevented by a due examination and cancellation of the labels affixed to documents when presented to the Court or office in which the fraud occurred. He therefore came to the conclusion that it would be premature to condemn a system the checks and precautions for the proper working of which had never been fairly and perseveringly enforced.

6. The great advantage which the substitution of stamped papers for adhesive labels in the collection of the Court-fees of the higher values instead of those of the lower values possesses is that the increase of expenditure entailed by the former change is very much less than that entailed by the latter. Mr. Cockerell calculates that the average consumption of stamps of the value of ten rupees and upwards is less than Rs. 3,00,000, out of a total consumption of more than 25½ millions. Then the cost of the lower values of adhesive labels is two shillings and sixpence per thousand, while the cost of the smallest size of stamped papers is 37 shillings per thousand. Besides this vast difference in the cost of production, the introduction of stamped papers involves a great increase in the cost of carriage.

7. For these reasons Mr. Cockerell recommended that stamped papers should be used for the collection of all Court-fees of ten rupees' value and upwards, and that the use of adhesive labels in respect of all denominations of fees below that amount should be continued. His reasons for thinking that the change should commence at the ten rupees' denomination are briefly as follows:—

(1) that this would include all values of substantial amount in regard to which the greatest risk to the revenue from forgeries is to be apprehended;

(2) that, to avoid expense in the introduction of stamped papers, it will be necessary to manufacture them on the same pattern, using the same plates, &c., as the stamped papers used under the Indian Stamp Act, 1879. The classification of stamped papers for Court-fees should, therefore, be the same as that for stamp-duties, and class III of the latter commences at ten rupees.

(3) that it is of great importance that the denominations below one rupee should be represented by adhesive labels, as these denominations are specially required for the purpose of making up the fractional parts of five rupees where the whole value of the stamp required exceeds ten rupees.

8. Mr. Cockerell proposed no change in the present scale of fees payable in suits the amount or value of the subject-matter of which does not exceed Rs. 5,000. With regard to the fees chargeable on suits of higher values, he proposed to re-adjust the scale of fees prescribed by Schedule I of the Court-fees' Act so as to reduce materially the number of denominations of stamps required for the collection of fees. The sliding scale fixed by the present law comprises no less than one hundred and thirty-five denominations of fees above Rs. 275, which is the fee chargeable on a suit for an amount or value of Rs. 5,000. To meet the requirements of this scale very many new denominations of stamped papers would have to be provided. Great additional expense would have to be incurred in making the proposed change, while the new stamp papers would, comparatively speaking, be seldom used, the number of suits for large amounts forming so small a portion of the entire litigation of the country.

9. The greatest enhancement in the fees which this change in the law will involve will be in suits for Rs. 7,000 and Rs. 10,000. In the former suits there will be an increase of twenty rupees and in the latter an increase of fifty. In the case of suits for sums exceeding Rs. 10,000 the increase will be less in proportion. Thus, the fee on a suit for Rs. 15,000 will be only twenty-five rupees above its amount under the existing scale, and the fee on a suit for Rs. 20,000 will be the same as that on a suit for Rs. 30,000 and only twenty-five rupees more than the present fee. The proposed increase, it is calculated, affects only about one per cent. of the entire litigation of the country.

10. Mr. Cockerell calculates that the annual cost of substituting stamped papers for all values of ten rupees and upwards, and continuing the use of adhesive labels, will be about £8,600, or an increase of rather more than £5,000 over the present cost. The total cost of substituting stamped papers in respect of all denominations of Court-fees and discontinuing the use of labels absolutely will be about £56,000, or an increase over the present expenditure for manufacture alone of about £53,000.

11. The Government of India has resolved to adopt Mr. Cockerell's recommendations, and it is therefore necessary to legislate and to amend the first article of Schedule II of the Court-fees' Act in accordance with his suggestions. The Act will also be amended so as to prevent the fraudulent removal and re-use of adhesive labels. The opportunity will be taken to make certain other amendments of the law which the reported decisions of the High Courts and the experience of the last eleven years have shewn to be desirable.

12. The following are the principal amendments which are made in the present law by the Bill.

13. In clause (a), section 36, of the Bill, corresponding to clause (a), section 27, of the present Act, power is given to the Local Government to make rules for regulating the supply and sale of Court-fee stamps, the persons by whom alone such sale is to be conducted, and the duties and remuneration of such persons. The Local Government has similar powers under the Indian Stamp Act, and such powers will be useful in preventing frauds against the revenue. It is easier to detect the fraudulent removal and re-use of labels when there are means of tracing the persons by whom and to whom the labels were sold. If the stamp-vendors are placed under the control of the Local Government and sales by non-authorized persons prohibited, means can be provided for tracing the vendors and purchasers of stamps with respect to which fraud is suspected.

14. This amendment has involved other changes in the law. In order to enforce the rules made under clause (a), section 36, a penalty is provided by section 41 for breach of the rules by authorized vendors and for the sale of stamps by a person not authorized. Then, as no one but a duly authorised person can sell stamps, section 48 provides for making an allowance for stamps which a person has purchased but afterwards finds that he has no use for.

15. In order to prevent the fraudulent removal and re-use of labels it is necessary to provide for the proper cancellation of stamps. The present law (section 30) directs that cancellation shall be effected by punching out the figure-head so as to leave the amount designated on the stamp untouched, and that the part removed by punching shall be burnt or otherwise destroyed. These provisions have not been found to work well in practice. The duty which they impose has not been fully performed, and experience has shown that there is more chance of getting the responsible officers concerned to observe regulations of this kind when they are prescribed by rules which can be adapted to the varying circumstances of the different provinces of the empire. Accordingly, section 39 of the Bill gives each Local Government power, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to make rules for regulating the mode of cancelling stamps and the persons by whom such cancellation is to be effected.

16. The other amendment involved by Mr. Cockerell's proposals is the alteration in the scale of ad valorem fees: the cause of this change in the law has been already explained. In suits when the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute exceeds Rs. 5,000, instead of charging a fee of ten rupees for every Rs. 250 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 10,000, the Bill provides a charge of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 500 or part thereof. When such amount or value exceeds Rs. 10,000, instead of a fee of fifteen rupees for every Rs. 500 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 10,000 up to Rs. 20,000, the Bill provides a fee of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof up to Rs. 25,000. So the next class of suits, instead of ranging from Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 30,000 with an additional fee of Rs. 20 for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 20,000, ranges from Rs. 25,000 to Rs. 50,000 with an additional fee of Rs. 100 for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 25,000. The next class of suits, instead of ranging from Rs. 30,000 to Rs. 50,000 is to range from Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 4,00,000 with an increased fee of Rs. 100 on every Rs. 25,000 or part thereof. Lastly, instead of a fee of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 50,000, the Bill prescribes a fee of Rs. 100 for every Rs. 50,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 4,00,000.

17. The Bill also provides in section 42 a penalty for the fraudulent possession of used and cancelled stamps which have been removed from the documents to which they have been affixed. The fact of a person having such stamps in his possession is a clear indication of an intent to use them fraudulently.

18. A penalty has also been provided (section 40) for failing to file the statement on oath of all property received or realized under a certificate granted under Act No. XL of 1858, Act No. XXVII of 1860, Act No. XX of 1864, or Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827. At present the law requiring such statements to be furnished may be evaded to the detriment of the revenue, for the only penalty is cancellation of the certificate, and default in filing the statement is probably in many cases never brought to the notice of the Court.

19. To prevent vexatious prosecutions the Bill (section 43), following the Indian Stamp Act, provides that no prosecution for any offence punishable thereunder shall be instituted without the sanction of the Collector or an officer duly authorized in that behalf.

20. The above are the principal amendments; but opportunity has been taken to make some other alterations in the law, which appear to be advisable.

21. In section 6 of the Bill the words "granted under his seal and signature" have been substituted for the word "furnished." The practice was for many years to grant copies unauthenticated by seal or signature without payment of Court-fee. It is held that this practice is under the present law illegal; but as copies are frequently required for private use and not for filing, exhibiting and recording in a Court of justice, it is thought advisable in the interests of the public to render the former practice legal.

22. In section 7, paragraph xi, the fee in suits to enhance the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy and for abatement of rent is directed to be calculated on five times the amount by which the rent is sought to be enhanced or abated, instead of, as at present, according to the amount of the rent of the land to which the suit refers payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint. The amendment gives a fairer method of calculating the fee chargeable in such suits.

23. In section 12, corresponding with section 12 of the present law, the words "and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" have been omitted. It has been held by the High Court at Calcutta, in the case of Ajoodhya Pershad v. Gunga Pershad (I. L. R., 6 Calc., p. 249), that an appeal lies against an order rejecting a plaint on the ground of its being insufficiently stamped, such an order being a decree within the meaning of the definition in the Code of Civil Procedure. An appeal should be allowed from an order so rejecting a plaint, and if the words "and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" are retained in the Bill, it will probably be held that the right of appeal is taken away.

24. In section 17, which relates to the fee payable in multifarious suits, the expression "causes of action" is substituted for the expression "subjects" in accordance with a recent decision of the High Court at Allahabad.

25. The list of exemptions in section 19 of the Act has been transferred to Schedule III. The words "whilst serving in such capacity" have been substituted for the words "not in civil employment" in the eleventh exemption, and petitions, applications and memoranda of appeal under the Oudh Taluqdárs Act, 1870, have been added to the exemptions; and section twenty-four of that Act, which exempted those documents from Court-fees, has been entered in the schedule of enactments repealed. Other exemptions which have been made by the Governor General in Council under section 35 of the present Act have also for convenience been included in the schedule of exemptions and the whole has been arranged in alphabetical order.

26. The provisions as to probates, letters of administration and certificates which were inserted in the Court-fees' Act by the Probates and Letters of Administration Act of 1875 are printed in their proper place in Chapter IV of the Bill. By section 27 the provisions of this chapter are made applicable to certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 and Bom. Reg. VIII of 1827, as well as to certificates granted under Acts XL of 1858 and XX of 1864, and the note to Article 12, Schedule I, which requires a statement on oath of all property recovered or realized under a certificate to be filed by the certificate-holder, is removed from the schedule and added to the chapter as section 28. A provision has also been added to section 28, in accordance with a decision of the High Court of Madras, that a certificate which has become liable to cancellation under the section shall remain in force until it is actually cancelled.

27. In section 38 words are added to make it clear that an amended document is not exempted from the payment of an additional fee, when the duty with which it is chargeable is increased by the amendment.

28. Some obsolete portions of the Court-fees' Act have been omitted, but the general arrangement of the Bill remains the same as that of the Act.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st August, 1881, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 17 OF 1881.

A Bill to amend the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872.

Preamble.

WHEREAS, in order to provide for the establishment of a system of municipal-watchmen in certain municipalities in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, it is expedient to amend the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Laws Amendment Act, 1881," and shall come into force at once.

Substitution of new sections for sections 39A and 39B.

2. For sections 39A and 39B of the said Act, the following sections shall be substituted:—

Power to establish system of village-watchmen and municipal-watchmen, and to make rules.

"39A. The Local Government may establish a system of village-watchmen or municipal-watchmen in any part of the territories under its administration, and in furtherance of this object may, from time to time, make rules to provide for the following matters:—

(a) the definition of the limits of watchmen's beats;

(b) the determination of the several grades of watchmen, and the number of each grade to be appointed to each beat;

(c) the appointment, suspension, dismissal and resignation of watchmen of each grade;

(d) the equipment and discipline of, and the control and supervision over, such watchmen;

(e) the conferring upon them, and the exercise by them, of any powers, and the enjoyment by them of any protection or privilege, which may be exercised and enjoyed by a police-officer under any law for the time being in force;

(f) the performance by them of such duties relating to police, sanitation or statistics, or for the benefit of the village-communities or municipalities within their beat, as the Local Government thinks fit;

(g) the exercise of authority over, and the rendering of aid to, such watchmen by headmen of the villages or members of the Municipal Committees of the towns, comprised in their respective beats;

(h) the performance by the headmen of villages comprised in the beat of any of the duties of a village-watchman in aid of, or substitution for, such watchman;

(i) the exercise by such village-headmen for the purposes referred to in clauses (g) and (h), or by members of Municipal Committees for the purposes referred to in clause (g) of this section, of any of the powers, and the enjoyment by them of any privilege or protection, of a village-watchman or a municipal-watchman;

(j) the determination of the rate at which, and the mode in which, watchmen shall be paid, and, in the case of village-watchmen, of the mode in which their pay, the expenses of their equipment, and other charges connected with the village-watchman system shall be provided for, whether out of cesses or funds already leviable or available in the villages comprised in the beat, or by a special tax in money or kind to be imposed on any class of persons residing or owning property in, or resorting to, such villages or partly in one of these ways and partly in the other;

(k) the collection with or without the aid of the village-headmen, and by any process available for the realization of the land-revenue, of any tax imposed under clause (j) of this section, and the application of, and the mode of accounting for, the same; and generally for

"Provided—

2ndly,—that the rules to be made under clause (j) of this section with regard to village-watchmen shall include provisions for recording and securing due consideration of the views and opinions of the village-headmen of such beat on the matters therein referred to.

"39B. Every person is bound to render to a village-watchman, or municipal-watchman, or village-headman discharging the duties of a police-officer under the rules made hereunder, all the assistance which he is bound to render to a police-officer.

Obligation to assist watchmen and headmen.

"Any person who obstructs such watchman or headman in the discharge of such duties may be arrested without warrant by a police-officer or by any watchman or village-headman empowered in this behalf by the Local Government."

Person obstructing watchman or headman may be arrested without warrant.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER section 12 of the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, every Municipal Committee is bound to set apart, out of the Municipal Fund, a sum for the maintenance of a police establishment in the town for which the Committee is appointed. Within the last few years certain small Municipalities in the Panjáb have represented that their income was insufficient to maintain a regular police force, as constituted under the Police Act (V of 1861), and have requested the Local Government to permit the employment by them of a cheaper form of guard in the shape of chaukídárs or watchmen. As there appeared to be considerable weight in these representations, the Local Government has permitted the Municipalities in question to employ watchmen instead of regular police. It appears, however, to Government that there is no suitable provision in the law as it now stands under which such watchmen can be appointed.

Except Act V of 1861, which, as shewn above, is inapplicable to the Municipalities in question, the only Acts in force in the Panjáb under which police establishments can be constituted are Act XX of 1856 (known as the Chaukídárí Act) and Act IV of 1872 (the Panjáb Laws Act). The former of these Acts is unsuited to the case of these Municipalities, as it necessarily carries with it additional taxation, while sufficient special local taxation is already levied within them under the Municipal Act. The provisions of the latter of these Acts, which provide for the appointment of watchmen, are specially framed so as to exclude Municipalities from their operation.

Under these circumstances, it has been deemed advisable to have recourse to legislation, so that these watchmen may be appointed on a definite legal basis. It appears to the Government of India that the simplest plan is to modify the provisions of the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, and make them applicable to the case of Municipalities as well as to that of other places; and with this object the present Bill has been prepared.

Stamp Bill of 1877, s. 50, last clause.

8. The amount of fee payable under this Act on a memorandum of appeal against an order relating to compensation under any law for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes shall be computed according to the difference between the amount awarded and the amount claimed by the appellant.

Act VII of 1870, s. 9.

Fee on memorandum of appeal against order relating to compensation.

9. If the Court sees reason to think that the annual net profits or the market-value of any such land, house or garden are mentioned in section seven, paragraphs v and vi, have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court may, for the purpose of computing the fee payable in any suit therein mentioned, issue a commission to any proper person directing him to make such local or other investigation as may be necessary, and to report thereon to the Court.

Act VII of 1870, s. 9.

Power to ascertain net profits or market-value.

10. If in the result of any such investigation or otherwise the Court finds that the annual net profits or market-value have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court, if the estimation has been excessive, may in its discretion refund the excess paid as such fee; but if the estimation has been insufficient, the Court shall require the plaintiff to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the said market-value or annual profits been rightly estimated:

Procedure where net profits or market-value wrongly estimated.

In such case the suit shall be stayed until the additional fee is paid. If the paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed.

Act VII of 1870, s. 11.

11. In suits for mesne profits or for immoveable property and mesne profits, or for an account, if the profits or amount decreed are or is in excess of the profits claimed or the amount at which the plaintiff valued the relief sought, the decree shall not be executed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits or amount so decreed has been paid to the proper officer.

Procedure in suits for mesne profits or account when amount decreed exceeds amount claimed.

Where the amount of mesne profits is left to be ascertained in the course of the execution of the decree, if the profits so ascertained exceed the profits claimed, the further execution of the decree shall be stayed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits so ascertained has been paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the application for the execution of the decree shall be dismissed.

Act VII of 1870, s. 12. The words "said such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" are omitted. See Narayan Vishvanath

12. Every question relating to valuation for the purpose of determining the amount of any fee chargeable under this chapter on a plaint or memorandum of appeal shall be decided by the Court in which such plaint or memorandum, as the case may be, is filed.

Decision of questions as to valuation.

When any suit or appeal in which any such question arises comes before a Court of appeal, reference or revision, if such Court considers that the decision of such question has been wrongly decided, to the detriment of the revenue, it shall require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the question been rightly decided, and the provisions of the second paragraph of section ten shall apply.

Act VII of 1870, s. 13.

13. If a plaint or appeal which has been rejected by the lower Court on any of the grounds mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure is ordered to be received, or if a suit is remanded in appeal, on any of the grounds mentioned in section [illegible] of the same Code, for a second decision by the lower Court, the Appellate Court shall grant to the appellant a certificate, authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the full amount of fee paid on the memorandum of appeal:

Refund of fee paid on memorandum of appeal.

Provided that, if, in the case of a remand in appeal, the order of remand does not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the suit, the certificate so granted shall not authorize the appellant to receive back more than so much fee as would have been originally payable on the part or parts of such subject-matter in respect whereof the suit has been remanded.

Stamp Bill of 1877, s. 50, last clause.

Refund of fee on application for review of judgment.

14. Where an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the ninetieth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day.

15. Where an application for a review of judgment is admitted, and on the rehearing the Court reverses or modifies its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact, the applicant shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the fee paid on the application.

Act VII of 1870, s. 15.

Refund where Court reverses or modifies its former decision on ground of mistake.

Stamp Bill of 1877, s. 83.

But nothing in the former part of this section shall entitle the applicant to such certificate where the reversal or modification is due, wholly or in part, to fresh evidence which might have been produced at the original hearing.

16. When any appeal is presented to a Civil Court, not against the whole of a decision, but only against so much thereof as relates to a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, and, on the hearing of such appeal, the respondent takes, under section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an objection to any part of the said decision other than the part appealed against, the Court shall not hear such objection until the respondent has paid the additional fee which would have been payable had the appeal comprised the part of the decision so objected to.

Act VII of 1870, s. [illegible]

Additional fee where respondent takes objection to unappealed part of decree.

17. Where a suit comprises two or more distinct causes of action the plaint or memorandum of appeal shall be chargeable with the aggregate amount of the fees [illegible] to which the plaints or memoranda of appeal in suits comprising separately each of such causes of action would be liable under this Act.

Mul Chund v. Shib Charan Lal and others, I. L. R. [illegible]

Multifarious suits.

Nothing in the former part of this section shall apply to suits for the price of goods sold and delivered, or shall be deemed to affect the power conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 45.

18. Act XIII of 1865, s. 6.

Relief where too high a Court-fee has been paid on probate or letters of administration.

within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained, such person produces the probate or letters to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority of the province in which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to such Authority a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation, and if such Authority is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required,

the said Authority may—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled;

(b) substitute another stamp for denoting the Court-fee which should have been paid thereon; and

(c) make an allowance for the difference between them as in the case of spoiled stamps, or repay the same in money, at his discretion.

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

21. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of such Authority that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less Court-fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act, such Authority may return the difference, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters.

Relief where debts due from a deceased person have been paid out of his estate.

But whenever, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the said Authority may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

Ibid.

22. Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable hereunder when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate;

Relief in case of several grants.

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates.

Ibid.

23. The probate of the will, or the letters of administration of the effects, of any person deceased heretofore or hereafter granted shall be deemed valid and available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring or assigning any moveable or immoveable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a Court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration.

Probate declared valid as to trust-property though not covered by Court-fee.

24. Where any person on applying for probate or letters of administration has estimated the estate of the deceased to be of less value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has in consequence paid too low a Court-fee thereon, the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority of the province in which the probate or letters has or have been granted may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full Court-fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper Court-fee, without any deduction of the Court-fee originally paid on such probate or letters:

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

Provision for case where too low a Court-fee has been paid on probates, &c.

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a Court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the said Authority is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper Court-fee, the said Authority may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

25. In case of letters of administration on which too low a Court-fee has been paid at first, the said Authority shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in manner aforesaid until the Administrator has given such security to the Court by which the letters of administration have been granted as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had been then ascertained.

Ibid.

Administrator to give proper security before letters stamped under section 24.

26. Where too low a Court-fee has been paid on any probate or letters of administration in consequence of any mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said Authority and pay what is wanting to make up the Court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent. on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper Court-fee.

Stamp Act, 1877, Sch. [illegible].

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In the year 1879 Mr. F. R. Cockerell was instructed by the Government of India to place himself on his arrival in England in communication with Messrs. De La Rue & Co., the eminent stamp-manufacturers. He was to bring before them the whole question of the stamp forgeries recently discovered in Oudh and the North-Western Provinces and to submit, for their inspection and examination, some specimens of those forgeries, together with the apparatus employed, or supposed to have been employed, in the manufacture of the forged labels. He was then, in consultation with Messrs. De La Rue and with the aid of their practical experience, to devise some kind of stamping machinery which would protect the revenue against the fraudulent practices by which its security has been menaced from time to time, and to submit, as the result of this conference, his conclusions on the whole question, and any recommendations for the alteration of the existing system of collecting fees, stating at the same time how far those conclusions and recommendations had the concurrence of that firm.

2. Mr. Cockerell has now submitted his report. The principal question for consideration was whether adhesive labels were to be retained for the collection of Court-fees wholly or partly.

3. The frauds to which the use of adhesive stamps has given rise are of two kinds:—

1st—Abstraction of the labels from the papers to which they have been affixed and re-use of such labels.

2nd—The production as genuine of counterfeit labels and making them pass current.

4. Messrs. De La Rue were of opinion that from the stamp-manufacturers' point of view there is no way of preventing such attempts at counterfeiting adhesive labels as had been recently discovered, or rendering their accomplishment more difficult. The Government of India had therefore to choose between persevering with the adhesive stamps and a partial or complete recourse to the use of stamped papers in lieu of the labels. Messrs. De La Rue advocated a complete re-introduction of stamped papers for the collection of Court-fees generally. They were of opinion that it is more profitable for forgers to work upon labels of the smaller values, as they pass with less scrutiny than labels of the higher values, and that the forgeries discovered were of so clumsy and inaccurate a nature that they should have been detected at once with ordinary care. The real difficulty and danger to the revenue, Messrs. De La Rue considered, arose out of the other kind of fraud, namely, the abstraction and re-use of the adhesive labels.

5. On the other hand, Mr. Cockerell was of opinion that the wisest course, under the present circumstances, would be a partial substitution of stamped papers for adhesive labels. If after a fair trial of such a measure it was found necessary to go further in the direction of the discontinuance of the use of adhesive labels, such progressive action would not have been rendered more difficult by the adoption of what he proposed, inasmuch as his proposals did not involve any considerable initial outlay, the value of which would be lost in the event of any [illegible] Mr. Cockerell also thought that, considering the great difficulty which forgers have in this country, owing to defective mechanical appliances, in manufacturing forged stamps rapidly, and the great expense incurred in paying persons to pass the counterfeit labels, it was unlikely that forgers would work upon the smaller values. With regard to the abstraction and re-use of adhesive labels, he thought that an inquiry into the cases in which such frauds have been committed showed that they might have been prevented by a due examination and cancellation of the labels affixed to documents when presented to the Court or office in which the fraud occurred. He therefore came to the conclusion that it would be premature to condemn a system the checks and precautions for the proper working of which had never been fairly and perseveringly enforced.

6. The great advantage which the substitution of stamped papers for adhesive labels in the collection of the Court-fees of the higher values instead of those of the lower values possesses is that the increase of expenditure entailed by the former change is very much less than that entailed by the latter. Mr. Cockerell calculates that the average consumption of stamps of the value of ten rupees and upwards is less than Rs. 3,00,000, out of a total consumption of more than 25½ millions. Then the cost of the lower values of adhesive labels is two shillings and sixpence per thousand, while the cost of the smallest size of stamped papers is 37 shillings per thousand. Besides this vast difference in the cost of production, the introduction of stamped papers involves a great increase in the cost of carriage.

7. For these reasons Mr. Cockerell recommended that stamped papers should be used for the collection of all Court-fees of ten rupees' value and upwards, and that the use of adhesive labels in respect of all denominations of fees below that amount should be continued. His reasons for thinking that the change should commence at the ten rupees' denomination are briefly as follows:—

(1) that this would include all values of substantial amount in regard to which the greatest risk to the revenue from forgeries is to be apprehended;

(2) that, to avoid expense in the introduction of stamped papers, it will be necessary to manufacture them on the same pattern, using the same plates, &c., as the stamped papers used under the Indian Stamp Act, 1879. The classification of stamped papers for Court-fees should, therefore, be the same as that for stamp-duties, and class III of the latter commences at ten rupees.

(3) that it is of great importance that the denominations below one rupee should be represented by adhesive labels, as these denominations are specially required for the purpose of making up the fractional parts of five rupees where the whole value of the stamp required exceeds ten rupees.

8. Mr. Cockerell proposed no change in the present scale of fees payable in suits the amount or value of the subject-matter of which does not exceed Rs. 5,000. With regard to the fees chargeable on suits of higher values, he proposed to re-adjust the scale of fees prescribed by Schedule I of the Court-fees' Act so as to reduce materially the number of denominations of stamps required for the collection of fees. The sliding scale fixed by the present law comprises no less than one hundred and thirty-five denominations of fees above Rs. 275, which is the fee chargeable on a suit for an amount or value of Rs. 5,000. To meet the requirements of this scale very many new denominations of stamped papers would have to be provided. Great additional expense would have to be incurred in making the proposed change, while the new stamp papers would, comparatively speaking, be seldom used, the number of suits for large amounts forming so small a portion of the entire litigation of the country.

9. The greatest enhancement in the fees which this change in the law will involve will be in suits for Rs. 7,000 and Rs. 10,000. In the former suits there will be an increase of twenty rupees and in the latter an increase of fifty. In the case of suits for sums exceeding Rs. 10,000 the increase will be less in proportion. Thus, the fee on a suit for Rs. 15,000 will be only twenty-five rupees above its amount under the existing scale, and the fee on a suit for Rs. 20,000 will be the same as that on a suit for Rs. 30,000 and only twenty-five rupees more than the present fee. The proposed increase, it is calculated, affects only about one per cent. of the entire litigation of the country.

10. Mr. Cockerell calculates that the annual cost of substituting stamped papers for all values of ten rupees and upwards, and continuing the use of adhesive labels, will be about £8,600, or an increase of rather more than £5,000 over the present cost. The total cost of substituting stamped papers in respect of all denominations of Court-fees and discontinuing the use of labels absolutely will be about £56,000, or an increase over the present expenditure for manufacture alone of about £53,000.

11. The Government of India has resolved to adopt Mr. Cockerell's recommendations, and it is therefore necessary to legislate and to amend the first article of Schedule I of the Court-fees' Act in accordance with his suggestions. The Act will also be amended so as to prevent the fraudulent removal and re-use of adhesive labels. The opportunity will be taken to make certain other amendments of the law which the reported decisions of the High Courts and the experience of the last eleven years have shewn to be desirable.

12. The following are the principal amendments which are made in the present law by the Bill.

13. In clause (a), section 36, of the Bill, corresponding to clause (a), section 27, of the present Act, power is given to the Local Government to make rules for regulating the supply and sale of Court-fee stamps, the persons by whom alone such sale is to be conducted, and the duties and remuneration of such persons. The Local Government has similar powers under the Indian Stamp Act, and such powers will be useful in preventing frauds against the revenue. It is easier to detect the fraudulent removal and re-use of labels when there are means of tracing the persons by whom and to whom the labels were sold. If the stamp-vendors are placed under the control of the Local Government and sales by non-authorized persons prohibited, means can be provided for tracing the vendors and purchasers of stamps with respect to which fraud is suspected.

14. This amendment has involved other changes in the law. In order to enforce the rules made under clause (a), section 36, a penalty is provided by section 41 for breach of the rules by authorized vendors and for the sale of stamps by a person not authorized. Then, as no one but a duly authorised person can sell stamps, section 48 provides for making an allowance for stamps which a person has purchased but afterwards finds that he has no use for.

15. In order to prevent the fraudulent removal and re-use of labels it is necessary to provide for the proper cancellation of stamps. The present law (section 30) directs that cancellation shall be effected by punching out the figure-head so as to leave the amount designated on the stamp untouched, and that the part removed by punching shall be burnt or otherwise destroyed. These provisions have not been found to work well in practice. The duty which they impose has not been fully performed, and experience has shown that there is more chance of getting the responsible officers concerned to observe regulations of this kind when they are prescribed by rules which can be adapted to the varying circumstances of the different provinces of the empire. Accordingly, section 39 of the Bill gives each Local Government power, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to make rules for regulating the mode of cancelling stamps and the persons by whom such cancellation is to be effected.

16. The other amendment involved by Mr. Cockerell's proposals is the alteration in the scale of ad valorem fees: the cause of this change in the law has been already explained. In suits when the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute exceeds Rs. 5,000, instead of charging a fee of ten rupees for every Rs. 250 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 10,000, the Bill provides a charge of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 500 or part thereof. When such amount or value exceeds Rs. 10,000, instead of a fee of fifteen rupees for every Rs. 500 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 10,000 up to Rs. 20,000, the Bill provides a fee of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof up to Rs. 25,000. So the next class of suits, instead of ranging from Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 30,000 with an additional fee of Rs. 20 for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 20,000, ranges from Rs. 25,000 to Rs. 50,000 with an additional fee of Rs. 100 for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 25,000. The next class of suits, instead of ranging from Rs. 30,000 to Rs. 50,000 is to range from Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 4,00,000 with an increased fee of Rs. 100 on every Rs. 25,000 or part thereof. Lastly, instead of a fee of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 50,000, the Bill prescribes a fee of Rs. 100 for every Rs. 50,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 4,00,000.

17. The Bill also provides in section 42 a penalty for the fraudulent possession of used and cancelled stamps which have been removed from the documents to which they have been affixed. The fact of a person having such stamps in his possession is a clear indication of an intent to use them fraudulently.

18. A penalty has also been provided (section 40) for failing to file the statement on oath of all property received or realized under a certificate granted under Act No. XL of 1858, Act No. XXVII of 1860, Act No. XX of 1864, or Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827. At present the law requiring such statements to be furnished may be evaded to the detriment of the revenue, for the only penalty is cancellation of the certificate, and default in filing the statement is probably in many cases never brought to the notice of the Court.

19. To prevent vexatious prosecutions the Bill (section 43), following the Indian Stamp Act, provides that no prosecution for any offence punishable thereunder shall be instituted without the sanction of the Collector or an officer duly authorized in that behalf.

20. The above are the principal amendments; but opportunity has been taken to make some other alterations in the law, which appear to be advisable.

21. In section 6 of the Bill the words "granted under his seal and signature" have been substituted for the word "furnished." The practice was for many years to grant copies unauthenticated by seal or signature without payment of Court-fee. It is held that this practice is under the present law illegal; but as copies are frequently required for private use and not for filing, exhibiting and recording in a Court of justice, it is thought advisable in the interests of the public to render the former practice legal.

22. In section 7, paragraph xi, the fee in suits to enhance the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy and for abatement of rent is directed to be calculated on five times the amount by which the rent is sought to be enhanced or abated, instead of, as at present, according to the amount of the rent of the land to which the suit refers payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint. The amendment gives a fairer method of calculating the fee chargeable in such suits.

23. In section 12, corresponding with section 12 of the present law, the words "and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" have been omitted. It has been held by the High Court at Calcutta, in the case of Ajoodhya Pershad v. Gunga Pershad (I. L. R., 6 Calc., p. 249), that an appeal lies against an order rejecting a plaint on the ground of its being insufficiently stamped, such an order being a decree within the meaning of the definition in the Code of Civil Procedure. An appeal should be allowed from an order so rejecting a plaint, and if the words "and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" are retained in the Bill, it will probably be held that the right of appeal is taken away.

24. In section 17, which relates to the fee payable in multifarious suits, the expression "causes of action" is substituted for the expression "subjects" in accordance with a recent decision of the High Court at Allahabad.

25. The list of exemptions in section 19 of the Act has been transferred to Schedule III. The words "whilst serving in such capacity" have been substituted for the words "not in civil employment" in the eleventh exemption, and petitions, applications and memoranda of appeal under the Oudh Taluqdárs Act, 1870, have been added to the exemptions; and section twenty-four of that Act, which exempted those documents from Court-fees, has been entered in the schedule of enactments repealed. Other exemptions which have been made by the Governor General in Council under section 35 of the present Act have also for convenience been included in the schedule of exemptions and the whole has been arranged in alphabetical order.

26. The provisions as to probates, letters of administration and certificates which were inserted in the Court-fees' Act by the Probates and Letters of Administration Act of 1875 are printed in their proper place in Chapter IV of the Bill. By section 27 the provisions of this chapter are made applicable to certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 and Bom. Reg. VIII of 1827, as well as to certificates granted under Acts XL of 1858 and XX of 1864, and the note to Article 12, Schedule I, which requires a statement on oath of all property recovered or realized under a certificate to be filed by the certificate-holder, is removed from the schedule and added to the chapter as section 28. A provision has also been added to section 28, in accordance with a decision of the High Court of Madras, that a certificate which has become liable to cancellation under the section shall remain in force until it is actually cancelled.

27. In section 38 words are added to make it clear that an amended document is not exempted from the payment of an additional fee, when the duty with which it is chargeable is increased by the amendment.

28. Some obsolete portions of the Court-fees' Act have been omitted, but the general arrangement of the Bill remains the same as that of the Act.

(k) the collection with or without the aid of the village-headmen, and by any process available for the realization of the land-revenue, of any tax imposed under clause (j) of this section, and the application of, and the mode of accounting for, the same; and generally for

"Provided—

2ndly,—that the rules to be made under clause (j) of this section with regard to village-watchmen shall include provisions for recording and securing due consideration of the views and opinions of the village-headmen of such beat on the matters therein referred to.

Obligation to assist watchmen and headmen.

"39B. Every person is bound to render to a village-watchman, or municipal-watchman, or village-headman discharging the duties of a police-officer under the rules made hereunder, all the assistance which he is bound to render to a police-officer.

Person obstructing watchman or headman may be arrested without warrant.

"Any person who obstructs such watchman or headman in the discharge of such duties may be arrested without warrant by a police-officer or by any watchman or village-headman empowered in this behalf by the Local Government."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER section 12 of the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, every Municipal Committee is bound to set apart, out of the Municipal Fund, a sum for the maintenance of a police establishment in the town for which the Committee is appointed. Within the last few years certain small Municipalities in the Panjáb have represented that their income was insufficient to maintain a regular police force, as constituted under the Police Act (V of 1861), and have requested the Local Government to permit the employment by them of a cheaper form of guard in the shape of chaukídárs or watchmen. As there appeared to be considerable weight in these representations, the Local Government has permitted the Municipalities in question to employ watchmen instead of regular police. It appears, however, to Government that there is no suitable provision in the law as it now stands under which such watchmen can be appointed.

Except Act V of 1861, which, as shewn above, is inapplicable to the Municipalities in question, the only Acts in force in the Panjáb under which police establishments can be constituted are Act XX of 1856 (known as the Chaukídárí Act) and Act IV of 1872 (the Panjáb Laws Act). The former of these Acts is unsuited to the case of these Municipalities, as it necessarily carries with it additional taxation, while sufficient special local taxation is already levied within them under the Municipal Act. The provisions of the latter of these Acts, which provide for the appointment of watchmen, are specially framed so as to exclude Municipalities from their operation.

Under these circumstances, it has been deemed advisable to have recourse to legislation, so that these watchmen may be appointed on a definite legal basis. It appears to the Government of India that the simplest plan is to modify the provisions of the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, and make them applicable to the case of Municipalities as well as to that of other places; and with this object the present Bill has been prepared.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has been drawn on the lines of a draft prepared by a Commission which recently met in Calcutta to consider and amend Bengal Act VII of 1873 (the Labour Districts Emigration Act). The attention of Government had previously been directed by certain persons interested in the large and important tea industry in Assam to several points in which the law relating to inland emigration appeared to require amendment. As the subject seemed to be one which affected not only the tea interest, but to a certain extent the interest of the whole country, the Government of India decided, in communication with His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to refer it to the consideration of a Commission. This Commission, which consisted of members of the mercantile community of Calcutta and the tea interest in Assam, as well as of official members under each of those administrations especially conversant with the details of inland emigration, reviewed the whole question in all its details, and submitted a report, to which was annexed the draft Bill above referred to, which embodied the amendments of the law considered desirable. The Government of India resolved on legislating in accordance generally with the provisions of this draft, and accordingly the present Bill has been prepared. It differs considerably in form, but does not, it is believed, in substance differ materially (save in certain points which will be mentioned below) from the draft prepared by the Commission.

2. It does not seem necessary to specify in this place the numerous amendments of the existing law which the Bill, in common with the draft of the Commission, proposes to make. Many of these deal with minor and unimportant points, and all will be found enumerated in detail in the Report of the Commission. It will be sufficient here to state the main points in which the Commission found the present law defective and the changes which the Bill proposes with the view of removing these defects.

3. These points are four in number,—

(a) that the existing law does not afford sufficient encouragement to free emigration;

(b) that it imposes unnecessary restrictions upon sardári recruiting;

(c) that it fails to provide for the enforcement of contracts made otherwise than under its provisions even in the case of imported labourers;

(d) that it is defective in respect of the remedies provided for employers in the event of the unlawful absence, idleness or desertion of their contract labourers.

4. With regard to the first of these points, no labour-contracts can be entered into under the existing law (Bengal Act VII of 1873) after the emigrant has arrived in a labour-district; and further, under section 7 of the same Act, no contract to labour in a labour-district for more than one year is binding upon an emigrant unless it is made and executed according to the provisions of the Act. To remove these restrictions the Bill permits emigrants to make labour-contracts under its provisions after their arrival in a labour-district, and, by omitting any provision of the nature of section 7 of Bengal Act VII of 1873, leaves employers free to make with any persons, whether within or without the labour-districts, any labour-contract which the ordinary law will recognize and enforce.

5. As to the second point, under the present law, a garden-sardár in order to get his certificate countersigned is compelled to present himself at the Court of the Magistrate of the District in which he proposes to engage labourers; his certificate is only allowed to run for six months; he is not allowed to travel with another garden-sardár if the total number of their united bands of emigrants exceeds twenty; whilst if he recruits more than twenty emigrants himself, he must take them to a contractor's depôt. Such restrictions, besides unnecessarily impeding the garden-sardár in his operations, bring him into dangerous connection with contractors and recruiters who not unfrequently tempt him to make over to them for a consideration labourers recruited at his employer's expense. The Bill severs all connection between garden-sardárs and contractor's depôts; and, though providing, in the employer's interest, for the effective control of garden-sardárs when on recruiting duty, removes the restrictions above mentioned, and gives the widest scope to the working of the sardári system.

6. With respect to the third point, labour-contracts cannot be made under Bengal Act VII of 1873 in a labour-district. Consequently labour-contracts entered into in such districts must be made under the ordinary law. Though Act XIII of 1859 (to provide for the punishment of breaches of contract by Artificers, workmen and labourers in certain cases) has in some districts been applied to these locally made labour-contracts, its provisions were obviously never intended to meet such cases. As employers may incur serious loss in the event of their labourers refusing to fulfil their agreements, it is clear that they are insufficiently protected under the present law in respect of locally made labour-contracts. Nothing short of a penal labour-law is sufficient for their protection. At the same time it appears only just that, if a labourer is to be subjected to a penal labour-law, he should obtain also the protection of law in respect of his general relations with his employer. Under these circumstances it seems preferable, instead of providing that locally made contracts may be enforced under the Act, to remove the restrictions which at present exist against labour-contracts under the Act being made in labour-districts, and this the Bill accordingly does.

7. As to the fourth point, under the existing law the penalty prescribed for the unlawful absence of the labourer from his work can only be enforced by complaint before a Magistrate. Such a provision is obviously very inconvenient to employers, who cannot spare time to make a journey to Court every time one of their labourers is unlawfully absent from his work. The Bill therefore provides for a system of monthly lists of defaulters to be submitted by the employer to the Inspector, who will, on his next visit to the garden, enquire into the case of each defaulter mentioned in such list; and if satisfied that the labourer is guilty of the offence charged, punish him by entering such days of absence on his contract and adding them to the term thereof, unless the labourer consents to forfeit to his employer the sum of four annas for each such day of absence. Prolonged and repeated absence may, however, be still punished by a Magistrate, if the employer chooses to complain.

The Government of India have resolved to make no change in the provisions of the existing law as to desertion, and the proposals of the Commission with regard to these provisions have not therefore been adopted in the Bill.

8. It may also be noticed that the Bill (section 9) extends the term for which a labourer may contract to labour. Under the present law the term is limited to three years from the date of the arrival of the labourer on his employer's estate. It is now proposed to extend it to five years from the date of the execution of the contract. This extension will enable the employer to recoup himself for his preliminary outlay incurred in importing the labourer and maintaining him while he learns his work and becomes acclimatized. At the same time provision has been made in the interest of the labourer that, for the last two years of the term, he shall receive an increase of one rupee per mensem to his wages. At the end of three years he is presumably better acquainted with his work, more valuable to his employer, and therefore entitled to a higher rate of wages.

9. Certain other points in which the Bill differs from the draft prepared by the Commission may now be noticed. Under that draft, sections 24 and 63, labourers engaged in districts not under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal need not, when recruited by garden-sardárs, and cannot when recruited by recruiters, be registered until they are brought within a district of the Lower Provinces. The Government of India is of opinion that it is necessary, for the purpose of protecting the labourer and preventing fraudulent practices on the part of the garden-sardár or recruiter, that all labourers, in whose case the registration of the engagement before proceeding to the labour-districts is imperative, should be registered in the districts in which they are engaged. The provisions of the draft have accordingly been modified so as to carry out these views.

10. Again, the draft of the Commission permitted the transport to the labour-districts of labourers, whether engaged by garden-sardárs or recruiters, by any route. As it is known that on certain routes great mortality has occurred, it seems advisable that power should be taken to enable the Local Government to prescribe the routes by which only labourers may travel to the labour-districts. A power of this nature has therefore been inserted in the Bill (section 142).

11. Lastly, under the draft of the Commission it is not necessary that contracts of locally engaged labourers should always be registered before a Magistrate or other officer. The Government of India is, however, of opinion that, unless such registration is made compulsory in all cases, there is not sufficient security that the nature of the engagement shall be fully understood by the labourer. The provisions of the draft have therefore been so altered in the Bill (section 111) that it will be necessary to have all contracts of locally engaged labourers executed before and registered by an Inspector of labourers or a Magistrate.

In the case of certain offences the Commission proposed that a penalty of rigorous imprisonment should be inflicted. It is considered that the Magistrates should be allowed a discretion as to the infliction of rigorous or simple imprisonment, and the Bill therefore substitutes the expression "imprisonment," which means imprisonment either simple or rigorous, in the places where in the draft prepared by the Commission the expression "rigorous imprisonment" is used.

Company to apply to the Court for an order confirming reduction.

40 & 41 Vic., c. 26, s. 4.

When the reduction does not involve either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up capital, it shall not be necessary, before the presentation of any petition under this section; and the Court may, if it thinks fit so to do, dispense with the addition of the words "and reduced," as mentioned in section fourteen.

In any case that the Court thinks fit so to do, it may require the Company to publish, in such manner as the Court thinks fit, the reasons for the reduction or such other information regarding the same as the Court may think expedient with a view to give proper information to the public in relation to such reduction, and if the Court think fit, the cause which led thereto.

16. Where a Company proposes to reduce its capital, every creditor of the Company who, at the date fixed by the Court, is entitled to any debt or claim which, if that date were the commencement of the winding-up of the Company, would be admissible in proof against the Company, shall be entitled to object to the proposed reduction, and to be entered in the list of creditors who are so entitled to object.

Creditors may object to reduction and list of objecting creditors to be settled by the Court.

The Court shall settle a list of such creditors, and for that purpose shall ascertain as far as possible, without requiring an application from any creditor, the names of such creditors and the nature and amount of their debts or claims, and may publish notices fixing a certain day or days within which creditors of the Company who are not entered on the list are to claim to be so entered, or to be excluded from the right of objecting to the proposed reduction:

40 & 41 Vic., c. 26, s. 4.

Provided that when the reduction does not involve either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up capital, the creditors of the Company shall not, unless the Court otherwise directs, be entitled to object, or required to consent, to the reduction.

30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, s. 14.

17. Where a creditor whose name is entered on the list of creditors, and whose debt or claim is not discharged or determined, does not consent to the proposed reduction, the Court may (if it think fit) dispense with such consent on the Company securing the payment of the debt or claim of such creditor by setting apart and appropriating in such manner as the Court may direct a sum of such amount as is hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say),

Court may dispense with consent of creditor on security being given for his debt.

(a) If the full amount of the debt or claim of the creditor is admitted by the Company, or, though not admitted, is such as the Company are willing to set apart and appropriate, then the full amount of the debt or claim shall be set apart and appropriated.

(b) If the full amount of the debt or claim of the creditor is not admitted by the Company, and is not such as the Company are willing to set apart and appropriate, or if the amount is contingent or not ascertained, then the Court may, if it think fit, inquire into and adjudicate upon the validity of such debt or claim, and the amount for which the Company may be liable in respect thereof, in the same manner as if the Company were being wound up by the Court, and the amount fixed by the Court on such inquiry and adjudication shall be set apart and appropriated.

Ibid., s. 15.

30 & 31 Vic., c. 131 s. 16.

19. The minute, when registered, shall be deemed to be substituted for the corresponding part of the memorandum of association of the Company, and shall be of the same validity, and subject to the same alterations, as if it had been originally contained in the memorandum of association; and, subject as in this Act mentioned, no member of the Company, whether past or present, shall be liable in respect of any share to any call or contribution exceeding in amount the difference (if any) between the amount which has been paid on such share and the amount of the share as fixed by the minute.

Ibid., s. 17.

20. Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of the contributories of the Company among themselves.

30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, s. 18.

21. (2) Every member shall, on payment of eight annas or such less sum as the Company in general meeting may prescribe, be entitled to a certificate under the common seal of the Company, specifying the share or shares held by him, and the amount paid up thereon.

(3) If such certificate is worn out or lost, it may be renewed, on payment of eight annas or such less sum as the Company in general meeting may prescribe.

Calls on Shares.

(4) The directors may from time to time make such calls upon the members in respect of all monies unpaid on their shares as they think fit, provided that twenty-one days' notice at least is given of each call; and each member shall be liable to pay the amount of calls so made to the persons and at the times and places appointed by the directors.

(5) A call shall be deemed to have been made at the time when the resolution of the directors authorizing such call was passed.

(6) If the call payable in respect of any share is not paid before or on the day appointed for payment thereof, the holder for the time being of such share shall be liable to pay interest for the same at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment.

(7) The directors may, if they think fit, receive from any member willing to advance the same all or any part of the monies due upon the shares held by him beyond the sums actually called for; and upon the monies so paid in advance, or so much thereof as from time to time exceeds the amount of the calls then made upon the shares in respect of which such advance has been made, the Company may pay interest at such rate as the member paying such sum in advance and the directors agree upon.

Transfers of Shares.

(8) The instrument of transfer of any share in the Company shall be executed both by the transferor and transferee, and the transferor shall be deemed to remain a holder of such share until the name of the transferee is entered in the register book in respect thereof.

(11) The transfer books shall be closed during the fourteen days immediately preceding the ordinary general meeting in each year.

Transmission of Shares.

(12) The executors or administrators of a deceased member shall be the only persons recognised by the Company as having any title to his share.

(13) Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death, bankruptcy or insolvency of any member, or in consequence of the marriage of any female member, may be registered as a member upon such evidence being produced as may from time to time be required by the Company.

(14) Any person who has become entitled to a share in consequence of the death, bankruptcy or insolvency of any member, or in consequence of the marriage of any female member, may, instead of being registered himself, elect to have some person to be named by him registered as a transferee of such share.

(15) The person so becoming entitled shall testify such election by executing to his nominee an instrument of transfer of such share.

(16) The instrument of transfer shall be presented to the Company, together with such evidence as the directors may require to prove the title of the transferee, and thereupon the Company shall regsiter the transferee as a member.

Forfeiture of Shares.

(17) If any member fails to pay any call on the day appointed for payment thereof, the directors may, at any time thereafter, during such time as the call remains unpaid, serve a notice on him requiring him to pay such call, together with interest and any expenses that may have accrued by reason of such non-payment.

(18) The notice shall name a further day on or before which such call and all interest and expenses that have accrued by reason of such non-payment are to be paid. It shall also name the place where payment is to be made, the place so named being either the registered office of the Company or some other place at which calls of the Company are usually made payable. The notice shall also state that in the event of non-payment at or before the time and at the place appointed, the shares in respect of which such call was made will be liable to be forfeited.

(19) If the requisitions of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which such notice has been given may at any time thereafter before payment of all calls, interest and expenses due in respect thereof has been made, be forfeited by a resolution of the directors to that effect.

(20) Any share so forfeited shall be deemed to be the property of the Company, and may be disposed of in such manner as the Company in general meeting thinks fit.

(21) Any member whose shares have been forfeited shall notwithstanding be liable to pay to the Company all calls owing upon such shares at the time of the forfeiture.

(22) A solemn declaration in writing, made before a magistrate, that the call in respect of a share was made and notice thereof given, and that default in payment of the call was made, and that the forfeiture of the share was made by a resolution of the directors to that effect, shall be sufficient evidence of the facts therein stated, as against all persons entitled to such share, and such declaration and the receipt of the Company for the price of such share shall constitute a good title to such share, and a certificate of proprietorship shall be delivered to a purchaser, and thereupon he shall be deemed the holder of such share discharged from all calls due prior to such purchase, and he shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money, nor shall his title to such share be affected by any irregularity in the proceedings in reference to such sale.

Conversion of Shares into Stock.

(23) The directors may, with the sanction of the Company previously given in general meeting convert any paid-up shares into stock.

(24) When any shares have been converted into stock, the several holders of such stock may thenceforth transfer their respective interests therein or any part of such interests, in the same manner and subject to the same regulations as and subject to which any shares in the capital of the Company may be transferred, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(25) The several holders of stock shall be entitled to participate in the dividends and profits of the Company according to the amount of their respective interests in such stock, and such interests shall, in proportion to the amount thereof, confer on the holders there of respectively, the same privileges and advantages for the purpose of voting at meetings of the Company and for other purposes, as would have been conferred by shares of equal amount in the capital of the Company; but so that none of such privileges or advantages, except the participation in the dividends and profits of the Company, shall be conferred by any such aliquot part of consolidated stock as would not, if existing in shares, have conferred such privileges or advantages.

Increase in Capital.

(26) The directors may, with the sanction of a special resolution of the Company previously given in the general meeting, increase its capital by the issue of new shares, such aggregate increase to be of such amount, and to be divided into shares of such respective amounts, as the Company in general meeting directs, or, if no direction is given, as the directors think expedient.

(27) Subject to any direction to the contrary that may be given by the meeting that sanctions the increase of capital, all new shares shall be offered to the members in proportion to the existing shares held by them, and such offer shall be made by notice specifying the number of shares to which the member is entitled and limiting a time within which the offer, if not accepted, will be deemed to be declined; and after the expiration of such time, or on the receipt of an intimation from the member to whom such notice is given that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of the same in such manner as they think most beneficial to the Company.

(28) Any capital raised by the creation of new shares shall be considered as part of the original capital, and shall be subject to the same provisions with reference to the payment of calls, and the forfeiture of shares on non-payment of calls, or otherwise, as if it had been part of the original capital.

General Meetings.

(29) The first general meeting shall be held at such time, not being more than six months after the registration of the Company, and at such place, as the directors may determine.

(30) Subsequent general meetings shall be held at such time and place as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; and if no other time or place is prescribed, a general meeting shall be held on the first Monday in February in every year, at such place as may be determined by the directors.

(31) The above-mentioned general meetings shall be called ordinary meetings; all other general meetings shall be called extraordinary.

(32) The directors may, whenever they think fit, and they shall upon a requisition made in writing by not less than one-fifth in number of the members of the Company, convene an extraordinary general meeting.

(33) Any requisition made by the members shall express the object of the meeting proposed to be called, and shall be left at the registered office of the Company.

(34) Upon the receipt of such requisition the directors shall forthwith proceed to convene an extraordinary general meeting. If they do not proceed to convene the same within twenty-one days from the date of the requisition, the requisitionists or any other members amounting to the required number, may themselves convene an extraordinary general meeting.

Proceedings at General Meeting.

(35) Seven days' notice at the least, specifying the place, the day and the hour of meeting, and in case of special business the general nature of such business, shall be given to the members in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; but the non-receipt of such notice by any member shall not invalidate the proceedings at any general meeting.

(36) All business shall be deemed special that it transacted at an extraordinary meeting, and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting, with the exception of sanctioning a dividend, and the consideration of the accounts, balance-sheets and the ordinary report of the directors.

(37) No business shall be transacted at any general meeting, except the declaration of a dividend, unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business. Such quorum shall be ascertained as follows, that is to say, if the persons who have taken shares in the Company at the time of the meeting do not exceed ten in number, the quorum shall be five; if they exceed ten, there shall be added to the above quorum one for every five additional members up to fifty, and one for every ten additional members after fifty, with this limitation, that no quorum shall in any case exceed twenty.

(38) If within one hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, the meeting, if convened upon the requisition of members, shall be dissolved. In any other case it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week, at the same time and place; and if at such adjourned meeting a quorum is not present, it shall be adjourned sine die.

(39) The chairman (if any) of the board of directors shall preside as chairman at every general meeting of the Company.

(40) If there is no such chairman, or if at any meeting he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting, the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman.

(41) The chairman may, with the consent of the meeting, adjourn any meeting from time to time and from place to place; but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left unfinished at the meeting from which the adjournment took place.

(42) At any general meeting, unless a poll is demanded by at least five members, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has been carried, and an entry to that effect in the book of proceedings of the Company, shall be sufficient evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of or against such resolution.

(43) If a poll is demanded by five or more members, it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of such poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the Company in general meeting. In the case of an equality of votes at any general meeting the Chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

Votes of Members.

(44) Every member shall have one vote for every share up to ten. He shall have an additional vote for every five shares beyond the first ten shares up to one hundred, and an additional vote for every ten shares beyond the first hundred shares.

(45) If any member is a lunatic or idiot, he may vote by his committee or other legal curator and if any member is a minor, he may vote by his guardian or any one of his guardians if more than one.

(46) If one or more persons are jointly entitled to a share or shares, the member whose name stands first in the register of members as one of the holders of such share or shares, and no other, shall be entitled to vote in respect of the same.

(47) No member shall be entitled to vote at any general meeting unless all calls due from him have been paid, and no member shall be entitled to vote in respect of any share that he has acquired by transfer, at any meeting held after the expiration of three months from the registration of the Company, unless he has been possessed of the share in respect of which he claims to vote for at least three months previously to the time of holding the meeting at which he proposes to vote.

(48) Votes may be given either personally or by proxy.

(49) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing, under the hand of the appointor, or if such appointor is a corporation, under their common seal, and shall be attested by one or more witness or witnesses. No person shall be appointed a proxy who is not a member of the Company.

(50) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be deposited at the registered office of the Company not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in such instrument proposes to vote; but no instrument appointing a proxy shall be valid after the expiration of twelve months from the date of its execution.

(51) Any instrument appointing a proxy shall be in the following form:—

Company Limited.

being a member of the Company Limited, and entitled to vote or votes, hereby appoint of as my proxy, to vote for me and on my behalf at the (ordinary or extraordinary, as the case may be) general meeting of the Company to be held on the day of and at any adjournment thereof (or, at any meeting of the Company that may be held in the year). As witness my hand, this day of

Signed by the said in the presence of Directors.

(52) The number of the directors, and the names of the first directors, shall be determined by the subscribers of the memorandum of association.

(53) Until directors are appointed, the subscribers of the memorandum of association shall be deemed to be directors.

(54) The future remuneration of the directors and their remuneration for services performed previously to the first general meeting, shall be determined by the Company in general meeting.

Powers of Directors.

(55) The business of the Company shall be managed by the directors, who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the Company, and may exercise all such powers of the Company as are not by the foregoing Act, or by these articles, required to be exercised by the Company in general meeting subject nevertheless to any regulations of these articles, to the provisions of the foregoing Act, and to such regulations, being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations, or provisions as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; but no regulation made by the Company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if such regulation had not been made.

(56) The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body.

Disqualification of Directors.

(57) The office of director shall be vacated—

If he holds any other office or place of profit under the Company;

If he becomes bankrupt or insolvent;

If he is concerned in or participates in the profits of any contract with the Company;

But the above rules shall be subject to the following exceptions: That no director shall vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any Company which has entered into contracts with or done any work for the Company of which he is director; nevertheless he shall not vote in respect of such contract or work; and if he does so vote his vote shall not be counted.

Rotation of Directors.

(58) At the first ordinary meeting after the registration of the Company, the whole of the directors shall retire from office; and at the first ordinary meeting in every subsequent year, one-third of the directors for the time being, or, if their number is not a multiple of three, then the number nearest to one-third, shall retire from office.

(59) The one-third or other nearest number to retire during the first and second years ensuing the first ordinary meeting of the Company shall, unless the directors agree among themselves, be determined by ballot. In every subsequent year, the one-third or other nearest number who have been longest in office shall retire.

(60) A retiring director shall be re-eligible.

(61) The Company at the general meeting at which any directors retire in manner aforesaid shall fill up the vacated offices by electing a like number of persons.

(62) If at any meeting at which an election of directors ought to take place the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the meeting shall stand adjourned till the same day in the next week, at same time and place; and if at such adjourned meeting the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the vacating directors or such of them as have not had their places filled up, shall continue in office until the ordinary meeting in the next year, and so on from time to time until their places are filled up.

(63) The Company may from time to time, in general meeting, increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation such increased or reduced number is to go out of office.

(64) Any casual vacancy occurring in the board of directors may be filled up by the directors, but any person so chosen shall retain his office so long only as the vacating director would have retained the same if no vacancy had occurred.

(65) The Company in general meeting may, by a special resolution, remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead. The person so appointed shall hold office during such time only as the director in whose place he is appointed would have held the same if he had not been removed.

Proceedings of Directors.

(66) The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn and otherwise regulate their meetings as they think fit, and determine the quorum necessary for the transaction of business. Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote. A director may at any time summon a meeting of the directors.

(67) The directors may elect a chariman of their meetings, and determine the period for which he is to hold office; but if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

(68) The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit. Any committee so formed shall, in the exercise of the powers so delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed on it by the directors.

(69) A committee may elect a chairman of its meetings. If no such chairman is elected, or if he is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the members present shall choose one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

(70) A committee may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present; and in case of an equality of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

(71) All acts done by any meeting of the directors, or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

Dividends.

(72) The directors may, with the sanction of the Company in general meeting, declare a dividend to be paid to the members in proportion to their shares.

(73) No dividend shall be payable except out of the profits arising from the business of the Company.

(74) The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the Company such sum as they think proper as a reserved fund to meet contingencies, or for equalizing dividends, or for repairing or maintaining the works connected with the business of the Company or any part thereof; and the directors may invest the sum so set part as a reserved fund upon such securities as they may select.

(75) The directors may deduct from the dividends payable to any member all such sums of money as may be due from him to the Company on account of calls or otherwise.

(76) Notice of any dividend that may have been declared shall be given to each member in manner hereinafter mentioned; and all dividends unclaimed for three years after having been declared may be forfeited by the directors for the benefit of the Company.

(77) No dividend shall bear interest as against the Company.

Accounts.

(78) The directors shall cause true accounts to be kept,

of the sums of money received and expended by the Company, and the matters in respect of which such receipt and expenditure take place; and of the credits and liabilities of the Company.

The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the Company, and subject to any reasonable restrictions as to the time and manner of inspecting the same that may be imposed by the Company in general meeting, shall be open to the inspection of the members during the hours of business.

(79) Once at the least in every year the directors shall lay before the Company in general meeting a statement of the income and expenditure for the past year, made up to a date not more than three months before such meeting.

(80) The statement so made shall show, arranged under the most convenient heads, the amount of gross income, distinguishing the several sources from which it has been derived, and the amount of gross expenditure, distinguishing the expense of the establishment, salaries and other like matters. Every item of expenditure fairly chargeable against the year's income shall be brought into account, so that a just balance of profit and loss may be laid before the meeting; and in cases where any item of expenditure which may in fairness be distributed over several years has been incurred in any one year, the whole amount of such item shall be stated, with the addition of the reasons why only a portion of such expenditure is charged against the income of the year.

(81) A balance-sheet shall be made out in every year and laid before the Company in general meeting, and such balance-sheet shall contain a summary of the property and liabilities of the Company arranged under the heads appearing in the form annexed to this table, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(82) A printed copy of such balance-sheet shall, seven days previously to such meeting, be served on every member in the manner in which notices are hereinafter directed to be served.

Audit.

(83) Once at the least in every year the accounts of the Company shall be examined, and the correctness of the balance-sheet ascertained by one or more auditor or auditors.

(84) The first auditors shall be appointed by the directors; subsequent auditors shall be appointed by the Company in general meeting.

(85) If one auditor only is appointed, all the provisions herein contained relating to auditors shall apply to him.

(86) The auditors may be members of the Company; but no person is eligible as an auditor who is interested otherwise than as a member in any transaction of the Company; and no director or other officer of the Company is eligible during his continuance in office.

(87) The election of auditors shall be made by the Company at their ordinary meeting in each year.

(88) The remuneration of the first auditors shall be fixed by the directors; that of subsequent auditors shall be fixed by the Company in general meeting.

(89) Any auditor shall be re-eligible on his quitting office.

(90) If any casual vacancy occurs in the office of any auditor appointed by the Company, the directors shall forthwith call an extraordinary general meeting for the purpose of supplying the same.

(91) If no election of auditors is made in manner aforesaid, the local Government may, on the application of not less than five members of the Company, appoint an auditor for the current year, and fix the remuneration to be paid to him by the Company for his services.

(92) Every auditor shall be supplied with a copy of the balance-sheet, and it shall be his duty the examine the same with the accounts and vouchers relating thereto.

(93) Every auditor shall have a list delivered to him of all books kept by the Company, and shall at all reasonable times have access to the books and accounts of the Company. He may, at the expense of the Company, employ accountants or other persons to assist him in investigating such accounts, and he may, in relation to such accounts, examine the directors or any other officer of the Company.

(94) The auditors shall make a report to the members upon the balance-sheet and accounts, and in every such report they shall state whether, in their opinion, the balance-sheet is a full and fair balance-sheet, containing the particulars required by these regulations, and properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Company's affairs; and in case they have called for explanations or information from the directors, whether such explanations or information have or has been given by the directors, and whether they or it have or has been satisfactory. Such report shall be read, together with the report of the directors, at the ordinary meeting.

Notices.

(95) A notice may be served by the Company upon any member either personally or by sending it through the post in a letter addressed to such member at his registered place of abode.

(96) All notices directed to be given to the members shall, with respect to any share to which persons are jointly entitled, be given to whichever of such persons is named first in the register of members; and notice so given shall be sufficient notice to all the holders of such share.

(97) Any notice, if served by post, shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of the post; and in proving such service it shall be sufficient to prove that the letter containing the notice was properly addressed and put into the post office.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill is occasioned by the discovery of a defect in section 49 of the Indian Companies Act (No. X of 1866), which does not provide clearly that the annual balance-sheet to be filed with the Registrar shall be the one which has been laid before, and finally adopted and passed by, a general meeting of the Company concerned, or that it shall be filed within a prescribed time as provided by Act No. XIX of 1857.

On consideration, it was determined by the Government of India that this defect should be removed, and that the opportunity should be taken to make certain other amendments in the Indian Companies Act.

These amendments fall under two heads, first, the substantial additions suggested by the English legislation regarding Companies since the year 1866, and, secondly, the verbal alterations suggested by the reported decisions of the English and Indian Courts.

Since 1866, the English Companies Act, from which our Act No. X of 1866 is for the most part copied, has been amended by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, 33 & 34 Vic., c. 104, and 40 & 41 Vic., c. 26.

These Statutes provide—

(i) that a limited Company may, if it declares its intention to do so, either by the memorandum of association or by special resolution, have directors with unlimited liability, such liability to be enforceable only when the Company is being wound up and the corporate assets (including the contributions of ordinary members) are insufficient to pay its debts or the costs of the winding-up;

(ii) that a Company may, by leave of the Court, reduce the aggregate amount of its nominal capital, or diminish the amount of the shares, but saving the rights of creditors who are ignorant of the proceedings;

(iii) that the capital of a Company limited by shares may be reduced by cancelling unissued shares;

(iv) that shares may be subdivided;

(v) that associations not engaged in mercantile pursuits may become incorporated under the Companies Act without annexing to their names the inappropriate term "limited";

(vi) that a Company may have some shares fully paid up and others not, and that dividends may be paid in proportion to the amount paid up on each share;

(vii) that a transfer of shares shall be registered at the request of the transferor, subject to the same conditions as if the request were made by the transferee;

(viii) that in the case of limited shares fully paid up share-warrants may be issued to bearer, and the shares will thereupon be transferred by delivery of the warrant, and that coupons may be annexed entitling the bearer to receive dividends;

(ix) that every prospectus of a Company and every notice inviting persons to subscribe for shares in a joint stock Company shall specify the dates of and parties to any contract which has been previously made by the Company or its promoters or directors, and may reasonably influence a person in determining him to take or not to take shares in the Company (Sullivan v. Mitcalfe, 49 L.J.Q.B. 815);

(x) that a general meeting must be held within four months after registration;

(xi) that a contributory shall not be qualified to present a winding-up petition unless the members are reduced to less than seven, or unless he has held his shares for at least six of the previous eighteen months, or unless the shares have devolved on him through the death of a former holder. This will prevent the practice of speculators buying shares in failing Companies with a view to wind them up and share in the plunder;

(xii) that when the High Court has made an order for winding-up a Company, it may refer all subsequent proceedings to a district Court (to use the Indian term corresponding to the English "County Court") and transfer a winding-up from one district Court to another;

(xiii) that when a compromise is proposed between a Company that is being wound up and its creditors, the Court may order a meeting of such creditors; and that if a majority representing three-fourths in value agree to the compromise, it shall, when sanctioned by the Court, be binding.

The amendment made by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, section 37 (as to the manner in which contracts might be made on behalf of Companies), was anticipated by the Indian legislature in section 42 of Act No. X of 1866, and will be found in section 67 of the present Bill.

It seems to the Government of India that the thirteen amendments above specified should be made for two reasons, first, because they are good in themselves, and, secondly, because it is desirable that the laws relating to such a subject as mercantile Companies should be as nearly as possible the same in India as in England. Any differences in such laws lead to mistakes in the Indian Courts, and must, to some extent, discourage English investors from putting their money into Indian Companies. The provisions as to the unlimited liability of directors (sections 7, 62) have been stigmatised in England as certain to drive from the direction men of wealth and position and to substitute in their places needy adventurers. But it need hardly be said that the experience of fourteen years has belied this prophecy. It may be added that, under the provisions in question, a director will not be liable as such for more than a year after he has ceased to hold office, and that he will not be liable as such in respect of any debt of the Company contracted after he has ceased to be a director. The other provisions suggested by recent English legislation do not seem to require further notice. They will be found in sections 15 to 35 (both inclusive), 47, 49, 75, 76, 88, 132, 150, 203, 218, 219, 253, 254.

The reported decisions of the Indian Courts regarding the law applicable to trading Companies appear to be only thirty-two in number, and of these but few turn upon the wording of Act No. X of 1866. But there is a large number of English decisions bearing on the wording of the corresponding sections of the English Statute of 1862, and the Bill embodies the result of an examination of these decisions. Most of the verbal amendments of the present law are indicated by italics, and the cases which suggested them are noted in the margins of the Bill.

9. If the Court sees reason to think that the annual net profits or the market-value of any such land, house or garden as is mentioned in section seven, paragraphs v and vi, have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court may, for the purpose of computing the fee payable in any suit therein mentioned, issue a commission to any proper person directing him to make such local or other investigation as may be necessary, and to report thereon to the Court.

Act VII of 1870, s. 10.

Procedure where net profits or market-value wrongly estimated.

10. If in the result of any such investigation the Court finds that the net profits or market-value have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court, if the estimation has been excessive, may in its discretion refund the excess paid as such fee; but if the estimation has been insufficient, the Court shall require the plaintiff to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the said market-value or net profits been rightly estimated:

In such case the suit shall be stayed until the additional fee is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed.

When any suit or appeal in which any such question arises comes before a Court of appeal, reference or revision, if such Court considers that the said question has been wrongly decided, to the detriment of the revenue, it shall require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the question been rightly decided, and the provisions of the second paragraph of section ten shall apply.

Act VII of 1870, s. 13.

Provided that, if, in the case of a remand in appeal, the order of remand does not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the suit, the certificate so granted shall not authorize the appellant to receive back more than so much fee as would have been originally payable on the part or parts of such subject-matter in respect whereof the suit has been remanded.

Act VII of 1870, s. 14.

Refund of fee on application for review of judgment.

14. Where an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the ninetieth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day.

Act VII of 1870, s. 15.

15. Where an application for a review of judgment is admitted, and on the rehearing the Court reverses or modifies its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact, the applicant shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the fee paid on the application.

18. When the first or only examination of a person who complains of the offence of wrongful confinement, or of wrongful restraint, or of any offence other than an offence for which police-officers may arrest without a warrant, and who has not already presented a petition on which a fee has been levied under this Act, is reduced to writing under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the complainant shall pay a fee of eight annas, unless the Court thinks fit to remit such payment.

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

Relief where too high a Court-fee has been paid on probate or letters of administration.

20. Where any person on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration has estimated the property of the deceased to be of greater value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has consequently paid too high a Court-fee thereon, if within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained, such person produces the probate or letters to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority of the province in which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to such Authority a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation, and if such Authority is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required,

the said Authority may—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled;

(b) substitute another stamp for denoting the Court-fee which should have been paid thereon; and

(c) make an allowance for the difference between them as in the case of spoiled stamps, or repay the same in money, at his discretion.

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

21. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of such Authority that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less Court-fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act, such Authority may return the difference, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters.

Relief where debts due from a deceased person have been paid out of his estate.

But whenever, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the said Authority may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

Ibid.

22. Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable hereunder when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate;

Relief in case of several grants.

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates.

Ibid.

23. The probate of the will, or the letters of administration of the effects, of any person deceased heretofore or hereafter granted shall be deemed valid and available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring or assigning any moveable or immoveable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a Court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration.

Probates declared valid as to trust-property though not covered by Court-fee.

Act XIII of 1875, s. 6.

24. Where any person on applying for probate or letters of administration has estimated the estate of the deceased to be of less value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has in consequence paid too low a Court-fee thereon, the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority of the province in which the probate or letters has or have been granted may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full Court-fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper Court-fee, without any deduction of the Court-fee originally paid on such probate or letters:

Provision for case where too low a Court-fee has been paid on probates, &c.

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a Court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the said Authority is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper Court-fee, the said Authority may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

Ibid.

25. In case of letters of administration on which too low a Court-fee has been paid at first, the said Authority shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in manner aforesaid until the Administrator has given such security to the Court by which the letters of administration have been granted as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had been then ascertained.

Administrator to give proper security before letters stamped under section 24.

Ibid.

26. Where too low a Court-fee has been paid on any probate or letters of administration in consequence of any mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said Authority and pay what is wanting to make up the Court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent. on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper Court-fee.

Executors, &c., not paying full Court-fee on probates, &c., within six months after discovery of underpayment.

Statement of property realized under certificate to be filed.

If the property so recovered or realized exceed the amount of debts or other property as sworn to by the person to whom the certificate is granted, the Court may cancel the same and order such person to take out a fresh certificate and pay the fee prescribed by this Act for such excess.

In default of filing such statement within the time allowed, the Court may cancel the certificate.

Stamp Bill of 1877, Sch. VI

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

IN the year 1879 Mr. F. R. Cockerell was instructed by the Government of India to place himself on his arrival in England in communication with Messrs. De La Rue & Co., the eminent stamp-manufacturers. He was to bring before them the whole question of the stamp forgeries recently discovered in Oudh and the North-Western Provinces and to submit, for their inspection and examination, some specimens of those forgeries, together with the apparatus employed, or supposed to have been employed, in the manufacture of the forged labels. He was then, in consultation with Messrs. De La Rue and with the aid of their practical experience, to devise some kind of stamping machinery which would protect the revenue against the fraudulent practices by which its security has been menaced from time to time, and to submit, as the result of this conference, his conclusions on the whole question, and any recommendations for the alteration of the existing system of collecting fees, stating at the same time how far these conclusions and recommendations had the concurrence of that firm.

2. Mr. Cockerell has now submitted his report. The principal question for consideration was whether adhesive labels were to be retained for the collection of Court-fees wholly or partly.

3. The frauds to which the use of adhesive stamps has given rise are of two kinds:—

1st—Abstraction of the labels from the papers to which they have been affixed and re-use of such labels.

2nd—The production as genuine of counterfeit labels and making them pass current.

4. Messrs. De La Rue were of opinion that from the stamp-manufacturers' point of view there is no way of preventing such attempts at counterfeiting adhesive labels as had been recently discovered, or rendering their accomplishment more difficult. The Government of India had therefore to choose between persevering with the adhesive stamps and a partial or complete recourse to the use of stamped papers in lieu of the labels. Messrs. De La Rue advocated a complete re-introduction of stamped papers for the collection of Court-fees generally. They were of opinion that it is more profitable for forgers to work upon labels of the smaller values, as they pass with less scrutiny than labels of the higher values, and that the forgeries discovered were of so clumsy and inaccurate a nature that they should have been detected at once with ordinary care. The real difficulty and danger to the revenue, Messrs. De La Rue considered, arose out of the other kind of fraud, namely, the abstraction and re-use of the adhesive labels.

5. On the other hand, Mr. Cockerell was of opinion that the wisest course, under the present circumstances, would be a partial substitution of stamped papers for adhesive labels. If after a fair trial of such a measure it was found necessary to go further in the direction of the discontinuance of the use of adhesive labels, such progressive action would not have been rendered more difficult by the adoption of what he proposed, inasmuch as his proposals did not involve any considerable initial outlay, the value of which would be lost in the event of any closely following change of system. Mr. Cockerell also thought that, considering the great difficulty which forgers have in this country, owing to deficient mechanical appliances, in manufacturing forged stamps rapidly, and the great expense incurred in paying persons to pass the counterfeit labels, it was unlikely that forgers would work upon the smaller values. With regard to the abstraction and re-use of adhesive labels, he thought that an inquiry into the cases in which such frauds have been committed showed that they might have been prevented by a due examination and cancellation of the labels affixed to documents when presented to the Court or office in which the fraud occurred. He therefore came to the conclusion that it would be premature to condemn a system the checks and precautions for the proper working of which had never been fairly and perseveringly enforced.

6. The great advantage which the substitution of stamped papers for adhesive labels in the collection of the Court-fees of the higher values instead of those of the lower values possesses is that the increase of expenditure entailed by the former change is very much less than that entailed by the latter. Mr. Cockerell calculates that the average consumption of stamps of the value of ten rupees and upwards is less than Rs. 3,00,000, out of a total consumption of more than 25½ millions. Then the cost of the lower values of adhesive labels is two shillings and sixpence per thousand, while the cost of the smallest size of stamped papers is 37 shillings per thousand. Besides this vast difference in the cost of production, the introduction of stamped papers involves a great increase in the cost of carriage.

7. For these reasons Mr. Cockerell recommended that stamped papers should be used for the collection of all Court-fees of ten rupees' value and upwards, and that the use of adhesive labels in respect of all denominations of fees below that amount should be continued. His reasons for thinking that the change should commence at the ten rupees' denomination are briefly as follows:—

(1) that this would include all values of substantial amount in regard to which the greatest risk to the revenue from forgeries is to be apprehended;

(2) that, to avoid expense in the introduction of stamped papers, it will be necessary to manufacture them on the same pattern, using the same plates, &c., as the stamped papers used under the Indian Stamp Act, 1879. The classification of stamped papers for Court-fees should, therefore, be the same as that for stamp-duties, and class III of the latter commences at ten rupees.

(3) that it is of great importance that the denominations below one rupee should be represented by adhesive labels, as these denominations are specially required for the purpose of making up the fractional parts of five rupees where the whole value of the stamp required exceeds ten rupees.

8. Mr. Cockerell proposed no change in the present scale of fees payable in suits the amount or value of the subject-matter of which does not exceed Rs. 5,000. With regard to the fees chargeable on suits of higher values, he proposed to re-adjust the scale of fees prescribed by Schedule I of the Court-fees' Act so as to reduce materially the number of denominations of stamps required for the collection of fees. The sliding scale fixed by the present law comprises no less than one hundred and thirty-five denominations of fees above Rs. 275, which is the fee chargeable on a suit for an amount or value of Rs. 5,000. To meet the requirements of this scale very many new denominations of stamped papers would have to be provided. Great additional expense would have to be incurred in making the proposed change, while the new stamp papers would, comparatively speaking, be seldom used, the number of suits for large amounts forming so small a portion of the entire litigation of the country.

9. The greatest enhancement in the fees which this change in the law will involve will be in suits for Rs. 7,000 and Rs. 10,000. In the former suits there will be an increase of twenty rupees and in the latter an increase of fifty. In the case of suits for sums exceeding Rs. 10,000 the increase will be less in proportion. Thus, the fee on a suit for Rs. 15,000 will be only twenty-five rupees above its amount under the existing scale, and the fee on a suit for Rs. 20,000 will be the same as that on a suit for Rs. 30,000 and only twenty-five rupees more than the present fee. The proposed increase, it is calculated, affects only about one per cent. of the entire litigation of the country.

10. Mr. Cockerell calculates that the annual cost of substituting stamped papers for all values of ten rupees and upwards, and continuing the use of adhesive labels, will be about £8,600, or an increase of rather more than £5,000 over the present cost. The total cost of substituting stamped papers in respect of all denominations of Court-fees and discontinuing the use of labels absolutely will be about £56,000, or an increase over the present expenditure for manufacture alone of about £53,000.

11. The Government of India has resolved to adopt Mr. Cockerell's recommendations, and it is therefore necessary to legislate and to amend the first article of Schedule I of the Court-fees' Act in accordance with his suggestions. The Act will also be amended so as to prevent the fraudulent removal and re-use of adhesive labels. The opportunity will be taken to make certain other amendments of the law which the reported decisions of the High Courts and the experience of the last eleven years have shewn to be desirable.

12. The following are the principal amendments which are made in the present law by the Bill.

13. In clause (a), section 36, of the Bill, corresponding to clause (a), section 27, of the present Act, power is given to the Local Government to make rules for regulating the supply and sale of Court-fee stamps, the persons by whom alone such sale is to be conducted, and the duties and remuneration of such persons. The Local Government has similar powers under the Indian Stamp Act, and such powers will be useful in preventing frauds against the revenue. It is easier to detect the fraudulent removal and re-use of labels when there are means of tracing the persons by whom and to whom the labels were sold. If the stamp-vendors are placed under the control of the Local Government and sales by non-authorized persons prohibited, means can be provided for tracing the vendors and purchasers of stamps with respect to which fraud is suspected.

14. This amendment has involved other changes in the law. In order to enforce the rules made under clause (a), section 36, a penalty is provided by section 41 for breach of the rules by authorized vendors and for the sale of stamps by a person not authorized. Then, as no one but a duly authorised person can sell stamps, section 48 provides for making an allowance for stamps which a person has purchased but afterwards finds that he has no use for.

15. In order to prevent the fraudulent removal and re-use of labels it is necessary to provide for the proper cancellation of stamps. The present law (section 30) directs that cancellation shall be effected by punching out the figure-head so as to leave the amount designated on the stamp untouched, and that the part removed by punching shall be burnt or otherwise destroyed. These provisions have not been found to work well in practice. The duty which they impose has not been fully performed, and experience has shown that there is more chance of getting the responsible officers concerned to observe regulations of this kind when they are prescribed by rules which can be adapted to the varying circumstances of the different provinces of the empire. Accordingly, section 39 of the Bill gives each Local Government power, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to make rules for regulating the mode of cancelling stamps and the persons by whom such cancellation is to be effected.

16. The other amendment involved by Mr. Cockerell's proposals is the alteration in the scale of ad valorem fees: the cause of this change in the law has been already explained. In suits when the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute exceeds Rs. 5,000, instead of charging a fee of ten rupees for every Rs. 250 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 10,000, the Bill provides a charge of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 500 or part thereof. When such amount or value exceeds Rs. 10,000, instead of a fee of fifteen rupees for every Rs. 500 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 10,000 up to Rs. 20,000, the Bill provides a fee of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof up to Rs. 25,000. So the next class of suits, instead of ranging from Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 30,000 with an additional fee of Rs. 20 for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 20,000, ranges from Rs. 25,000 to Rs. 50,000 with an additional fee of Rs. 100 for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 25,000. The next class of suits, instead of ranging from Rs. 30,000 to Rs. 50,000 is to range from Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 4,00,000 with an increased fee of Rs. 100 on every Rs. 25,000 or part thereof. Lastly, instead of a fee of Rs. 25 for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 50,000, the Bill prescribes a fee of Rs. 100 for every Rs. 50,000 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 4,00,000.

17. The Bill also provides in section 42 a penalty for the fraudulent possession of used and cancelled stamps which have been removed from the documents to which they have been affixed. The fact of a person having such stamps in his possession is a clear indication of an intent to use them fraudulently.

18. A penalty has also been provided (section 40) for failing to file the statement on oath of all property received or realized under a certificate granted under Act No. XL of 1858, Act No. XXVII of 1860, Act No. XX of 1864, or Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827. At present the law requiring such statements to be furnished may be evaded to the detriment of the revenue, for the only penalty is cancellation of the certificate, and default in filing the statement is probably in many cases never brought to the notice of the Court.

19. To prevent vexatious prosecutions the Bill (section 43), following the Indian Stamp Act, provides that no prosecution for any offence punishable thereunder shall be instituted without the sanction of the Collector or an officer duly authorized in that behalf.

20. The above are the principal amendments; but opportunity has been taken to make some other alterations in the law, which appear to be advisable.

21. In section 6 of the Bill the words "granted under his seal and signature" have been substituted for the word "furnished." The practice was for many years to grant copies unauthenticated by seal or signature without payment of Court-fee. It is held that this practice is under the present law illegal; but as copies are frequently required for private use and not for filing, exhibiting and recording in a Court of justice, it is thought advisable in the interests of the public to render the former practice legal.

22. In section 7, paragraph xi, the fee in suits to enhance the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy and for abatement of rent is directed to be calculated on five times the amount by which the rent is sought to be enhanced or abated, instead of, as at present, according to the amount of the rent of the land to which the suit refers payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint. The amendment gives a fairer method of calculating the fee chargeable in such suits.

23. In section 12, corresponding with section 12 of the present law, the words "and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" have been omitted. It has been held by the High Court at Calcutta, in the case of Ajoodhya Pershad v. Gunga Pershad (I. L. R., 6 Calc., p. 249), that an appeal lies against an order rejecting a plaint on the ground of its being insufficiently stamped, such an order being a decree within the meaning of the definition in the Code of Civil Procedure. An appeal should be allowed from an order so rejecting a plaint, and if the words "and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit" are retained in the Bill, it will probably be held that the right of appeal is taken away.

24. In section 17, which relates to the fee payable in multifarious suits, the expression "causes of action" is substituted for the expression "subjects" in accordance with a recent decision of the High Court at Allahabad.

25. The list of exemptions in section 19 of the Act has been transferred to Schedule III. The words "whilst serving in such capacity" have been substituted for the words "not in civil employment" in the eleventh exemption, and petitions, applications and memoranda of appeal under the Oudh Taluqdárs Act, 1870, have been added to the exemptions; and section twenty-four of that Act, which exempted those documents from Court-fees, has been entered in the schedule of enactments repealed. Other exemptions which have been made by the Governor General in Council under section 35 of the present Act have also for convenience been included in the schedule of exemptions and the whole has been arranged in alphabetical order.

26. The provisions as to probates, letters of administration and certificates which were inserted in the Court-fees' Act by the Probates and Letters of Administration Act of 1875 are printed in their proper place in Chapter IV of the Bill. By section 27 the provisions of this chapter are made applicable to certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 and Bom. Reg. VIII of 1827, as well as to certificates granted under Acts XL of 1858 and XX of 1864, and the note to Article 12, Schedule I, which requires a statement on oath of all property recovered or realized under a certificate to be filed by the certificate-holder, is removed from the schedule and added to the chapter as section 28. A provision has also been added to section 28, in accordance with a decision of the High Court of Madras, that a certificate which has become liable to cancellation under the section shall remain in force until it is actually cancelled.

27. In section 38 words are added to make it clear that an amended document is not exempted from the payment of an additional fee, when the duty with which it is chargeable is increased by the amendment.

28. Some obsolete portions of the Court-fees' Act have been omitted, but the general arrangement of the Bill remains the same as that of the Act.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st August, 1881, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

Person obstructing watchman or headman may be arrested without warrant.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER section 12 of the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, every Municipal Committee is bound to set apart, out of the Municipal Fund, a sum for the maintenance of a police establishment in the town for which the Committee is appointed. Within the last few years certain small Municipalities in the Panjáb have represented that their income was insufficient to maintain a regular police force, as constituted under the Police Act (V of 1861), and have requested the Local Government to permit the employment by them of a cheaper form of guard in the shape of chaukídárs or watchmen. As there appeared to be considerable weight in these representations, the Local Government has permitted the Municipalities in question to employ watchmen instead of regular police. It appears, however, to Government that there is no suitable provision in the law as it now stands under which such watchmen can be appointed.

Except Act V of 1861, which, as shewn above, is inapplicable to the Municipalities in question, the only Acts in force in the Panjáb under which police establishments can be constituted are Act XX of 1856 (known as the Chaukídárí Act) and Act IV of 1872 (the Panjáb Laws Act). The former of these Acts is unsuited to the case of these Municipalities, as it necessarily carries with it additional taxation, while sufficient special local taxation is already levied within them under the Municipal Act. The provisions of the latter of these Acts, which provide for the appointment of watchmen, are specially framed so as to exclude Municipalities from their operation.

Under these circumstances, it has been deemed advisable to have recourse to legislation, so that these watchmen may be appointed on a definite legal basis. It appears to the Government of India that the simplest plan is to modify the provisions of the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, and make them applicable to the case of Municipalities as well as to that of other places; and with this object the present Bill has been prepared.

Local Government how to proceed if mortality in past year exceeds 7 per cent., or if the average mortality for three years exceeds 7 per cent.

Matters to be enquired into.

(a) The cause or causes of such mortality;

(b) The want (if any) of due care or precaution, and of the adoption of proper and available sanitary measures, on the part of the owner of such estate or portion thereof, or the employer in charge of such estate or portion, causing or contributing to such mortality;

(c) The fitness or otherwise of such estate or portion for the residence of labourers.

Draft, s. 130.

130. Such medical officer shall, as soon as may be, inquire into such matters, and shall hear and record such information relating thereto as the owner of such estate or portion, or the employer in charge of the same, or the Inspector, may place before him, and shall visit and inspect such estate or portion, and shall make a report expressing the reasons for his opinion, and transmit the same to the local Government together with the information so recorded and the notes of his inspection of such estate or portion.

Draft, s. 129.

131. If the local Government, after perusal and consideration of the said report, information and notes, is of opinion that such mortality was caused by the want, on the part of the owner of such estate or portion, or the employer in charge of the same, of due care or precaution, or of the adoption of proper and available sanitary measures, and that such estate or portion is thereby rendered unfit for the residence of labourers, it may declare in writing that such estate or portion is unfit for the residence of labourers. Such declaration of the local Government shall have the same effect as the finding of a Committee under section one hundred and twenty-eight.

Local Government may declare estate unfit for residence.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has been drawn on the lines of a draft prepared by a Commission which recently met in Calcutta to consider and amend Bengal Act VII of 1873 (the Labour Districts Emigration Act). The attention of Government had previously been directed by certain persons interested in the large and important tea industry in Assam to several points in which the law relating to inland emigration appeared to require amendment. As the subject seemed to be one which affected not only the tea interest, but to a certain extent the interest of the whole country, the Government of India decided, in communication with His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to refer it to the consideration of a Commission. This Commission, which consisted of members of the mercantile community of Calcutta and the tea interest in Assam, as well as of official members under each of those administrations especially conversant with the details of inland emigration, reviewed the whole question in all its details, and submitted a report, to which was annexed the draft Bill above referred to, which embodied the amendments of the law considered desirable. The Government of India resolved on legislating in accordance generally with the provisions of this draft, and accordingly the present Bill has been prepared. It differs considerably in form, but does not, it is believed, in substance differ materially (save in certain points which will be mentioned below) from the draft prepared by the Commission.

2. It does not seem necessary to specify in this place the numerous amendments of the existing law which the Bill, in common with the draft of the Commission, proposes to make. Many of these deal with minor and unimportant points, and all will be found enumerated in detail in the Report of the Commission. It will be sufficient here to state the main points in which the Commission found the present law defective and the changes which the Bill proposes with the view of removing these defects.

3. These points are four in number,—

(a) that the existing law does not afford sufficient encouragement to free emigration;

(b) that it imposes unnecessary restrictions upon sardári recruiting;

(c) that it fails to provide for the enforcement of contracts made otherwise than under its provisions even in the case of imported labourers;

(d) that it is defective in respect of the remedies provided for employers in the event of the unlawful absence, idleness or desertion of their contract labourers.

4. With regard to the first of these points, no labour-contracts can be entered into under the existing law (Bengal Act VII of 1873) after the emigrant has arrived in a labour-district; and further, under section 7 of the same Act, no contract to labour in a labour-district for more than one year is binding upon an emigrant unless it is made and executed according to the provisions of the Act. To remove these restrictions the Bill permits emigrants to make labour-contracts under its provisions after their arrival in a labour-district, and, by omitting any provision of the nature of section 7 of Bengal Act VII of 1873, leaves employers free to make with any persons, whether within or without the labour-districts, any labour-contract which the ordinary law will recognize and enforce.

5. As to the second point, under the present law, a garden-sardár in order to get his certificate countersigned is compelled to present himself at the Court of the Magistrate of the District in which he proposes to engage labourers; his certificate is only allowed to run for six months; he is not allowed to travel with another garden-sardár if the total number of their united bands of emigrants exceeds twenty; whilst if he recruits more than twenty emigrants himself, he must take them to a contractor's depôt. Such restrictions, besides unnecessarily impeding the garden-sardár in his operations, bring him into dangerous connection with contractors and recruiters who not unfrequently tempt him to make over to them for a consideration labourers recruited at his employer's expense. The Bill severs all connection between garden-sardárs and contractor's depôts; and, though providing, in the employer's interest, for the effective control of garden-sardárs when on recruiting duty, removes the restrictions above mentioned, and gives the widest scope to the working of the sardári system.

6. With respect to the third point, labour-contracts cannot be made under Bengal Act VII of 1873 in a labour-district. Consequently labour-contracts entered into in such districts must be made under the ordinary law. Though Act XIII of 1859 (to provide for the punishment of breaches of contract by Artificers, workmen and labourers in certain cases) has in some districts been applied to these locally made labour-contracts, its provisions were obviously never intended to meet such cases. As employers may incur serious loss in the event of their labourers refusing to fulfil their agreements, it is clear that they are insufficiently protected under the present law in respect of locally made labour-contracts. Nothing short of a penal labour-law is sufficient for their protection. At the same time it appears only just that, if a labourer is to be subjected to a penal labour-law, he should obtain also the protection of law in respect of his general relations with his employer. Under these circumstances it seems preferable, instead of providing that locally made contracts may be enforced under the Act, to remove the restrictions which at present exist against labour-contracts under the Act being made in labour-districts, and this the Bill accordingly does.

7. As to the fourth point, under the existing law the penalty prescribed for the unlawful absence of the labourer from his work can only be enforced by complaint before a Magistrate. Such a provision is obviously very inconvenient to employers, who cannot spare time to make a journey to Court every time one of their labourers is unlawfully absent from his work. The Bill therefore provides for a system of monthly lists of defaulters to be submitted by the employer to the Inspector, who will, on his next visit to the garden, enquire into the case of each defaulter mentioned in such list; and if satisfied that the labourer is guilty of the offence charged, punish him by entering such days of absence on his contract and adding them to the term thereof, unless the labourer consents to forfeit to his employer the sum of four annas for each such day of absence. Prolonged and repeated absence may, however, be still punished by a Magistrate, if the employer chooses to complain.

The Government of India have resolved to make no change in the provisions of the existing law as to desertion, and the proposals of the Commission with regard to these provisions have not therefore been adopted in the Bill.

8. It may also be noticed that the Bill (section 9) extends the term for which a labourer may contract to labour. Under the present law the term is limited to three years from the date of the arrival of the labourer on his employer's estate. It is now proposed to extend it to five years from the date of the execution of the contract. This extension will enable the employer to recoup himself for his preliminary outlay incurred in importing the labourer and maintaining him while he learns his work and becomes acclimatized. At the same time provision has been made in the interest of the labourer that, for the last two years of the term, he shall receive an increase of one rupee per mensem to his wages. At the end of three years he is presumably better acquainted with his work, more valuable to his employer, and therefore entitled to a higher rate of wages.

9. Certain other points in which the Bill differs from the draft prepared by the Commission may now be noticed. Under that draft, sections 24 and 63, labourers engaged in districts not under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal need not, when recruited by garden-sardárs, and cannot when recruited by recruiters, be registered until they are brought within a district of the Lower Provinces. The Government of India is of opinion that it is necessary, for the purpose of protecting the labourer and preventing fraudulent practices on the part of the garden-sardár or recruiter, that all labourers, in whose case the registration of the engagement before proceeding to the labour-districts is imperative, should be registered in the districts in which they are engaged. The provisions of the draft have accordingly been modified so as to carry out these views.

10. Again, the draft of the Commission permitted the transport to the labour-districts of labourers, whether engaged by garden-sardárs or recruiters, by any route. As it is known that on certain routes great mortality has occurred, it seems advisable that power should be taken to enable the Local Government to prescribe the routes by which only labourers may travel to the labour-districts. A power of this nature has therefore been inserted in the Bill (section 142).

11. Lastly, under the draft of the Commission it is not necessary that contracts of locally engaged labourers should always be registered before a Magistrate or other officer. The Government of India is, however, of opinion that, unless such registration is made compulsory in all cases, there is not sufficient security that the nature of the engagement shall be fully understood by the labourer. The provisions of the draft have therefore been so altered in the Bill (section 111) that it will be necessary to have all contracts of locally engaged labourers executed before and registered by an Inspector of labourers or a Magistrate.

In the case of certain offences the Commission proposed that a penalty of rigorous imprisonment should be inflicted. It is considered that the Magistrates should be allowed a discretion as to the infliction of rigorous or simple imprisonment, and the Bill therefore substitutes the expression "imprisonment," which means imprisonment either simple or rigorous, in the places where in the draft prepared by the Commission the expression "rigorous imprisonment" is used.

Explanation II.—The power to reduce capital conferred by this section includes a power to cancel any lost capital, or any capital unrepresented by available assets, or to pay off any capital which may be in excess of the wants of the Company; and paid-up capital may be reduced either with or without extinguishing or reducing the liability (if any) remaining on the shares of the Company; and to the extent to which such liability is not extinguished or reduced, it shall be deemed to be preserved, notwithstanding anything hereinafter contained.

30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, s. 10.

14. The Company shall, after the date of the passing of any special resolution for reducing its capital, add to its name, until such date as the Court may fix, the words "and reduced," as the last words in its name, and those words shall, until such date, be deemed to be part of the name of the Company.

In any case that the Court thinks fit so to do, it may require the Company to publish, in such manner as the Court thinks fit, the reasons for the reduction or such other information regarding the same as the Court may think expedient with a view to give proper information to the public in relation to such reduction, and if the Court think fit, the cause which led thereto.

Creditors may object to reduction and list of objecting creditors to be settled by the Court.

The Court shall settle a list of such creditors, and for that purpose shall ascertain as far as possible, without requiring an application from any creditor, the names of such creditors and the nature and amount of their debts or claims, and may publish notices fixing a certain day or days within which creditors of the Company who are not entered on the list are to claim to be so entered, or to be excluded from the right of objecting to the proposed reduction :

30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, s. 14.

17. Where a creditor whose name is entered on the list of creditors, and whose debt or claim is not discharged or determined, does not consent to the proposed reduction, the Court may (if it think fit) dispense with such consent on the Company securing the payment of the debt or claim of such creditor by setting apart and appropriating in such manner as the Court may direct a sum of such amount as is hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say),

Court may dispense with consent of creditor on security being given for his debt.

(a) If the full amount of the debt or claim of the creditor is admitted by the Company, or, though not admitted, is such as the Company are willing to set apart and appropriate, then the full amount of the debt or claim shall be set apart and appropriated.

(b) If the full amount of the debt or claim of the creditor is not admitted by the Company, and is not such as the Company are willing to set apart and appropriate, or if the amount is contingent or not ascertained, then the Court may, if it think fit, inquire into and adjudicate upon the validity of such debt or claim, and the amount for which the Company may be liable in respect thereof, in the same manner as if the Company were being wound up by the Court, and the amount fixed by the Court on such inquiry and adjudication shall be set apart and appropriated.

(42) At any general meeting, unless a poll is demanded by at least five members, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has been carried, and an entry to that effect in the book of proceedings of the Company, shall be sufficient evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of or against such resolution.

(43) If a poll is demanded by five or more members, it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of such poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the Company in general meeting. In the case of an equality of votes at any general meeting the Chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

(49) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing, under the hand of the appointor, or if such appointor is a corporation, under their common seal, and shall be attested by one or more witness or witnesses. No person shall be appointed a proxy who is not a member of the Company.

(50) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be deposited at the registered office of the Company not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in such instrument proposes to vote; but no instrument appointing a proxy shall be valid after the expiration of twelve months from the date of its execution.

(65) The Company in general meeting may, by a special resolution, remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead. The person so appointed shall hold office during such time only as the director in whose place he is appointed would have held the same if he had not been removed.

Proceedings of Directors.

(66) The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn and otherwise regulate their meetings as they think fit, and determine the quorum necessary for the transaction of business. (70) A committee may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present; and in case of an equality of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

(71) All acts done by any meeting of the directors, or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

Dividends.

(72) The directors may, with the sanction of the Company in general meeting, declare a dividend to be paid to the members in proportion to their shares.

(73) No dividend shall be payable except out of the profits arising from the business of the Company.

(74) The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the Company such sum as they think proper as a reserved fund to meet contingencies, or for equalizing

(79) Once at the least in every year the directors shall lay before the Company in general meeting a statement of the income and expenditure for the past year, made up to a date not more than three months before such meeting.

(80) The statement so made shall show, arranged under the most convenient heads, the amount of gross income, distinguishing the several sources from which it has been derived, and the amount of gross expenditure, distinguishing the expense of the establishment, salaries and other like matters. Every item of expenditure fairly chargeable against the year's income shall be brought into account, so that a just balance of profit and loss may be laid before the meeting; and in cases where any item of expenditure which may in fairness be distributed over several years has been incurred in any one year, the whole amount of such item shall be stated, with the addition of the reasons why only a portion of such expenditure is charged against the income of the year.

(81) A balance-sheet shall be made out in every year and laid before the Company in general meeting, and such balance-sheet shall contain a summary of the property and liabilities of the Company arranged under the heads appearing in the form annexed to this table, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(90) If any casual vacancy occurs in the office of any auditor appointed by the Company, the directors shall forthwith call an extraordinary general meeting for the purpose of supplying the same.

(91) If no election of auditors is made in manner aforesaid, the local Government may, on the application of not less than five members of the Company, appoint an auditor for the current year, and fix the remuneration to be paid to him by the Company for his services.

(92) Every auditor shall be supplied with a copy of the balance-sheet, and it shall be his duty the examine the same with the accounts and vouchers relating thereto.

(93) Every auditor shall have a list delivered to him of all books kept by the Company, and shall at all reasonable times have access to the books and accounts of the Company. (97) Any notice, if served by post, shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of the post; and in proving such service it shall be sufficient to prove that the letter containing the notice was properly addressed and put into the post office.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill is occasioned by the discovery of a defect in section 40 of the Indian Companies Act (No. X of 1866), which does not provide clearly that the annual balance-sheet to be filed with the Registrar shall be the one which has been laid before, and finally adopted and passed by, a general meeting of the Company concerned, or that it shall be filed within a prescribed time as provided by Act No. XIX of 1857.

On consideration, it was determined by the Government of India that this defect should be removed, and that the opportunity should be taken to make certain other amendments in the Indian Companies Act.

These amendments fall under two heads, first, the substantial additions suggested by the English legislation regarding Companies since the year 1866, and, secondly, the verbal alterations suggested by the reported decisions of the English and Indian Courts.

Since 1866, the English Companies Act, from which our Act No. X of 1866 is for the most part copied, has been amended by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, 33 & 34 Vic., c. 104, and 40 & 41 Vic., c. 26.

These Statutes provide—

(i) that a limited Company may, if it declares its intention to do so, either by the memorandum of association or by special resolution, have directors with unlimited liability, such liability to be enforceable only when the Company is being wound up and the corporate assets (including the contributions of ordinary members) are insufficient to pay its debts or the costs of the winding-up;

(ii) that a Company may, by leave of the Court, reduce the aggregate amount of its nominal capital, or diminish the amount of the shares, but saving the rights of creditors who are ignorant of the proceedings;

(iii) that the capital of a Company limited by shares may be reduced by cancelling unissued shares;

(iv) that shares may be subdivided;

(v) that associations not engaged in mercantile pursuits may become incorporated under the Companies Act without annexing to their names the inappropriate term "limited";

(vi) that a Company may have some shares fully paid up and others not, and that dividends may be paid in proportion to the amount paid up on each share;

(vii) that a transfer of shares shall be registered at the request of the transferor, subject to the same conditions as if the request were made by the transferee;

(viii) that in the case of limited shares fully paid up share-warrants may be issued to bearer, and the shares will thereupon be transferred by delivery of the warrant, and that coupons may be annexed entitling the bearer to receive dividends;

(ix) that every prospectus of a Company and every notice inviting persons to subscribe for shares in a joint stock Company shall specify the dates of and parties to any contract which has been previously made by the Company or its promoters or directors, and may reasonably influence a person in determining him to take or not to take shares in the Company (Sullivan v. Mitcalfe, 49 L.J.Q.B. 815);

(x) that a general meeting must be held within four months after registration;

(xi) that a contributory shall not be qualified to present a winding-up petition unless the members are reduced to less than seven, or unless he has held his shares for at least six of the previous eighteen months, or unless the shares have devolved on him through the death of a former holder. This will prevent the practice of speculators buying shares in failing Companies with a view to wind them up and share in the plunder;

(xii) that when the High Court has made an order for winding-up a Company, it may refer all subsequent proceedings to a district Court (to use the Indian term corresponding to the English "County Court") and transfer a winding-up from one district Court to another;

(xiii) that when a compromise is proposed between a Company that is being wound up and its creditors, the Court may order a meeting of such creditors; and that if a majority representing three-fourths in value agree to the compromise, it shall, when sanctioned by the Court, be binding.

The amendment made by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, section 37 (as to the manner in which contracts might be made on behalf of Companies), was anticipated by the Indian legislature in section 42 of Act No. X of 1866, and will be found in section 67 of the present Bill.

It seems to the Government of India that the thirteen amendments above specified should be made for two reasons, first, because they are good in themselves, and, secondly, because it is desirable that the laws relating to such a subject as mercantile Companies should be as nearly as possible the same in India as in England. Any differences in such laws lead to mistakes in the Indian Courts, and must, to some extent, discourage English investors from putting their money into Indian Companies. The provisions as to the unlimited liability of directors (sections 7, 62) have been stigmatised in England as certain to drive from the direction men of wealth and position and to substitute in their places needy adventurers. But it need hardly be said that the experience of fourteen years has belied this prophecy. It may be added that, under the provisions in question, a director will not be liable as such for more than a year after he has ceased to hold office, and that he will not be liable as such in respect of any debt of the Company contracted after he has ceased to be a director. The other provisions suggested by recent English legislation do not seem to require further notice. They will be found in sections 13 to 35 (both inclusive), 47, 49, 75, 76, 88, 132, 150, 203, 218, 219, 253, 254.

The reported decisions of the Indian Courts regarding the law applicable to trading Companies appear to be only thirty-two in number, and of these but few turn upon the wording of Act No. X of 1866. But there is a large number of English decisions bearing on the wording of the corresponding sections of the English Statute of 1862, and the Bill embodies the result of an examination of these decisions. Most of the verbal amendments of the present law are indicated by italics, and the cases which suggested them are noted in the margins of the Bill.

The following Bill, and Statement of Objects and Reasons accompanying it, are published for general information, by order of His Excellency the Governor General, under the 22nd of the Rules for the Conduct of the Legislative Business of the Council of the Governor General:—

A Bill to declare the extent of the testamentary power of Hindús and Buddhists, and to regulate their Wills.

Preamble. WHEREAS it is expedient to declare the extent of the testamentary power of Hindús and Buddhists, and to provide rules for the execution, attestation, revocation, revival, interpretation and probate of their wills; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—PRELIMINARY.

Short title. Local extent. Commencement. 1. This Act may be called "The Hindú Wills Act, 1882": it applies to the whole of British India; and it shall come into force on the first day of March, 1882.

Repeal of enactments. 2. On and from that day the Hindú Wills Act, 1870, and the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, section 154, shall be repealed. But all references to the former Act shall be read as if made to this Act.

II.—EXTENT OF TESTAMENTARY POWER.

When and how far Hindús and Buddhists may bequeathe property. 3. Every Hindú and Buddhist may bequeathe property in the cases and to the extent in and to which he may transfer the same:

Provided that when the testator is a member of an undivided family and his right to bequeathe conflicts, at the time of his death, with any right of the surviving members of such family, the latter right shall prevail.

III.—RULES REGULATING WILLS.

Portions of Act X of 1865 extended to wills of Hindús and Buddhists. 4. The following portions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, namely,— sections 46, 48, 49, 50, 51, 55 and 57 to 77 (both inclusive),

sections 82, 83, 85 and 88 to 108 (both inclusive), sections 106 to 177 (both inclusive), and

shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 331 of the same Act, apply—

(a) to all wills and codicils made by any Hindú or Buddhist on or after the first day of March, 1882, within British India; and

(b) to all such wills and codicils made outside British India, so far as relates to immoveable property situate in British India.

Provisos. 5. Nothing contained in section four shall—

(a) render any will or codicil revocable by the testator's marriage;

(b) authorise any testator to bequeathe property which he could not have transferred;

(c) deprive any persons of any right of maintenance of which, but for section four of this Act, the testator could not deprive them by will;

(d) affect any law of adoption or intestate succession; or (e) authorise any Hindú or Buddhist to create in property any interest which he could not have created before the first day of March, 1882.

IV.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Power to exempt from operation of section 4. 6. With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, any local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the local Gazette, either retrospectively from the said first day of March, 1882, or prospectively, exempt from the operation of the whole or any part of section four of this Act the members of any race, sect or tribe, throughout the whole or any specified portion of the territories administered by such local Government; and may, from time to time, revoke any such exemption, but not so that the revocation shall have any retrospective effect.

Saving of rights of Administrator General. 7. Nothing herein contained shall affect the rights, duties and privileges of the Administrators General of Bengal, Madras and Bombay, respectively.

Interpretation-clause. 8. In this Act the term "Hindús" shall include also Jainas, Síkhs and all other persons (not being Muhammadans or Buddhists) to whom the Indian Succession Act, 1865, does not apply.

And in this Act and in the said sections of the said Succession Act all words defined in the same Act shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to have the same meaning as that Act has attached to such words respectively.

And in applying sections 62, 63, 92, 96, 98 to 103 (both inclusive) of the said Succession Act to wills and codicils made under this Act, the words "son," "sons," "child" and "children" shall be deemed to include an adopted child; and the word "grand-children" shall be deemed to include the children, whether adopted or natural born, of a child whether adopted or natural born; and the expression "daughter-in-law" shall be deemed to include the wife of an adopted son.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Hindú Wills Act, 1870, has now been in force for eleven years in the Lower Provinces of Bengal, the Chief Commissionership of Assam and the towns of Madras and Bombay. It has worked satisfactorily in preventing forgery, fraud and perjury. There is also reason to believe that it has enhanced the value of property by making the title thereto more readily ascertainable and by facilitating its transfer. The primary object of the present Bill is to extend to the rest of British India such of the provisions of the Act as have not been repealed by the Probate and Administration Act, 1881.

The opportunity has been taken to declare, in accordance with recent decisions, that a Hindú's right to bequeathe is co-extensive with his power to alienate, except where in an undivided family the right to bequeathe conflicts with the law of survivorship. See 8 Mad. H. C. 6, 13; 3 Bomb. A. C. 6, 66; Mayne's Hindú Law and Usage, § 349.

In British Burma the Recorder of Rangoon and the Judicial Commissioner, sitting as Judges of the Special Court, have decided that a Buddhist has no power to make a will. But both Judges are strongly in favour of conferring the power by legislative enactment. The local Government remarks that "the Burmese of the larger towns are in the habit of making wills. They are very ready to adopt the practices of advanced civilisation where they recognise their advantages, and they are quick to discover the merits of any particular custom. In the course of the rapid progress which their country is making, they have easily perceived the benefits of a power of regulating the devolution of property by will, and a genuine want for this power has in consequence grown up." The Bill accordingly expressly declares that every Buddhist may bequeathe property in the cases and to the extent to which he may transfer the same.

As there possibly are in some parts of the empire Hindús and Buddhists to whom it may be inexpedient to apply the rules for the execution, attestation, revocation, revival and interpretation of wills, power has been given to each local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt from all or any of those rules the members of any race, sect or tribe throughout the whole or any specified portion of the territories administered by such Government.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has been drawn on the lines of a draft prepared by a Commission which recently met in Calcutta to consider and amend Bengal Act VII of 1873 (the Labour Districts Emigration Act). The attention of Government had previously been directed by certain persons interested in the large and important tea industry in Assam to several points in which the law relating to inland emigration appeared to require amendment. As the subject seemed to be one which affected not only the tea interest, but to a certain extent the interest of the whole country, the Government of India decided, in communication with His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to refer it to the consideration of a Commission. This Commission, which consisted of members of the mercantile community of Calcutta and the tea interest in Assam, as well as of official members under each of those administrations especially conversant with the details of inland emigration, reviewed the whole question in all its details, and submitted a report, to which was annexed the draft Bill above referred to, which embodied the amendments of the law considered desirable. The Government of India resolved on legislating in accordance generally with the provisions of this draft, and accordingly the present Bill has been prepared. It differs considerably in form, but does not, it is believed, in substance differ materially (save in certain points which will be mentioned below) from the draft prepared by the Commission.

2. It does not seem necessary to specify in this place the numerous amendments of the existing law which the Bill, in common with the draft of the Commission, proposes to make. Many of these deal with minor and unimportant points, and all will be found enumerated in detail in the Report of the Commission. It will be sufficient here to state the main points in which the Commission found the present law defective and the changes which the Bill proposes with the view of removing these defects.

3. These points are four in number,—

(a) that the existing law does not afford sufficient encouragement to free emigration;

(b) that it imposes unnecessary restrictions upon sardári recruiting;

(c) that it fails to provide for the enforcement of contracts made otherwise than under its provisions even in the case of imported labourers;

(d) that it is defective in respect of the remedies provided for employers in the event of the unlawful absence, idleness or desertion of their contract labourers.

4. With regard to the first of these points, no labour-contracts can be entered into under the existing law (Bengal Act VII of 1873) after the emigrant has arrived in a labour-district; and further, under section 7 of the same Act, no contract to labour in a labour-district for more than one year is binding upon an emigrant unless it is made and executed according to the provisions of the Act. To remove these restrictions the Bill permits emigrants to make labour-contracts under its provisions after their arrival in a labour-district, and, by omitting any provision of the nature of section 7 of Bengal Act VII of 1873, leaves employers free to make with any persons, whether within or without the labour-districts, any labour-contract which the ordinary law will recognize and enforce.

5. As to the second point, under the present law, a garden-sardár in order to get his certificate countersigned is compelled to present himself at the Court of the Magistrate of the District in which he proposes to engage labourers; his certificate is only allowed to run for six months; he is not allowed to travel with another garden-sardár if the total number of their united bands of emigrants exceeds twenty; whilst if he recruits more than twenty emigrants himself, he must take them to a contractor's depôt. Such restrictions, besides unnecessarily impeding the garden-sardár in his operations, bring him into dangerous connection with contractors and recruiters who not unfrequently tempt him to make over to them for a consideration labourers recruited at his employer's expense. The Bill severs all connection between garden-sardárs and contractor's depôts; and, though providing, in the employer's interest, for the effective control of garden-sardárs when on recruiting duty, removes the restrictions above mentioned, and gives the widest scope to the working of the sardári system.

6. With respect to the third point, labour-contracts cannot be made under Bengal Act VII of 1873 in a labour-district. Consequently labour-contracts entered into in such districts must be made under the ordinary law. Though Act XIII of 1859 (to provide for the punishment of breaches of contract by Artificers, workmen and labourers in certain cases) has in some districts been applied to these locally made labour-contracts, its provisions were obviously never intended to meet such cases. As employers may incur serious loss in the event of their labourers refusing to fulfil their agreements, it is clear that they are insufficiently protected under the present law in respect of locally made labour-contracts. Nothing short of a penal labour-law is sufficient for their protection. At the same time it appears only just that, if a labourer is to be subjected to a penal labour-law, he should obtain also the protection of law in respect of his general relations with his employer. Under these circumstances it seems preferable, instead of providing that locally made contracts may be enforced under the Act, to remove the restrictions which at present exist against labour-contracts under the Act being made in labour-districts, and this the Bill accordingly does.

7. As to the fourth point, under the existing law the penalty prescribed for the unlawful absence of the labourer from his work can only be enforced by complaint before a Magistrate. Such a provision is obviously very inconvenient to employers, who cannot spare time to make a journey to Court every time one of their labourers is unlawfully absent from his work. The Bill therefore provides for a system of monthly lists of defaulters to be submitted by the employer to the Inspector, who will, on his next visit to the garden, enquire into the case of each defaulter mentioned in such list; and if satisfied that the labourer is guilty of the offence charged, punish him by entering such days of absence on his contract and adding them to the term thereof, unless the labourer consents to forfeit to his employer the sum of four annas for each such day of absence. Prolonged and repeated absence may, however, be still punished by a Magistrate, if the employer chooses to complain.

The Government of India have resolved to make no change in the provisions of the existing law as to desertion, and the proposals of the Commission with regard to these provisions have not therefore been adopted in the Bill.

8. It may also be noticed that the Bill (section 9) extends the term for which a labourer may contract to labour. Under the present law the term is limited to three years from the date of the arrival of the labourer on his employer's estate. It is now proposed to extend it to five years from the date of the execution of the contract. This extension will enable the employer to recoup himself for his preliminary outlay incurred in importing the labourer and maintaining him while he learns his work and becomes acclimatized. At the same time provision has been made in the interest of the labourer that, for the last two years of the term, he shall receive an increase of one rupee per mensem to his wages. At the end of three years he is presumably better acquainted with his work, more valuable to his employer, and therefore entitled to a higher rate of wages.

9. Certain other points in which the Bill differs from the draft prepared by the Commission may now be noticed. Under that draft, sections 24 and 63, labourers engaged in districts not under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal need not, when recruited by garden-sardárs, and cannot when recruited by recruiters, be registered until they are brought within a district of the Lower Provinces. The Government of India is of opinion that it is necessary, for the purpose of protecting the labourer and preventing fraudulent practices on the part of the garden-sardár or recruiter, that all labourers, in whose case the registration of the engagement before proceeding to the labour-districts is imperative, should be registered in the districts in which they are engaged. The provisions of the draft have accordingly been modified so as to carry out these views.

10. Again, the draft of the Commission permitted the transport to the labour-districts of labourers, whether engaged by garden-sardárs or recruiters, by any route. As it is known that on certain routes great mortality has occurred, it seems advisable that power should be taken to enable the Local Government to prescribe the routes by which only labourers may travel to the labour-districts. A power of this nature has therefore been inserted in the Bill (section 142).

11. Lastly, under the draft of the Commission it is not necessary that contracts of locally engaged labourers should always be registered before a Magistrate or other officer. The Government of India is, however, of opinion that, unless such registration is made compulsory in all cases, there is not sufficient security that the nature of the engagement shall be fully understood by the labourer. The provisions of the draft have therefore been so altered in the Bill (section 111) that it will be necessary to have all contracts of locally engaged labourers executed before and registered by an Inspector of labourers or a Magistrate.

In the case of certain offences the Commission proposed that a penalty of rigorous imprisonment should be inflicted. It is considered that the Magistrates should be allowed a discretion as to the infliction of rigorous or simple imprisonment, and the Bill therefore substitutes the expression "imprisonment," which means imprisonment either simple or rigorous, in the places where in the draft prepared by the Commission the expression "rigorous imprisonment" is used.

Definition of "the Court."

130. The expression "the Court" as used in this part of this Act shall mean the principal Court having original civil jurisdiction in the place in which the registered office of the Company is situate; unless in the regulations for the management of the Company it shall be stipulated that the Company, if wound up, shall be wound up by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, Madras or Bombay (as the case may be), or by the Chief Court of the Panjáb, in which case the word "Court" shall mean the said High Court or Chief Court (as the case may be) in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction.

Increase in Capital.

(26) The directors may, with the sanction of a special resolution of the Company previously given in the general meeting, increase its capital by the issue of new shares, such aggregate increase to be of such amount, and to be divided into shares of such respective amounts, as the Company in general meeting directs, or, if no direction is given, as the directors think expedient.

(27) Subject to any direction to the contrary that may be given by the meeting that sanctions the increase of capital, all new shares shall be offered to the members in proportion to the existing shares held by them, and such offer shall be made by notice specifying the number of shares to which the member is entitled and limiting a time within which the offer, if not accepted, will be deemed to be declined; and after the expiration of such time, or on the receipt of an intimation from the member to whom such notice is given that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of the same in such manner as they think most beneficial to the Company.

(28) Any capital raised by the creation of new shares shall be considered as part of the original capital, and shall be subject to the same provisions with reference to the payment of calls, and the forfeiture of shares on non-payment of calls, or otherwise, as if it had been part of the original capital.

General Meetings.

(29) The first general meeting shall be held at such time, not being more than six months after the registration of the Company, and at such place, as the directors may determine.

(30) Subsequent general meetings shall be held at such time and place as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; and if no other time or place is prescribed, a general meeting shall be held on the first Monday in February in every year, at such place as may be determined by the directors.

(31) The above-mentioned general meetings shall be called ordinary meetings; all other general meetings shall be called extraordinary.

(32) The directors may, whenever they think fit, and they shall upon a requisition made in writing by not less than one-fifth in number of the members of the Company, convene an extraordinary general meeting.

(33) Any requisition made by the members shall express the object of the meeting proposed to be called, and shall be left at the registered office of the Company.

(34) Upon the receipt of such requisition the directors shall forthwith proceed to convene an extraordinary general meeting. If they do not proceed to convene the same within twenty-one days from the date of the requisition, the requisitionists or any other members amounting to the required number, may themselves convene an extraordinary general meeting.

Proceedings at General Meeting.

(35) Seven days' notice at the least, specifying the place, the day and the hour of meeting, and in case of special business the general nature of such business, shall be given to the members in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; but the non-receipt of such notice by any member shall not invalidate the proceedings at any general meeting.

(36) All business shall be deemed special that it transacted at an extraordinary meeting, and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting, with the exception of sanctioning a dividend, and the consideration of the accounts, balance-sheets and the ordinary report of the directors.

(37) No business shall be transacted at any general meeting, except the declaration of a dividend, unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business. Such quorum shall be ascertained as follows, that is to say, if the persons who have taken shares in the Company at the time of the meeting do not exceed ten in number, the quorum shall be five; if they exceed ten, there shall be added to the above quorum one for every five additional members up to fifty, and one for every ten additional members after fifty, with this limitation, that no quorum shall in any case exceed twenty.

(38) If within one hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, the meeting, if convened upon the requisition of members, shall be dissolved. In any other case it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week, at the same time and place; and if at such adjourned meeting a quorum is not present, it shall be adjourned sine die.

(39) The chairman (if any) of the board of directors shall preside as chairman at every general meeting of the Company.

(40) If there is no such chairman, or if at any meeting he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting, the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman.

(41) The chairman may, with the consent of the meeting, adjourn any meeting from time to time and from place to place; but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left unfinished at the meeting from which the adjournment took place.

(42) At any general meeting, unless a poll is demanded by at least five members, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has been carried, and an entry to that effect in the book of proceedings of the Company, shall be sufficient evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of or against such resolution.

(43) If a poll is demanded by five or more members, it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of such poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the Company in general meeting. In the case of an equality of votes at any general meeting the Chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

Votes of Members.

(44) Every member shall have one vote for every share up to ten. He shall have an additional vote for every five shares beyond the first ten shares up to one hundred, and an additional vote for every ten shares beyond the first hundred shares.

(45) If any member is a lunatic or idiot, he may vote by his committee or other legal curator and if any member is a minor, he may vote by his guardian or any one of his guardians if more than one.

(46) If one or more persons are jointly entitled to a share or shares, the member whose name stands first in the register of members as one of the holders of such share or shares, and no other, shall be entitled to vote in respect of the same.

(47) No member shall be entitled to vote at any general meeting unless all calls due from him have been paid, and no member shall be entitled to vote in respect of any share that he has acquired by transfer, at any meeting held after the expiration of three months from the registration of the Company, unless he has been possessed of the share in respect of which he claims to vote for at least three months previously to the time of holding the meeting at which he proposes to vote.

(48) Votes may be given either personally or by proxy.

(49) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing, under the hand of the appointor, or if such appointor is a corporation, under their common seal, and shall be attested by one or more witness or witnesses. No person shall be appointed a proxy who is not a member of the Company.

(50) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be deposited at the registered office of the Company not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in such instrument proposes to vote; but no instrument appointing a proxy shall be valid after the expiration of twelve months from the date of its execution.

(51) Any instrument appointing a proxy shall be in the following form:—

Company Limited.

I of

As witness my hand, this day of

Signed by the said in the presence of Directors.

(52) The number of the directors, and the names of the first directors, shall be determined by the subscribers of the memorandum of association.

(53) Until directors are appointed, the subscribers of the memorandum of association shall be deemed to be directors.

(54) The future remuneration of the directors and their remuneration for services performed previously to the first general meeting, shall be determined by the Company in general meeting.

Powers of Directors.

(55) The business of the Company shall be managed by the directors, who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the Company, and may exercise all such powers of the Company as are not by the foregoing Act, or by these articles, required to be exercised by the Company in general meeting subject nevertheless to any regulations of these articles, to the provisions of the foregoing Act, and to such regulations, being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations, or provisions as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; but no regulation made by the Company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if such regulation had not been made.

(56) The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body.

Disqualification of Directors.

(57) The office of director shall be vacated—

If he holds any other office or place of profit under the Company;

If he becomes bankrupt or insolvent;

If he is concerned in or participates in the profits of any contract with the Company;

But the above rules shall be subject to the following exceptions: That no director shall vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any Company which has entered into contracts with or done any work for the Company of which he is director; nevertheless he shall not vote in respect of such contract or work; and if he does so vote his vote shall not be counted.

Rotation of Directors.

(58) At the first ordinary meeting after the registration of the Company, the whole of the directors shall retire from office; and at the first ordinary meeting in every subsequent year, one-third of the directors for the time being, or, if their number is not a multiple of three, then the number nearest to one-third, shall retire from office.

(59) The one-third or other nearest number to retire during the first and second years ensuing the first ordinary meeting of the Company shall, unless the directors agree among themselves, be determined by ballot. In every subsequent year, the one-third or other nearest number who have been longest in office shall retire.

(60) A retiring director shall be re-eligible.

(61) The Company at the general meeting at which any directors retire in manner aforesaid shall fill up the vacated offices by electing a like number of persons.

(62) If at any meeting at which an election of directors ought to take place the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the meeting shall stand adjourned till the same day in the next week, at same time and place; and if at such adjourned meeting the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the vacating directors or such of them as have not had their places filled up, shall continue in office until the ordinary meeting in the next year, and so on from time to time until their places are filled up.

(63) The Company may from time to time, in general meeting, increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation such increased or reduced number is to go out of office.

(64) Any casual vacancy occurring in the board of directors may be filled up by the directors, but any person so chosen shall retain his office so long only as the vacating director would have retained the same if no vacancy had occurred.

(65) The Company in general meeting may, by a special resolution, remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead. The person so appointed shall hold office during such time only as the director in whose place he is appointed would have held the same if he had not been removed.

Proceedings of Directors.

(66) The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn and otherwise regulate their meetings as they think fit, and determine the quorum necessary for the transaction of business. Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote. A director may at any time summon a meeting of the directors.

(67) The directors may elect a chariman of their meetings, and determine the period for which he is to hold office; but if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

(68) The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit. Any committee so formed shall, in the exercise of the powers so delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed on it by the directors.

(69) A committee may elect a chairman of its meetings. If no such chairman is elected, or if he is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the members present shall choose one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

(70) A committee may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present; and in case of an equality of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

(71) All acts done by any meeting of the directors, or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

Dividends.

(72) The directors may, with the sanction of the Company in general meeting, declare a dividend to be paid to the members in proportion to their shares.

(73) No dividend shall be payable except out of the profits arising from the business of the Company.

(74) The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the Company such sum as they think proper as a reserved fund to meet contingencies, or for equalizing dividends, or for repairing or maintaining the works connected with the business of the Company or any part thereof; and the directors may invest the sum so set part as a reserved fund upon such securities as they may select.

(75) The directors may deduct from the dividends payable to any member all such sums of money as may be due from him to the Company on account of calls or otherwise.

(76) Notice of any dividend that may have been declared shall be given to each member in manner hereinafter mentioned; and all dividends unclaimed for three years after having been declared may be forfeited by the directors for the benefit of the Company.

(77) No dividend shall bear interest as against the Company.

Accounts.

(78) The directors shall cause true accounts to be kept,

of the stock in trade of the Company;

of the sums of money received and expended by the Company, and the matters in respect of which such receipt and expenditure take place; and of the credits and liabilities of the Company.

The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the Company, and subject to any reasonable restrictions as to the time and manner of inspecting the same that may be imposed by the Company in general meeting, shall be open to the inspection of the members during the hours of business.

(79) Once at the least in every year the directors shall lay before the Company in general meeting a statement of the income and expenditure for the past year, made up to a date not more than three months before such meeting.

(80) The statement so made shall show, arranged under the most convenient heads, the amount of gross income, distinguishing the several sources from which it has been derived, and the amount of gross expenditure, distinguishing the expense of the establishment, salaries and other like matters. Every item of expenditure fairly chargeable against the year's income shall be brought into account, so that a just balance of profit and loss may be laid before the meeting; and in cases where any item of expenditure which may in fairness be distributed over several years has been incurred in any one year, the whole amount of such item shall be stated, with the addition of the reasons why only a portion of such expenditure is charged against the income of the year.

(81) A balance-sheet shall be made out in every year and laid before the Company in general meeting, and such balance-sheet shall contain a summary of the property and liabilities of the Company arranged under the heads appearing in the form annexed to this table, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(82) A printed copy of such balance-sheet shall, seven days previously to such meeting, be served on every member in the manner in which notices are hereinafter directed to be served.

Audit.

(83) Once at the least in every year the accounts of the Company shall be examined, and the correctness of the balance-sheet ascertained by one or more auditor or auditors.

(84) The first auditors shall be appointed by the directors; subsequent auditors shall be appointed by the Company in general meeting.

(85) If one auditor only is appointed, all the provisions herein contained relating to auditors shall apply to him.

(86) The auditors may be members of the Company; but no person is eligible as an auditor who is interested otherwise than as a member in any transaction of the Company; and no director or other officer of the Company is eligible during his continuance in office.

(87) The election of auditors shall be made by the Company at their ordinary meeting in each year.

(88) The remuneration of the first auditors shall be fixed by the directors; that of subsequent auditors shall be fixed by the Company in general meeting.

(89) Any auditor shall be re-eligible on his quitting office.

(90) If any casual vacancy occurs in the office of any auditor appointed by the Company, the directors shall forthwith call an extraordinary general meeting for the purpose of supplying the same.

(91) If no election of auditors is made in manner aforesaid, the local Government may, on the application of not less than five members of the Company, appoint an auditor for the current year, and fix the remuneration to be paid to him by the Company for his services.

(92) Every auditor shall be supplied with a copy of the balance-sheet, and it shall be his duty the examine the same with the accounts and vouchers relating thereto.

(93) Every auditor shall have a list delivered to him of all books kept by the Company, and shall at all reasonable times have access to the books and accounts of the Company. He may, at the expense of the Company, employ accountants or other persons to assist him in investigating such accounts, and he may, in relation to such accounts, examine the directors of any other officer of the Company.

(94) The auditors shall make a report to the members upon the balance-sheet and accounts, and in every such report they shall state whether, in their opinion, the balance-sheet is a full and fair balance-sheet, containing the particulars required by these regulations, and properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Company's affairs; and in case they have called for explanations or information from the directors, whether such explanations or information have or has been given by the directors, and whether they or it have or has been satisfactory. Such report shall be read, together with the report of the directors, at the ordinary meeting.

Notices.

(95) A notice may be served by the Company upon any member either personally or by sending it through the post in a letter addressed to such member at his registered place of abode.

(96) All notices directed to be given to the members shall, with respect to any share to which persons are jointly entitled, be given to whichever of such persons is named first in the register of members; and notice so given shall be sufficient notice to all the holders of such share.

(97) Any notice, if served by post, shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of the post; and in proving such service it shall be sufficient to prove that the letter containing the notice was properly addressed and put into the post office.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill is occasioned by the discovery of a defect in section 49 of the Indian Companies Act (No. X of 1866), which does not provide clearly that the annual balance-sheet to be filed with the Registrar shall be the one which has been laid before, and finally adopted and passed by, a general meeting of the Company concerned, or that it shall be filed within a prescribed time as provided by Act No. XIX of 1857.

On consideration, it was determined by the Government of India that this defect should be removed, and that the opportunity should be taken to make certain other amendments in the Indian Companies Act.

These amendments fall under two heads, first, the substantial additions suggested by the English legislation regarding Companies since the year 1866, and, secondly, the verbal alterations suggested by the reported decisions of the English and Indian Courts.

Since 1866, the English Companies Act, from which our Act No. X of 1866 is for the most part copied, has been amended by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, 33 & 34 Vic., c. 104, and 40 & 41 Vic., c. 26.

These Statutes provide—

(i) that a limited Company may, if it declares its intention to do so, either by the memorandum of association or by special resolution, have directors with unlimited liability, such liability to be enforceable only when the Company is being wound up and the corporate assets (including the contributions of ordinary members) are insufficient to pay its debts or the costs of the winding-up;

(ii) that a Company may, by leave of the Court, reduce the aggregate amount of its nominal capital, or diminish the amount of the shares, but saving the rights of creditors who are ignorant of the proceedings;

(iii) that the capital of a Company limited by shares may be reduced by cancelling unissued shares;

(iv) that shares may be subdivided;

(v) that associations not engaged in mercantile pursuits may become incorporated under the Companies Act without annexing to their names the inappropriate term "limited";

(vi) that a Company may have some shares fully paid up and others not, and that dividends may be paid in proportion to the amount paid up on each share;

(vii) that a transfer of shares shall be registered at the request of the transferor, subject to the same conditions as if the request were made by the transferee;

(viii) that in the case of limited shares fully paid up share-warrants may be issued to bearer, and the shares will thereupon be transferred by delivery of the warrant, and that coupons may be annexed entitling the bearer to receive dividends;

(ix) that every prospectus of a Company and every notice inviting persons to subscribe for shares in a joint stock Company shall specify the dates of and parties to any contract which has been previously made by the Company or its promoters or directors, and may reasonably influence a person in determining him to take or not to take shares in the Company (Sullivan v. Mitcalfe, 49 L.J.Q.B. 815);

(x) that a general meeting must be held within four months after registration;

(xi) that a contributory shall not be qualified to present a winding-up petition unless the members are reduced to less than seven, or unless he has held his shares for at least six of the previous eighteen months, or unless the shares have devolved on him through the death of a former holder. This will prevent the practice of speculators buying shares in failing Companies with a view to wind them up and share in the plunder;

(xii) that when the High Court has made an order for winding-up a Company, it may refer all subsequent proceedings to a district Court (to use the Indian term corresponding to the English "County Court") and transfer a winding-up from one district Court to another;

(xiii) that when a compromise is proposed between a Company that is being wound up and its creditors, the Court may order a meeting of such creditors; and that if a majority representing three-fourths in value agree to the compromise, it shall, when sanctioned by the Court, be binding.

The amendment made by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 131, section 37 (as to the manner in which contracts might be made on behalf of Companies), was anticipated by the Indian legislature in section 42 of Act No. X of 1866, and will be found in section 67 of the present Bill.

It seems to the Government of India that the thirteen amendments above specified should be made for two reasons, first, because they are good in themselves, and, secondly, because it is desirable that the laws relating to such a subject as mercantile Companies should be as nearly as possible the same in India as in England. Any differences in such laws lead to mistakes in the Indian Courts, and must, to some extent, discourage English investors from putting their money into Indian Companies. The provisions as to the unlimited liability of directors (sections 7, 62) have been stigmatised in England as certain to drive from the direction men of wealth and position and to substitute in their places needy adventurers. But it need hardly be said that the experience of fourteen years has belied this prophecy. It may be added that, under the provisions in question, a director will not be liable as such for more than a year after he has ceased to hold office, and that he will not be liable as such in respect of any debt of the Company contracted after he has ceased to be a director. The other provisions suggested by recent English legislation do not seem to require further notice. They will be found in sections 15 to 35 (both inclusive), 47, 49, 75, 76, 88, 132, 150, 203, 218, 219, 253, 254.

The reported decisions of the Indian Courts regarding the law applicable to trading Companies appear to be only thirty-two in number, and of these but few turn upon the wording of Act No. X of 1866. But there is a large number of English decisions bearing on the wording of the corresponding sections of the English Statute of 1862, and the Bill embodies the result of an examination of these decisions. Most of the verbal amendments of the present law are indicated by italics, and the cases which suggested them are noted in the margins of the Bill.

Power to exempt from operation of section 4.

8. In this Act the term "Hindús" shall include also Jainas, Síkhs and all other persons (not being Muhammadans or Buddhists) to whom the Indian Succession Act, 1865, does not apply. Interpretation-clause.

And in this Act and in the said sections of the said Succession Act all words defined in the same Act shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to have the same meaning as that Act has attached to such words respectively.

And in applying sections 62, 63, 92, 96, 98 to 103 (both inclusive) of the said Succession Act to wills and codicils made under this Act, the words "son," "sons," "child" and "children" shall be deemed to include an adopted child; and the word "grand-children" shall be deemed to include the children, whether adopted or natural born, of a child whether adopted or natural born; and the expression "daughter-in-law" shall be deemed to include the wife of an adopted son.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Hindú Wills Act, 1870, has now been in force for eleven years in the Lower Provinces of Bengal, the Chief Commissionership of Assam and the towns of Madras and Bombay. It has worked satisfactorily in preventing forgery, fraud and perjury. There is also reason to believe that it has enhanced the value of property by making the title thereto more readily ascertainable and by facilitating its transfer. The primary object of the present Bill is to extend to the rest of British India such of the provisions of the Act as have not been repealed by the Probate and Administration Act, 1881.

The opportunity has been taken to declare, in accordance with recent decisions, that a Hindú's right to bequeathe is co-extensive with his power to alienate, except where in an undivided family the right to bequeathe conflicts with the law of survivorship. See 8 Mad. H. C. 6, 13; 3 Bomb. A. C. 6, 66; Mayne's Hindú Law and Usage, § 319.

In British Burma the Recorder of Rangoon and the Judicial Commissioner, sitting as Judges of the Special Court, have decided that a Buddhist has no power to make a will. But both Judges are strongly in favour of conferring the power by legislative enactment. The local Government remarks that "the Burmese of the larger towns are in the habit of making wills. They are very ready to adopt the practices of advanced civilisation where they recognise their advantages, and they are quick to discover the merits of any particular custom. In the course of the rapid progress which their country is making, they have easily perceived the benefits of a power of regulating the devolution of property by will, and a genuine want for this power has in consequence grown up." The Bill therefore expressly declares that every Buddhist may bequeathe property in the cases and to the extent in and to which he may transfer the same.

As there possibly are in some parts of the empire Hindús and Buddhists to whom it may be inexpedient to apply the rules for the execution, attestation, revocation, revival and interpretation of wills, power has been given to each local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt from all or any of those rules the members of any race, sect or tribe throughout the whole or any specified portion of the territories administered by such Government.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 5th October, 1881, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 20 OF 1881.

A Bill to prohibit the landing of certain Stowaways, and to provide for the recovery of expenses incurred by Government in respect of such persons.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to prohibit the landing in British India of stowaways of European extraction, and to provide for the recovery of expenses incurred by Government in respect of such persons who become vagrants within one year after so landing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called "The Stowaways Act, 1881"; and it shall come into force at once.

Interpretation-clause.

2. In this Act—

"Stowaway:"

"Stowaway" means any person of European extraction as defined in the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, who secretes himself and goes to sea in any ship without the consent of the owner, the consignee or the master of such ship, or of any other person entitled to give such consent, and who arrives on board such ship in a British Indian port;

"Master:"

"Master" includes any person in charge of a decked vessel; and

"Shipping master."

"Shipping master" includes any other officer whom the local Government may from time to time appoint to exercise the powers of a shipping master under this Act.

Prohibition against causing or permitting stowaway to land without sanction.

3. No master shall cause or permit any stowaway finally to land from his ship in a British Indian port without the previous sanction in writing of the shipping master. Cf. s. 4 of Act XIII of 1876.

Sanction not to be given unless owner or agent of ship enter into a bond.

4. Such sanction shall not be given unless and until the owner or agent of such ship has given to the shipping master a bond in such form, and with such number of sureties, as the local Government may from time to time prescribe, binding himself, in such sum as the shipping master thinks sufficient, to pay to the Secretary of State for India in Council, in the event of such stowaway becoming within one year after he so lands from such ship chargeable to the State as a vagrant under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, the cost of his removal under the said Act and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

Penalty for causing or permitting stowaway to land in contravention of section 3.

5. Any master who, in wilful disobedience of the prohibition contained in section three, causes or permits any stowaway finally to land from his ship, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both. Cf. para. 2 of sec. 4 of Act XIII of 1876.

Liability of owner or agent when stowaway lands without sanction.

6. Whenever any stowaway finally lands from a ship without the sanction required by section three and becomes chargeable to the State as a vagrant under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, within one year after so landing, the person who is at the Cf. Act IX of 1874, s. 31, third para.

date of such landing the owner or agent of the ship from which such stowaway has so landed shall be liable to pay to the Government the cost of his removal under the said Act and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

7. All costs and charges which any owner or agent is liable to pay under this Act shall be recoverable by suit as if he had entered into an express agreement with the said Secretary of State in Council to repay them. Cf. last para. s. 31, Act IX of 1874.

Recovery of costs and charges.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Stowaways of European extraction are found, on a rough average, on board twenty per cent. of the vessels arriving at the port of Calcutta. They are also, though less frequently, landed at Bombay, Aden and Rangoon. As the law stands, masters of ships in British Indian ports may land stowaways, and are in no way responsible for them after they have landed. If stowaways so landed are Europeans and become vagrants (as they occasionally do), they have to be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, and provided with subsistence-allowance while in charge of the police, with food while in a workhouse, and (where no suitable employment is obtained for them) with a passage to England, Australia or wherever their homes may be. As the necessity for relieving such persons really originates in the carelessness of masters of ships, who fail to detect their presence on board before leaving port, it seems unfair that the expenses so incurred should be borne by the Indian tax-payer.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared. It prohibits the landing of stowaways of European extraction, unless with the previous sanction of the Shipping Master or other officer appointed by the local Government, and unless the owner or agent of the ship on board of which the stowaway is found gives a bond to the effect that all expenses incurred in the event of the stowaway becoming a vagrant within one year shall be borne by the obligor. It also imposes a penalty on any master causing or permitting a stowaway to land, and provides that where any stowaway lands without such sanction and becomes a vagrant within one year of so landing, the owner or agent of the ship from which he has landed shall pay all the expenses incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Section 4 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, 1871, declares that the number of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs to be appointed in each district shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the local Government. And section 6 of the same Act declares that, when the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an increase in the number of Munsifs, the High Court shall nominate such person as it thinks fit to be a Munsif, and the local Government shall appoint him accordingly. The number of Munsifs was accordingly fixed under section 4 in the Lower Provinces and Assam. Subsequently, in exercise of the power vested in local Governments by the terms of the provincial service arrangements in regard to the creation of additional appointments on salaries not exceeding Rs. 250 a month, the Government of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of Assam, without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, appointed Munsifs in excess of the number so fixed. Doubts have been raised as to the validity of such appointments. It appears to the Government of India that the law does not authorize the local Government to appoint Munsifs, whether temporarily or permanently, in excess of the fixed number, unless an increase to that number has previously been sanctioned by the Governor General in Council. It is, however, in the opinion of the Government of India desirable to empower the local Government, without the sanction, but subject to the control, of the Governor General in Council, to increase the number of Munsifs, provided that the power is confined to those grades of Munsifs the pay of which does not exceed Rs. 250 a month.

2. The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It enables the local Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council to increase the number of Munsifs of a grade the salary of which does not exceed Rs. 250 per month. The opportunity has been taken to validate the appointments already made by the Bengal Government and the Chief Commissioner of Assam: to make it clear that the local Government cannot increase the number of District Judges or Subordinate Judges without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council: to extend the District Judge's power of transferring appeals and proceedings to appeals from all orders made by Munsifs and to proceedings under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881: and to make such amendments in the wording of the law as the experience of the last ten years shows to be necessary or desirable.

Recovery of costs and charges.

7. All costs and charges which any owner or agent is liable to pay under this Act shall be recoverable by suit as if he had entered into an express agreement with the said Secretary of State in Council to repay them.

Cf. last para. s. 31, Act XIX of 1874.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Stowaways of European extraction are found, on a rough average, on board twenty per cent. of the vessels arriving at the port of Calcutta. They are also, though less frequently, landed at Bombay, Aden and Rangoon. As the law stands, masters of ships in British Indian ports may land stowaways, and are in no way responsible for them after they have landed. If stowaways so landed are Europeans and become vagrants (as they occasionally do), they have to be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, and provided with subsistence-allowance while in charge of the police, with food while in a workhouse, and (where no suitable employment is obtained for them) with a passage to England, Australia or wherever their homes may be. As the necessity for relieving such persons really originates in the carelessness of masters of ships, who fail to detect their presence on board before leaving port, it seems unfair that the expenses so incurred should be borne by the Indian tax-payer.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared. It prohibits the landing of stowaways of European extraction, unless with the previous sanction of the Shipping Master or other officer appointed by the local Government, and unless the owner or agent of the ship on board of which the stowaway is found gives a bond to the effect that all expenses incurred in the event of the stowaway becoming a vagrant within one year shall be borne by the obligor. It also imposes a penalty on any master causing or permitting a stowaway to land, and provides that where any stowaway lands without such sanction and becomes a vagrant within one year of so landing, the owner or agent of the ship from which he has landed shall pay all the expenses incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Section 4 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, 1871, declares that the number of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs to be appointed in each district shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the local Government. And section 6 of the same Act declares that, when the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an increase in the number of Munsifs, the High Court shall nominate such person as it thinks fit to be a Munsif, and the local Government shall appoint him accordingly. The number of Munsifs was accordingly fixed under section 4 in the Lower Provinces and Assam. Subsequently, in exercise of the power vested in local Governments by the terms of the provincial service arrangements in regard to the creation of additional appointments on salaries not exceeding Rs. 250 a month, the Government of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of Assam, without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, appointed Munsifs in excess of the number so fixed. Doubts have been raised as to the validity of such appointments. It appears to the Government of India that the law does not authorize the local Government to appoint Munsifs, whether temporarily or permanently, in excess of the fixed number, unless an increase to that number has previously been sanctioned by the Governor General in Council. It is, however, in the opinion of the Government of India desirable to empower the local Government, without the sanction, but subject to the control, of the Governor General in Council, to increase the number of Munsifs, provided that the power is confined to those grades of Munsifs the pay of which does not exceed Rs. 250 a month.

2. The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It enables the local Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council to increase the number of Munsifs of a grade the salary of which does not exceed Rs. 250 per month. The opportunity has been taken to validate the appointments already made by the Bengal Government and the Chief Commissioner of Assam: to make it clear that the local Government cannot increase the number of District Judges or Subordinate Judges without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council: to extend the District Judge's power of transferring appeals and proceedings to appeals from all orders made by Munsifs and to proceedings under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881: and to make such amendments in the wording of the law as the experience of the last ten years shows to be necessary or desirable.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 5th October, 1881, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 20 OF 1881.

A Bill to prohibit the landing of certain Stowaways, and to provide for the recovery of expenses incurred by Government in respect of such persons.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to prohibit the landing in British India of stowaways of European extraction, and to provide for the recovery of expenses incurred by Government in respect of such persons who become vagrants within one year after so landing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called "The Stowaways Act, 1881"; and it shall come into force at once.

Interpretation-clause.

Cf. Act I of 1859, s. 98.

2. In this Act—

"Stowaway:"

"Stowaway" means any person of European extraction as defined in the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, who secretes himself and goes to sea in any ship without the consent of the owner, the consignee or the master of such ship, or of any other person entitled to give such consent, and who arrives on board such ship in a British Indian port;

"Master:"

"Master" includes any person in charge of a decked vessel; and

"Shipping master."

"Shipping master" includes any other officer whom the local Government may from time to time appoint to exercise the powers of a shipping master under this Act.

Prohibition against causing or permitting stowaway to land without sanction.

Cf. s. 4 of Act XIII of 1876.

3. No master shall cause or permit any stowaway finally to land from his ship in a British Indian port without the previous sanction in writing of the shipping master.

Sanction not to be given unless owner or agent of ship enter into a bond.

4. Such sanction shall not be given unless and until the owner or agent of such ship has given to the shipping master a bond in such form, and with such number of sureties, as the local Government may from time to time prescribe, binding himself, in such sum as the shipping master thinks sufficient, to pay to the Secretary of State for India in Council, in the event of such stowaway becoming within one year after he so lands from such ship chargeable to the State as a vagrant under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, the cost of his removal under the said Act and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

Penalty for causing or permitting stowaway to land in contravention of section 3.

Cf. para. 2 of sec. 4 of Act XIII of 1876.

5. Any master who, in wilful disobedience of the prohibition contained in section three, causes or permits any stowaway finally to land from his ship, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Liability of owner or agent when stowaway lands without sanction.

Cf. Act IX of 1874, s. 31, third para.

6. Whenever any stowaway finally lands from a ship without the sanction required by section three and becomes chargeable to the State as a vagrant under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, within one year after so landing, the person who is at the date of such landing the owner or agent of the ship from which such stowaway has so landed shall be liable to pay to the Government the cost of his removal under the said Act and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

7. All costs and charges which any owner or agent is liable to pay under this Act shall be recoverable by suit as if he had entered into an express agreement with the said Secretary of State in Council to repay them.

Recovery of costs and charges.

Cf. last para. s. 31, Act IX of 1874.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Stowaways of European extraction are found, on a rough average, on board twenty per cent. of the vessels arriving at the port of Calcutta. They are also, though less frequently, landed at Bombay, Aden and Rangoon. As the law stands, masters of ships in British Indian ports may land stowaways, and are in no way responsible for them after they have landed. If stowaways so landed are Europeans and become vagrants (as they occasionally do), they have to be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874, and provided with subsistence-allowance while in charge of the police, with food while in a workhouse, and (where no suitable employment is obtained for them) with a passage to England, Australia or wherever their homes may be. As the necessity for relieving such persons really originates in the carelessness of masters of ships, who fail to detect their presence on board before leaving port, it seems unfair that the expenses so incurred should be borne by the Indian tax-payer.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared. It prohibits the landing of stowaways of European extraction, unless with the previous sanction of the Shipping Master or other officer appointed by the local Government, and unless the owner or agent of the ship on board of which the stowaway is found gives a bond to the effect that all expenses incurred in the event of the stowaway becoming a vagrant within one year shall be borne by the obligor. It also imposes a penalty on any master causing or permitting a stowaway to land, and provides that where any stowaway lands without such sanction and becomes a vagrant within one year of so landing, the owner or agent of the ship from which he has landed shall pay all the expenses incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Section 4 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, 1871, declares that the number of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs to be appointed in each district shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the local Government. And section 6 of the same Act declares that, when the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an increase in the number of Munsifs, the High Court shall nominate such person as it thinks fit to be a Munsif, and the local Government shall appoint him accordingly. The number of Munsifs was accordingly fixed under section 4 in the Lower Provinces and Assam. Subsequently, in exercise of the power vested in local Governments by the terms of the provincial service arrangements in regard to the creation of additional appointments on salaries not exceeding Rs. 250 a month, the Government of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of Assam, without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, appointed Munsifs in excess of the number so fixed. Doubts have been raised as to the validity of such appointments. It appears to the Government of India that the law does not authorize the local Government to appoint Munsifs, whether temporarily or permanently, in excess of the fixed number, unless an increase to that number has previously been sanctioned by the Governor General in Council. It is, however, in the opinion of the Government of India desirable to empower the local Government, without the sanction, but subject to the control, of the Governor General in Council, to increase the number of Munsifs, provided that the power is confined to those grades of Munsifs the pay of which does not exceed Rs. 250 a month.

2. The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It enables the local Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council to increase the number of Munsifs of a grade the salary of which does not exceed Rs. 250 per month. The opportunity has been taken to validate the appointments already made by the Bengal Government and the Chief Commissioner of Assam: to make it clear that the local Government cannot increase the number of District Judges or Subordinate Judges without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council: to extend the District Judge's power of transferring appeals and proceedings to appeals from all orders made by Munsifs and to proceedings under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881: and to make such amendments in the wording of the law as the experience of the last ten years shows to be necessary or desirable.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons accompanying it are published for general information, by order of His Excellency the Governor General, under the 22nd of the Rules for the conduct of the Legislative Business of the Council of the Governor General:—

A Bill to amend the law relating to Powers-of-Attorney.

FOR the purpose of amending the law relating to Powers-of-Attorney; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. Local extent. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called "The Powers-of-Attorney Act, 1881": it applies to the whole of British India; and it shall come into force on the first day of January, 1882.

44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, s. 46.

Execution under power-of-attorney.

2. The donee of a power-of-attorney may, if he thinks fit, execute or do any assurance, instrument or thing in and with his own name and signature and his own seal, where sealing is required, by the authority of the donor of the power; and every assurance, instrument and thing so executed and done shall be as effectual in law as if it had been executed or done by the donee of the power in the name and with the signature and seal of the donor thereof.

This section applies to powers-of-attorney created by instruments executed either before or after this Act comes into force.

44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, s. 47.

Payment by attorney under power without notice of death, &c., good.

3. Any person making or doing any payment or act, in good faith, in pursuance of a power-of-attorney shall not be liable in respect of the payment or act by reason that before the payment or act the donor of the power had died or become lunatic, of unsound mind, or bankrupt, or insolvent, or had revoked the power, if the fact of death, lunacy, unsoundness of mind, bankruptcy, insolvency or revocation was not at the time of the payment or act known to the person making or doing the same.

But this section shall not affect any right against the payee of any person interested in any money so paid; and that person shall have the like remedy against the payee as he would have had against the payer if the payment had not been made by him.

This section applies only to payments and acts made or done after this Act comes into force.

44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, s. 48.

Deposit of original instruments creating powers-of-attorney.

4. (a) An instrument creating a power-of-attorney, its execution being verified by affidavit, statutory declaration or other sufficient evidence, may, with the affidavit or declaration, if any, be deposited in the High Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the instrument may be.

(b) A separate file of instruments so deposited shall be kept; and any person may search that file, and inspect every instrument so deposited; and a certified copy thereof shall be delivered out to him on request.

(c) A copy of an instrument so deposited may be presented at the office and may be stamped or marked as a certified copy, and when so stamped or marked shall become and be a certified copy.

(d) A certified copy of an instrument so deposited shall without further proof be sufficient evidence of the contents of the instrument and of the deposit thereof in the High Court.

(e) The High Court may from time to time make rules for the purposes of this section, and prescribing, with the concurrence of the Local Government, the fees to be taken under clauses (a), (b) and (c).

(f) Throughout British Burma, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be the High Court.

(g) This section applies to instruments creating powers-of-attorney executed either before or after this Act comes into force.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

As the law stands, the donee of a power-of-attorney, when executing an instrument pursuant to the power, must sign, and where sealing is required must seal, in his principal's name. The first object of this Bill is to render it legal for such donees to execute in and with their own names and seals. The law respecting the execution of powers-of-attorney will thus be made accordant with what will be the rule in England from and after the 31st December, 1881, and with what is believed to be the practice in the North-Western Provinces and, probably, elsewhere in India. The section effecting this is copied from section 46 of the recent Statute 44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, which takes effect from the close of the present year.

The second object of the Bill is to preclude doubts as to the liability of a donee of a power-of-attorney who makes payments in good faith after the donor of the power has died or become lunatic or bankrupt or insolvent, or has revoked the power, when the fact of death, lunacy, bankruptcy, insolvency or revocation was not known to the donee at the time of making the payment. The section effecting this is copied from section 47 of the Statute above mentioned, and merely extends to all attorneys the rule as to trustees, executors and administrators making payments under powers, which has been in force in British India for the last fifteen years—see Act XXVIII of 1866, section 39.

The third and last object of the Bill is to provide for the deposit of instruments creating powers-of-attorney, and for the evidence of the contents of such instruments. The section effecting this is copied (with the modifications necessary to adapt it to India) from 44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, section 48.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons accompanying it are published for general information, by order of His Excellency the Governor General, under the 22nd of the Rules for the conduct of the Legislative Business of the Council of the Governor General:—

No. 22 OF 1881.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Powers-of-Attorney.

FOR the purpose of amending the law relating to Powers-of-Attorney; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. Local extent. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called "The Powers-of-Attorney Act, 1881": it applies to the whole of British India; and it shall come into force on the first day of January, 1882.

44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, s. 46. Execution under power-of-attorney.

2. The donee of a power-of-attorney may, if he thinks fit, execute or do any assurance, instrument or thing in and with his own name and signature and his own seal, where sealing is required, by the authority of the donor of the power; and every assurance, instrument and thing so executed and done shall be as effectual in law as if it had been executed or done by the donee of the power in the name and with the signature and seal of the donor thereof.

This section applies to powers-of-attorney created by instruments executed either before or after this Act comes into force.

44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, s. 47. Payment by attorney under power without notice of death, &c., good.

3. Any person making or doing any payment or act, in good faith, in pursuance of a power-of-attorney shall not be liable in respect of the payment or act by reason that before the payment or act the donor of the power had died or become lunatic, of unsound mind, or bankrupt, or insolvent, or had revoked the power, if the fact of death, lunacy, unsoundness of mind, bankruptcy, insolvency or revocation was not at the time of the payment or act known to the person making or doing the same.

But this section shall not affect any right against the payee of any person interested in any money so paid; and that person shall have the like remedy against the payee as he would have had against the payer if the payment had not been made by him.

This section applies only to payments and acts made or done after this Act comes into force.

44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, s. 48. Deposit of original instruments creating powers-of-attorney.

4. (a) An instrument creating a power-of-attorney, its execution being verified by affidavit, statutory declaration or other sufficient evidence, may, with the affidavit or declaration, if any, be deposited in the High Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the instrument may be.

(b) A separate file of instruments so deposited shall be kept; and any person may search that file, and inspect every instrument so deposited; and a certified copy thereof shall be delivered out to him on request.

(c) A copy of an instrument so deposited may be presented at the office and may be stamped or marked as a certified copy, and when so stamped or marked shall become and be a certified copy.

(d) A certified copy of an instrument so deposited shall without further proof be sufficient evidence of the contents of the instrument and of the deposit thereof in the High Court.

(e) The High Court may from time to time make rules for the purposes of this section, and prescribing, with the concurrence of the Local Government, the fees to be taken under clauses (a), (b) and (c).

(f) Throughout British Burma, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be the High Court.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

As the law stands, the donee of a power-of-attorney, when executing an instrument pursuant to the power, must sign, and where sealing is required must seal, in his principal's name. The first object of this Bill is to render it legal for such donees to execute in and with their own names and seals. The law respecting the execution of instruments under powers-of-attorney will thus be made accordant with what will be the rule in England from and after the 31st December, 1881, and with what is believed to be the practice in the North-Western Provinces, British Burma and, probably, elsewhere in India. The section effecting this is copied from section 46 of the recent Statute 44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, which takes effect from the close of the present year.

The second object of the Bill is to preclude doubts as to the liability of a donee of a power-of-attorney who makes payments in good faith after the donor of the power has died or become lunatic or bankrupt or insolvent, or has revoked the power, when the fact of death, lunacy, bankruptcy, insolvency or revocation was not known to the donee at the time of making the payment. The section effecting this is copied from section 47 of the Statute above mentioned, and merely extends to all attorneys the rule as to trustees, executors and administrators making payments under powers, which has been in force in British India for the last fifteen years—see Act XXVIII of 1866, section 39.

The third and last object of the Bill is to provide for the deposit of instruments creating powers-of-attorney, and for the evidence of the contents of such instruments. The section effecting this is copied (with the modifications necessary to adapt it to India) from 44 & 45 Vic., c. 41, section 48.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons accompanying it are published for general information, by order of His Excellency the Governor General, under the 22nd of the Rules for the Conduct of the Legislative Business of the Council of the Governor General:—

No. 23 OF 1881.

A Bill to amend the Prisoners' Act, 1871.

Preamble. WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Act No. V of 1871 (to consolidate the laws relating to Prisoners confined by order of a Court); It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. 1. This Act may be called "The Prisoners' Act Amendment Act, 1883":

Local extent. it extends to the whole of British India; and it shall Commencement. come into force on the first day of January, 1883.

Section substituted for section 33, Act V of 1871. 2. For section thirty-three of the said Act the following shall be substituted (namely):—

"33. The Governor General in Council may, from time to time, appoint places within British India to which persons sentenced to transportation shall be sent; and the Local Government, or some officer duly authorized in this behalf by the Local Government, shall give orders for the removal of such persons to the places so appointed, except when sentence of transportation is passed on a person already undergoing transportation under a sentence previously passed for another offence. Act X of 1872, s. 319.

Governor General in Council to appoint places to which persons sentenced to transportation shall be sent.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

SECTIONS 319 and 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have been omitted in the Bill for regulating the Procedure of the Courts of Criminal Judicature, which repeals that Code.

The former section empowers the Governor General in Council to appoint a place or places in British India to which persons sentenced to transportation shall be sent, and also authorizes the Local Government to provide for the removal of such persons to the place or places so appointed. The latter section provides for the case of persons sentenced to transportation while already undergoing transportation under a sentence previously passed.

The reason for the omission of these provisions in the Bill is that the matter with which they deal does not belong to Criminal Procedure, but falls within the scope of the Prisoners' Act, 1871.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared. It simply substitutes for section 33 of the Prisoners' Act, 1871, a section containing the provisions of sections 319 and 320 of the present Code of Criminal Procedure, and will come into force at the same time as the new Code. The part of the former section which declares that no sentence of transportation shall specify the place to which the person sentenced is to be transported will be added to section 368 of the new Code.
