54. Every Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner may, by written order, direct that any business cognizable under this chapter by his Court, and the Courts under his control (including the execution of decrees) shall be distributed among such Courts in such manner as he thinks fit:

Power to distribute business.

Provided that no direction issued under this section shall empower any Court to exercise any jurisdiction which it is not empowered to exercise under section 50, section 51 or section 52.

55. All decisions and orders (except decisions and orders in suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act) of Assistant Commissioners not invested with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner under section 52, and of Tahsíldárs, shall be appealable to the Deputy Commissioner, whose order thereon shall be final, unless when the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds one hundred rupees, when a I of 1877.

further appeal shall lie to the Commissioner, or, in case the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds five thousand rupees, to the Financial Commissioner.

Further appeal in certain cases.

56. (1) All decisions and orders of Deputy Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners invested with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner in suits of the classes mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (e) of section 48, and in other suits (except suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act) in which the value of the subject-matter exceeds one hundred rupees, shall be appealable to the Commissioner, or in case the amount or value exceeds five thousand rupees, to the Financial Commissioner. I of 1877.

Cases appealable to Commissioner or Financial Commissioner.

(2) In all other cases their judgments and orders shall be final.

Other judgments to be final.

57. An appeal from the decisions of the Commissioner on appeals in suits of the classes mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (e) of section 48 shall lie to the Financial Commissioner, unless when the Commissioner dismisses the appeal. All other judgments and orders of the Commissioner on appeals shall be final, subject to revision by the Financial Commissioner.

Further appeal to Financial Commissioner in certain cases.

Other judgments of Commissioner to be final.

58. The Financial Commissioner may at any time call for any case which has come before any Commissioner or any Court subordinate to him, and pass such orders thereon consistent with the law applicable thereto as he thinks fit.

Revisional jurisdiction of Financial Commissioner.

59. (1) The period of limitation for an appeal under section 55, section 56 or section 57 shall run from the date of the decree, order for decision appealed against, and shall be as follows, that is to say:—

Limitation of appeals under this chapter.

(a) when such appeal lies to the Court of the Deputy Commissioner or of the Commissioner—sixty days;

(b) when such appeal lies to the Financial Commissioner—ninety days.

(2) In computing such periods of sixty and ninety days, and in all respects not herein specified, the limitation of such appeals shall be governed by the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. XV of 1877.

60. Subject to the general superintendence and control of the Financial Commissioner, every Commissioner shall control the Revenue Courts of all Deputy Commissioners and the Revenue Courts controlled by Deputy Commissioners within his Division; and subject to the control of the Commissioner, every Deputy Commissioner shall control the Revenue Courts of all Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs and officers invested with the powers of Deputy Commissioner, Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár within his District.

61. Except for the purpose of exercising control over any other Revenue Court, any person exercising the powers of a Revenue Court of any grade under section 49 or section 51 shall be deemed to be a Court of such grade for all the purposes of this Act, and shall exercise such powers and discharge the functions of such Court within such local limits and in such classes of cases as the Local Government may, from time to time, direct.

Persons invested with powers under this chapter to be deemed to be Courts of corresponding grades, and where and in what cases to exercise their powers.

62. When more than one Financial Commissioner is appointed, the Local Government may, from time to time, make rules as to the distribution of revenue, judicial and other business between the persons so appointed; and, until such rules are made, the Financial Commissioner who is senior in respect of his appointment as such may transfer such business as he thinks fit to the other Financial Commissioner for disposal, and may withdraw and himself dispose of any business so transferred and not disposed of.

Distribution of business between Financial Commissioners.

63. If either Financial Commissioner desires to obtain the opinion of the other upon any question arising in any appeal under this chapter pending before him, he may forward the record to the other Financial Commissioner with a statement of the question upon which he desires his opinion; and the latter, after such examination and such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit, shall record his opinion upon the question referred to him; and the Financial Commissioner who made the reference shall proceed to dispose of the appeal after considering the opinion so obtained.

Consultation between Financial Commissioners.

64. (1) The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in official Gazette, declare that a settlement of land-revenue is in progress in any local area, and invest any officer making or controlling such settlement, either by name or in virtue of his office, with all or any of the powers of any Court constituted under this Act for the purpose of trying all or any specified class of suits and appeals relating to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of such land, arising in such local area. [Act XVII of 1877, s. 49.]

Power to invest Settlement-officers with powers of Civil or Revenue Courts in certain cases.

(2) The publication of any notification under this section shall be conclusive evidence that a settlement of land-revenue is in progress in the local area to which the notification refers.

(3) The Local Government may cancel any such notification.

(4) While such notification continues in force, such powers shall be exercised by the officers so invested, and not otherwise:

Provided that the Local Government may, by order published in the official Gazette, direct that any jurisdiction with which any officer may have been invested by such notification shall be exercised solely by the Court by which such jurisdiction would have been exercised if such notification had not been published:

Provided also that any cases pending before any officer under such notification when it is cancelled may, notwithstanding such cancellation, be disposed of by him as if it continued in force, unless the Local Government directs (as it is hereby empowered to do) that such cases shall be transferred for disposal to the Court by which they would have been disposed of if such notification had not been published.

Explanation.—In this section "land" means land assessed to the land-revenue or whereof the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, and all land the property of Government not within the site of any town or village.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 50.]

65. For the purposes of section 64 the Local Government may, notwithstanding anything in this Act, from time to time direct that any of the Courts mentioned in this Act (except the Chief Court) shall, in respect of any specified class of cases, be subordinate to, or subject to the control or superintendence of, any authority other than those specified in this Act.

Power to alter subordination of Courts for purposes of section 64.

CHAPTER VII.

MISCELLANEOUS AND SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 46; compare Act VI of 1871, s. 25; Act XVII of 1875, s. 19; and Act XIII of 1879, s. 23.]

66. (1) Except with the consent of the parties, no presiding officer of any Court having jurisdiction under this Act shall try any suit or appeal to which he is a party or in which he is personally interested, or any appeal against a decree or order passed by himself, or shall adjudicate upon any proceeding connected with or arising out of such suit or appeal.

Presiding Officer of Court not to try certain suits and appeals.

(2) When any such suit, appeal or proceeding comes before him, he shall forthwith transmit the record of the case to the Court to which he is immediately subordinate, with a report of the circumstances attending the reference.

(3) The superior Court shall thereupon dispose of the case in the manner prescribed by section 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 47.]

67. All rules made and forms prescribed under section 28 and section 29, clauses (a), (b), (d) and (e), shall be submitted for sanction to the Local Government, and, on receiving such sanction, shall be published in the official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

Rules when to have force of law.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 48.]

68. (1) The Local Government may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint a single Judge of the Chief Court to exercise the power of superintendence conferred on such Court by section 27, and may cancel such notification.

Local Government may transfer power conferred by section 27 to a single Judge.

(2) While such notification continues in force, such power shall be exercised by the Judge appointed thereby, and not otherwise.

[Cf. Act XIII of 1879, s. 27.] IV of 1869.

69. For the purposes of the Indian Divorce Act, any Judge of the Divisional Court shall be deemed to be the District Judge throughout the Division over which that Court has jurisdiction.

[Act VI of 1871, s. 17; Act XIII of 1879, s. 38].

70. (1) Subject to such orders as may, from time to time, be issued by the Governor General in Council, and to the approval of the Local Government, the Chief Court shall prepare a list of days to be observed in each year as close holidays in the Civil Courts subordinate thereto.

Vacations.

(2) Such list shall be published in the official Gazette, and the said days shall be observed accordingly.

71. (1) All cases or proceedings pending in any Civil Court on the first day of October, 1884, may be disposed of as if this Act had not been passed, unless the Chief Court directs (as it is hereby empowered to do) that such cases or proceedings shall be transferred for disposal to the Courts established under this Act which would have had jurisdiction if they had been in existence when such cases or proceedings were instituted.

Pending proceedings.

(2) For the purposes of this section, all appeals in civil suits or proceedings pending on the said day shall—

(a) if preferred from the decrees, orders or decisions of Commissioners, Additional Commissioners or the Civil Judge of Peshâwar be deemed to be appeals from the Divisional Court;

(b) if preferred from the decrees, orders or decisions of Deputy Commissioners or officers invested under section three of Act XIV of 1875 with the appellate powers of Deputy Commissioners, or with the full powers of an Assistant Commissioner, be deemed to be appeals from the Court of the Assistant Judge; and

(c) if preferred from the decrees, orders or decisions of Assistant Commissioners not invested with full powers, or with the appellate powers of Deputy Commissioners, or of Honorary Civil Judges not invested with the full powers of an Assistant Commissioner, or of Tahsíldárs or Náib Tahsíldárs, be deemed to be appeals from Subordinate Judges of the second, third or fourth class.

XIV of 1882.

72. For the proposes of sections 617 and 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, the decree of an Appellate Court subordinate to the Chief Court shall be deemed to be final when no certificate permitting a further appeal to the Chief Court under section 43 has been granted, and a case decided by an Appellate Court in which no such certificate has been granted shall be deemed to be a case in which no appeal lies to the Chief Court.

Explanation of sections 617 and 622, Civil Procedure Code.

73. To the first schedule annexed to the Court-fees Act, 1870, the following shall be added :—

Amendment of the first schedule annexed to the Court-fees Act, 1870.

NUMBER.		PROPER FEE.
3. Application to the Chief Court of the Panjáb for the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure.	When the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute does not exceed twenty-five rupees.	Two rupees.
	When such amount or value exceeds twenty-five rupees.	The fee leviable on memorandum of appeal.

XIV of 1882.

74. If the Chief Court, on an application under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, on which a fee has been paid under the last preceding section, sets aside or modifies the decree or order of a subordinate Court, or remands the case for a fresh decision, it may grant to the applicant a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the full amount of fee paid on the application, or any smaller amount which, with regard to the circumstances of the case, it may think proper to order to be refunded.

Refund of fee paid on application for revision.

75. All appointments made under sections 5 and 22 of Act XVII of 1877, directions given under section 23, rules and forms prescribed under sections 26 and 27, and notifications published, powers conferred and orders issued under section 49, of the same Act, shall, so far as may be, be deemed to have been respectively made, given, prescribed, published, conferred and issued under this Act.

Saving of certain appointments, rules and forms, notifications, powers and orders.

SCHEDULE.

ACTS REPEALED.

(See section 2.)

Number and year.	Title of Act.	Extent of repeal.
Act IV of 1869	The Indian Divorce Act.	So much of section 3 as defines "District Judge" in the Panjab to mean the "Commissioner of a Division."
Act X of 1870	The Land Acquisition Act, 1870.	So much of section 3 as defines "Court" in the Panjáb to mean the "Commissioner of a Division."
Act XIV of 1875.	The Panjáb Judicial Administration Act, 1875.	So far as it relates to civil or criminal judicial powers.
Act XVII of 1877.	The Panjáb Courts' Act, 1877.	The whole.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

AN essential portion of the scheme for the reorganization of the civil administration in the Panjáb, which has recently received the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, is to be found in the improvement of the judicial agency and the reform of the appellate system. The arrangements proposed for this purpose render necessary very large changes in the law under which the Panjáb Courts are now constituted (the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877), and the most convenient mode of giving effect to them appears to be to repeal that Act and re-enact its provisions with the necessary additions and modifications. This it is proposed to do by the present Bill.

2. The changes in the law which it is intended to make will now be noticed.

3. Chapter II deals with the constitution of the Courts. The present law confers the civil judicial powers of the Courts subordinate to the Chief Court upon the executive officers of Government from the Commissioner down to the Tahsíldár, though Act XIV of 1875 enables the Local Government to confer the powers of a Deputy Commissioner or of a Tahsíldár upon other persons, and under that Act civil judicial powers have been conferred upon a number of officers known as Judicial Assistants and Munsifs, whose functions are mainly, though not always exclusively, judicial. Similarly, the Civil and Sessions Judge of Peshâwar and certain Additional Commissioners have been invested with the judicial powers of Commissioners under Act XVII of 1877. It is now proposed to relieve Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners, as a rule, of civil judicial functions, though they will continue to exercise jurisdiction in certain classes of cases which will be transferred from the Civil to the Revenue Courts, and they may also be invested with civil judicial powers where the judicial work is so light as not to require the creation of special Courts. Commissioners will likewise be, as a rule, relieved of the functions as Sessions Judges which now devolve upon them, but this can be done under the Criminal Procedure Code, without special legislation.

4. Special designations which do not imply the exercise of executive functions are accordingly given to the Courts subordinate to the Chief Court (section 4).

5. With a view to strengthen the Courts of appeal in order to admit of greater finality being given to appellate decisions, it is proposed that the Court immediately subordinate to the Chief Court should ordinarily consist of two Judges, and that, while one of these Judges may be enabled by rule to exercise certain of the powers of the Court, a single Judge should not have power in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction to reverse any order other than an interlocutory order passed by any Court.

6. Power is also taken (in section 7) to appoint the Commissioner of a Division to be one of the Judges of a Divisional Court in addition to his other duties, as it is in contemplation to establish one of the Divisional Courts at Derá Ismaíl Khán, and only one Judge will be available for that Court unless the Commissioner of the Deráját Division is appointed as one of the Judges.

7. The appointment of Assistant Judges and Subordinate Judges of the first class by the Local Government, and of Subordinate Judges of the second, third and fourth classes, corresponding to the present Munsifs, by the Chief Court, subject to rules to be made by the Local Government, is provided for by section 9. The Court of the Assistant Judge will replace the Court of the Deputy Commissioner or Judicial Assistant under the present law, and no provision has hitherto been made by law as to the authority by which Munsifs may be appointed or removed.

8. The other differences between Chapter II of the Bill and the corresponding chapter of Act XVII of 1877 follow upon those which have been already described.

9. The third chapter, which provides for the jurisdiction and powers of the Chief Court, only differs from the corresponding chapter of Act XVII of 1877 in that section 19, relating to the transfer of suits, is assimilated to section 25 of the Civil Procedure Code; section 21 is modified so as to enable the Chief Court to make rules for the exercise by one or more of the Judges of a Divisional Court of the powers of that Court, except as regards the reversal of decrees, sentences or decisions of any Court, to provide by rule for the constitution of a full bench of the Chief Court, and to delegate to one of its Judges the power of determining what Judges shall sit alone or as a bench of the Court, and power is also taken to enable a single Judge of the Chief Court or of a Divisional Court to reverse an interlocutory order; sections 31 and 32 replace the reference in section 29 of the present Act to sections 633 and 637 of the Civil Procedure Code, and add what is necessary of sections 638 and 639 of that Code; and section 33 provides for the delivery of the judgments of a bench of Judges by any Judge who was a member of that bench, in accordance with existing practice, and with the analogy of section 199 of the Civil Procedure Code.

10. Chapter IV relates to the jurisdiction and powers of Courts subordinate to the Chief Court. The Divisional Court is declared to be the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, but the Local Government is enabled to empower any Assistant Judge or Deputy Commissioner with the powers of an Assistant Judge to exercise any of the powers of a District Court, so as to obviate the inconvenience of unduly limiting the number of Courts which can exercise jurisdiction under certain laws, e. g., Acts XL of 1858, XXVII of 1860 and IX of 1861.

11. While the jurisdiction of the Divisional Court and of the Court of the Assistant Judge is unlimited as respects the value or amount in litigation, thus corresponding with the jurisdiction now exercised by Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners, that of the Subordinate Judge of the first class is limited to Rs. 5,000 instead of Rs. 10,000, which is the limit of the present jurisdiction of an Assistant Commissioner with full powers, and that of other Subordinate Judges may extend either to Rs. 100, to Rs. 500 or to Rs. 1,000.

12. In section 41 power is taken to invest Assistant Judges or Subordinate Judges with the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court Judge for the trial of suits cognizable by a Small Cause Court within certain limits of value or amount.

13. The other changes in Chapter IV are those which are rendered necessary by the alterations of the law already described.

14. Chapter V relates to appellate jurisdiction in civil cases. It embodies the modifications proposed in the appellate system with the view of restricting the right of appeal so far as it is considered that the improved organization of the Courts will admit of this. The second appeals allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure, and the further appeals allowed by the present Panjáb Courts Act are abolished, and the decisions of appellate Courts are made final, except that the Judges of a Divisional Court are enabled, when they differ as to the judgment which should be passed, or when some question of law or custom or of general interest is involved, if they think the case of sufficient importance to justify further appeal, to grant a certificate permitting a further appeal to the Chief Court.

15. Appeals to Assistant Judges are confined to suits not above Rs. 500 in value, either of the Small Cause Court class or of any other class which the Chief Court, with the sanction of the Local Government, may determine to put upon the same footing, and appeals in suits above Rs. 5,000 in value, as well as appeals from decrees of the Divisional Court, will, when allowed by law, lie to the Chief Court, all other appeals allowed by law lying to the Divisional Court.

16. Section 47, relating to the transfer of appeals, has been modified to the same extent as section 19.

17. Chapter VI, which deals with Revenue Courts, is new, having been rendered necessary by the transfer of certain classes of suits enumerated in section 48 from the Civil to the Revenue Courts. It provides for the jurisdiction and powers of these Courts, for their procedure, for appeals from their decisions, for the revisional jurisdiction of the Financial Commissioner, and the controlling powers of the Financial Commissioner, Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner, respectively, for the transfer of suits and appeals, and for the distribution of business between Financial Commissioners when more than one such officer is appointed, the sanction which has been given by the Secretary of State to the appointment of a second Financial Commissioner rendering a provision of this nature necessary. Sections 64 and 65 correspond with sections 49 and 50 of the present Act, enabling the Local Government to confer judicial powers upon Settlement-officers, the only addition being that the officer may be so empowered either by name or in virtue of his office.

18. Chapter VII contains miscellaneous and supplementary provisions, some of which correspond with sections 46 to 48 of the present Act. Of the others, section 69 provides that any Judge of the Divisional Court shall be deemed to be the District Judge throughout its jurisdiction for the purposes of the Indian Divorce Act; section 70 provides for vacations; and section 71 for proceedings pending when this Bill becomes law; section 72 interprets certain expressions in sections 617 and 622 of the Civil Procedure Code so as to prevent doubt as to the cases in which the revisional jurisdiction of the Chief Court may be exercised; section 73 amends the Court-fees Act so that the fee leviable on a memorandum of appeal, when it exceeds the fee leviable on a petition to the Chief Court, may be charged on an application to it for the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code; and section 74 enables the Court in certain cases to grant a certificate authorizing the refund of the fee so charged.

Explanation of abbreviation used in the margin.

"Bo. Bill" refers to the draft Bill prepared by the Commission and received with the letter from the Government of Bombay, No. 216, dated 14th January, 1880.

A Bill to amend and define the law of Testamentary and Intestate Succession to Khojás.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend and define the law applicable to testamentary and intestate succession to Khojás; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called the Khojá Succession Act, 1884; and it shall extend to the whole of British India.

Short title. Local extent.

2. Except as provided by any other law for the time being in force, succession to the property, whether moveable or immoveable, in British India of a Khojá dying on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-five shall be regulated by the rules contained in this Act, wherever he may have had his domicile at the time of his death.

[Act X of 1865, s. 5.]

Application.

Explanation.—Property in British India includes obligations enforceable there.

3. (1) In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

[Bo. Bill, s. 3.]

Definitions.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE UNDIVIDED PROPERTY OF A MALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

5. (1) When a male Khojá owning undivided property dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal male descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, every such descendant shall be entitled to a share in that property unless one of the persons through whom he is descended from the intestate is living.

Where there are lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

(2) When the sharers under sub-section (1) all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, their shares shall be equal.

[Act X of 1865, s. 33.]

(3) When the sharers under sub-section (1) do not all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, the property shall be divided into such a number of equal shares as will correspond with the number of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to him at his decease, and of his lineal male descendants of the like degree of kindred who died before him, and through whom the other sharers are descended from him; and one such share shall be allotted to each of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate at his decease; and one such share shall be allotted in respect of each such deceased male descendant; and the share allotted in respect of each such deceased male descendant shall be divided among the sharers descended through him, in such manner that the sons of any person shall always take that which their father would have been entitled to if he had survived the intestate.

6. In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the property of the intestate shall be divided equally among all the male members of his undivided family living at his death.

[Bo. Bill, s. 13.]

Where there are no lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

CHAPTER III.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE SEPARATE PROPERTY OF A MALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

7. When a male Khojá owning property, not being undivided property, dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal male descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, the property shall descend in the manner provided in section 5.

[Bo. Bill, s. 16.]

Where there are lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

8. In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the intestate's father shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 17.]

In default of such lineal male descendants, property to belong to the intestate's father.

9. In default of the father, the intestate's mother shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 18.]

In default of the father, to the mother.

10. In default of the mother, the widow or widows of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

In default of the mother, to the widows.

11. In default of widows, the daughters of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 20.]

In default of widows, to the daughters.

12. (1) In default of daughters, the sons of daughters shall succeed to the property, the sons of each daughter taking an equal share:

[Bo. Bill, s. 21.]

In default of daughters, to daughters' sons and to brothers.

Provided that, if the intestate has left brothers surviving him, the daughters' sons shall succeed to a moiety of the property, the sons of each daughter taking an equal share, and the brothers shall take the other moiety.

(2) In default of daughters' sons, the brothers shall take the whole of the property.

13. In default of brothers, the daughters of the intestate's sons shall succeed to the property, the daughters of each son taking an equal share.

[Bo. Bill, s. 22.]

In default of brothers, to sons' daughters.

14. In default of sons' daughters, the sons of the intestate's brothers shall succeed to the property, the sons of each brother taking an equal share.

[Bo. Bill, s. 23.]

In default of sons' daughters, to brothers' sons.

15. In default of brothers' sons, the half-brothers of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 24.]

In default of brothers' sons, to half-brothers.

16. In default of half-brothers, the sons of half-brothers shall succeed to the property, the sons of each half-brother taking an equal share.

[Bo. Bill, s. 25.]

In default of half-brothers, to half-brothers' sons.

17. In default of sons of half-brothers, the paternal grandfather shall succeed to the property; and in default of the paternal grandfather, the paternal grandmother shall succeed to it.

[Bo. Bill, s. 26.]

In default of half-brothers' sons, to the grandfather; and in default of the grandfather, to the grandmother.

18. In default of the paternal grandmother, the paternal uncles shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 27.]

In default of the grandmother, to paternal uncles.

19. In default of paternal uncles, the sisters of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 28.]

In default of paternal uncles, to sisters.

20. In default of sisters, the property shall belong to those of the intestate's relatives on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate; and, in default of relatives on the father's side, to those of the intestate's relatives on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate:

In default of sisters, to the nearest of kin.

Provided that no female relative shall be entitled to share in the property if there is a male relative standing on the same side in the same degree of kindred to the intestate.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter IV.—Of Succession to the Absolute Property of a Female Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 23-27.)

[Bo. Bill, s. 33. See sec. 48, infra.]

21. If, at the death of the intestate, any of the male heirs mentioned in sections 7 to 18 (both inclusive), or any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate, is living, a female succeeding under any of the foregoing sections shall take the property as restricted owner.

When female takes as restricted owner under foregoing sections.

[Bo. Bill, s. 30.]

22. When a male Khojá dies intestate in respect of any ornaments belonging to him, and not being undivided property, which are in the possession of his wife with his consent, and the wife does not acquire the ownership, whether absolute or restricted, of the ornaments under this Act, she shall be entitled to retain possession of them until she dies or re-marries.

Widow's right to retain possession of ornaments.

CHAPTER IV.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE ABSOLUTE PROPERTY OF A FEMALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

[Bo. Bill, s. 38.]

23. (1) When an unmarried female Khojá owning property otherwise than as a restricted owner dies intestate in respect of that property, it shall belong to her brothers; in default of brothers, to her father; in default of the father, to her mother; in default of the mother, to the relatives of the intestate on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate; and, in default of such relatives, to the relatives on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 32 & 33.]

(2) If at the death of the intestate any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate is living, a female succeeding under this section, whether in preference to or together with that male relative, shall take the property as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 31.]

24. (1) When a married female Khojá owning property otherwise than as restricted owner dies intestate in respect of that property, it shall belong to her sons and daughters; and the daughters shall take it as restricted owners.

Descent of married female's absolute property.

(2) In default of sons and daughters, the property shall, except as provided in sub-section (3), belong to her husband.

(3) If the property has been given to the female on the occasion of her marriage separately from the "Dej" for her sole use and benefit by her parents or relatives, it shall, in default of sons and daughters, belong—

[Bo. Bill, s. 37.]

25. (1) When a female Khojá, being a widow or divorced and owning property otherwise than as restricted owner, dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, every such descendant shall be entitled to a share of the property unless one of the persons through whom he is descended from the intestate is living.

Descent of absolute property of widow or divorced female leaving lineal descendants within the fourth degree.

[Act X of 1865, s. 33.]

(3) When the sharers under sub-section (1) do not all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, the property shall be divided into such a number of equal shares as may correspond with the number of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to her at her decease, and of lineal descendants of the like degree of kindred who died before her and through whom the other sharers are descended from her; and one such share shall be allotted to each of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate at her decease; and one such share shall be allotted in respect of each such deceased descendant; and the share allotted in respect of each such deceased descendant shall be divided among the sharers descended through him, in such manner that the children of any person shall always take what that person would have been entitled to if he had survived the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, s. 37.]

26. (1) In default of the descendants mentioned in section 25, the property shall belong to the brothers of the intestate; in default of brothers, to her father; in default of the father, to her mother.

Where there are no such lineal descendants.

(2) In default of the mother, the property shall belong to the relatives of the intestate on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred, and, in default of such relatives, to the relatives of the intestate on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred.

[Bo. Bill, s. 32.]

27. If, at the death of the intestate, any of the male heirs mentioned in section 25 and the first sub-section of section 26, or any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate, is living, a female succeeding under section 25 or section 26, whether in preference to or together with that heir or relative, shall take the property as restricted owner.

When female taking under section 25 or 26 takes as restricted owner.

CHAPTER V.

OF PROPERTY WHICH A FEMALE TAKES AS RESTRICTED OWNER, AND THE FURTHER SUCCESSION TO THE SAME.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate," "stridhan."]

28. A female taking property as restricted owner shall be absolutely entitled to the use of, and the income accruing from, that property during her life, and, except as otherwise provided by this Act, shall have all the other rights and powers of an absolute owner in respect of that property.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate."]

29. Except as provided by section 31, no right to, over or in respect of property created by a restricted owner of that property shall have effect for any time beyond her life:

Powers of alienation limited.

[New.]

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect a lease granted at a fair rent for a term not exceeding twenty years, and without payment of any fine or premium, or a right created for consideration in favour of a person acting in good faith, and without notice of the ownership being restricted.

[Act II of 1882, s. 3.]

Explanation.—A person has notice of the ownership being restricted when he actually knows that it is restricted, or when, but for wilful abstention from enquiry or gross negligence, he would have known it, or when information of it is given to, or obtained by, his agent under the circumstances mentioned in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 229.

IX of 1872.

30. A female taking property as restricted owner shall be bound, so far as it is possible for her to do so without applying her other property for that purpose,—

Obligations of restricted owner.

(a) to preserve the substance of the property without any material alteration, deterioration or diminution except such as may be essential to the realization of the full income of it in a reasonable manner, and to deal with it in all respects as carefully as a person of ordinary prudence would deal with property which he hoped to transmit in good condition to his heirs; and

(b) to make such payments, institute, maintain and defend such suits and other proceedings, and take such other steps as, regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the property, may be reasonably requisite for the assertion and protection of the title thereto, for the protection of the interest of those who are to take it after her, or for the recovery of any portion of it which is not in her possession.

31. A female taking property as restricted owner shall have power to transfer the same, so that the transfer may have effect beyond her life when, the income being insufficient, such transfer is necessary in order to raise money for any of the following purposes, namely:—

Restricted owner's power of transfer.

(b) to discharge the debts of the absolute owner from whom the property descended;

(c) to provide for the maintenance of any persons entitled under this Act to have their maintenance provided for out of the property, for the payment of any marriage expenses or funeral expenses payable under this Act out of the property, and for the performance of any ordinary family ceremonies; and

(d) to support herself where she has no other sufficient means of support.

[New]. [Act II of 1882, s. 34.]

32. (1) A restricted owner of property may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction to sanction any transfer of that property which she proposes to make under section 31.

Power to apply to Court to sanction a transfer under section 31.

(2) The petition must state the names of all the persons interested in the application so far as they can be ascertained, and must be verified by the applicant or by some other competent person in the manner required by law for the verification of plaints; and, if it contains any averment which the person making the verification knows or believes to be false, or does not know or believe to be true, that person shall be deemed to have intentionally given false evidence within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(3) A copy of the petition shall be served upon, and the hearing thereof may be attended by, such of the persons interested in the application as the Court thinks fit.

(4) A transfer made with the sanction of a Court obtained under this section shall be deemed to be warranted by section 31.

[New].

33. A Court dealing with an application under section 32 may, if it thinks fit, sanction the transfer proposed subject to the condition that the money raised by the transfer shall be paid into Court or to trustees apppointed by the Court, and may give such further directions as it thinks fit with a view to ensuring that the money shall be applied to the purpose for which it is raised, or that any balance thereof which is not required for that purpose, shall be secured for the benefit of those who would take the property after the restricted owner.

Power to direct money raised to be paid into Court.

34. When property belonging to a female as restricted owner is sold in execution of a decree passed against her, the interest taken by the purchaser shall cease on her death,—

(b) the decree is one for sale passed on a mortgage made under section 31 so as to take effect beyond the life of the female.

35. A decision in any suit or other proceeding, or a compromise of any dispute, relating to the property to which the restricted owner is a party, shall, except where she acts in collusion with the party opposed to her, bind those who take the property after her under this Act in the same manner and to the same extent as if she were an absolute owner of the property.

Effect of decision or compromise to which the restricted owner is a party.

36. In any case in which, under any enactment for the time being in force, an owner of property would by lapse of time lose any right to, over or in respect of that property, or any means of enforcing any such right, or another person would by lapse of time acquire any right to, over or in respect of that property, any period which elapses during the continuance of the restricted ownership shall be reckoned as against those taking the property after the termination of that ownership in the same manner and to the same extent as if the restricted owner had been an absolute owner of the property and it had been taken by them as her heirs.

[Bo. Bill, s. 39.]

37. (1) When property has descended to a female as restricted owner and she dies unmarried, it shall belong to the person to whom it would then have belonged if she had died before the absolute owner from whom it descended and it had descended under this Act without having been alienated.

Further descent of property held by unmarried female as restricted owner.

(2) In default of such person, the property shall descend as if the female were not a restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 41.]

38. (1) When property has descended to a female as restricted owner and she dies, being at the time of her death married, a widow or divorced from her husband, the property shall be divided among her legitimate lineal male descendants, not being more remote than the fourth degree, those nearest in degree of kindred to her excluding the more remote, and, when those nearest in degree are not her sons, the property being so divided amongst them that the sons of any person shall take the share which he would have taken if the fathers of all had survived the restricted owner.

(2) In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the property shall belong to the daughters of the deceased; in default of daughters, the property shall belong to the legitimate lineal male descendants of daughters, not being more remote from the deceased than the fourth degree, those nearest in degree excluding the more remote; the descendants of each daughter, when they take, taking an equal share, and when they are not sons of the daughters, that share being so divided among them that the sons of any person shall take what he would have taken if the fathers of all had survived the restricted owner.

(3) In default of legitimate lineal male descendants of daughters as aforesaid, the property shall belong to the person to whom it would then have belonged if the restricted owner had died before the absolute owner from whom it descended, and it had descended under this Act without having been alienated.

(4) In default of such person, the property shall descend as if the female were not a restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 32.]

39. When property, having descended to a female as restricted owner, subsequently descends to another female under section 37, sub-section (1), or section 38, sub-section (3), that female shall take it as restricted owner.

When female taking property under sections 37 and 38 takes as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 19.]

40. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing sections, when two or more widows of a deceased Khojá take his property under this Act as restricted owners,—

Widows taking together as restricted owners to have a right of survivorship.

(1) there shall be as between them a right of survivorship in respect of that property;

(2) the proviso to section 29 shall not apply to any lease of or any right to, over or in respect of the property, or any part or share thereof, granted or created by one or more of them without the consent in writing of the other or others of them then surviving;

41. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing sections, a widow marrying again after her husband's death shall not be entitled to take as restricted owner his property or any property of any of his lineal descendants which has descended to them from him; and a widow taking any such property as restricted owner under the foregoing sections and subsequently marrying again shall, for the purpose of applying sections 28, 29, 34, 38 and 40, to that property, be deemed to have died.

Effect of re-marriage of widow claiming or holding as restricted owner.

OF WILLS OF KHOJÁS.

42. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the portions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, set forth in the schedule hereto annexed, with the modifications shown in that schedule, shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 331 of that Act, apply to all wills made by a Khojá, whether male or female, dying on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-five; and in the portions of the Act so applying all words defined in section 3 of the Act shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to have the same meaning as that section has attached to them respectively;

Extension of portions of Act X of 1865 with certain modifications to wills of Khojás.

Provided that—

(a) For the purpose of the portions of the Act so applying, no person to whom the Indian Majority Act, 1875, applies shall be deemed to have attained his majority before the time specified in this behalf in that Act.

IX of 1875.

(b) A bequest by a Khojá in favour of any person who has not come into existence at the death of the testator, or in favour of a class of persons any one of whom has not come into existence at that time, shall be void.

(c) When a bequest is void under clause (b), any bequest contained in the same will and intended to take effect after or upon failure of such prior bequest shall also be void.

43. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sections, a Khojá may bequeath property to or for the benefit of a woman so that she shall not have power to transfer or charge the same or her beneficial interest therein.

Bequest of property to woman without power to transfer or charge.

[Act IV of 1882, s. 10.]

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter VII.—Of Maintenance and Marriage and Funeral Expenses.—Secs. 44-47).

(Chapter VIII.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 48-51.)

CHAPTER VII.

OF MAINTENANCE AND MARRIAGE AND FUNERAL EXPENSES.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 34 & 43.]

44. (1) The amount requisite for the maintenance of the following persons and the amount of their necessary funeral expenses shall, if they do not possess or leave means sufficient for the purpose, be payable out of any property of a deceased male Khojá in respect of which he has died intestate.

Maintenance and funeral expenses payable out of intestate's property.

(2) The persons referred to are—

(a) the widow or widows of the deceased Khojá and the widows of his legitimate lineal male descendants, provided they have not married again;

(b) every daughter and sister (whether legitimate or not) of the deceased Khojá, and every legitimate daughter of his son, grandson or great-grandson, except when she has been married and her husband is living;

(c) the father, mother, grandfather and grandmother of the deceased Khojá; and

(d) his illegitimate sons until they attain their majority.

[Bo. Bill, s. 44.]

45. The expenses of the first or only marriage of every daughter (whether legitimate or not) of a deceased male Khojá, and of every legitimate daughter of his deceased son, grandson or great-grandson, if not otherwise sufficiently provided for, shall be payable out of any of his property in respect of which he has died intestate.

Marriage expenses payable out of intestate's property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 45.]

Maintenance and funeral expenses payable out of property of testator.

[New.]

47. Any sum claimable for maintenance or marriage expenses or funeral expenses under section 44, section 45 or section 46 out of any property of a deceased male Khojá shall be recoverable as if it was due under a contract made by the Khojá in his lifetime and he had died leaving only that property:

Recovery of sums claimable under sections 44, 45 and 46.

first, the property shall be applied to the payment of debts due by the deceased before being applied to the payment of sums so claimable;

secondly, no decree shall be passed for arrears of any allowance on account of maintenance unless the amount of the allowance has been fixed by agreement or by order of a Court; and

thirdly, when a suit is instituted for the purpose of having any such allowance fixed against a person taking the property by intestate succession, and that person is able and willing to maintain or provide for the maintenance of the person by or on whose behalf the suit is instituted, and gives security to the satisfaction of the Court for his so doing, the Court may, if it thinks fit, dismiss the suit.

CHAPTER VIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

[Bo. Bill, s. 42. Act X of 1865, s. 28.]

48. When a Khojá dies intestate in respect of any of his property, and there is no person entitled to take that property under the foregoing sections, it shall go to the Crown.

Property when to go to the Crown.

Females succeeding under this Act to take as males, except in certain cases.

49. Except as otherwise provided by this Act—

(2) a female taking property under any testamentary disposition under this Act shall have the same interest in it, and the same powers in respect of it, as a male taking under a like disposition.

[Bo. Bill, s. 35. Act XV of 1856, s. 3.]

50. If a widow of a deceased Khojá, not having been appointed by his will to be guardian for his children, marries again, she shall not be entitled as of right to be appointed guardian of the children by a Court under any law for the time being in force relating to the appointment of guardians, and, when she has before her re-marriage been so appointed, a Court having jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for the children may in its discretion remove her from the guardianship.

Guardianship of children where widow re-marries.

Property transferable by gift made in contemplation of death.

51. A Khojá may dispose, by gift made in contemplation of death, of any moveable property which he could dispose of by will.

A gift is said to be made in contemplation of death where a person who is ill and expects to die shortly of his illness delivers to another the possession of any moveable property to keep as a gift in case the donor shall die of that illness.

When gift said to be made in contemplation of death.

Such gift resumable.

Such a gift may be resumed by the giver.

It does not take effect if he recovers from the illness during which it was made, nor if he survives the person to whom it was made.

When it fails.

PORTIONS OF THE INDIAN SUCCESSION ACT (X OF 1865) MODIFIED FOR APPLICATION TO WILLS MADE BY KHOJÁS.

Note.—Modifications are shewn in italics; omissions by asterisks.

PART VII.

Of Wills and Codicils.

Persons capable of making wills.

46. Every person of sound mind and not a minor may dispose of his property by will.

Explanation 1.—A married woman may dispose by will of any property which she could alienate by her own act during her life.

Explanation 2.—Persons who are deaf, or dumb, or blind are not thereby incapacitated for making a will if they are able to know what they do by it.

Explanation 3.—One who is ordinarily insane may make a will during an interval in which he is of sound mind.

Explanation 4.—No person can make a will while he is in such a state of mind, whether arising from drunkenness, or from illness, or from any other cause, that he does not know what he is doing.

Illustrations.

(a.) A can perceive what is going on in his immediate neighbourhood, and can answer familiar questions, but has not a competent understanding as to the nature of his property, or the persons who are of kindred to him, or in whose favour it would be proper that he should make his will. A cannot make a valid will.

(b.) A executes an instrument purporting to be his will, but he does not understand the nature of the instrument nor the effect of its provisions. This instrument is not a valid will.

(c.) A, being very feeble and debilitated, but capable of exercising a judgment as to the proper mode of disposing of his property, makes a will. This is a valid will.

Testamentary guardian.

47. A father, whatever his age may be, may by will appoint a guardian or guardians for his child during minority.

Will obtained by fraud, coercion or importunity.

Illustrations.

(a.) A falsely and knowingly represents to the testator that the testator's only child is dead, or that he has done some undutiful act, and thereby induces the testator to make a will in his, A's, favour; such will has been obtained by fraud and is invalid.

(b.) A by fraud and deception prevails upon the testator to bequeath a legacy to him. The bequest is void.

(c.) A, being a prisoner by lawful authority, makes his will. The will is not invalid by reason of the imprisonment.

(d.) A threatens to shoot B, or to burn his house, or to cause him to be arrested on a criminal charge, unless he makes a bequest in favour of C. B in consequence makes a bequest in favour of C. The bequest is void, the making of it having been caused by coercion.

(e.) A being of sufficient intellect, if undisturbed by the influence of others, to make a will, yet being so much under the control of B that he is not a free agent, makes a will dictated by B. It appears that he would not have executed the will but for fear of B. The will is invalid.

(f.) A, being in so feeble a state of health as to be unable to resist importunity, is pressed by B to make a will of a certain purport, and does so merely to purchase peace, and in submission to B. The will is invalid.

(g.) A being in such a state of health as to be capable of exercising his own judgment and volition, B uses urgent intercession and persuasion with him to induce him to make a will of a certain purport. A, in consequence of the intercession and persuasion, but in the free exercise of his judgment and volition, makes his will in the manner recommended by B. The will is not rendered invalid by the intercession and persuasion of B.

(h.) A, with a view to obtaining a legacy from B, pays him attention and flatters him, and thereby produces in him a capricious partiality to A. B, in consequence of such attention and flattery, makes his will, by which he leaves a legacy to A. The bequest is not rendered invalid by the attention and flattery of A.

Will may be revoked or altered.

49. A will is liable to be revoked or altered by the maker of it at any time when he is competent to dispose of his property by will.

PART VIII.

Of the Execution of Unprivileged Wills.

Execution of unprivileged wills.

50. Every testator, not being a soldier employed in an expedition, or engaged in actual warfare, or a mariner at sea, must execute his will according to the following rules:—

First.—The testator shall sign or shall affix his mark to the will, or it shall be signed by some other person in his presence and by his direction.

Second.—The signature or mark of the testator, or the signature of the person signing for him, shall be so placed that it shall appear that it was intended thereby to give effect to the writing as a will.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Third.—The will shall be attested by two or more witnesses, each of whom must have seen the testator sign or affix his mark to the will, or have seen some other person sign the will in the presence and by the direction of the testator, or have received from the testator a personal acknowledgment of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person; and each of the witnesses must sign or affix his mark to the will in the presence of the testator, but it shall not be necessary that more than one witness be present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary.

Incorporation of papers by reference.

51. If a testator, in a will or codicil duly attested, refers to any other document then actually written, as expressing any part of his intentions, such document shall be considered as forming a part of the will or codicil in which it is referred to.

PART IX.

Of Privileged Wills.

Privileged wills.

52. Any soldier being employed in an expedition, or engaged in actual warfare, or any mariner being at sea, may, if he has completed the age of eighteen years, dispose of his property by a will made as is mentioned in the fifty-third section. Such wills are called privileged wills.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, the surgeon of a regiment, is actually employed in an expedition. He is a soldier actually employed in an expedition, and can make a privileged will.

(b.) A is at sea in a merchant-ship, of which he is the purser. He is a mariner, and being at sea can make a privileged will.

(c.) A, a soldier serving in the field against insurgents, is a soldier engaged in actual warfare, and as such can make a privileged will.

(d.) A, a mariner of a ship in the course of a voyage, is temporarily on shore, while she is lying in harbour. He is, in the sense of the words used in this clause, a mariner at sea, and can make a privileged will.

(e.) A, an admiral who commands a naval force, but who lives on shore, and only occasionally goes on board his ship, is not considered as at sea, and cannot make a privileged will.

(f.) A, a mariner serving on a military expedition, but not being at sea, is considered as a soldier, and can make a privileged will.

Mode of making, and rules for executing, privileged wills.

53. Privileged wills may be in writing, or may be made by word of mouth.

The execution of them shall be governed by the following rules:—

First.—The will may be written wholly by the testator, with his own hand. In such case it need not be signed nor attested.

Second.—It may be written wholly or in part by another person, and signed by the testator. In such case it need not be attested.

Third.—If the instrument purporting to be a will is written wholly or in part by another person, and is not signed by the testator, it shall be considered to be his will, if it be shown that it was written by the testator's directions, or that he recognized it as his will.

If it appear on the face of the instrument that the execution of it in the manner intended by him was not completed, the instrument shall not by reason of that circumstance be invalid, provided that his non-execution of it can be reasonably ascribed to some cause other than the abandonment of the testamentary intentions expressed in the instrument.

Fourth.—If the soldier or mariner shall have written instructions for the preparation of his will, but shall have died before it could be prepared and executed, such instructions shall be considered to constitute his will.

Fifth.—If the soldier or mariner shall, in the presence of two witnesses, have given verbal instructions for the preparation of his will, and they shall have been reduced into writing in his lifetime, but he shall have died before the instrument could be prepared and executed, such instructions shall be considered to constitute his will, although they may not have been reduced into writing in his presence, nor read over to him.

Sixth.—Such soldier or mariner as aforesaid may make a will by word of mouth by declaring his intentions before two witnesses present at the same time.

Seventh.—A will made by word of mouth shall be null at the expiration of one month after the testator shall have ceased to be entitled to make a privileged will.

PART X.

Of the Attestation, Revocation, Alteration and Revival of Wills.

* * * * * * * * *

Witness not disqualified by interest or by being executor.

55. No person, by reason of interest in, or of his being an executor of, a will, is disqualified as a witness to prove the execution of the will or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof.

Revocation of unprivileged will or codicil.

57. No unprivileged will or codicil, nor any part thereof, shall be revoked otherwise than * * * * * by another will or codicil, or by some writing declaring an intention to revoke the same, and executed in the manner in which an unprivileged will is hereinbefore required to be executed, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same.

Illustrations.

(a.) A has made an unprivileged will. Afterwards A makes another unprivileged will which purports to revoke the first. This is a revocation.

(b.) A has made an unprivileged will. Afterwards, A being entitled to make a privileged will, makes a privileged will which purports to revoke his unprivileged will. This is a revocation.

Effect of obliteration, interlineation or alteration in unprivileged will.

58. No obliteration, interlineation or other alteration made in any unprivileged will after the execution thereof shall have any effect, except so far as the words or meaning of the will shall have been thereby rendered illegible or undiscernible, unless such alteration shall be executed in like manner as hereinbefore is required for the execution of the will; save that the will,

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

as so altered, shall be deemed to be duly executed if the signature of the testator and the subscription of the witnesses be made in the margin or on some other part of the will opposite or near to such alteration, or at the foot or end of or opposite to a memorandum referring to such alteration, and written at the end or some other part of the will.

Revocation of privileged will or codicil.

59. A privileged will or codicil may be revoked by the testator, by an unprivileged will or codicil, or by any act expressing an intention to revoke it, and accompanied with such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged will, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same.

Explanation.—In order to the revocation of a privileged will or codicil by an act accompanied with such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged will, it is not necessary that the testator should at the time of doing that act be in a situation which entitles him to make a privileged will.

Revival of unprivileged will.

60. No unprivileged will or codicil, nor any part thereof, which shall be in any manner revoked, shall be revived otherwise than by the re-execution thereof, or by a codicil executed in manner hereinbefore required, and showing an intention to revive the same; and when any will or codicil which shall be partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked shall be revived, such revival shall not extend to so much thereof as shall have been revoked before the revocation of the whole thereof, unless an intention to the contrary shall be shown by the will or codicil.

Extent of revival of will or codicil partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked.

PART XI.

Of the Construction of Wills.

Wording of will.

Enquiries to determine questions as to object or subject of will.

62. For the purpose of determining questions as to what person or what property is denoted by any words used in a will, a Court must inquire into every material fact relating to the persons who claim to be interested under such will, the property which is claimed as the subject of disposition, the circumstances of the testator and of his family, and into every fact a knowledge of which may conduce to the right application of the words which the testator has used.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, by his will, bequeaths 1,000 rupees to his eldest son or to his youngest grandchild, or to his cousin Mary. A Court may make inquiry in order to ascertain to what person the description in the will applies.

(b.) A, by his will, leaves to B "his estate called Black Acre." It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what is the subject-matter of the bequest; that is to say, what estate of the testator's is called Black Acre.

(c.) A, by his will, leaves to B "the estate which he purchased of C." It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what estate the testator purchased of C.

Misnomer or misdescription of object.

63. Where the words used in the will to designate or describe a legatee, or a class of legatees, sufficiently show what is meant, an error in the name or description shall not prevent the legacy from taking effect.

A mistake in the name of a legatee may be corrected by a description of him, and a mistake in the description of a legatee may be corrected by the name.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths a legacy "to Thomas, the second son of his brother John." The testator has an only brother, named John, who has no son named Thomas, but has a second son whose name is William. William shall have the legacy.

(b.) A bequeaths a legacy "to Thomas, the second son of his brother John." The testator has an only brother named John, whose first son is named Thomas, and whose second son is named William. Thomas shall have the legacy.

(c.) The testator bequeaths his property "to A and B, the legitimate children of C." C has no legitimate child, but has two illegitimate children, A and B. The bequest to A and B takes effect, although they are illegitimate.

(d.) The testator gives his residuary estate to be divided among "his seven children," and proceeding to enumerate them, mentions six names only. This omission shall not prevent the seventh child from taking a share with the others.

(e.) The testator, having six grand-children, makes a bequest to "his six grand-children," and proceeding to mention them by their Christian names, mentions one twice over, omitting another altogether. The one whose name is not mentioned shall take a share with the others.

(f.) The testator bequeaths "1,000 rupees to each of the three children of A." At the date of the will A has four children. Each of these four children shall, if he survives the testator, receive a legacy of 1,000 rupees.

When words may be supplied.

64. Where any word material to the full expression of the meaning has been omitted, it may be supplied by the context.

Illustration.

The testator gives a legacy of "five hundred" to his daughter A, and a legacy of "five hundred rupees" to his daughter B. A shall take a legacy of five hundred rupees.

Rejection of erroneous particulars in description of subject.

65. If the thing which the testator intended to bequeath can be sufficiently identified from the description of it given in the will, but some parts of the description do not apply, such parts of the description shall be rejected as erroneous and the bequest shall take effect.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, but had no marsh-lands in the occupation of X. The words "in the occupation of X" shall be rejected as erroneous, and the marsh-lands of the testator lying in L shall pass by the bequest.

(b.) The testator bequeaths to A "his zamíndárí of Rámpúr." He had an estate at Rámpúr, but it was a taluq and not a zamíndárí. The taluq passes by this bequest.

When part of description may not be rejected as erroneous.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Explanation.—In judging whether a case falls within the meaning of this section, any words which would be liable to rejection under the sixty-fifth section are to be considered as struck out of the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The bequest shall be considered as limited to such of the testator's marsh-lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X.

(b.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X, comprising 1,000 bighás of land." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The measurement is wholly inapplicable to the marsh-lands of either class, or to the whole taken together. The measurement shall be considered as struck out of the will, and such of the testator's marsh-lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X shall alone pass by the bequest.

Extrinsic evidence admissible in case of latent ambiguity.

67. Where the words of the will are unambiguous, but it is found by extrinsic evidence that they admit of applications one only of which can have been intended by the testator, extrinsic evidence may be taken to show which of these applications was intended.

Illustrations.

(a.) A man, having two cousins of the name of Mary, bequeaths a sum of money to "his cousin Mary." It appears that there are two persons each answering the description in the will. That description, therefore, admits of two applications, only one of which can have been intended by the testator. Evidence is admissible to show which of the two applications was intended.

(b.) A, by his will, leaves to B "his estate called Sultánpur Khurd." It turns out that he had two estates called Sultánpur Khurd. Evidence is admissible to show which estate was intended.

Extrinsic evidence inadmissible in cases of patent ambiguity or deficiency.

68. Where there is an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of the will, no extrinsic evidence as to the intentions of the testator shall be admitted.

Illustrations.

(a.) A man has an aunt Caroline and a cousin Mary, and has no aunt of the name of Mary. By his will he bequeaths 1,000 rupees to "his aunt Caroline" and 1,000 rupees to "his cousin Mary," and afterwards bequeaths 2,000 rupees to "his before-mentioned aunt Mary." There is no person to whom the description given in the will can apply, and evidence is not admissible to show who was meant by "his before-mentioned aunt Mary." The bequest is therefore void for uncertainty under the seventy-sixth section.

(b.) A bequeaths 1,000 rupees to , leaving a blank for the name of the legatee. Evidence is not admissible to show what name the testator intended to insert.

(c.) A bequeaths to B rupees, or "his estate of ." Evidence is not admissible to show what sum or what estate the testator intended to insert.

Meaning of clause to be collected from entire will.

69. The meaning of any clause in a will is to be collected from the entire instrument, and all its parts are to be construed with reference to each other; and for this purpose a codicil is to be considered as part of the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator gives to B a specific fund or property at the date of A, and by a subsequent clause gives the whole of his property to A. The effect of the several clauses taken together is to vest the specific fund or property in A for life and after his decease in B; it appearing from the bequest to B that the testator meant to use in a restricted sense the words in which he describes what he gives to A.

(b.) Where a testator, having an estate one part of which is called Black Acre, bequeaths the whole of his estate to A, and in another part of his will bequeaths Black Acre to B, the latter bequest is to be read as an exception out of the first, as if he had said, "I give Black Acre to B and all the rest of my estate to A."

When words may be understood in restricted sense, and when in sense wider than usual.

70. General words may be understood in a restricted sense where it may be collected from the will that the testator meant to use them in a restricted sense; and words may be understood in a wider sense than that which they usually bear, where it may be collected from the other words of the will that the testator meant to use them in such wider sense.

Illustrations.

(b.) The testator (a sailor on ship-board) bequeathed to his mother his gold ring, buttons and chest of clothes, and to his friend A (a shipmate) his red box, clasp-knife and all things not before bequeathed. The testator's share in a house does not pass to A under this bequest.

(c.) A, by his will, bequeathed to B all his household furniture, plate, linen, china, books, pictures and all other goods of whatever kind; and afterwards bequeathed to B a specified part of his property. Under the first bequest, B is entitled only to such articles of the testator's as are of the same nature with the articles therein enumerated.

Which of two possible constructions preferred.

71. Where a clause is susceptible of two meanings, according to one of which it has some effect, and according to the other it can have none, the former is to be preferred.

No part rejected, if it can be reasonably construed.

72. No part of a will is to be rejected as destitute of meaning if it is possible to put a reasonable construction upon it.

Interpretation of words repeated in different parts of will.

73. If the same words occur in different parts of the same will, they must be taken to have been used everywhere in the same sense, unless there appears an intention to the contrary.

Testator's intention to be effectuated as far as possible.

74. The intention of the testator is not to be set aside because it cannot take effect to the full extent, but effect is to be given to it as far as possible.

The last of two inconsistent clauses prevails.

75. Where two clauses or gifts in a will are irreconcileable, so that they cannot possibly stand together, the last shall prevail.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator by the first clause of his will leaves his estate of Rámnagar "to A," and by the last clause of his will leaves it "to B and not to A." B shall have it.

(b.) If a man at the commencement of his will gives his house to A, and at the close of it directs that his house shall be sold and the proceeds invested for the benefit of B, the latter disposition shall prevail.

Will or bequest void for uncertainty.

76. A will or bequest not expressive of any definite intention is void for uncertainty.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Illustration.

If a testator says—"I bequeath goods to A"; or "I bequeath to A"; or "I leave to A all the goods mentioned in a schedule," and no schedule is found; or "I bequeath 'money,' 'wheat,' 'oil,'" or the like, without saying how much, this is void.

77. The description contained in a will, of property the subject of gift, shall, unless a contrary intention appear by the will, be deemed to refer to and comprise the property answering that description at the death of the testator.

Words describing subject refer to property answering description at testator's death.

82. Where property is bequeathed to any person, he is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless it appears from the will that only a restricted interest was intended for him.

Bequest without words of limitation.

83. Where property is bequeathed to a person with a bequest in the alternative to another person or to a class of persons, if a contrary intention does not appear by the will, the legatee first named shall be entitled to the legacy, if he be alive at the time when it takes effect; but if he be then dead, the person or class of persons named in the second branch of the alternative shall take the legacy.

Bequest in alternative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A survives the testator. B takes nothing.

(b.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A dies after the date of the will, and before the testator. The legacy goes to B.

(c.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A is dead at the date of the will. The legacy goes to B.

(e.) Property is bequeathed to A or his nearest of kin. A dies in the lifetime of the testator. Upon the death of the testator, the bequest to A's nearest of kin takes effect.

84. Where property is bequeathed to a person, and words are added which describe a class of persons, but do not denote them as direct objects or a distinct and independent gift, such person is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless a contrary intention appears by the will.

Effect of words describing a class added to bequest to a person.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made—

to A and his children,
to A and his children by his present wife,
to A and his heirs,
to A and the heirs of his body,
to A and the heirs male of his body,
to A and the heirs female of his body,
to A and his issue,
to A and his family,
to A and his descendants,
to A and his representatives,
to A and his personal representatives,
to A, his executors and administators.

In each of these cases, A takes the whole interest which the testator had in the property.

(b.) A bequest is made to A and his brothers. A and his brothers are jointly entitled to the legacy.

85. Where a bequest is made to a class of persons under a general description only, no one to whom the words of the description are not in their ordinary sense applicable shall take the legacy.

Bequest to class of persons under general description only.

88. Where a will purports to make two bequests to the same person, and a question arises whether the testator intended to make the second bequest instead of or in addition to the first, if there is nothing in the will to show what he intended, the following rules shall prevail in determining the construction to be put upon the will:—

Rules of construction where will purports to make two bequests to same person.

First.—If the same specific thing is bequeathed twice to the same legatee in the same will, or in the will and again in a codicil, he is entitled to receive that specific thing only.

Second.—Where one and the same will or one and the same codicil purports to make, in two places, a bequest to the same person of the same quantity or amount of anything, he shall be entitled to one such legacy only.

Third.—Where two legacies of unequal amount are given to the same person in the same will, or in the same codicil, the legatee is entitled to both.

Fourth.—Where two legacies, whether equal or unequal in amount, are given to the same legatee, one by a will and the other by a codicil, or each by a different codicil, the legatee is entitled to both legacies.

Explanation.—In the four last rules, the word "will" does not include a codicil.

Illustrations.

(a.) A having ten shares, and no more, in the Bank of Bengal, made his will, which contains near its commencement the words "I bequeath my ten shares in the Bank of Bengal to B." After other bequests, the will concludes with the words "and I bequeath my ten shares in the Bank of Bengal to B." B is entitled simply to receive A's ten shares in the Bank of Bengal.

(b.) A having one diamond-ring, which was given him by B, bequeathed to C the diamond-ring which was given him by B. A afterwards made a codicil to his will, and thereby, after giving other legacies, he bequeathed to C the diamond-ring which was given him by B. C can claim nothing except the diamond-ring which was given to A by B.

(c.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees, and afterwards, in the same will, repeats the bequest in the same words. B is entitled to one legacy of 5,000 rupees only.

(d.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees, and afterwards, by the same will, bequeaths to B the sum of 6,000 rupees. B is entitled to 11,000 rupees.

(e.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees, and by a codicil to the will he bequeaths to him 5,000 rupees. B is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees.

(f.) A, by one codicil to his will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees, and by another codicil, bequeaths to him 6,000 rupees. B is entitled to receive 11,000 rupees.

(g.) A, by his will, bequeaths "500 rupees to B because she was his nurse," and in another part of the will bequeaths 500 rupees to B "because she went to England with his children." B is entitled to receive 1,000 rupees.

(h.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also, in another part of the will, an annuity of 400 rupees. B is entitled to both legacies.

(i.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also bequeaths to him the sum of 5,000 rupees if he shall attain the age of 18. B is entitled absolutely to one sum of 5,000 rupees, and take a contingent interest in another sum of 5,000 rupees.

89. A residuary legatee may be constituted by any words that show an intention on the part of the testator that the person designated shall take the surplus or residue of his property.

Constitution of residuary legatee.

(a.) A makes her will, consisting of several testamentary papers, in one of which are contained the following words:—"I think there will be something left, after all funeral expenses, &c., to give to B, now at school, towards equipping him to any profession he may hereafter be appointed to." B is constituted residuary legatee.

(b.) A makes his will, with the following passage at the end of it:—"I believe there will be found sufficient in my banker's hands to defray and discharge my debts, which I hereby desire B to do, and keep the residue for her own use and pleasure." B is constituted the residuary legatee.

(c.) A bequeaths all his property to B, except certain stocks and funds, which he bequeaths to C. B is the residuary legatee.

90. Under a residuary bequest, the legatee is entitled to all property belonging to the testator at the time of his death, of which he has not made any other testamentary disposition which is capable of taking effect.

Property to which residuary legatee entitled.

Time of vesting of legacy in general terms.

92. If the legatee does not survive the testator, the legacy cannot take effect, but shall lapse and form part of the residue of the testator's property, unless it appear by the will that the testator intended that it should go to some other person.

In what case legacy lapses.

In order to entitle the representatives of the legatee to receive the legacy, it must be proved that he survived the testator.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator bequeaths to B "500 rupees which B owes him." B dies before the testator; the legacy lapses.

(b.) A bequest is made to A and his children. A dies before the testator or happens to be dead when the will is made. The legacy to A and his children lapses.

(e.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A on his completing his eighteenth year, and in case he should die before he completes his eighteenth year, to B. A completes his eighteenth year, and dies in the lifetime of the testator. The legacy to A lapses, and the bequest to B does not take effect.

(f.) The testator and the legatee perished in the same shipwreck. There is no evidence to show which died first. The legacy will laspe.

93. If a legacy be given to two persons jointly, and one of them die before the testator, the other legatee takes the whole.

Legacy does not lapse if one of two joint legatees die before testator.

Illustration.

The legacy is simply to A and B. A dies before the testator. B takes the legacy.

94. But where a legacy is given to legatees in words which show that the testator intended to give them distinct shares of it, then if any legatee die before the testator, so much of the legacy as was intended for him shall fall into the residue of the testator's property.

Effect of words showing testator's intention to give distinct shares.

Illustration.

A sum of money is bequeathed to A, B and C, to be equally divided among them. A dies before the testator. B and C shall only take so much as they would have had if A had survived the testator.

95. Where the share that lapses is a part of the general residue bequeathed by the will, that share shall go as undisposed of.

When lapsed share goes as undisposed of.

Illustration.

The testator bequeaths the residue of his estate to A, B and C, to be equally divided between them. A dies before the testator. His one-third of the residue goes as undisposed of.

96. Where a bequest shall have been made to any son or other legitimate lineal male descendant of the testator, and the legatee shall die in the lifetime of the testator, but any legitimate lineal male descendant of his shall survive the testator, the bequest shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of the legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will.

When bequest to testator's lineal descendant does not lapse on his death in testator's lifetime.

Illustration.

A makes his will, by which he bequeaths a sum of money to his son B for his own absolute use and benefit. B dies before A, leaving a son C who survives A, and having made his will whereby he bequeaths all his property to his widow D. The money goes to D.

97. Where a bequest is made to one person for the benefit of another, the legacy does not lapse by the death, in the testator's lifetime, of the person to whom the bequest is made.

Bequest to A for benefit of B does not lapse by A's death.

98. Where a bequest is made simply to a described class of persons, the thing bequeathed shall go only to such as shall be alive at the testator's death.

Survivorship in case of bequest to described class.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 1,000 rupees to "the children of B" without saying when it is to be distributed among them. B had died previous to the date of the will, leaving three children, C, D and E. E died after the date of the will, but for the death of A. C and D survive A. The legacy shall belong to C and D, to the exclusion of the representatives of E.

(b.) A bequeaths a legacy to the children of B. At the time of the testator's death, B has no children. The bequest is void.

PART XII.

OF VOID BEQUESTS.

99. Where a bequest is made to a person by a particular description, and there is no person in existence at the testator's death who answers the description, the bequest is void.

Bequest to person by particular description, who is not in existence at testator's death.

101. No bequest is valid whereby the vesting of the thing bequeathed may be delayed beyond the lifetime of one or more persons living at the testator's decease.

Rule against perpetuity.

102. If a bequest is made to a class of persons, with regard to some of whom it is inoperative by reason of the rules contained in the last preceding section, such bequest shall be wholly void.

Bequest to a class, some of whom may come under rules in section 101.

Bequest to take effect on failure of bequest void under section 101 or 102.

104. A direction to accumulate the income arising from any property shall be void; and the property shall be disposed of as if no accumulation had been directed.

Effect of direction for accumulation.

Exception.—Where the property is immoveable, or where accumulation is directed to be made from the death of the testator, the direction shall be valid in respect only of the income arising from the property within one year next following the testator's death;

and at the end of the year such property and income shall be disposed of respectively, as if the period during which the accumulation has been directed to be made had elapsed.

Illustrations.

(a.) The will directs that the sum of 10,000 rupees shall be invested in Government securities, and the income accumulated for 20 years, and that the principal together with the accumulations, shall then be divided between A, B and C. A, B and C are entitled to receive the sum of 10,000 rupees at the end of the year from the testator's death.

(b.) The will directs that 10,000 rupees shall be invested and the income accumulated until A shall marry, and shall then be paid to him. A is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees at the end of a year from the testator's death.

(c.) The will directs that the rents of the farm of Sultánpur shall be accumulated for ten years, and that the accumulation shall be then paid to the eldest son of A. At the death of the testator, A has an eldest son living, named B. B shall receive at the end of one year from the testator's death the rents which have accrued during the year, together with any interest which may have been made by investing them.

(e.) A bequeaths a sum of money to B, to be paid to him when he shall attain the age of 18, and directs the interest to be accumulated till he shall arrive at that age. At A's death the legacy becomes vested in B; and so much of the interest as is not required for his maintenance and education is accumulated, not by reason of the direction contained in the will, but in consequence of B's minority.

PART XIII.

OF THE VESTING OF LEGACIES.

106. Where by the terms of a bequest the legatee is not entitled to immediate possession of the thing bequeathed, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the will, become vested in the legatee on the testator's death, and shall pass to the legatee's representatives if he dies before that time and without having received the legacy.

Date of vesting of legacy when payment or possession postponed.

And in such cases the legacy is from the testator's death said to be vested in interest.

Explanation.—An intention that a legacy to any person shall not become vested in interest in him is not to be inferred merely from a provision whereby the payment or possession of the thing bequeathed is postponed, or whereby a prior interest therein is bequeathed to some other person, or whereby the income arising from the fund bequeathed is directed to be accumulated until the time of payment arrives, or from a provision that, if a particular event shall happen, the legacy shall go over to another person.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 100 rupees, to be paid to him at the death of C. On A's death the legacy becomes vested in interest in B, and if he dies before C, his representatives are entitled to the legacy.

(b.) A bequeaths to B 100 rupees, to be paid to him upon his attaining the age of 18. On A's death the legacy becomes vested in interest in B.

(c.) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B. On the testator's death the legacy to B becomes vested in interest in B.

(d.) A fund is bequeathed to A until B attains the age of 18, and then to B. The legacy to B is vested in interest from the testator's death.

(e.) A bequeaths the whole of his property to B upon trust to pay certain debts out of the income, and then to make over the fund to C. At A's death the gift to C becomes vested in interest in him.

(f.) A fund is bequeathed to A, B and C in equal shares, to be paid to them on their attaining the age of 18 respectively, with a proviso that, if all of them die under the age of 18, the legacy shall devolve upon D. On the death of the testator, the shares vest in interest in A, B and C, subject to be devested in case A, B and C shall all die under 18, and upon the death of any of them (except the last survivor) under the age of 18, his vested interest passes, so subject, to his representatives.

107. A legacy bequeathed in case a specified uncertain event shall happen does not vest until that event happens.

Date of vesting when legacy contingent upon specified uncertain event.

A legacy bequeathed in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen does not vest until the happening of that event becomes impossible.

In either case, until the condition has been fulfilled, the interest of the legatee is called contingent.

Exception.—Where a fund is bequeathed to any person upon his attaining a particular age, and the will also gives to him absolutely the income to arise from the fund before he reaches that age, or directs the income, or so much of it as may be necessary, to be applied for his benefit, the bequest of the fund is not contingent.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to D in case A, B and C shall all die under the age of 18. D has a contingent interest in the legacy until A, B and C all die under 18, or one of them attains that age.

(b.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A "in case he shall attain the age of 18," or, "when he shall attain the age of 18." A's interest in the legacy is contingent until the condition shall be fulfilled by his attaining that age.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, if B shall then be living; but if B shall not be then living, to C. A, B and C survive the testator. B and C each take a contingent interest in the estate until the event which is to vest it in one or in the other shall have happened.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(d.) An estate is bequeathed as in the case last supposed. B dies in the lifetime of A and C. Upon the death of B, C acquires a vested right to obtain possession of the estate upon A's death.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A when she shall attain the age of 18, or shall marry under that age with the consent of B, with a proviso that, if she shall not attain 18, or marry under that age with B's consent, the legacy shall go to C. A and C each take a contingent interest in the legacy. A attains the age of 18. A becomes absolutely entitled to the legacy, although she may have married under 18 without the consent of B.

(f.) An estate is bequeathed to A until he shall marry, and after that event to B. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until the condition shall be fulfiled by A's marrying.

(g.) An estate is bequeathed to A until he shall take advantage of the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, and after that event to B. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until A takes advantage of the Act.

(h.) An estate is bequeathed to A if he shall pay 500 rupees to B. A's interest in the bequest is contingent until he has paid 500 rupees to B.

(i.) A leaves his farm of Sultánpur Khurd to B, if B shall convey his own farm of Sultánpur Buzurg to C. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until he has conveyed the latter farm to C.

(j.) A fund is bequeathed to A if B shall not marry C within five years after the testator's death. A's interest in the legacy is contingent, until the condition shall be fulfilled by the expiration of the five years without B's having married C, or by the occurrence, within that period, of an event which makes the fulfilment of the condition impossible.

(k.) A fund is bequeathed to A if B shall not make any provision for him by will. The legacy is contingent until B's death.

(l.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees a year upon his attaining the age of 18, and directs that the interest, or a competent part thereof, shall be applied for his benefit until he reaches that age. The legacy is vested.

(m.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees when he shall attain the age of 18, and directs that a certain sum, out of another fund, shall be applied for his maintenance until he arrives at that age. The legacy is contingent.

108. Where a bequest is made only to such members of a class as shall have attained a particular age, a person who has not attained that age cannot have a vested interest in the legacy.

Vesting of interest in bequest to such members of a class as shall have attained particular age.

PART XIV.

OF ONEROUS BEQUESTS.

109. Where a bequest imposes an obligation on the legatee, he can take nothing by it unless he accepts it fully.

Onerous bequest.

Illustration.

A having shares in (X), a prosperous joint stock company, and also shares in (Y), a joint stock company in difficulties, in respect of which, shares heavy calls are expected to be made, bequeaths to B all his shares in joint stock companies. B refuses to accept the shares in (Y). He forfeits the shares in (X).

110. Where a will contains two separate and independent bequests to the same person, the legatee is at liberty to accept one of them and refuse the other, although the former may be beneficial and the latter onerous.

One of two separate and independent bequests to same person may be accepted, and other refused.

Illustration.

A having a lease for a term of years of a house at a rent which he and his representatives are bound to pay during the term, and which is higher than the house can be let for, bequeaths to B the lease and a sum of money. B refuses to accept the lease. He shall not by this refusal forfeit the money.

PART XV.

OF CONTINGENT BEQUESTS.

111. Where a legacy is given if a specified uncertain event shall happen, and no time is mentioned in the will for the occurrence of that event, the legacy cannot take effect unless such event happens before the period when the fund bequeathed is payable or distributable.

Bequest contingent upon specified uncertain event, no time being mentioned for its occurrence.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, and in case of his death, to B. If A survives the testator, the legacy to B does not take effect.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, and in case of his death without children, to B. If A survives the testator or dies in his lifetime leaving a child, the legacy to B does not take effect.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A when and if he attains the age of 18, and in case of his death, to B. A attains the age of 18. The legacy to B does not take effect.

(d.) A legacy is bequeathed to A for life and after his death to B, and, "in case of B's death without children," to C. The words "in case of B's death without children" are to be understood as meaning in case B shall die without children during the lifetime of A.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, and, "in case of B's death," to C. The words "in case of B's death" are to be considered as meaning "in case B shall die in the lifetime of A."

112. Where a bequest is made to such of certain persons as shall be surviving at some period but the exact period is not specified, the legacy shall go to such of them as shall be alive at the time of payment or distribution, unless a contrary intention appear by the will.

Bequest to such of certain persons as shall be surviving at some period not specified.

Illustrations.

(a.) Property is bequeathed to A and B, to be equally divided between them, or to the survivor of them. If both A and B survive the testator, the legacy is equally divided between them. If A dies before the testator, and B survives the testator, it goes to B.

(b.) Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B and C, to be equally divided between them, or to the survivor of them. B dies during the life of A; C survives A. At A's death the legacy goes to C.

(d.) Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B and C, with a direction that, in case either of them dies in the lifetime of A, the whole shall go to the survivor. B dies in the lifetime of A. Afterwards C dies in the lifetime of A. The legacy goes to the representative of C.

PART XVI.

OF CONDITIONAL BEQUESTS.

113. A bequest upon an impossible condition is void.

Bequest upon impossible condition.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall walk one hundred miles in an hour. The bequest is void.

(b.) A bequeaths 500 rupees to B on condition that he shall marry A's daughter. A's daughter was dead at the date of the will. The bequest is void.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

114. A bequest upon a condition the fulfilment of which would be contrary to law or to morality is void.

Bequest upon illegal or immoral condition.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 500 rupees to B on condition that he shall murder C. The bequest is void.

(b.) A bequeaths 5,000 rupees to his niece if she will desert her husband. The bequest is void.

115. Where a will imposes a condition to be fulfilled before the legatee can take a vested interest in the thing bequeathed, the condition shall be considered to have been fulfilled if it has been substantially complied with.

Fulfilment of condition precedent to vesting of legacy.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C, D and E. A marries with the written consent of B. C is present at the marriage. D sends a present to A previous to the marriage. E has been personally informed by A of his intentions, and has made no objection. A has fulfilled the condition.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. D dies. A marries with the consent of B and C. A has fulfilled the condition.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A marries in the lifetime of B, C and D, with the consent of B and C only. A has not fulfilled the condition.

(d.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A obtains the unconditional assent of B, C and D to his marriage with E. Afterwards B, C and D capriciously retract their consent. A marries E. A has fulfilled the condition.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A marries without the consent of B, C and D, but obtains their consent after the marriage. A has not fulfilled the condition.

(g.) A legacy is bequeathed to A if he executes a certain document within a time specified in the will. The document is executed by A within a reasonable time, but not within the time specified in the will. A has not performed the condition, and is not entitled to receive the legacy.

116. Where there is a bequest to one person and a bequest of the same thing to another, if the prior bequest shall fail, the second bequest shall take effect upon the failure of the prior bequest, although the failure may not have occurred in the manner contemplated by the testator.

Bequest to A and on failure of prior bequest, to B.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths a sum of money to his own children surviving him, and if they all die under 18, to B. A dies without having ever had a child. The bequest to B takes effect.

(b.) A bequeaths a sum of money to B, on condition that he shall execute a certain document within three months after A's death, and if he should neglect to do so, to C. B dies in the testator's lifetime. The bequest to C takes effect.

117. Where the will shows an intention that the second bequest shall take effect only in the event of the first bequest failing in a particular manner, the second bequest shall not take effect unless the prior bequest fails in that particular manner.

When second bequest not to take effect on failure of first.

Illustration.

A makes a bequest to his wife, but in case she should die in his lifetime, bequeaths to B that which he had bequeathed to her. A and his wife perish together, under circumstances which make it impossible to prove that she died before him. The bequest to B does not take effect.

118. A bequest may be made to any person with the condition superadded that in case a specified uncertain event shall happen, the thing bequeathed shall go to another person; or, that in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen, the thing bequeathed shall go over to another person.

Bequest over, conditional upon happening or not happening of specified uncertain event.

In each case the ulterior bequest is subject to the rules contained in sections 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 117.

Illustrations.

(a.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A, to be paid to him at the age of 18, and if he shall die before he attains that age, to B. A takes a vested interest in the legacy, subject to be devested and to go to B in case A shall die under 18.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A with a proviso that, if A shall dispute the competency of the testator to make a will, the estate shall go to B. A disputes the competency of the testator to make a will. The estate goes to B.

(d.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A and B, and if either should die during the life of C, then to the survivor living at the death of C. A and B die before C. The gift over cannot take effect, but the representative of A takes one-half of the money and the representative of B takes the other half.

(e.) A bequeaths to B the interest of a fund for life, and directs the fund to be divided, at her death, equally among her three children, or such of them as shall be living at her death. All the children of B die in B's lifetime. The bequest over cannot take effect, but the interests of the children pass to their representatives.

119. An ulterior bequest of the kind contemplated by the last preceding section cannot take effect unless the condition is strictly fulfilled.

Condition must be strictly fulfilled.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if he marries without the consent of B, C and D, the legacy shall go to E. D dies. Even if A marries without the consent of B and C, the gift to E does not take effect.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if he marries without the consent of B, the legacy shall go to C. A marries with the consent of B. He afterwards becomes a widower and marries again without the consent of B. The bequest to C does not take effect.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, to be paid at 18, or marriage, with a proviso that, if A dies under 18, or marries without the consent of B, the legacy shall go to C. A marries under 18, without the consent of B. The bequest to C takes effect.

120. If the ulterior bequest be not valid, the original bequest is not affected by it.

Original bequest not affected by invalidity of second.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A for his life, with a condition superadded that if he shall not on a given day walk 100 miles in an hour, the estate shall go to B. The condition being void, A retains his estate as if no condition had been inserted in the will.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A for her life, and if she do not desert her husband, to B. A is entitled to the estate during her life as if no condition had been inserted in the will.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A for life, and, if he marries, to the eldest son of B for life. B, at the date of the testator's death, had not had a son. The bequest over is void under section 92, and A is entitled to the estate during his life.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

121. A bequest may be made with the condition superadded that it shall cease to have effect in case a specified uncertain event shall happen, or in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen.

Bequest conditioned that it shall cease to have effect in case specified uncertain event shall happen or not happen.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A for his life, with a proviso that, in case he shall cut down a certain wood, the bequest shall cease to have any effect. A cuts down the wood; he loses his life-interest in the estate.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A, provided that, if he marries under the age of 25 without the consent of the executors named in the will, the estate shall cease to belong to him. A marries under 25 without the consent of the executors. The estate ceases to belong to him.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A, provided that, if he shall not go to England within three years after the testator's death, his interest in the estate shall cease. A does not go to England within the time prescribed. His interest in the estate ceases.

(d.) An estate is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if she becomes a nun, she shall cease to have any interest in the estate. A becomes a nun. She loses her interest under the will.

(e.) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, if B shall be then living, with a proviso that, if B shall become a nun, the bequest to her shall cease to have any effect. B becomes a nun in the lifetime of A. She thereby loses her contingent interest in the fund.

122. In order that a condition that a bequest shall cease to have effect may be valid, it is necessary that the event to which it relates be one which could legally constitute the condition of a bequest as contemplated by the one hundred and seventh section.

Such condition must not be invalid under section 107.

123. Where a bequest is made with a condition superadded that, unless the legatee shall perform a certain act, the subject-matter of the bequest shall go to another person, or the bequest shall cease to have effect, but no time is specified for the performance of the act, if the legatee takes any step which renders impossible or indefinitely postpones the performance of the act required, the legacy shall go as if the legatee had died without performing such act.

Result of legatee rendering impossible or indefinitely postponing act for which no time specified and on non-performance of which subject-matter to go over.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made to A with a proviso that, unless he enters the army, the legacy shall go over to B. A takes holy orders, and thereby renders it impossible that he should fulfil the condition. B is entitled to receive the legacy.

(b.) A bequest is made to A with a proviso that it shall cease to have any effect if he does not marry B's daughter. A marries a stranger, and thereby indefinitely postpones the fulfilment of the condition. The bequest ceases to have effect.

124. Where the will requires an act to be performed by the legatee within a specified time, either as a condition to be fulfilled before the legacy is enjoyed or as a condition upon the non-fulfilment of which the subject-matter of the bequest is to go over to another person, or the bequest is to cease to have effect, the act must be performed within the time specified, unless the performance of it be prevented by fraud, in which case such further time shall be allowed as shall be requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud.

Performance of condition, precedent or subsequent, within specified time.

Further time in case of fraud.

PART XVII.

Of Bequests with directions as to application or enjoyment.

125. Where a fund is bequeathed absolutely to or for the benefit of any person, but the will contains a direction that it shall be applied or enjoyed in a particular manner, the legatee shall be entitled to receive the fund as if the will had contained no such direction.

Direction that funds be employed in particular manner following absolute bequest of same to or for benefit of any person.

Illustration.

A sum of money is bequeathed towards purchasing a country-residence for A, or to purchase an annuity for A, or to purchase a commission in the army for A, or to place A in any business. A chooses to receive the legacy in money. He is entitled to do so.

126. Where a testator absolutely bequeaths a fund, so as to sever it from his own estate, but directs that the mode of enjoyment of it by the legatee shall be restricted so as to secure a specified benefit for the legatee; if that benefit cannot be obtained for the legatee, the fund belongs to him as if the will had contained no such direction.

Direction that mode of enjoyment of absolute bequest is to be restricted, to secure specified benefit for legatee.

Bequest of fund for certain purposes, some of which cannot be fulfilled.

PART XVIII.

Of Bequests to an Executor.

128. If a legacy is bequeathed to a person who is named an executor of the will, he shall not take the legacy unless he proves the will or otherwise manifests an intention to act as executor.

Legatee named as executor cannot take unless he shews intention to act as executor.

Illustration.

A legacy is given to A, who is named an executor. A orders the funeral according to the directions contained in the will, and dies a few days after the testator, without having proved the will. A has manifested an intention to act as executor.

PART XIX.

Of Specific Legacies.

129. Where a testator bequeaths to any person a specified part of his property, which is distinguished from all other parts of his property, the legacy is said to be specific.

Specific legacy defined.

"such of his horses as B may select:"

"all his shares in the Bank of Bengal:"

"all the shares in the Bank of Bengal which he may possess at the time of his death:"

"all the money which he has in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India:"

"all the Government-securities he shall be entitled to at the time of his decease."

Each of these legacies is specific.

(b.) A having Government promissory notes for 10,000 rupees, bequeaths to his executors "Government promissory notes for 10,000 rupees in trust to sell" for the benefit of B.

The legacy is specific.

(c.) A having property at Benares, and also in other places, bequeaths to B all his property at Benares.

The legacy is specific.

(d.) A bequeaths to B—

his house in Calcutta:

his zamíndárí of Rámpur:

his taluq of Rámnagar:

his lease of the indigo-factory of Salkya:

an annuity of 500 rupees out of the rents of his zamíndárí of W.

A directs his zamíndárí of X to be sold, and the proceeds to be invested for the benefit of B.

Each of these bequests is specific.

(e.) A by his will charges his zamíndárí of Y with an annuity of 1,000 rupees to C during his life, and subject to this charge he bequeaths the zamíndárí to D. Each of these bequests is specific.

(f.) A bequeaths a sum of money—

to buy an estate in zila Faridpur for B:

to buy a diamond-ring for B:

to buy a horse for B:

to be invested in shares in the Bank of Bengal for B:

to be invested in Government-securities for B.

A bequeaths to B—

"a diamond-ring:"

"a horse:"

"10,000 rupees worth of Government securities:"

"an annuity of 500 rupees:"

"2,000 rupees, to be paid in cash:"

"so much money as will produce 5,000 rupees 4 per cent. Government-securities."

These bequests are not specific.

(g.) A, having property in England and property in India, bequeaths a legacy to B, and directs that it shall be paid out of the property which he may leave in India. He also bequeaths a legacy to C, and directs that it shall be paid out of the property which he may leave in England.

No one of these legacies is specific.

130. Where a sum certain is bequeathed, the legacy is not specific merely because the stocks, funds or securities in which it is invested are described in the will.

Bequest of sum certain where stocks, &c., in which invested are described.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"10,000 rupees of his funded property:"

"10,000 rupees of his property now invested in shares of the East Indian Railway Company:"

"10,000 rupees at present secured by mortgage of Rámpur factory."

No one of these legacies is specific.

Bequest of stock where testator had, at date of will, equal or greater amount of stock of same kind.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees 5 per cent. Government securities. A had at the date of the will five per cent. Government securities for 5,000 rupees.

The legacy is not specific.

132. A money-legacy is not specific merely because the will directs its payment to be postponed until some part of the property of the testator shall have been reduced to a certain form, or remitted to a certain place.

Bequest of money where not payable until part of testator's property disposed of in certain way.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B 10,000 rupees, and directs that this legacy shall be paid as soon as A's property in India shall be realized in England.

The legacy is not specific.

133. Where a will contains a bequest of the residue of the testator's property along with an enumeration of some items of property not previously bequeathed, the articles enumerated shall not be deemed to be specifically bequeathed.

When enumerated articles not deemed specifically bequeathed.

PART XX.

Of Demonstrative Legacies.

137. Where a testator bequeaths a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of any other commodity, and refers to a particular fund or stock so as to constitute the same the primary fund or stock out of which payment is to be made, the legacy is said to be demonstrative.

Demonstrative legacy defined.

Explanation.—The distinction between a specific legacy and a demonstrative legacy consists in this, that—where specified property is given to the legatee, the legacy is specific;

where the legacy is directed to be paid out of specified property, it is demonstrative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The legacy to B is specific; the legacy to C is demonstrative.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—

"ten bushels of the corn which shall grow in his field of Greenacre:"

"80 chests of the indigo which shall be made at his factory of Rámpur:"

"10,000 rupees out of his five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India:"

an annuity of 500 rupees "from his funded property:"

"1,000 rupees out of the sum of 2,000 rupees due to him by C."

A bequeaths to B an annuity, and directs it to be paid out of the rents arising from his taluq of Rámnagar.

A bequeaths to B—

"10,000 rupees out of his estate at Rámnagar," or charges it on his estate at Rámnagar:

"10,000 rupees, being his share of the capital embarked in a certain business."

Each of these bequests is demonstrative.

138. Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed and a legacy is directed to be paid out of the same fund, the portion specifically bequeathed shall first be paid to the legatee, and the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the residue of the fund, and, so far as the residue shall be deficient, out of the general assets of the testator.

Order of payment when legacy directed to be paid out of fund the subject of specific legacy.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The debt due to A from W is only 1,500 rupees; of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B, and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator.

PART XXI.

Of Ademption of Legacies.

139. If anything which has been specifically bequeathed does not belong to the testator at the time of his death, or has been converted into property of a different kind, the legacy is adeemed; that is, it cannot take effect by reason of the subject-matter having been withdrawn from the operation of the will.

Ademption explained.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—

"the diamond-ring presented to him by C:"

"his gold chain:"

"a certain bale of wool:"

"a certain piece of cloth:"

"all his household-goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in M Street, in Calcutta, at the time of his death."

A, in his lifetime,

sells or gives away the ring;
converts the chain into a cup:
converts the wool into cloth:
makes the cloth into a garment:

takes another house into which he removes all his goods

Each of these legacies is adeemed.

"the sum of 1,000 rupees in a certain chest:"

"all the horses in his stable."

At the death of A, no money is found in the chest, and no horses in the stable.

The legacies are adeemed.

(c.) A bequeaths to B certain bales of goods. A takes the goods with him on a voyage. The ship and goods are lost at sea, and A is drowned.

The legacy is adeemed.

140. A demonstrative legacy is not adeemed by reason that the property on which it is charged by the will does not exist at the time of the death of the testator, or has been converted into property of a different kind; but it shall in such case be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Non-ademption of demonstrative legacy.

141. Where the thing specifically bequeathed is the right to receive something of value from a third party, and the testator himself receives it, the bequest is adeemed.

Ademption of specific bequest of right to receive something from third party.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—

"the debt which C owes him:"

"2,000 rupees which he has in the hands of D:"

"the money due to him on the bond of E:"

"his mortgage on the Rámpur factory."

All these debts are extinguished in A's lifetime, some with and some without his consent.

All the legacies are adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—

"his interest in certain policies of life-assurance."

A in his lifetime receives the amount of the policies. The legacy is adeemed.

142. The receipt by the testator of a part of an entire thing specifically bequeathed shall operate as an ademption of the legacy to the extent of the sum received.

Ademption pro tanto by testator's receipt of part of entire thing specifically bequeathed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B "the debt due to him by C." The debt amounts to 10,000 rupees. C pays to A 5,000 rupees, the one-half of the debt. The legacy is revoked by ademption, so far as regards the 5,000 rupees received by A.

143. If a portion of an entire fund or stock be specifically bequeathed, the receipt by the testator of a portion of the fund or stock shall operate as an ademption only to the extent of the amount so received; and the residue of the fund or stock shall be applicable to the discharge of the specific legacy.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B one-half of the sum of 10,000 rupees due to him from W. A in his lifetime receives 6,000 rupees, part of the 10,000 rupees. The 4,000 rupees which are due from W to A at the time of his death belong to B under the specific bequest.

Order of payment where portion of fund specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and legacy charged on same fund to another, and testator having received portion of that fund, remainder insufficient to pay both legacies.

144. Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and a legacy charged on the same fund is bequeathed to another legatee, if the testator receives a portion of that fund, and the remainder of the fund is insufficient to pay both the specific and the demonstrative legacy, the specific legacy shall be paid first, and the residue (if any) of the fund shall be applied so far as it will extend in payment of the demonstrative legacy, and the rest of the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, part of the debt of 2,000 rupees due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. A afterwards receives 500 rupees, part of that debt, and dies leaving only 1,500 rupees due to him from W. Of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B, and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator.

Ademption where stock, specifically bequeathed, does not exist at testator's death.

145. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does not exist at the testator's death, the legacy is adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"his capital stock of 1,000*l.* in East India Stock:"

"his promissory notes of the Government of India for 10,000 rupees in their 4 per cent. loan."

A sells the stock and the notes.

The legacies are adeemed.

Ademption pro tanto where stock, specifically bequeathed, exists in part only at testator's death.

146. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does only in part exist at the testator's death, the legacy is adeemed so far as regards that part of the stock which has ceased to exist.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"his 10,000 rupees in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India."

A sells one-half of his 10,000 rupees in the loan in question.

One-half of the legacy is adeemed.

Non-ademption of specific bequest of goods described as connected with certain place, by reason of removal.

147. A specific bequest of goods under a description connecting them with a certain place is not adeemed by reason that they have been removed from such place from any temporary cause, or by fraud or without the knowledge or sanction of the testator.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B "all his household goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in Calcutta at the time of his death." The goods are removed from the house to save them from fire. A dies before they are brought back.

A bequeaths to B "all his household goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in Calcutta at the time of his death." During A's absence upon a journey, the whole of the goods are removed from the house. A dies without having sanctioned their removal.

Neither of these legacies is adeemed.

When removal of thing bequeathed does not constitute ademption.

148. The removal of the thing bequeathed from the place in which it is stated in the will to be situated does not constitute an ademption where the place is only referred to in order to complete the description of what the testator meant to bequeath.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B all the bills, bonds and other securities for money belonging to him then lying in his lodgings in Calcutta. At the time of his death these effects had been removed from his lodgings in Calcutta.

A bequeaths to B all his furniture then in his house in Calcutta. The testator has a house at Calcutta and another at Chinsurah, in which he lives alternately, being possessed of one set of furniture only, which he removes with himself to each house. At the time of his death the furniture is in the house at Chinsurah.

A bequeaths to B all his goods on board a certain ship then lying in the river Hugli. The goods are removed by A's directions to a warehouse, in which they remain at the time of A's death.

No one of these legacies is revoked by ademption.

When thing bequeathed is a valuable to be received by testator from third person, and testator himself, or his representative, receives it.

149. Where the thing bequeathed is not the right to receive something of value from a third person, but the money or other commodity which shall be received from the third person by the testator himself or by his representatives, the receipt of such sum of money or other commodity by the testator shall not constitute an ademption;

but if he mixes it up with the general mass of his property, the legacy is adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B whatever sum may be received from his claim on C. A receives the whole of his claim on C and sets it apart from the general mass of his property. The legacy is not adeemed.

Change by operation of law of subject of specific bequest between date of will and testator's death.

150. Where a thing specifically bequeathed undergoes a change between the date of the will and the testator's death, and the change takes place by operation of law or in the course of execution of the provisions of any legal instrument under which the thing bequeathed was held, the legacy is not adeemed by reason of such change.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B "all the money which he has in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India."

The securities for the 5½ per cent. loan are converted during A's lifetime into 5 per cent. stock.

A's bequeaths to B the sum of 2,000*l.*, invested in consols in the names of trustees for A.

The sum of 2,000*l.* is transferred by the trustees into A's own name.

A bequeaths to B the sum of 10,000 rupees in promissory notes of the Government of India which he has power under his marriage-settlement to dispose of by will. Afterwards in A's lifetime, the fund is converted into consols by virtue of an authority contained in the settlement.

No one of these legacies has been adeemed.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Change of subject without testator's knowledge.

151. Where a thing specifically bequeathed undergoes a change between the date of the will and the testator's death, and the change takes place without the knowledge or sanction of the testator, the legacy is not adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B "all his 3 per cent. consols." The consols are, without A's knowledge, sold by his agent, and the proceeds converted into East India stock. This legacy is not adeemed.

Stock specifically bequeathed, lent to third party on condition that it be replaced.

152. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed is lent to a third party on condition that it shall be replaced, and it is replaced accordingly, the legacy is not adeemed.

Stock specifically bequeathed, sold but replaced and belonging to testator at his death.

153. Where stock specifically bequeathed is sold, and an equal quantity of the same stock is afterwards purchased and belongs to the testator at his death, the legacy is not adeemed.

PART XXII.

Of the Payment of Liabilities in respect of the subject of a Bequest.

Non-liability of executor to exonerate specific legatees.

154. Where property specifically bequeathed is subject at the death of the testator to any pledge, lien or incumbrance, created by the testator himself or by any person under whom he claims, then, unless a contrary intention appears by the will, the legatee, if he accepts the bequest, shall accept it subject to such pledge or incumbrance, and shall (as between himself and the testator's estate) be liable to make good the amount of such pledge or incumbrance.

A contrary intention shall not be inferred from any direction which the will may contain for the payment of the testator's debts generally.

Explanation.—A periodical payment in the nature of land-revenue or in the nature of rent is not such an incumbrance as is contemplated by this section.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B the diamond-ring given him by C. At A's death the ring is held in pawn by D, to whom it has been pledged by A. It is the duty of A's executors, if the state of the testator's assets will allow them, to allow B to redeem the ring.

(b.) A bequeaths to B a zamíndárí which at A's death is subject to a mortgage for 10,000 rupees, and the whole of the principal sum, together with interest to the amount of 1,000 rupees, is due at A's death. B, if he accepts the bequest, accepts it subject to this charge, and is liable, as between himself and A's estate, to pay the sum of 11,000 rupees thus due.

Completion of testator's title to things bequeathed to be at cost of his estate.

155. Where anything is to be done to complete the testator's title to the thing bequeathed, it is to be done at the cost of the testator's estate.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, having contracted in general terms for the purchase of a piece of land at a certain price, bequeaths it to B, and dies before he has paid the purchase-money. The purchase-money must be made good out of A's assets.

(b.) A having contracted for the purchase of a piece of land for a certain sum of money, one-half of which is to be paid down, and the other half secured by mortgage of the land, bequeaths it to B, and dies before he has paid or secured any part of the purchase-money. One-half of the purchase-money must be paid out of A's assets.

Exoneration of legatee's immoveable property for which land-revenue or rent payable periodically.

156. Where there is a bequest of any interest in immoveable property, in respect of which payment in the nature of land-revenue or in the nature of rent has to be made periodically, the estate of the testator shall (as between such estate and the legatee) make good such payments or a proportion of them up to the day of his death.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B a house, in respect of which 365 rupees are payable annually by way of rent. A pays his rent at the usual time, and dies 25 days after. A's estate shall make good 25 rupees in respect of the rent.

Exoneration of specific legatee's stock in joint stock company.

157. In the absence of any direction in the will where there is a specific bequest of stock in a joint stock company, if any call or other payment is due from the testator at the time of his death in respect of such stock, such call or payment shall, as between the testator's estate and the legatee, be borne by such estate;

but if any call or other payment shall, after the testator's death become due in respect of such stock, the same shall, as between the testator's estate and the legatee, be borne by the legatee if he accept the bequest.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeathed to B his shares in a certain railway. At A's death there was due from him the sum of 5*l.* in respect of each share, being the amount of a call which had been duly made, and the sum of 5*s.* in respect of each share, being the amount of interest which had accrued due in respect of the call. These payments must be borne by A's estate.

(b.) A has agreed to take 50 shares in an intended joint stock company, and has contracted to pay up 5*l.* in respect of each share, which sum must be paid before his title to the shares can be completed. A bequeaths these shares to B. The estate of A must make good the payments which were necessary to complete A's title.

(c.) A bequeaths to B his shares in a certain railway. B accepts the legacy. After A's death, a call is made in respect of the shares. B must pay the call.

(d.) A bequeaths to B his shares in a joint stock company. B accepts the bequest. Afterwards the affairs of the company are wound up and each shareholder is called upon for contribution. The amount of the contribution must be borne by the legatee.

(e.) A is the owner of ten shares in a railway company. At a meeting held during his lifetime a call is made of 3*l.* per share payable by three instalments. A bequeaths his shares to B, and dies between the day fixed for the payment of the first and the day fixed for the payment of the second instalment and without having paid the first instalment. A's estate must pay the first instalment, and B, if he accepts the legacy, must pay the remaining instalments.

PART XXIII.

Of Bequests of Things described in general terms.

Bequest of thing described in general terms.

158. If there be a bequest of something described in general terms, the executor must purchase for the legatee what may reasonably be considered to answer the description.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B a pair of carriage-horses, or a diamond-ring. The executor must provide the legatee with such articles, if the state of the assets will allow it.

(b.) A bequeaths to B "his pair of carriage-horses." A had no carriage-horses at the time of his death. The legacy fails.

PART XXIV.

Of Bequests of the Interest or Produce of a Fund.

Bequest of interest or produce of fund.

159. Where the interest or produce of a fund is bequeathed to any person, and the will affords no indication of an intention that the enjoyment of the bequest should be of limited duration, the principal as well as the interest shall belong to the legatee.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B the interest of his five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India. There is no other clause in the will affecting those securities. B is entitled to A's five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India.

(b.) A bequeaths the interest of his 5½ per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India to B for his life, and after his death to C. B is entitled to the interest of the notes during his life and C is entitled to the notes upon B's death.

(c.) A bequeaths to B the rents of his lands at X. B is entitled to the lands.

PART XXV.

Of Bequests of Annuities.

Annuity created by will payable for life only, unless contrary intention appears by will.

160. Where an annuity is created by will, the legatee is entitled to receive it for his life only unless a contrary intention appears by the will. And this rule shall not be varied by the circumstance that the annuity is directed to be paid out of the property generally, or that a sum of money is bequeathed to be invested in the purchase of it.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees a year. B is entitled during his life to receive the annual sum of 500 rupees.

(b.) A bequeaths to B the sum of 500 rupees monthly. B is entitled during his life to receive the sum of 500 rupees every month.

(c.) A bequeaths an annuity of 500 rupees to B for life, and on B's death to C. B is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees during his life. C, if he survives B, is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees from B's death until his own death.

Period of vesting where will directs that annuity be provided out of proceeds of property, or out of property generally or where money bequeathed to be invested in purchase of annuity.

161. Where the will directs that an annuity shall be provided for any person out of the proceeds of property, or out of property generally, or where money is bequeathed to be invested in the purchase of any annuity for any person, on the testator's death the legacy vests in interest in the legatee, and he is entitled at his option to have an annuity purchased for him or to receive the money appropriated for that purpose by the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A by his will directs that his executors shall out of his property purchase an annuity of 1,000 rupees for B. B is entitled at his option to have an annuity of 1,000 rupees for his life purchased for him, or to receive such a sum as will be sufficient for the purchase of such an annuity.

(b.) A bequeaths a fund to B for his life, and directs that after B's death it shall be laid out in the purchase of an annuity for C. B and C survive the testators. C dies in B's lifetime. On B's death the fund belongs to the representative of C.

Abatement of annuity.

162. Where an annuity is bequeathed, but the assets of the testator are not sufficient to pay all the legacies given by the will, the annuity shall abate in the same proportion as the other pecuniary legacies given by the will.

Where gift of annuity and residuary gift, whole annuity to be first satisfied.

163. Where there is a gift of an annuity and a residuary gift, the whole of the annuity is to be satisfied before any part of the residue is paid to the residuary legatee, and, if necessary, the capital of the testator's estate shall be applied for that purpose.

PART XXVI.

Of Legacies to Creditors and Portioners.

Creditor primâ facie entitled to legacy as well as debt.

164. Where a debtor bequeaths a legacy to his creditor, and it does not appear from the will that the legacy is meant as a satisfaction of the debt, the creditor shall be entitled to the legacy as well as to the amount of the debt.

Child primâ facie entitled to legacy as well as portion.

Illustration.

A, by articles entered into in contemplation of his marriage with B, covenanted that he would pay to each of the daughters of the intended marriage a portion of 20,000 rupees on her marriage. This covenant having been broken, A bequeaths 20,000 rupees to each of the married daughters of himself and B. The legatees are entitled to the benefit of this bequest in addition to their portions.

No ademption by subsequent provision for legatee.

166. No bequest shall be wholly or partially adeemed by a subsequent provision made by settlement or otherwise for the legatee.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 20,000 rupees to his son B. He afterwards gives to B the sum of 20,000 rupees. The legacy is not thereby adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths 40,000 rupees to B, his orphan-niece, whom he had brought up from her infancy. Afterwards on the occasion of B's marriage, A settles upon her the sum of 30,000 rupees. The legacy is not thereby diminished.

PART XXVII.

Of Election.

Circumstances in which election takes place.

167. Where a man, by his will, professes to dispose of something which he has no right to dispose of, the person to whom the thing belongs shall elect either to confirm such disposition or to dissent from it, and in the latter case he shall give up any benefits which may have been provided for him by the will.

Devolution of interest relinquished by owner.

168. The interest so relinquished shall devolve as if it had not been disposed of by the will in favour of the legatee, subject, nevertheless, to the charge of making good to the disappointed legatee the amount or value of the gift attempted to be given to him by the will.

Testator's belief as to his ownership immaterial.

169. This rule will apply whether the testator does or does not believe that which he professes to dispose of by his will to be his own.

Illustrations.

(a.) The farm of Sultánpur was the property of C. A bequeathed it to B, giving a legacy of 1,000 rupees to C. C has elected to retain his farm of Sultánpur, which is worth 800 rupees. C forfeits his legacy of 1,000 rupees, of which 800 rupees goes to B, and the remaining 200 rupees falls into the residuary bequest, or devolves according to the rules of intestate succession, as the case may be.

(b.) A bequeaths an estate to B in case B's elder brother (who is married and has children) shall leave no issue living at his death. A also bequeaths to C a jewel, which belongs to B. B must elect to give up the jewel, or to lose the estate.

(c.) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, and to C an estate which will, under a settlement, belong to B if his elder brother (who is married and has children) shall leave no issue living at his death. B must elect to give up the estate, or to lose the legacy.

(d.) A, a person of the age of 18 domiciled in British India, but owning real property in England, to which C is heir-at-law, bequeaths a legacy to C, and, subject thereto, devises and bequeaths to B "all his property, whatsoever and wheresoever," and dies under 21. The real property in England does not pass by the will. C may claim his legacy without giving up the real property in England.

Bequest for man's benefit how regarded for purpose of election.

170. A bequest for a man's benefit is, for the purpose of election, the same thing as a bequest made to himself.

Illustration.

The farm of Sultánpur Khurd being the property of B, A bequeathed it to C, and bequeathed another farm called Sultánpur Buzurg to his own executors, with a direction that it should be sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of B's debts. B must elect whether he will abide by the will, or keep his farm of Sultánpur Khurd in opposition to it.

Person deriving benefit indirectly not put to election.

171. A person taking no benefit directly under the will, but deriving a benefit under it indirectly, is not put to his election.

C dies intestate, shortly after the testator, and without having made any election. D takes out administration to C, and as administrator elects on behalf of C's estate to take under the will. In that capacity he receives the legacy of 1,000 rupees, and accounts to B for the rents of the lands of Sultánpur which accrued after the death of the testator and before the death of C. In his individual character he retains the lands of Sultánpur in opposition to the will.

B dies intestate, shortly after the testator, without having made an election. C takes out administration to B, and as administrator elects to keep the estate of Sultánpur in opposition to the will, and to relinquish the legacy of 2,000 rupees. C may do this, and yet claim his legacy of 1,000 rupees under the will.

Exception to the six last Rules.—Where a particular gift is expressed in the will to be in lieu of something belonging to the legatee, which is also in terms disposed of by the will, if the legatee claims that thing, he must relinquish the particular gift, but he is not bound to relinquish any other benefit given to him by the will.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Khojás are members of a sect which was originally Hindu but was converted to Muhammadanism about 400 years ago. They still, however, as has been more than once held by the highest Court in the Bombay Presidency, retain their former law to such an extent in matters connected with property and succession that it is to be presumed to apply to them until the contrary is shown. This state of things has at times given rise to great difficulties in litigation between Khojás.

2. In the case of Hirbai v. Gorbai, 12 Bom. High Court Rep. 294, which appears to have occupied the Lower Court for twenty-four sitting days and the Appellate Court for four days, Sir Michael Westropp, C. J., after describing the state of the law, observed as follows :—

"It is, however, evident that the Khojás are not as firmly bound in matters of succession and inheritance by the Hindu law as Muhammadans proper are by the Muhammadan law and the Hindus by the Hindu law, and hence it is that it would not be reasonable to require such stringent proof of a custom of inheritance amongst them differing from ordinary Hindu law as from a Hindu.

"Now, it is manifest that such a state of the law must greatly encourage litigation, and we cannot help thinking that it would be most desirable that the Government should take steps, as was done in the case of the Pársís, to ascertain the views of the majority of the community on the subject of succession, and should then pass an enactment giving effect to those views. Unanimity, of course, could not be expected, but the rules which were found generally to prevail might be made law ; and though the religious differences existing among members of the Khojá caste might create some difficulty, it would not, we think, be insuperable."

3. The Government of Bombay, acting upon this suggestion, appointed about the end of the year 1878 a Commission consisting of four gentlemen taken from the Shia division of the Khojás, which acknowledged His Highness the late Ágha Khán as its spiritual superior, one taken from the Sunni division, and Mr. Spencer, Acting First Judge of the Court of Small Causes, with the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Melvill, of the Bombay High Court, as president.

The Commission took the greatest pains to inform themselves of the customs and views of both divisions of the Khojá sect in the Presidency of Bombay and elsewhere, and after much consideration and discussion agreed upon a draft Bill, subject to a dissent on a few specific points which was signed by His Highness Ágha Alí Sháh, son of His Highness the late Ágha Khán, and Mr. Dhurrumsey Poonjabhoy but not by Mr. Jairajbhoy Peerboy and Mr. Rahimtula Syance, the two other Shia members of the Commission. That draft, having been submitted to the Government of Bombay by the president on the 23rd of December, 1879, and approved of by that Government, was forwarded to the Government of India, and forms the basis of the present Bill.

4. It will be convenient to refer to the provisions of the present Bill as nearly as possible in their order, noticing in their proper place the few points in regard to which His Highness Ágha Alí Sháh and Mr. Dhurrumsey Poonjabhoy differed from the majority of the Commission, and the points of substantive importance in which the present Bill deviates from the draft framed by the Commission.

5. The first provision calling for notice is section 2, which defines the application of the Act—a matter which was not clearly provided for in the Bill prepared by the Commission. The main enactment of the section is that succession to the property, whether moveable or immoveable, in British India of a Khojá dying on or after the first day of January, 1885, shall be regulated by the rules contained in the Act wherever he may have had his domicile at the time of his death. So far as regards immoveable property, this provision coincides with section 5 of the Indian Succession Act, but, as regards moveable property, it involves an important deviation from that section, inasmuch as it applies the Act to all successions to such property though the deceased person may have been domiciled outside British India at the time of his death.

As the rule, which makes the law of the domicile of a deceased person regulate the succession to his moveable property, is not merely the rule of the Indian Succession Act but has obtained very general acceptance elsewhere, it seems desirable to state the reasons which have led the Government of India to think that it is not suitable to the Khojá community.

6. The choice as regards succession to moveable property appears to lie between the law of the domicile of the deceased and the law of the situs of the assets. The objections urged against the latter in Western countries are chiefly that a man's moveables are apt to be scattered over many jurisdictions each having a readily ascertainable law of its own, and that accordingly, if the law of the situs is made applicable to them, his estate will be broken up into many fragments, all governed by different laws; that a man's moveables may change their place; that the most important class of them, goods employed in commerce, are constantly changing their place; and that accordingly, if the law of the situs is applied, it will be impossible for him to foresee the particular law under which they will fall upon his death; and lastly, that the rule of the law of the situs does not clearly provide for that portion of the assets which consists of debts or other obligations existing in favour of the deceased. To avoid these difficulties it has been generally agreed to adopt the law of the domicile of the deceased for the whole of his moveable estate. Various attempts have been made to rest this rule on some á priori principle; but it would seem to have had its actual origin in mere considerations of convenience.

7. Looking to the arguments by which it is supported, and to the peculiar circumstances of the Khojá community, it is questionable, to say the least, whether such a rule would meet the requirements of their case. The places beyond the limits of British India, as, for example, Kutch, the Persian Gulf and Zanzibar, in which any considerable number of Khojás is to be found have no law such as can properly be called a territorial law of succession. The tribunals in such places, in so far as they make any rational attempt to apply a law at all, would apply the personal law of the parties, and that in the case of Khojás is ex hypothesi altogether unsettled and unascertainable. There is thus in the case of Khojás domiciled out of British India practically speaking no law of the situs of the foreign assets to conflict with the law which would apply to the British Indian assets, and no law of the domicile to which recourse could be had; and, therefore, to give the law of the domicile a preference over the Indian law would be simply to substitute a congeries of indefinite and half-established customs for a law, to the application of which there could be no reasonable objection.

It may be added that, in the absence of a law of the domicile, the case is very analogous to those cases in which it is impossible to fix the domicile of the deceased, and the solution which Lord Alvanley appears to have suggested in a case of this latter class was to fall back, as is proposed in this case, on the law of the situs of the property; in other words, to put moveables on the same footing as immoveables.

8. If this solution is adopted, and the Indian law is applied to all moveables left by a deceased Khojá in British India, without regard to his domicile, and if, moreover, the same rule is applied, as it naturally would be, in cases arising in Consular jurisdictions in the Persian Gulf, Zanzibar and elsewhere, this further advantage will probably in time be gained, that the law in British India will come to be adopted as a personal law applicable to Khojás in all foreign States in this part of the world.

9. The above remarks apply equally to intestate and to testamentary succession. A question might indeed be raised as to whether a testamentary disposition made beyond the limits of British India should as regards its form be made absolutely subject to British Indian law; but, seeing that the effect of taking any other course would certainly be to admit oral dispositions, it seems clear that the risk of failures of justice will be on the whole less by subjecting completely to our law all dispositions, wherever made, of moveable property in British India.

10. In connection with the definitions it is convenient to notice one of the few important questions on which any difference of opinion has arisen, namely, the question as to the status to be assigned to a woman who is not a Khojá but who is legally married to a Khojá according to the rules of the Muhammadan law, and to her children by him.

The Khojás of the Sunni Jamát, though apparently unwilling to go so far as to recognize any other than a Khojá widow as entitled to inherit from her husband, proposed that the sons of a Khojá by a wife who is not a Khojá should have some share in the inheritance. To this the Khojás of the Shia Jamát would not agree, and the Commission ultimately adopted as a compromise the plan of assigning to the offspring of the marriages in question a status nominally intermediate between those of legitimacy and illegitimacy and giving them in the definition-clauses the designation of "alien sons", but allowing them nothing more than illegitimate sons in the later sections of their Bill. It is stated that the Khojás as a rule are very exclusive and rarely take wives from outside their own community, and so long as this state of things continues the mode in which this point is dealt with is not of great practical moment; but there is an important principle involved, against which even the compromise adopted by the Commission appears to the Government of India to offend. The exclusion of the non-Khojá wife from inheritance and the degradation of her sons to a position altogether lower than that of the legitimate son involves a view as to restrictions on marriage which, even though it may have obtained acceptance with a majority of the Khojá sect, and though the Government has no desire to interfere with it, it is manifestly undesirable to have affirmed by the legislature. The present Bill will accordingly be found to contain no reference either in its definition-clauses or elsewhere to the so-called "alien son." It defines "son" to be a legitimate son and leaves "widow" undefined, and then proceeds to declare the rights of sons and widows, trusting to the Courts to decide, as they will on principles lying outside the law of succession, who are legally entitled to the status of sons and widows.

11. Chapter II of the Bill deals with "succession to the undivided property of a male Khojá dying intestate," and in the previous chapter "undivided property" has been defined as meaning "a share in property belonging to an undivided family." The Bill prepared by the Commission purported to define the phrase "undivided family," but the definition proposed has on inquiry been found to be unsafe. The undivided family among the Khojás appears to come into existence chiefly in connection with trade, and would seem to be an institution of a peculiar nature, somewhat resembling the undivided family among the Hindus; but, on the other hand, it is clear, from the rules laid down in certain sections of the Bill prepared by the Commission, and from the papers submitted with that Bill, that it differs in important respects from the Hindu undivided family. What exactly it is, and when property is to be regarded as its undivided property, it is difficult to ascertain from the papers before the Government of India; but, judging from the analogous case in Hindu law, it would seem that these are matters which it would be almost hopeless to attempt to define in an Act of the legislature; nor does it appear to be necessary to define them in a Succession Act. It may well be assumed that a fundamental distinction which goes to the root of the family constitution, and which is not confined in its operation to matters of succession, but applies also inter vivos, is established outside this Bill. For these reasons, it has been thought best to make no attempt to define "undivided family" or "undivided property" in the present Bill.

12. It will be observed, on comparing Chapters II and III, that the only peculiarity connected with the intestate succession to undivided property is (section 6) that, in default of legitimate lineal male descendants of the intestate within the fourth degree, the property is equally divided among all the male members of the undivided family living at his death.

13. Chapter III of the Bill treats of "succession to the separate property of a male Khojá dying intestate," and the order of succession marked out in sections 7 to 20 will be found to be based on that of the Hindu law.

The subjoined statement has been prepared by the Hon'ble Mr. Melvill, the President of the Commission, with a view to showing at a glance the extent to which the two differ—

Order of succession according to Hindu law.	Order of succession for Khojás proposed by the Bill.
1. Sons.	1. Sons.
2. Grandsons.	2. Grandsons.
3. Great-grandsons.	3. Great-grandsons.
4. Widow.	4. Great-great-grandsons.
5. Daughters.	5. Father.
6. Daughters' sons.	6. Mother.
7. Mother.	7. Widow.
8. Father.	8. Daughters.
9. Brothers.	9. Daughters' sons. }
10. Half-brothers.	10. Brothers. }
11. Brothers' sons.	11. Sons' daughters.
12. Half-brothers' sons.	12. Brothers' sons.
13. Grandmother.	13. Half-brothers.
14. Sister (under the Mayukha).	14. Half-brothers' sons.
15. Grandfather.	15. Grandfather.
16. More distant relatives.	16. Grandmother.
	17. Paternal uncle.
	18. Sister.
	19. More distant relatives.

"It will be seen," Mr. Melvill observes, "that the only very noticeable point of difference is that among the Khojás the father and mother are elevated to a rank in the order of succession superior to that of the widow. This precedence of the mother has been judicially settled in the case of Hirbai v. *Gorbai, already referred to; and although the Khojá members of the Commission were not unanimously in favour of the view taken in that case, they all agreed that, having once been judicially determined, the rule should not be disturbed."

* Reported 12 Bom. H. C. Rep., 294.

14. Section 20 of the present Bill differs in one important particular from the corresponding section (29) of the Bill prepared by the Commission.

The latter admitted to the succession only those of the "more distant relatives" of the intestate who were on the father's side, and confined it to such of them as are within the seventh degree of kindred. On failure of this limited class of distant kindred, section 42 gave the property "to the Jamát of that sect of the Khojás to which the intestate belonged at the time of his death, to be held and applied according to the customs of the said Jamát." Even this did not satisfy the two dissenting members of the Commission and some of the other adherents of His Highness the late Aghá Khán, who, as Imám, was the person chiefly interested in the succession of the Jamát. They contended that the Jamát should come in immediately after the nearer relations.

15. Apart from this fundamental objection in point of principle, there appear to be practical objections to the proposal as formulated by the Commission. The Jamát is said to be an assembly in council of all the adult male members of the Khojá community of the place, and it is not unlikely that doubts would arise, in connection with matters of religious belief, residence, attendance at the Jamát, and so forth, as to the particular Jamát (if any) to which the deceased person belonged. Similar doubts might also arise as to who were the other persons actually belonging to the Jamát to which the deceased belonged, so as to take the property. There might further be doubts as to how the property of a deceased intestate Khojá is to be held, and the objects to which it is to be applied. It is true that the section proposed by the Commission says that the property is to be held and applied "according to the customs of the said Jamát." But from a judgment of Sir J. Arnould in the case marginally noted, it would appear that there are no customs to look to. Though a Jamát collects large sums of money through its officers, it only does so on behalf of the Imám; the money collected is passed on to him; and if the Jamát wants any portion of it, even for the expenses of its Jamát-kháná (the council-hall or guildhall of the community), it can procure it only as a grant from the Imám. It appears to be absolutely in the discretion of the Imám to spend the money as he pleases, and as a matter of fact he spends a large portion of it, or at least is said by Sir J. Arnould to have done so at the time the judgment was delivered, on his own private purposes. Indeed, in a set of draft rules of succession for Shia Khojás submitted by His Highness Aghá Alí Sháh the succession of the Jamát is treated as the same thing with the succession of the Imám. The Jamát, therefore, does not seem to have any property or control over property, and it is not clear how there can be any custom governing the application of property by it. It has been argued that no such difficulties as those suggested ordinarily arise at present, but it would be clearly impossible to put the succession of the Jamát on a legislative basis without defining its conditions and incidents, and it would be equally impossible to place the property at the absolute disposal of any individual in whatever degree of veneration he might be held.

Dayá Muhammad and others versus H. H. Aghá Khán and others (page 323 of the Bombay High Court Reports, Vol. XII).

16. For these reasons section 20 of the present Bill extends the succession to relatives of the intestate both on the father's and on the mother's side without limit of degree, and it may be added that section 48 applies the ordinary rule, which makes the Crown the ultimate heir, in the rare case in which an owner of property may die intestate and leave no person entitled to succeed under the previous sections.

17. Section 21 is one of the leading sections of the Bill. It provides in effect that, when a female inherits under any of the foregoing sections, she shall, if certain near male relatives are living and are thus postponed to her, take the property only as "restricted owner"—a position to be presently explained at length. With this section should be read section 49, from which it will be seen that in other cases she takes the same interest in the property and has the same powers in respect of it as if she were a male.

18. Chapter IV treats of succession to the absolute property of a female Khojá dying intestate, that is to say, the succession to such of her property as belongs to her otherwise than as restricted owner. The provisions of this chapter call for no remark. Mr. Melvill states that they differ from the Hindu law but that they are approved by all classes of the Khojás, and are not, he thinks, open to any objection. The particulars in which they deviate from the Hindu law or the reasons for the deviations are not explained. They have been accepted by the Government of India as settled by the Commission, such details only being filled in after consultation with the local authorities as seemed necessary to give effect to what is understood to be the intention of those who framed them.

19. Chapter V, which treats of "property which a female takes as restricted owner and the further succession to the same," calls for more detailed notice.

It applies not only in the ordinary case of property taken by a female as restricted owner under Chapter III (supra, paragraph 17), but also in cases where she may take a similar interest in property under section 23 (2), section 24 (1), section 27 and section 39.

Its provisions are merely a development, with the requisite amplifications and with the addition of the necessary machinery, of the corresponding provisions of the Bill framed by the Commission. It has been settled in consultation with the local authorities and with a view to giving effect to what are understood to be the views of the Commission; but, having regard to the novelty and complication of the subject, it is not unlikely that when subjected to criticism it will be found susceptible of improvement in many particulars.

The limited estate taken by a Khojá female under this Bill resembles the estate taken by a Hindu widow, but there are many important differences between them. Mr. Melvill observes that the Khojá female estate is the more restricted of the two, but on this point he says the Khojás hold very strong views which he is of opinion must be respected.

20. In proceeding to notice the details of the chapter, the first point calling for attention is the phrase "restricted owner." It has been chosen merely on the ground that it is new and connotes nothing, and it is not unlikely that some more appropriate phrase may be suggested. The phrase "life-estate" and its correlative "reversion," used in the Bombay Bill, are not only open to the objection that ordinarily lies against all terms imported from another legal system, but further, as has been constantly observed of them in the case of the Hindu widow's estate, they suggest an altogether false analogy. The position, if it is necessary to illustrate it by reference to English law, is rather like that of a fee-simple estate subject to an executory devise.

21. As regards the attempt made in the Bill to define the estate, it will be observed that section 28 enacts that the female shall be absolutely entitled to the use of, and the income accruing from, the property during her life, and, except as otherwise provided by the Act, shall have all the other rights and powers of an absolute owner.

An objection has been taken to this on the ground that money saved by a widow from the income of the property should not belong to her absolutely but should go to her husband's heirs.

This contention is not based on any alleged actual practice, but is put forward merely as a "necessary consequence of the invariable custom" which limits the widow's interest in the corpus of her husband's property to the time during which she remains unmarried.

Now, not only is it not a necessary consequence of the custom in question, but it is, as admitted by the objectors themselves, in a certain sense illogical; for why should a person who has absolute power to dispose of the income as it comes in, in whatever way she pleases, be restricted from dealing with her savings from it?

Again, the only effect of adopting the proposed suggestion would, as the objectors themselves admit, generally be that the widow would squander the income as it came in; and, in the rare cases in which she allowed some of it to accumulate, the probability is that litigation would result from the difficulty of identifying the fund and separating it from the rest of her property. For these reasons the section has been allowed to stand.

22. Section 30 defines the obligations of the restricted owner as regards—

(a) the preservation of the substance of the property for those who are to come after her; and

(b) the protection of the title.

As regards "waste," it stands on a footing altogether peculiar in the case of the Hindu widow; and clause (a) of this section has been drawn with a view to placing it on a somewhat similar footing in the case of the restricted owner.

23. As regards the powers of alienation, in the limitations on which the restricted nature of the estate chiefly consists, the only powers of alienation for any time beyond the life of the restricted owner allowed to her by the Bill, besides a limited power of leasing conferred by section 29, are those specified in section 31, which runs as follows:—

Restricted owner's power of transfer.

"31. A female taking property as restricted owner shall have power to transfer the same, so that the transfer may have effect beyond her life, when, the income being insufficient, such transfer is necessary in order to raise money for any of the following purposes, namely:—

"(a) to discharge any of the obligations imposed by section 30;*

* Viz., obligations to preserve the substance of the property and protect the title.

"(b) to discharge the debts of the absolute owner from whom the property descended;

"(c) to provide for the maintenance of any persons entitled under this Act to have their maintenance provided for out of the property, for the payment of any marriage expenses or funeral expenses payable under this Act out of the property, and for the performance of any ordinary family ceremonies; and

"(d) to support herself where she has no other sufficient means of support."

24. It has been urged by the two dissenting members of the Commission and by some other adherents of His Highness the Imám that a mother taking a restricted estate should have larger powers of alienation and that she or a widow taking a like estate should be empowered to alienate for religious objects; that is, as explained in the set of draft rules submitted by His Highness Ághá Alí Sháh, to give the property to the Imám; but, upon considering the arguments adduced and consulting the local authorities, the Government of India have determined to uphold the decision of the majority of the Commission, which is against the concession of any such powers.

25. In order to avoid as far as possible the great difficulties which arise in the case of a Hindu widow exceeding her power of alienation, an alienation in excess of the power has (section 29 of the Bill) been made absolutely void for any period beyond the restricted owner's life, except where the purchaser takes for consideration and without notice of the ownership being restricted. This, no doubt, standing alone, would place too great difficulties in the way of alienation; but sufficient relief will probably be afforded by the power to apply to a Court for sanction, which is given by section 32. It may be objected that it is undesirable to force people to resort to a Court in such matters; but the case is one of a choice of evils, and it is probably better that they should resort to the Court in every case where there is any room for doubt than run the risk of being involved in troublesome and expensive litigation later on.

A Court dealing with a application under section 32 is empowered (section 33) to accord its sanction to the transfer subject to the condition that the money thereby raised shall be paid into Court or to trustees appointed by the Court, and to give such further directions as it may think fit with a view to ensuring that the money shall be applied to the purpose for which it is raised, or that any balance that is not so applied shall be secured for the benefit of those entitled after the restricted owner.

26. It will be observed that no provision is made in the draft for alienation with the consent of the so-called "reversioners." This matter is one which gives rise to great difficulties in the case of the Hindu widow, and it seems impossible, having regard to the system of succession established by the Bill, to provide for it in any satisfactory manner. If provision had only to be made to meet the case of "reversioners" who claim under section 37 (1) and section 38 (3) by descent from the last absolute owner, the matter would be much simpler than in the case of the Hindu widow, inasmuch as these "reversioners" would always be known living persons or persons who would claim through them; but there are, besides these, the "reversioners" mentioned in section 38 (1) and (2), and it is thus impossible to fix upon any person whose consent would be sufficient.

27. Further, even if we were, as has been suggested, to waive this objection, and accept the consent of a merely presumptive "reversioner," there is another difficulty, namely, that the presumptive "reversioner" might (see section 39 of the Bill) be another restricted owner, possibly an old woman on the verge of the grave, whose prospect of succeeding would be extremely small. There might be several such persons intervening between the restricted owner and the first person who would take as absolute owner. We could hardly rest satisfied with anything short of the consent of this last person and all the intervening ones, and thus we should be landed in a considerable complication, leading in many cases to no very satisfactory result, inasmuch as the interest of the first person who would take as absolute owner, and to whose consent we would chiefly look, would often be of a remotely contingent nature. It is, of course, on economical grounds desirable to provide a means of freeing the property from the limited ownership, but the advantage would be dearly purchased if the basis of the purchaser's title were to be complicated in this way.

28. As regards the sale of property in execution of a decree against a restricted owner, it will be seen that the effect of section 34 of the Bill is that a person lending money for any of the purposes mentioned in section 31 can sell in execution nothing more than the so-called "life-interest" of the restricted owner, unless his loan is secured by a mortgage. The position of the restricted owner as regards anything beyond her so-called life-interest is, in fact, in this particular, somewhat similar to that of an English executor with power to charge the real estate. If it were otherwise, there might arise, in cases of execution for unsecured debts, the same difficult questions which the preceding sections are intended to shut out in cases of voluntary alienation.

29. It will be observed that, by sections 37 (2) and 38 (4) of the Bill the Crown is postponed to the general heirs of the restricted owner. This appears to be right, though it is gathered from the case of The Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narrainapah (8 Moo. I. A. 529),—this precise point was not there decided,—that it is otherwise in the case of a Hindu woman's estate.

30. Sections 35 and 36 in effect provide that the restricted owner shall represent the property in judicial proceedings and compromises of disputes and for the purposes of laws of limitation and prescription, so as to bind those who take after her.

31. Sections 37 to 39, which regulate the devolution of property after the death of the restricted owner, have been drawn with a view to carry out what is understood to be the intentions of the Commission.

Their main provisions are that—

(b) when the restricted owner has been married, the property shall on her death go to certain of her descendants, and if there are no such descendants shall devolve as just stated.

32. From section 39 it will be seen, as already observed, that property may devolve upon two or more restricted owners in succession. This is to be regretted, but it seems to be an essential part of the scheme.

33. Section 40 regulates the legal relations arising where two or more widows of a deceased Khojá take his property together as restricted owners, and provides that there shall be a right of survivorship between them.

34. Section 41 provides that a widow marrying again after her husband's death shall not be entitled to take as restricted owner his property or any property of any of his lineal descendants which has descended to them from him, and that, if a widow taking any such property as restricted owner subsequently marries again, she shall be deemed for the purposes of certain sections of the chapter to have died. One effect of this latter provision is that the restricted ownership of the widow ceases on her re-marriage.

35. Coming now to Chapter VI, relating to the wills of Khojás, it will be observed that all matters connected with probate and letters of administration are in the case of Khojás, as in the case of other persons not subject to the Indian Succession Act, left to be dealt with under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. The result of this is that the matters remaining to be provided for under this chapter are in the main the same as those which are provided for by the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, as amended by the Act just mentioned; and, as a matter of fact, the specification of the sections of the Indian Succession Act made applicable to the wills of Khojás by this chapter is based on the specification contained in the Hindu Wills Act as cut down by the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. There are, however, some important differences between the two which call for explanation here.

36. The most important of these differences is connected with the limitation on the powers of testamentary disposition. The specification of the sections of the Indian Succession Act applicable to Hindus, &c., contained in the Hindu Wills Act comprises several sections which either confer, or assume the existence of, a power of disposition in favour of unborn persons, but the Act contains a proviso to the effect that nothing therein contained shall authorize any Hindu, &c., to create in property any interest which he could not previously have created, and the Calcutta High Court have held in the recent case of Alungamonjori Dabee v. Sonamoni Dabee (I. L. R. 8 Cal. 637) that the effect of that proviso is to cut down the power of disposition, which the sections in question confer or assume to exist, to the limits imposed on a testator by the Hindu law, that is to say, as held in the well-known Tagore case, to a mere power of disposition in favour of persons who are either in fact or in contemplation of law in existence at the death of the testator.

If, on the other hand, it was observed, it should appear that the rule prohibiting dispositions in favour of unborn persons had, as a matter of fact, been recognised and observed among the Khojás, or if, there being no recognized rule or established practice either way, it should be considered that the powers of disposition allowed by the Succession Act were larger than were needed for the requirements of Khojás, it would probably be desirable to limit the power of disposition in some such way as it is limited by the Hindu law as interpreted in the Tagore case. The system of intestate succession established by the Bill was in certain respects a complicated one; and if to this were to be added a power of making complicated dispositions by will, it was to be feared that we should bring about, in regard to the property of this wealthy and important sect, a state of things which it was desirable if possible to avoid.

any attempt had hitherto been made among them to create by will an interest in favour of an unborn person; that there was thus a tabula rasa; and that it was quite open to the legislature to legislate on the subject as it thought best without any fear of violating an existing custom or of running counter to any prejudice or desire of the Khojá community.

This being so, the Government of India have come to the conclusion that it is undesirable to confer on Khojás any power of testamentary disposition in favour of persons not in existence at the time of the testator's death; and accordingly all portions of the Indian Succession Act which confer, or assume the existence of, such a power have, as far as practicable, been omitted, a proviso at the same time being inserted to the effect that a bequest by a Khojá in favour of any person who has not come into existence at the death of the testator shall be void.

40. The remaining differences between this Bill and the Hindu Wills Act as regards the provisions of the Indian Succession Act applied by them are of less importance.

It may, however, be stated that the following additional provisions of the Succession Act have been made applicable, namely:—

(a) section 47, giving a father power to appoint a guardian by will—a power the existence of which was assumed by the Commission;

(b) sections 52 and 53, relating to privileged wills;

(c) section 84, which provides that, when property is bequeathed to a person and words are added which describe a class of persons but do not denote them as direct objects of a distinct and independent gift, such person is entitled to the whole of the interest of the testator therein unless a contrary intention appears by the will;

(d) section 104, which limits directions for accumulation.

41. The only other point calling for notice in connection with this chapter is that section 43, following the proviso to section 10 of the Transfer of Property Act, confers a power of bequeathing property to or for the benefit of a woman, so that she shall not have power to transfer or charge the same or her beneficial interest therein. The existence of such a power appears to have been assumed in the Bill prepared by the Commission.

42. Chapter VII, relating to maintenance and marriage and funeral expenses, calls for little notice. There was some obscurity about the corresponding provisions of the Bill prepared by the Commission, and this chapter has now been settled in accordance with what is understood from the local authorities to have been the original intention. It is believed that the only change of a substantive nature made here is in section 46, where provision has been made for the maintenance, &c., of a daughter while she remains unmarried. The chapter, however, will probably be found open to further amendment when it has been more fully considered.

43. Section 47, which provides for the recovery of sums due under this chapter, has been drawn with a view to precluding, as far as possible, the difficulties which have arisen under the Hindu law in regard to claims for maintenance, and in particular as to how far a person having a right to maintenance is entitled to follow the property of the deceased. As regards this last point, it has been thought best to place the claim for maintenance, &c., on the footing of a debt, postponing it, however, to debts proper. This will not absolutely remove all difficulty, but, by bringing the case within an existing class, it will avoid the creation of a new difficulty.

SCHEDULE.—ACTS REPEALED.

A Bill to amend the Law relating to Courts in the Panjáb.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to Courts in the Panjáb; and whereas the Secretary of State for India in Council has given his previous sanction to the passing of this Act; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Panjáb Courts' Act, 1884. (Short title.)

(2) It extends to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb; and (Local extent.)

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of October, 1884. (Commencement.)

2. On and from that day the Acts mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent specified in the third column thereof. (Repeal of Acts.)

3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context— (Definitions.)

(1) "Assistant Judge" includes a Deputy Commissioner invested with the powers of an Assistant Judge.

(2) "Assistant Commissioner" includes Extra Assistant Commissioner.

(3) "Revenue Court" means the Court of a Financial Commissioner, of a Commissioner, of a Deputy Commissioner, of an Assistant Commissioner or of a Tahsíldár exercising jurisdiction in suits of any of the classes mentioned in section 48.

(4) "Interlocutory order" means an order not having the force of a decree under the Civil Procedure Code or any other enactment, nor being a judgment, order to give security, order of acquittal or order under the Code of Criminal Procedure for the disposal of property or the proceeds thereof, passed or made by a Criminal Court. XIV of 1882. X of 1872.

The Panjáb Courts Bill, 1884.
(Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of the Courts.—Sections 4-16.)

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE COURTS.

4. Besides the Courts established under any other law for the time being in force, there shall be the following grades of Courts (namely) :— (Grades of Courts.)

(1) the Chief Court;
(2) the Divisional Court;
(3) the Court of the Assistant Judge;
(4) the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the first class;
(5) the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the second class;
(6) the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the third class;
(7) the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the fourth class.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 5.]

5. The Chief Court shall consist of three or more Judges who shall be appointed by the Governor General in Council, and shall hold their offices during his pleasure, and of whom one at least shall always be a barrister of not less than five years' standing. (Constitution of Chief Court and appointment and tenure of Judges.)

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 6.]

6. The Judges of the Chief Court shall have rank and precedence according to the seniority of their appointments as such Judges: (Rank and precedence of Judges of Chief Court.)

Provided that a Judge permanently appointed shall be deemed senior to an officiating Judge.

7. (1) Each Divisional Court shall consist of two or more Judges who shall be appointed by the Local Government, and may be transferred, suspended or removed by the Local Government. (Constitution of Divisional Courts.)

(2) The Commissioner of a Division may be appointed Judge of a Divisional Court, in addition to his other duties.

8. (1) When the Commissioner of a Division is one of the Judges of a Divisional Court, he shall be deemed the Senior Judge of the Court. (Seniority of Judges of a Divisional Court.)

(2) The seniority of the other Judges shall be regulated by the seniority of their appointments as Judges of a Divisional Court:

Provided that a Judge permanently appointed shall be deemed senior to an officiating Judge.

9. (1) The Assistant Judges and the Subordinate Judges of the first class shall be appointed, and may be transferred, suspended or removed, by the Local Government. (Appointment of Assistant Judges and Subordinate Judges.)

(2) The Subordinate Judges of the second, third and fourth classes shall be appointed, and may be transferred, suspended or removed, by the Chief Court, subject to the control of the Local Government, and to rules which the Local Government is hereby empowered to make as to the qualifications of persons to be appointed to the office of Subordinate Judge.

(3) The present Munsifs shall be deemed to have been duly appointed, and shall be, Subordinate Judges under this Act, and their classification as Subordinate Judges of the second, third or fourth class shall be determined by the Chief Court.

10. Every person appointed under this Act to be or to act as Judge of a Divisional Court, Assistant Judge or Subordinate Judge shall, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court to which he may, from time to time, be posted, have the powers of a Judge of a Divisional Court, of the Court of an Assistant Judge, or of the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the fourth class, as the case may be. (Certain powers to be exercised ex officio.)

(2) Any officer invested with powers under this section may exercise such powers in any district or sub-division of a district to which he may, from time to time, be posted.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 9.]

12. The Local Government may, from time to time, confer upon any person all or any of the powers of a Court of any of the five grades last mentioned in section 4, and may withdraw any powers so conferred. (Any person may be invested with certain powers.)

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 10.]

13. (1) The Local Government may direct any three or more persons invested with powers of the same description under section 12 to sit together as a bench; and those powers shall, while such direction remains in force, be exercised by the bench so constituted, and not otherwise. (Exercise of such powers by benches.)

(2) The decision of the majority of the members of a bench constituted under this section shall be deemed to be the decision of the bench.

14. Except for the purpose of exercising control over any other Court, any person or any bench exercising the powers of a Court of any grade under section 12 or section 13 shall be deemed to be a Court of such grade for all the purposes of this Act. (Persons and benches exercising such powers to be deemed Courts of corresponding grades.)

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 12.]

15. Any person or bench invested under section 11, section 12 or section 13 with the powers of a Court of any grade shall exercise such powers and discharge the functions of such Court within such local limits and in such classes of cases as the Local Government may, from time to time, direct. (Such powers where and in what cases to be exercised.)

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 13.]

16. The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, fix the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Court of any of the six grades last mentioned in section 4. (Power to alter local limits of jurisdiction.)

The Panjáb Courts Bill, 1884.
(Chapter III.—Of the Jurisdiction and Powers of the Chief Court.—Sections 17-24.)

CHAPTER III.

OF THE JURISDICTION AND POWERS OF THE CHIEF COURT.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 14.]

Civil appeals from subordinate Courts.

17. The Chief Court shall be deemed, for the purposes of all enactments for the time being in force, to be the highest Civil Court of appeal in the territories to which this Act extends.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 15; Cf. Crim. Pro. Code, ss. 4 (i) and 266.]

Criminal, appellate and revisional jurisdiction.

Power to try European British subjects.

18. The Chief Court shall be the highest Court of criminal appeal or revision in the said territories, and shall have power, as a Court of original jurisdiction, to try European British subjects committed to it for trial.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 16; Civil Pro. Code, s. 25.]

Power to withdraw and try, or to transfer, suits.

Appeals from original jurisdiction of Chief Court.

20. Except as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from any decree or order passed or made by the Chief Court—

(a) in exercise of the original jurisdiction conferred by section 19; or

(b) in exercise of any other original jurisdiction of a civil nature to which the Chief Court may by rule extend this section:

Provided that such appeal shall lie only in the cases and in manner following (that is to say):—

(c) when such decree or order is made by a single Judge, an appeal shall lie, either to a bench consisting of two other Judges, or to the full bench, as the Court may, by general rule or special order, from time to time, direct;

(d) when such decree or order is made by a bench of Judges not being the full bench, and such Judges differ in opinion, the appeal shall lie from such decree or order to the full bench.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 19, extended to Divisional Courts.]

Delegation of powers to its members.

21. (1) Except as by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force otherwise provided, the Chief Court may make rules to provide in such manner as it thinks fit for the exercise by one or more of its Judges of any powers conferred on it, and for the exercise by one or more of the Judges of a Divisional Court of any of the powers conferred on that Court, by this Act, or by any other enactment for the time being in force:

Proviso.

Provided that no order not being an interlocutory order, and no decree, sentence or decision of any Court, shall be reversed by any Judge of the Chief Court or of a Divisional Court sitting alone.

(2) When the Chief Court consists of more than three Judges, it may make rules declaring what number of Judges, not being less than three, shall constitute a full bench of the Court, and may by these rules prescribe the mode of determining what Judges shall sit as a full bench, when a full bench sitting becomes necessary.

(3) The Chief Court may, from time to time, delegate to one of its Judges the power of determining, subject to any rules made under this section, what Judge in each case shall sit alone and what Judges of the Court shall constitute any bench of Judges.

Rule of decision when Judges differ.

22. When there is a difference of opinion among the Judges composing any bench of the Chief Court on any question arising before such Judges in the exercise by them of any powers conferred on such Court by this Act, or by any other enactment for the time being in force, such question shall, except as otherwise provided by any enactment for the time being in force, be decided as follows, that is to say:

If the number of such Judges concurring in one opinion upon such question is larger than the number holding any other opinion upon such question, the decision shall be in accordance with the opinion of such larger number.

If the numbers of such Judges holding two or more opinions on such question are equal, the following rules shall be observed, that is to say:—

(a) if such bench is the full bench, or is exercising any original jurisdiction to which section 20 applies or is extended, the decision upon such question shall be in accordance with such one of these opinions as is held by the Judge who has precedence under section 6;

(b) in other cases the bench before which such question has arisen shall refer the same to the full bench, and the full bench shall decide the same in accordance with the rules hereinbefore contained, and the case in which such question has arisen shall be disposed of by the bench referring such question in accordance with the decision of the full bench thereon.

Power to refer question to full bench.

23. (1) Any single Judge of the Chief Court or any bench of Judges of such Court (not being the full bench) exercising any powers conferred on the Chief Court by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force may refer for the decision of the full bench any question of law or custom having the force of law, or the construction of any document, or the admissibility of any evidence arising before such Judge or bench of Judges.

(2) Any Judge or bench making a reference on any question in any case under this section shall dispose of such case in accordance with the decision of the full bench on such question.

Power to appoint ministerial officers.

24. (1) The Chief Court may, from time to time, appoint a Registrar and Deputy Registrar and such other ministerial officers as may be necessary for the administration of justice by such Court, and for the exercise and performance of the powers and duties conferred and imposed on it by this Act.

(2) The appointment of the Registrar shall be subject to the sanction of the Local Government.

The Panjáb Courts Bill, 1884.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 23.]

Powers and duties of such officers.

25. The officers so appointed shall exercise such powers and discharge such duties of a ministerial nature as the Chief Court may, from time to time, direct.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 24.]

Suspension and dismissal of such officers.

26. Any such officer may be suspended or dismissed from his office by order of the Chief Court:

Provided that neither the Registrar nor the Deputy Registrar shall be dismissed without the previous sanction of the Local Government.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 25.]

Superintendence and control of subordinate Courts.

27. The general superintendence and control over all Courts of the six grades last mentioned in section 4, and over all Courts of Small Causes, shall be vested in, and such Courts shall be subordinate to, the Chief Court.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 26.]

Power to make rules as to petition-writers.

28. (1) The Chief Court may, from time to time, make rules—

(a) declaring what persons shall be permitted to practise as petition-writers in the Courts of the Panjáb;

(b) regulating the conduct of persons so practising.

(2) Whoever breaks any rule made under this section and having the force of law shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 27; see also Criminal Procedure Code, s. 553, and Civil Procedure Code, s. 652.]

Power to make rules as to other matters.

29. The Chief Court may, from time to time,—

(a) make rules consistent with this Act conferring and imposing on the ministerial officers of the Courts subject to its superintendence such powers and duties of a ministerial nature as it thinks fit, and regulating the mode in which powers and duties so conferred and imposed shall be exercised and performed;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act to determine in what cases pleaders practising in such Courts shall be permitted to address such Courts in English;

(c) prescribe forms for seals to be used by such Courts;

(d) prescribe forms for such books, entries, statistics and accounts as it thinks necessary to be kept, made or compiled in such Courts or submitted to any authority;

(e) make rules consistent with this Act providing for the inspection of such Courts and the supervision of the working thereof;

(f) make such rules consistent with this Act, institute such enquiries and submit such recommendations to the Local Government as it may think fit, with a view to promoting the efficiency of the judicial and ministerial officers of such Courts and maintaining proper discipline among such officers.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 28.]

Registers, books, accounts and statements to be kept and furnished by Chief Court.

30. (1) The Chief Court shall keep such registers, books and accounts as may be necessary for the transaction of the business of the Court, and shall submit to the Local Government such of the same registers, books and accounts, and statements of the work done in the Court, as may, from time to time, be required by the said Government.

(2) The Chief Court shall also comply with such requisitions as may, from time to time, be made by the Governor General in Council, or by the Local Government, for certified copies of, or extracts from, the records of the Courts.

[Sec. 29, Act XVII of 1877, and ss. 638 and 639, Civ. Pro. Code.]

Chief Court to take evidence and record judgments according to its own rules, and to frame forms for proceedings.

31. (1) The Chief Court, when sitting as a Court of civil judicature, shall take evidence and record judgments and orders in such manner as it, by rule, from time to time, directs, and may, from time to time, frame forms for any proceeding in that Court in the exercise of its civil jurisdiction.

(2) The following provisions of the Civil Procedure Code shall not apply to the Chief Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, namely, sections 119, 182 to 185 (both inclusive), 187, 189 to 191 (both inclusive), 192 (so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence), 198, 200 to 204 (both inclusive), and so much of section 409 as relates to the making of a memorandum; XIV of 1882.

And sections 571 to 573 (both inclusive), 574 (so far as it relates to the time of dating and signing judgment) and 579 shall not apply to the Chief Court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.

Non-judicial acts may be done by Registrar.

32. (1) Any non-judicial or quasi-judicial act which the Civil Procedure Code requires to be done by a Judge, and any act which may be done by a Commissioner appointed to examine and adjust accounts under section 394 of that Code, may be done by the Registrar of the Court, or by such other officer of the Court as the Court may direct to do such act. XIV of 1882.

(2) The Chief Court may, from time to time, by rule, declare what shall be deemed to be non-judicial and quasi-judicial acts within the meaning of this section.

[New. Cf. ss. 199, Civ. Pro. Code.]

Delivery of judgment in the absence of Judge who recorded it.

33. When any appeal, reference or case heard in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction has been heard by a bench consisting of two or more Judges, a judgment or dissent written by any member of the bench, but not pronounced, may be delivered by any other member of that bench.

CHAPTER IV.

OF THE JURISDICTION AND POWERS OF THE SUBORDINATE COURTS.

[Sec. 30, Act XVII of 1877.]

Controlling powers of Divisional Court and of Assistant Judges.

34. Subject to the general superintendence and control of the Chief Court—every Divisional Court shall control (a) the Courts of all Assistant Judges or officers invested with the powers of an Assistant Judge within its division, and (b) the Courts controlled by the Assistant Judges or Deputy Commissioners invested with the powers of an Assistant Judge within its division; and, subject to the control of the Divisional Court—every Assistant Judge and every Deputy Commissioner invested with the powers of an Assistant Judge shall control (a) all Courts of the four grades last mentioned in section 4, and all Courts of Small Causes, and (b) all Courts of persons other than the Deputy Commissioner of a district invested under section 11 or section 12 with the powers of an Assistant Judge within the area subject to his jurisdiction.

Principal Court of original jurisdiction.

35. Except as otherwise provided by any enactment for the time being in force, the Divisional Court shall be deemed to be the District Court or principal civil Court of original jurisdiction in its division:

Provided that the Local Government may empower any Assistant Judge or any Deputy Commissioner invested with the powers of an Assistant Judge to exercise all or any of the powers of a District Court within the area subject to his jurisdiction.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 32.]

36. Except as otherwise provided by any enactment for the time being in force—

No pecuniary limits of jurisdiction of Divisional Court or of Assistant Judge.

(1) the Divisional Court, and (2) the Court of the Assistant Judge, shall have jurisdiction for the adjudication of original civil suits without limit as regards the amount or value of the subject-matter of such suits; and Pecuniary limits of jurisdiction of other Courts.

each of the Courts mentioned in the first column of the subjoined table shall have jurisdiction for the adjudication of civil suits when the amount or value of the subject-matter of such suits does not exceed the limit prescribed for such Court in the second column of the table:—

COURT.	Limit of jurisdiction.
	Rs.
(a)—The Court of the Subordinate Judge of the first class.	5,000
(b)—The Court of the Subordinate Judge of the second class.	1,000

Powers of Divisional Court and of Court of Assistant Judge.

37. (1) Any Divisional Court or any Assistant Judge, or Deputy Commissioner invested with the powers of Assistant Judge, may exercise, as regards the Courts under its or his control, the same powers of withdrawal, trial, disposal and transfer as are conferred by section 19 on the Chief Court.

(2) The Court trying any suit withdrawn under this section from a Court of Small Causes shall, for the purposes of such suit, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes.

(3) The Local Government may, from time to time, confer upon any Assistant Commissioner the powers of an Assistant Judge under this section, and withdraw the same.

[Section 34, Act XVII of 1877.] XIV of 1882.

Power to distribute business.

38. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, every Divisional Court, Assistant Judge or Deputy Commissioner invested with the powers of Assistant Judge may, by written order, direct that any civil business cognizable by it or his Court and the Courts under its or his control (including the execution of decrees) shall be distributed among such Courts in such manner as it or he thinks fit:

Provided that no direction issued under this section shall empower any Court to exercise any jurisdiction in any suit of which the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds its proper jurisdiction:

Provided also that no such direction shall be inconsistent with any direction or notification issued by the Local Government under section 15 or 16.

[Section 35, Act XVII of 1877.]

Ministerial officers of subordinate Courts.

39. (1) The ministerial officers of the Divisional Court and of the Courts of Assistant Judges and Courts of Small Causes shall be appointed, and may be suspended and dismissed, by the Judges of those Courts respectively, whose orders in such matters shall, in the case of a Divisional Court, be final, and in the case of any other Court be subject to the general control of the Divisional Court.

(2) The ministerial officers of all Courts controlled by an Assistant Judge, other than a Court of Small Causes, shall be appointed, and may be suspended and dismissed, by the Assistant Judge, subject to the general control of the Divisional Court.

(3) Every appointment under this section shall be subject to such rules as the Local Government, from time to time, prescribes in this behalf.

Power to fine ministerial officers.

40. (1) The Judge or presiding officer of every Court under the control of an Assistant Judge may fine, in an amount not exceeding one month's salary, any of the ministerial officers of such Court who is guilty of misconduct or neglect in the performance of the duties of his office.

(2) The Assistant Judge, subject to the general control of the Divisional Court, may, on appeal or otherwise, reverse or modify any such order made by any such Judge or officer, other than a Judge of a Court of Small Causes; and may of his own motion fine up to the amount of one month's salary any ministerial officer of any Court under his control other than a Court of Small Causes.

(3) Any Divisional Court or Assistant Judge, and the Judge of any Court of Small Causes, may fine any ministerial officer of his Court in an amount not exceeding one month's salary.

Power to invest with Small Cause Court jurisdiction.

41. The Local Government may invest, within such local limits as it, from time to time, fixes, any Assistant Judge or Subordinate Judge of the first class with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes for the trial of suits cognizable by such Courts up to the amount of five hundred rupees, and any Subordinate Judge of the second or third class with similar jurisdiction up to the amount of fifty rupees; and may, whenever it thinks fit, withdraw the jurisdiction so conferred.

CHAPTER V.

OF APPELLATE JURISDICTION IN CIVIL CASES.

First appeals to whom to lie.

42. (1) Appeals from the decrees and orders of a Court of any of the three grades last mentioned in section 4 in suits of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes, and in suits of any other class which the Chief Court, with the sanction of the Local Government, may, from time to time, determine to place on the same footing, shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, and the value or amount of the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed five hundred rupees, lie to the Court of the Assistant Judge.

(2) Appeals from the decrees and orders of the Court of the Assistant Judge in original suits, when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds five thousand rupees, and appeals from the decrees and orders of the Divisional Court in original suits, shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie to the Chief Court.

(3) Appeals from decrees and orders in original suits not hereinbefore provided for shall, when such appeal is allowed by law, lie to the Divisional Court.

Further appeal to lie to the Chief Court on the certificate of the Divisional Court that the case is a fit one for further appeal.

43. When two Judges of a Divisional Court are unable to concur in a judgment varying or reversing the decree or order appealed against, or when some question of law or custom, or of general interest, is involved, the Judges may, if they regard the case as of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal, or if, when the certificate is applied for, one of the Judges who passed the decree is no longer attached to the Court, the remaining Judge may, if he regards the case as of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal, grant a certificate to any party to the appeal that the case is a fit one for a further appeal; and on such certificate being granted a further appeal shall lie to the Chief Court from the decree or order of the Divisional Court on any ground which would be a good ground of appeal if the decree or order had been passed in an original suit:

Provided that no further appeal shall lie in any suit of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes, or other suit placed on the same footing under section 42 when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the original suit does not exceed five hundred rupees.

XIV of 1882.

Appellate decision of Assistant Judge or Divisional Court otherwise final.

44. Subject to the provisions of section 43, and of the Code of Civil Procedure, sections 595 and 622, the decision of the Court of the Assistant Judge or of the Divisional Court passed in appeal shall be final.

[Cf. Act XIII of 1879, s. 22.]

Appeals from decrees, &c., passed before Act comes into force.

45. For the purposes of sections 42 and 23, all decrees, orders and decisions passed before the date on which this Act comes into force shall be deemed—

(a) if passed by a Commissioner or Additional Commissioner, or by the Civil Judge of Peshawar, to have been passed by the Divisional Court;

(b) if passed by a Deputy Commissioner or other officer invested with the appellate jurisdiction of a Deputy Commissioner, to have been passed by an Assistant Judge;

(c) if passed by an Assistant Commissioner with full powers, to have been passed by a Subordinate Judge of the first class;

(d) if passed by an Assistant Commissioner not invested with full powers or with the appellate powers of a Deputy Commissioner, or by an Honorary Civil Judge, or by a Tahsíldár or Náib Tahsíldár, to have been passed by a Subordinate Judge of the second, third or fourth class:

Provided that—

(1) no right of appeal which has accrued under the existing law shall be taken away, and no certificate shall be required for a further appeal;

(2) if the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds five thousand rupees, the appeal, if any is allowed by law, shall lie to the Chief Court; but in other cases in which the appeal now lies to the Commissioner's Court, the appeal shall lie to the Divisional Court.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 40.]

Period of limitation.

46. (1) The period of limitation for an appeal under section 41 or section 42 shall run from the date of the decree, order or decision appealed against, and shall be as follows, that is to say:—

(a) when such appeal lies to the Court of the Assistant Judge or to the Divisional Court—sixty days;

(b) when such appeal lies to the Chief Court—ninety days.

(2) In computing such periods of sixty and ninety days, and in all respects not herein specified, the limitation of such appeals shall be governed by the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

XV of 1877.

Power to withdraw and try or to transfer appeal.

47. The Chief Court, the Divisional Court or the Court of an Assistant Judge may, on the application of any of the parties, after giving notice to the parties and hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion, without giving such notice, withdraw any civil appeal pending in any Court under its superintendence or control, and try such appeal itself, or transfer the same for trial to any other Court under its superintendence or control and of a grade equal or superior to that of the Court from which such appeal is withdrawn.

CHAPTER VI.

OF REVENUE COURTS.

Certain classes of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts only.

48. Suits of any of the following classes instituted on and after the first day of October, 1884, shall be heard and determined in Revenue Courts and not otherwise:

XXVIII of 1868.

(b) suits by landlords under section 6 of the same Act to prove that a tenant presumed to have a right of occupancy under that section has no such right;

(c) suits for enhancement or abatement of rent under Chapter III of the same Act;

The Panjáb Courts Bill, 1884.
(Chapter VI.—Of Revenue Courts.—Sections 49-55.)

(d) suits for ejectment of a tenant under Chapter IV of the same Act;

(e) suits under section 25 of the same Act to contest liability to be ejected when notice of ejectment has been served;

(f) suits under section 40 of the same Act to determine the amount or value of the compensation to be paid or the terms of a lease to be granted to a tenant under section 39 of the same Act, or both;

(g) suits for arrears of rent on account of land, or on account of any rights of pasturage, forest-rights, fisheries or the like;

(h) suits for the recovery of any over-payment of rent;

(i) suits by lambardárs for arrears of land-revenue, payable through them by the co-sharers, or for village-expenses or other dues for which the co-sharers may be responsible to the lambardár;

(j) suits by co-sharers for their share of the profits of an estate or part thereof after payment of the land-revenue and village-expenses, or for a settlement of accounts;

(k) suits by assignees of land-revenue for arrears of revenue due to them as such;

(l) suits by superior proprietors for arrears of revenue due to them as such; and

(m) suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act to recover possession of land assessed to the land-revenue or liable to be so assessed, or of which the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned. I of 1877.

49. If in any suit of any of the classes mentioned in clauses (a) to (l) of the last preceding section it appears that the parties are at issue on any question of proprietary title, or on the question of the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant between them, the Revenue Court shall not determine such question, but may either proceed to decide the case by passing a decree contingent upon the determination of such question by a Civil Court, giving such directions as it may think proper as to the party with whom it shall rest to institute a suit for the purpose, or, on the application of either party, may stay proceedings to enable the party applying to institute a suit for the purpose in a Civil Court; but the proceedings shall not be stayed under this section for more than three months unless such suit is in the meantime instituted; nor, when a decree has been passed contingent upon the determination of such question by a Civil Court, shall any execution be issued, property sold or person ejected or imprisoned thereunder until the receipt of a copy of the judgment of the Civil Court on the question, unless the decree has been passed against the party whose duty it is to sue and he fails to institute the suit for more than three months from the date of the decree.

Procedure when question of proprietary title or of existence of relation of landlord and tenant arises.

50. All Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs shall have power to try suits of the classes mentioned in section 48, clauses (g), (i), (k) and (l), when the amount or value of the claim does not exceed one hundred rupees; and the Local Government may invest Náib Tahsíldárs with the same powers.

Certain revenue powers of Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs to be exercised ex officio.

51. The Local Government may invest any Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár with power to try all suits of the classes mentioned in the same section, clauses (d) and (f) to (m), both inclusive.

Additional powers with which Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs may be invested.

52. The Deputy Commissioner shall have power to try suits of any of the classes mentioned in section 48, and the Local Government may specially invest any Assistant Commissioner with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner for the trial of suits of the classes mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (e) of the same section.

Revenue powers of Deputy Commissioners and power to invest Assistant Commissioners therewith.

53. (1) The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, make rules consistent with this Act for regulating the procedure of Revenue Courts in cases under this chapter for which a procedure is not prescribed thereby; and may, by any such rule, direct that any provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply, with or without modification, to all or any classes of cases before Revenue Courts. [Cf. Act XVIII of 1881, s. 19.] XIV of 1882.

Procedure of Revenue Courts how to be regulated.

(2) Until such rules are made, Revenue Courts shall be guided in cases under this chapter by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, section 2, Part I, except Chapters XVI and XX, Parts II, III and IV, Chapters XXXVII and XXXVIII, XLI, XLIII and XLIV, and Parts VIII and X, so far as applicable; and the Court of the Financial Commissioner shall, in respect of such cases, be deemed to be the High Court within the meaning of the said Code, and shall exercise, as regards the Courts under his control, the same powers of withdrawal, trial, disposal and transfer as are conferred by sections 19 and 17 on the Chief Court; and the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner shall respectively exercise, as regards the Courts under his control, the same powers of withdrawal, trial, disposal and transfer as are conferred by sections 57 and 47 upon a Divisional Court and an Assistant Judge. XIV of 1882.

54. Every Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner may, by written order, direct that any business cognizable under this chapter by his Court, and the Courts under his control (including the execution of decrees) shall be distributed among such Courts in such manner as he thinks fit:

Power to distribute business.

Provided that no direction issued under this section shall empower any Court to exercise any jurisdiction which it is not empowered to exercise under section 50, section 51 or section 52.

55. All decisions and orders (except decisions and orders in suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act) of Assistant Commissioners not invested with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner under section 52, and of Tahsíldárs, shall be appealable to the Deputy Commissioner, whose order thereon shall be final, unless when the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds one hundred rupees, when a I of 1877.

further appeal shall lie to the Commissioner, or, in case the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds five thousand rupees, to the Financial Commissioner.

Further appeal in certain cases.

56. (1) All decisions and orders of Deputy Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners invested with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner in suits of the classes mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (e) of section 48, and in other suits (except suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act) in which the value of the subject-matter exceeds one hundred rupees, shall be appealable to the Commissioner, or in case the amount or value exceeds five thousand rupees, to the Financial Commissioner. I of 1877.

Cases appealable to Commissioner or Financial Commissioner.

(2) In all other cases their judgments and orders shall be final.

Other judgments to be final.

57. An appeal from the decisions of the Commissioner on appeals in suits of the classes mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (e) of section 48 shall lie to the Financial Commissioner, unless when the Commissioner dismisses the appeal. All other judgments and orders of the Commissioner on appeals shall be final, subject to revision by the Financial Commissioner.

Further appeal to Financial Commissioner in certain cases.

Other judgments of Commissioner to be final.

58. The Financial Commissioner may at any time call for any case which has come before any Commissioner or any Court subordinate to him, and pass such orders thereon consistent with the law applicable thereto as he thinks fit.

Revisional jurisdiction of Financial Commissioner.

59. (1) The period of limitation for an appeal under section 55, section 56 or section 57 shall run from the date of the decree, order for decision appealed against, and shall be as follows, that is to say:—

Limitation of appeals under this chapter.

(a) when such appeal lies to the Court of the Deputy Commissioner or of the Commissioner—sixty days;

(2) In computing such periods of sixty and ninety days, and in all respects not herein specified, the limitation of such appeals shall be governed by the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. XV of 1877.

60. Subject to the general superintendence and control of the Financial Commissioner, every Commissioner shall control the Revenue Courts of all Deputy Commissioners and the Revenue Courts controlled by Deputy Commissioners within his Division; and subject to the control of the Commissioner, every Deputy Commissioner shall control the Revenue Courts of all Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs and officers invested with the powers of Deputy Commissioner, Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár within his District.

61. Except for the purpose of exercising control over any other Revenue Court, any person exercising the powers of a Revenue Court of any grade under section 49 or section 51 shall be deemed to be a Court of such grade for all the purposes of this Act, and shall exercise such powers and discharge the functions of such Court within such local limits and in such classes of cases as the Local Government may, from time to time, direct.

Persons invested with powers under this chapter to be deemed to be Courts of corresponding grades, and where and in what cases to exercise their powers.

62. When more than one Financial Commissioner is appointed, the Local Government may, from time to time, make rules as to the distribution of revenue, judicial and other business between the persons so appointed; and, until such rules are made, the Financial Commissioner who is senior in respect of his appointment as such may transfer such business as he thinks fit to the other Financial Commissioner for disposal, and may withdraw and himself dispose of any business so transferred and not disposed of.

Distribution of business between Financial Commissioners.

63. If either Financial Commissioner desires to obtain the opinion of the other upon any question arising in any appeal under this chapter pending before him, he may forward the record to the other Financial Commissioner with a statement of the question upon which he desires his opinion; and the latter, after such examination and such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit, shall record his opinion upon the question referred to him; and the Financial Commissioner who made the reference shall proceed to dispose of the appeal after considering the opinion so obtained.

Consultation between Financial Commissioners.

64. (1) The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in official Gazette, declare that a settlement of land-revenue is in progress in any local area, and invest any officer making or controlling such settlement, either by name or in virtue of his office, with all or any of the powers of any Court constituted under this Act for the purpose of trying all or any specified class of suits and appeals relating to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of such land, arising in such local area. [Act XVII of 1877, s. 49.]

Power to invest Settlement-officers with powers of Civil or Revenue Courts in certain cases.

(2) The publication of any notification under this section shall be conclusive evidence that a settlement of land-revenue is in progress in the local area to which the notification refers.

(3) The Local Government may cancel any such notification.

(4) While such notification continues in force, such powers shall be exercised by the officers so invested, and not otherwise:

Provided that the Local Government may, by order published in the official Gazette, direct that any jurisdiction with which any officer may have been invested by such notification shall be exercised solely by the Court by which such jurisdiction would have been exercised if such notification had not been published:

Provided also that any cases pending before any officer under such notification when it is cancelled may, notwithstanding such cancellation, be disposed of by him as if it continued in force, unless the Local Government directs (as it is hereby empowered to do) that such cases shall be transferred for disposal to the Court by which they would have been disposed of if such notification had not been published.

Explanation.—In this section "land" means land assessed to the land-revenue or whereof the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, and all land the property of Government not within the site of any town or village.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 50.] Power to alter subordination of Courts for purposes of section 64.

65. For the purposes of section 64 the Local Government may, notwithstanding anything in this Act, from time to time direct that any of the Courts mentioned in this Act (except the Chief Court) shall, in respect of any specified class of cases, be subordinate to, or subject to the control or superintendence of, any authority other than those specified in this Act.

CHAPTER VII.

MISCELLANEOUS AND SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 46; compare Act VI of 1871, s. 25; Act XVII of 1875, s. 19; and Act XIII of 1879, s. 23.] Presiding Officer of Court not to try certain suits and appeals.

66. (1) Except with the consent of the parties, no presiding officer of any Court having jurisdiction under this Act shall try any suit or appeal to which he is a party or in which he is personally interested, or any appeal against a decree or order passed by himself, or shall adjudicate upon any proceeding connected with or arising out of such suit or appeal.

(2) When any such suit, appeal or proceeding comes before him, he shall forthwith transmit the record of the case to the Court to which he is immediately subordinate, with a report of the circumstances attending the reference.

(3) The superior Court shall thereupon dispose of the case in the manner prescribed by section XIV of 1882. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 47.] Rules when to have force of law.

67. All rules made and forms prescribed under section 28 and section 29, clauses (a), (b), (d) and (e), shall be submitted for sanction to the Local Government, and, on receiving such sanction, shall be published in the official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

[Act XVII of 1877, s. 48.] Local Government may transfer power conferred by section 27 to a single Judge.

68. (1) The Local Government may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint a single Judge of the Chief Court to exercise the power of superintendence conferred on such Court by section 27, and may cancel such notification.

[Cf. Act XIII of 1879, s. 27.] IV of 1869. Jurisdiction under Divorce Act.

69. For the purposes of the Indian Divorce Act, any Judge of the Divisional Court shall be deemed to be the District Judge throughout the Division over which that Court has jurisdiction.

[Act VI of 1871, s. 17; Act XIII of 1879, s. 38.] Vacations.

70. (1) Subject to such orders as may, from time to time, be issued by the Governor General in Council, and to the approval of the Local Government, the Chief Court shall prepare a list of days to be observed in each year as close holidays in the Civil Courts subordinate thereto.

(2) Such list shall be published in the official Gazette, and the said days shall be observed accordingly.

Pending proceedings.

71. (1) All cases or proceedings pending in any Civil Court on the first day of October, 1884, may be disposed of as if this Act had not been passed, unless the Chief Court directs (as it is hereby empowered to do) that such cases or proceedings shall be transferred for disposal to the Courts established under this Act which would have had jurisdiction if they had been in existence when such cases or proceedings were instituted.

(2) For the purposes of this section, all appeals in civil suits or proceedings pending on the said day shall—

(a) if preferred from the decrees, orders or decisions of Commissioners, Additional Commissioners or the Civil Judge of Peshawar be deemed to be appeals from the Divisional Court;

(b) if preferred from the decrees, orders or decisions of Deputy Commissioners or officers invested under section three of Act XIV of 1875 with the appellate powers of Deputy Commissioners, or with the full powers of an Assistant Commissioner, be deemed to be appeals from the Court of the Assistant Judge; and

(c) if preferred from the decrees, orders or decisions of Assistant Commissioners not invested with full powers, or with the appellate powers of Deputy Commissioners, or of Honorary Civil Judges not invested with the full powers of an Assistant Commissioner, or of Tahsíldárs or Náib Tahsíldárs, be deemed to be appeals from Subordinate Judges of the second, third or fourth class.

Explanation of sections 617 and 622, Civil Procedure Code.

72. For the purposes of sections 617 and 622 of XIV of 1882. the Civil Procedure Code, the decree of an Appellate Court subordinate to the Chief Court shall be deemed to be final when no certificate permitting a further appeal to the Chief Court under section 43 has been granted, and a case decided by an Appellate Court in which no such certificate has been granted shall be deemed to be a case in which no appeal lies to the Chief Court.

Amendment of the first schedule annexed to the Court-fees Act, 1870.

73. To the first schedule VII of 1870. annexed to the Court-fees Act, 1870, the following shall be added :—

NUMBER.		PROPER FEE.
8. Application to the Chief Court of the Panjáb for the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure.	When the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute does not exceed twenty-five rupees.	Two rupees.
	When such amount or value exceeds twenty-five rupees.	The fee leviable on memorandum of appeal.

The Panjáb Courts Bill, 1884.
(Chapter VII.—Miscellaneous and Supplementary Provisions.—Sections 74-75.)

Refund of fee paid on application for revision. XIV of 1882.

74. If the Chief Court, on an application under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, on which a fee has been paid under the last preceding section, sets aside or modifies the decree or order of a subordinate Court, or remands the case for a fresh decision, it may grant to the applicant a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the full amount of fee paid on the application, or any smaller amount which, with regard to the circumstances of the case, it may think proper to order to be refunded.

Saving of certain appointments, rules and forms, notifications, powers and orders.

75. All appointments made under sections 5 and 22 of Act XVII of 1877, directions given under section 23, rules and forms prescribed under sections 26 and 27, and notifications published, powers conferred and orders issued under section 49, of the same Act, shall, so far as may be, be deemed to have been respectively made, given, prescribed, published, conferred and issued under this Act.

SCHEDULE.

ACTS REPEALED.

(See section 2.)

Number and year.	Title of Act.	Extent of repeal.
Act IV of 1869	The Indian Divorce Act.	So much of section 3 as defines "District Judge" in the Panjáb to mean the "Commissioner of a Division."
Act X of 1870	The Land Acquisition Act, 1870.	So much of section 3 as defines "Court" in the Panjáb to mean the "Commissioner of a Division."
Act XIV of 1875.	The Panjáb Judicial Administration Act, 1875.	So far as it relates to civil or criminal judicial powers.
Act XVII of 1877.	The Panjáb Courts' Act, 1877.	The whole.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

AN essential portion of the scheme for the reorganization of the civil administration in the Panjáb, which has recently received the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, is to be found in the improvement of the judicial agency and the reform of the appellate system. The arrangements proposed for this purpose render necessary very large changes in the law under which the Panjáb Courts are now constituted (the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877), and the most convenient mode of giving effect to them appears to be to repeal that Act and re-enact its provisions with the necessary additions and modifications. This it is proposed to do by the present Bill.

2. The changes in the law which it is intended to make will now be noticed.

3. Chapter II deals with the constitution of the Courts. The present law confers the civil judicial powers of the Courts subordinate to the Chief Court upon the executive officers of Government from the Commissioner down to the Tahsíldár, though Act XIV of 1875 enables the Local Government to confer the powers of a Deputy Commissioner or of a Tahsíldár upon other persons, and under that Act civil judicial powers have been conferred upon a number of officers known as Judicial Assistants and Munsifs, whose functions are mainly, though not always exclusively, judicial. Similarly, the Civil and Sessions Judge of Peshawar and certain Additional Commissioners have been invested with the judicial powers of Commissioners under Act XVII of 1877. It is now proposed to relieve Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners, as a rule, of civil judicial functions, though they will continue to exercise jurisdiction in certain classes of cases which will be transferred from the Civil to the Revenue Courts, and they may also be invested with civil judicial powers where the judicial work is so light as not to require the creation of special Courts. Commissioners will likewise be, as a rule, relieved of the functions as Sessions Judges which now devolve upon them, but this can be done under the Criminal Procedure Code, without special legislation.

4. Special designations which do not imply the exercise of executive functions are accordingly given to the Courts subordinate to the Chief Court (section 4).

5. With a view to strengthen the Courts of appeal in order to admit of greater finality being given to appellate decisions, it is proposed that the Court immediately subordinate to the Chief Court should ordinarily consist of two Judges, and that, while one of these Judges may be enabled by rule to exercise certain of the powers of the Court, a single Judge should not have power in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction to reverse any order other than an interlocutory order passed by any Court.

6. Power is also taken (in section 7) to appoint the Commissioner of a Division to be one of the Judges of a Divisional Court in addition to his other duties, as it is in contemplation to establish one of the Divisional Courts at Derá Ismaíl Khán, and only one Judge will be available for that Court unless the Commissioner of the Deráját Division is appointed as one of the Judges.

7. The appointment of Assistant Judges and Subordinate Judges of the first class by the Local Government, and of Subordinate Judges of the second, third and fourth classes, corresponding to the present Munsifs, by the Chief Court, subject to rules to be made by the Local Government, is provided for by section 9. The Court of the Assistant Judge will replace the Court of the Deputy Commissioner or Judicial Assistant under the present law, and no provision has hitherto been made by law as to the authority by which Munsifs may be appointed or removed.

8. The other differences between Chapter II of the Bill and the corresponding chapter of Act XVII of 1877 follow upon those which have been already described.

9. The third chapter, which provides for the jurisdiction and powers of the Chief Court, only differs from the corresponding chapter of Act XVII of 1877 in that section 19, relating to the transfer of suits, is assimilated to section 25 of the Civil Procedure Code; section 21 is modified so as to enable the Chief Court to make rule for the exercise by one or more of the Judges of a Divisional Court of the powers of that Court, except as regards the reversal of decrees, sentences or decisions of any Court, to provide by rule for the constitution of a full bench of the Chief Court, and to delegate to one of its Judges the power of determining what Judges shall sit alone or as a bench of the Court, and power is also taken to enable a single Judge of the Chief Court or of a Divisional Court to reverse an interlocutory order; sections 31 and 32 replace the reference in section 29 of the present Act to sections 633 and 637 of the Civil Procedure Code, and add what is necessary of sections 638 and 639 of that Code; and section 33 provides for the delivery of the judgments of a bench of Judges by any Judge who was a member of that bench, in accordance with existing practice, and with the analogy of section 199 of the Civil Procedure Code.

10. Chapter IV relates to the jurisdiction and powers of Courts subordinate to the Chief Court. The Divisional Court is declared to be the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, but the Local Government is enabled to empower any Assistant Judge or Deputy Commissioner with the powers of an Assistant Judge to exercise any of the powers of a District Court, so as to obviate the inconvenience of unduly limiting the number of Courts which can exercise jurisdiction under certain laws, e. g., Acts XL of 1858, XXVII of 1860 and IX of 1861.

11. While the jurisdiction of the Divisional Court and of the Court of the Assistant Judge is unlimited as respects the value or amount in litigation, thus corresponding with the jurisdiction now exercised by Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners, that of the Subordinate Judge of the first class is limited to Rs. 5,000 instead of Rs. 10,000, which is the limit of the present jurisdiction of an Assistant Commissioner with full powers, and that of other Subordinate Judges may extend either to Rs. 100, to Rs. 500 or to Rs. 1,000.

12. In section 41 power is taken to invest Assistant Judges or Subordinate Judges with the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court Judge for the trial of suits cognizable by a Small Cause Court within certain limits of value or amount.

13. The other changes in Chapter IV are those which are rendered necessary by the alterations of the law already described.

14. Chapter V relates to appellate jurisdiction in civil cases. It embodies the modifications proposed in the appellate system with the view of restricting the right of appeal so far as it is considered that the improved organization of the Courts will admit of this. The second appeals allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure, and the further appeals allowed by the present Panjab Courts Act are abolished, and the decisions of appellate Courts are made final, except that the Judges of a Divisional Court are enabled, when they differ as to the judgment which should be passed, or when some question of law or custom or of general interest is involved, if they think the case of sufficient importance to justify further appeal, to grant a certificate permitting a further appeal to the Chief Court.

15. Appeals to Assistant Judges are confined to suits not above Rs. 500 in value, either of the Small Cause Court class or of any other class which the Chief Court, with the sanction of the Local Government, may determine to put upon the same footing, and appeals in suits above Rs. 5,000 in value, as well as appeals from decrees of the Divisional Court, will, when allowed by law, lie to the Chief Court, all other appeals allowed by law lying to the Divisional Court.

16. Section 47, relating to the transfer of appeals, has been modified to the same extent as section 19.

17. Chapter VI, which deals with Revenue Courts, is new, having been rendered necessary by the transfer of certain classes of suits enumerated in section 48 from the Civil to the Revenue Courts. It provides for the jurisdiction and powers of these Courts, for their procedure, for appeals from their decisions, for the revisional jurisdiction of the Financial Commissioner, Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner, and the controlling powers of the Financial Commissioner, Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner, respectively, for the transfer of suits and appeals, and for the distribution of business between Financial Commissioners when more than one such officer is appointed, the sanction which has been given by the Secretary of State to the appointment of a second Financial Commissioner rendering a provision of this nature necessary. Sections 64 and 65 correspond with sections 49 and 50 of the present Act, enabling the Local Government to confer judicial powers upon Settlement-officers, the only addition being that the officer may be so empowered either by name or in virtue of his office.

18. Chapter VII contains miscellaneous and supplementary provisions, some of which correspond with sections 46 to 48 of the present Act. Of the others, section 69 provides that any Judge of the Divisional Court shall be deemed to be the District Judge throughout its jurisdiction for the purposes of the Indian Divorce Act; section 70 provides for vacations; and section 71 for proceedings pending when this Bill becomes law; section 72 interprets certain expressions in sections 617 and 622 of the Civil Procedure Code so as to prevent doubt as to the cases in which the revisional jurisdiction of the Chief Court may be exercised; section 73 amends the Court-fees Act so that the fee leviable on a memorandum of appeal, when it exceeds the fee leviable on a petition to the Chief Court, may be charged on an application to it for the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code; and section 74 enables the Court in certain cases to grant a certificate authorizing the refund of the fee so charged.

Explanation of abbreviation used in the margin.

"Bo. Bill" refers to the draft Bill prepared by the Commission and received with the letter from the Government of Bombay, No. 216, dated 14th January, 1880.

A Bill to amend and define the law of Testamentary and Intestate Succession to Khojás.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend and define the law applicable to testamentary and intestate succession to Khojás; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title. Local extent.

1. This Act may be called the Khojá Succession Act, 1884; and it shall extend to the whole of British India.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 8-12.]

Application.

2. Except as provided by any other law for the time being in force, succession to the property, whether moveable or immoveable, in British India of a Khojá dying on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-five shall be regulated by the rules contained in this Act, wherever he may have had his domicile at the time of his death.

[Act X of 1865, s. 5.]

Explanation.—Property in British India includes obligations enforceable there.

[Act X of 1865, s. 33.]

Definitions.

3. (1) In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

[Bo. Bill, s. 3.]

"son" means a legitimate son, and does not include an adopted son:

"grandson" means a son's son:

"great-grandson" means a grandson's son:

"daughter" means a legitimate daughter:

"father" and "mother" do not include step-father and step-mother:

"grandfather" and "grandmother" do not include a father's step-father or step-mother:

"brother" and "sister" do not include step-brother and step-sister, nor half-brother and half-sister:

"half-brother" means son of the same father but by another wife:

"lineal male descendant," used with reference to any person, means a male descended from that person through males only:

[New.]

"degree" means a degree of kindred computed according to the rules laid down in sections 21, 22 and 24 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, and the table of consanguinity thereto annexed:

X of 1865. [Home Dept. Office Memo. dated 12th August, 1865, para. 7.]

"undivided property" means a share in the property belonging to an undivided family:

"restricted owner," used with reference to any property, means a female acquiring that property in the manner specified in section 21, section 23, sub-section (2), section 24, sub-section (1), section 27 and section 39.

[New.]

(2) When it is provided in this Act that the members of any class shall take property and the shares which they are respectively to take therein are not specified, they shall take equal shares therein.

No distinction between ancestral and self-acquired, nor between moveable and immoveable, property. Child in womb.

4. For the purposes of this Act there shall be no distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property, nor between moveable and immoveable property, nor between those born in the lifetime of a deceased owner of property and those who at the date of his death were only conceived in the womb, but who have been subsequently born alive.

[Act X of 1865, s. 26.]

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.
(Chapter II.—Of Succession to the Undivided Property of a Male Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 5-6.)
(Chapter III.—Of Succession to the Separate Property of a Male Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 7-20.)

CHAPTER II.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE UNDIVIDED PROPERTY OF A MALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

Where there are lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

5. (1) When a male Khojá owning undivided property dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal male descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, every such descendant shall be entitled to a share in that property unless one of the persons through whom he is descended from the intestate is living.

(3) When the sharers under sub-section (1) do not all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, the property shall be divided into such a number of equal shares as will correspond with the number of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to him at his decease, and of his lineal male descendants of the like degree of kindred who died before him, and through whom the other sharers are descended from him; and one such share shall be allotted to each of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate at his decease; and one such share shall be allotted in respect of each such deceased male descendant; and the share allotted in respect of each such deceased male descendant shall be divided among the sharers descended through him, in such manner that the sons of any person shall always take that which their father would have been entitled to if he had survived the intestate.

Where there are no lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

6. In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the property of the intestate shall be divided equally among all the male members of his undivided family living at his death.

CHAPTER III.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE SEPARATE PROPERTY OF A MALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

[Bo. Bill, s. 16.]

Where there are lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

7. When a male Khojá owning property, not being undivided property, dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal male descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, the property shall descend in the manner provided in section 5.

[Bo. Bill, s. 17.]

In default of such lineal male descendants, property to belong to the intestate's father.

8. In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the intestate's father shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 18.]

In default of the father, to the mother.

9. In default of the father, the intestate's mother shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 19, see infra, s. 34.]

In default of the mother, to the widows.

10. In default of the mother, the widow or widows of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 20.]

In default of widows, to the daughters.

11. In default of widows, the daughters of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 21.]

In default of daughters, to daughters' sons and to brothers.

12. (1) In default of daughters, the sons of daughters shall succeed to the property, the sons of each daughter taking an equal share:

Provided that, if the intestate has left brothers surviving him, the daughters' sons shall succeed to a moiety of the property, the sons of each daughter taking an equal share, and the brothers shall take the other moiety.

(2) In default of daughters' sons, the brothers shall take the whole of the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 22.]

In default of brothers, to sons' daughters.

13. In default of brothers, the daughters of the intestate's sons shall succeed to the property, the daughters of each son taking an equal share.

[Bo. Bill, s. 23.]

In default of sons' daughters, to brothers' sons.

14. In default of sons' daughters, the sons of the intestate's brothers shall succeed to the property, the sons of each brother taking an equal share.

[Bo. Bill, s. 24.]

In default of brothers' sons, to half-brothers.

15. In default of brothers' sons, the half-brothers of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 25.]

In default of half-brothers, to half-brothers' sons.

16. In default of half-brothers, the sons of half-brothers shall succeed to the property, the sons of each half-brother taking an equal share.

[Bo. Bill, s. 26.]

In default of half-brothers' sons, to the grandfather; and in default of the grandfather, to the grandmother.

17. In default of sons of half-brothers, the paternal grandfather shall succeed to the property; and in default of the paternal grandfather, the paternal grandmother shall succeed to it.

[Bo. Bill, s. 27.]

In default of the grandmother, to paternal uncles.

18. In default of the paternal grandmother, the paternal uncles shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 28.]

In default of paternal uncles, to sisters.

19. In default of paternal uncles, the sisters of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 29.]

In default of sisters, to the nearest of kin.

20. In default of sisters, the property shall belong to those of the intestate's relatives on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate; and, in default of relatives on the father's side, to those of the intestate's relatives on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate:

Provided that no female relative shall be entitled to share in the property if there is a male relative standing on the same side in the same degree of kindred to the intestate.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter IV.—Of Succession to the Absolute Property of a Female Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 23-27:)

[Bo. Bill, s. 33. See sec. 48, infra.]

When female takes as restricted owner under foregoing sections.

21. If, at the death of the intestate, any of the male heirs mentioned in sections 7 to 18 (both inclusive), or any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate, is living, a female succeeding under any of the foregoing sections shall take the property as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 30.]

Widow's right to retain possession of ornaments.

22. When a male Khojá dies intestate in respect of any ornaments belonging to him, and not being undivided property, which are in the possession of his wife with his consent, and the wife does not acquire the ownership, whether absolute or restricted, of the ornaments under this Act, she shall be entitled to retain possession of them until she dies or re-marries.

CHAPTER IV.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE ABSOLUTE PROPERTY OF A FEMALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

[Bo. Bill, s. 38.]

Descent of unmarried female's absolute property.

23. (1) When an unmarried female Khojá owning property otherwise than as a restricted owner dies intestate in respect of that property, it shall belong to her brothers; in default of brothers, to her father; in default of the father, to her mother; in default of the mother, to the relatives of the intestate on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate; and, in default of such relatives, to the relatives on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 32 & 33.]

(2) If at the death of the intestate any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate is living, a female succeeding under this section, whether in preference to or together with that male relative, shall take the property as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 40.]

Descent of married female's absolute property.

24. (1) When a married female Khojá owning property otherwise than as restricted owner dies intestate in respect of that property, it shall belong to her sons and daughters; [Bo. Bill, s. 32.] and the daughters shall take it as restricted owners.

(2) In default of sons and daughters, the property shall, except as provided in sub-section (3), belong to her husband.

(3) If the property has been given to the female on the occasion of her marriage separately from the "Dej" for her sole use and benefit by her parents or relatives, it shall, in default of sons and daughters, belong—

(4) A female taking property under clause (b) of sub-section (3) shall not take it as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 37.]

Descent of absolute property of widow or divorced female leaving lineal descendants within the fourth degree.

25. (1) When a female Khojá, being a widow or divorced and owning property otherwise than as restricted owner, dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, every such descendant shall be entitled to a share of the property unless one of the persons through whom he is descended from the intestate is living.

[Act X of 1865, s. 33.]

(3) When the sharers under sub-section (1) do not all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, the property shall be divided into such a number of equal shares as may correspond with the number of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to her at her decease, and of lineal descendants of the like degree of kindred who died before her and through whom the other sharers are descended from her; and one such share shall be allotted to each of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate at her decease; and one such share shall be allotted in respect of each such deceased descendant; and the share allotted in respect of each such deceased descendant shall be divided among the sharers descended through him, in such manner that the children of any person shall always take what that person would have been entitled to if he had survived the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, s. 37.]

Where there are no such lineal descendants.

26. (1) In default of the descendants mentioned in section 25, the property shall belong to the brothers of the intestate; in default of brothers, to her father; in default of the father, to her mother.

(2) In default of the mother, the property shall belong to the relatives of the intestate on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred, and, in default of such relatives, to the relatives of the intestate on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred.

When female taking under section 25 or 26 takes as restricted owner.

27. If, at the death of the intestate, any of the male heirs mentioned in section 25 and the first sub-section of section 26, or any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate, is living, a female succeeding under section 25 or section 26, whether in preference to or together with that heir or relative, shall take the property as restricted owner.

CHAPTER V.

OF PROPERTY WHICH A FEMALE TAKES AS RESTRICTED OWNER, AND THE FURTHER SUCCESSION TO THE SAME.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate," "stridhan."]

Nature of restricted ownership generally.

28. A female taking property as restricted owner shall be absolutely entitled to the use of, and the income accruing from, that property during her life, and, except as otherwise provided by this Act, shall have all the other rights and powers of an absolute owner in respect of that property.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate."]

Powers of alienation limited.

29. Except as provided by section 31, no right to, over or in respect of property created by a restricted owner of that property shall have effect for any time beyond her life:

[New.]

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect a lease granted at a fair rent for a term not exceeding twenty years, and without payment of any fine or premium, or a right created for consideration in favour of a person acting in good faith, and without notice of the ownership being restricted.

[Act II of 1882, s. 3.]

Explanation.—A person has notice of the ownership being restricted when he actually knows that it is restricted, or when, but for wilful abstention from enquiry or gross negligence, he would have known it, or when information of it is given to, or obtained by, his agent under the circumstances mentioned in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 229.

IX of 1872.

Obligations of restricted owner.

30. A female taking property as restricted owner shall be bound, so far as it is possible for her to do so without applying her other property for that purpose,—

(b) to make such payments, institute, maintain and defend such suits and other proceedings, and take such other steps as, regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the property, may be reasonably requisite for the assertion and protection of the title thereto, for the protection of the interest of those who are to take it after her, or for the recovery of any portion of it which is not in her possession.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate."]

Restricted owner's power of transfer.

31. A female taking property as restricted owner shall have power to transfer the same, so that the transfer may have effect beyond her life when, the income being insufficient, such transfer is necessary in order to raise money for any of the following purposes, namely:—

(a) to discharge any of the obligations imposed by section 30;

(b) to discharge the debts of the absolute owner from whom the property descended;

(c) to provide for the maintenance of any persons entitled under this Act to have their maintenance provided for out of the property, for the payment of any marriage expenses or funeral expenses payable under this Act out of the property, and for the performance of any ordinary family ceremonies; and

(d) to support herself where she has no other sufficient means of support.

[New]. [Act II of 1882, s. 34.]

Power to apply to Court to sanction a transfer under section 31.

32. (1) A restricted owner of property may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction to sanction any transfer of that property which she proposes to make under section 31.

(2) The petition must state the names of all the persons interested in the application so far as they can be ascertained, and must be verified by the applicant or by some other competent person in the manner required by law for the verification of plaints; and, if it contains any averment which the person making the verification knows or believes to be false, or does not know or believe to be true, that person shall be deemed to have intentionally given false evidence within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(3) A copy of the petition shall be served upon, and the hearing thereof may be attended by, such of the persons interested in the application as the Court thinks fit.

(4) A transfer made with the sanction of a Court obtained under this section shall be deemed to be warranted by section 31.

[New].

Power to direct money raised to be paid into Court.

33. A Court dealing with an application under section 32 may, if it thinks fit, sanction the transfer proposed subject to the condition that the money raised by the transfer shall be paid into Court or to trustees apppointed by the Court, and may give such further directions as it thinks fit with a view to ensuring that the money shall be applied to the purpose for which it is raised, or that any balance thereof which is not required for that purpose, shall be secured for the benefit of those who would take the property after the restricted owner.

Effect of sale in execution against restricted owner.

34. When property belonging to a female as restricted owner is sold in execution of a decree passed against her, the interest taken by the purchaser shall cease on her death,— except when, without any collusion between her and the plaintiff,—

(b) the decree is one for sale passed on a mortgage made under section 31 so as to take effect beyond the life of the female.

Effect of decision or compromise to which the restricted owner is a party.

35. A decision in any suit or other proceeding, or a compromise of any dispute, relating to the property to which the restricted owner is a party, shall, except where she acts in collusion with the party opposed to her, bind those who take the property after her under this Act in the same manner and to the same extent as if she were an absolute owner of the property.

Effect of lapse of time during continuance of restricted ownership.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter VI.—Of Wills of Khojás.—Sections 42-43.)

owner of the property and it had been taken by them as her heirs.

[Bo. Bill, s. 39.] 37. (1) When property has descended to a female as restricted owner and she dies unmarried, it shall belong to the person to whom it would then have belonged if she had died before the absolute owner from whom it descended and it had descended under this Act without having been alienated.

Further descent of property held by unmarried female as restricted owner.

(2) In default of such person, the property shall descend as if the female were not a restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 41.] 38. (1) When property has descended to a female as restricted owner and she dies, being at the time of her death married, a widow or divorced from her husband, the property shall be divided among her legitimate lineal male descendants, not being more remote than the fourth degree, those nearest in degree of kindred to her excluding the more remote, and, when those nearest in degree are not her sons, the property being so divided amongst them that the sons of any person shall take the share which he would have taken if the fathers of all had survived the restricted owner.

(2) In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the property shall belong to the daughters of the deceased; in default of daughters, the property shall belong to the legitimate lineal male descendants of daughters, not being more remote from the deceased than the fourth degree, those nearest in degree excluding the more remote; the descendants of each daughter, when they take, taking an equal share, and when they are not sons of the daughters, that share being so divided among them that the sons of any person shall take what he would have taken if the fathers of all had survived the restricted owner.

(3) In default of legitimate lineal male descendants of daughters as aforesaid, the property shall belong to the person to whom it would then have belonged if the restricted owner had died before the absolute owner from whom it descended, and it had descended under this Act without having been alienated.

(4) In default of such person, the property shall descend as if the female were not a restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 32.] 39. When property, having descended to a female as restricted owner, subsequently descends to another female under section 37, sub-section (1), or section 38, sub-section (3), that female shall take it as restricted owner.

When female taking property under sections 37 and 38 takes as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 19.] 40. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing sections, when two or more widows of a deceased Khojá take his property under this Act as restricted owners,—

Widows taking together as restricted owners to have a right of survivorship.

(1) there shall be as between them a right of survivorship in respect of that property;

(2) the proviso to section 29 shall not apply to any lease of or any right to, over or in respect of the property, or any part or share thereof, granted or created by one or more of them without the consent in writing of the other or others of them then surviving;

(4) section 35 shall not apply to any decision in any suit or proceeding or to any compromise unless all of them then surviving are parties to that suit, proceeding or compromise.

[Bo. Bill, s. 34; Act XV of 1856, s. 2.] 41. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing sections, a widow marrying again after her husband's death shall not be entitled to take as restricted owner his property or any property of any of his lineal descendants which has descended to them from him; and a widow taking any such property as restricted owner under the foregoing sections and subsequently marrying again shall, for the purpose of applying sections 28, 29, 31, 38 and 10, to that property, be deemed to have died.

Effect of re-marriage of widow claiming or holding as restricted owner.

CHAPTER VI.

OF WILLS OF KHOJÁS.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 4, 5 & 6.] 42. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the portions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, set forth in the schedule hereto annexed, with the modifications shown in that schedule, shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 331 of that Act, apply to all wills made by a Khojá, whether male or female, dying on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-five; and Act X of 1865.

Extension of portions of Act X of 1865 with certain modifications to wills of Khojás.

in the portions of the Act so applying all words defined in section 3 of the Act shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to have the same meaning as that section has attached to them respectively;

Provided that—

(a) For the purpose of the portions of the Act so applying, no person to whom the Indian Majority Act, 1875, applies shall be deemed to have attained his majority before the time specified in this behalf in that Act.

IX of 1875.

(b) A bequest by a Khojá in favour of any person who has not come into existence at the death of the testator, or in favour of a class of persons any one of whom has not come into existence at that time, shall be void.

(c) When a bequest is void under clause (b), any bequest contained in the same will and intended to take effect after or upon failure of such prior bequest shall also be void.

[Act IV of 1882, s. 10.] 43. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sections, a Khojá may bequeath property to or for the benefit of a woman so that she shall not have power to transfer or charge the same or her beneficial interest therein.

Bequest of property to woman without power to transfer or charge.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter VIII.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 48-51.)

CHAPTER VII.

OF MAINTENANCE AND MARRIAGE AND FUNERAL EXPENSES.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 34 & 43.] 44. (1) The amount requisite for the maintenance of the following persons and the amount of their necessary funeral expenses shall, if they do not possess or leave means sufficient for the purpose, be payable out of any property of a deceased male Khojá in respect of which he has died intestate.

Maintenance and funeral expenses payable out of intestate's property.

(a) the widow or widows of the deceased Khojá and the widows of his legitimate lineal male descendants, provided they have not married again;

(b) every daughter and sister (whether legitimate or not) of the deceased Khojá, and every legitimate daughter of his son, grandson or great-grandson, except when she has been married and her husband is living;

(d) his illegitimate sons until they attain their majority.

[Bo. Bill, s. 44.] 45. The expenses of the first or only marriage of every daughter (whether legitimate or not) of a deceased male Khojá, and of every legitimate daughter of his deceased son, grandson or great-grandson, if not otherwise sufficiently provided for, shall be payable out of any of his property in respect of which he has died intestate.

Marriage expenses payable out of intestate's property.

Maintenance and funeral expenses payable out of property of testator.

[New.] 47. Any sum claimable for maintenance or marriage expenses or funeral expenses under section 44, section 45 or section 46 out of any property of a deceased male Khojá shall be recoverable as if it was due under a contract made by the Khojá in his lifetime and he had died leaving only that property:

Recovery of sums claimable under sections 44, 45 and 46.

Provided that—

first, the property shall be applied to the payment of debts due by the deceased before being applied to the payment of sums so claimable;

thirdly, when a suit is instituted for the purpose of having any such allowance fixed against a person taking the property by intestate succession, and that person is able and willing to maintain or provide for the maintenance of the person by or on whose behalf the suit is instituted, and gives security to the satisfaction of the Court for his so doing, the Court may, if it thinks fit, dismiss the suit.

CHAPTER VIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

[Bo. Bill, s. 42. Act X of 1865, s. 28.] 48. When a Khojá dies intestate in respect of any of his property, and there is no person entitled to take that property under the foregoing sections, it shall go to the Crown.

Property when to go to the Crown.

49. Except as otherwise provided by this Act—

Females succeeding under this Act to take as males, except in certain cases.

(2) a female taking property under any testamentary disposition under this Act shall have the same interest in it, and the same powers in respect of it, as a male taking under a like disposition.

[Bo. Bill, s. 35. Act XV of 1856, s. 3.] 50. If a widow of a deceased Khojá, not having been appointed by his will to be guardian for his children, marries again, she shall not be entitled as of right to be appointed guardian of the children by a Court under any law for the time being in force relating to the appointment of guardians, and, when she has before her re-marriage been so appointed, a Court having jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for the children may in its discretion remove her from the guardianship.

Guardianship of children where widow re-marries.

51. A Khojá may dispose, by gift made in contemplation of death, of any moveable property which he could dispose of by will.

Property transferable by gift made in contemplation of death.

A gift is said to be made in contemplation of death where a person who is ill and expects to die shortly of his illness delivers to another the possession of any moveable property to keep as a gift in case the donor shall die of that illness.

When gift said to be made in contemplation of death.

Such a gift may be resumed by the giver.

Such gift resumable.

It does not take effect if he recovers from the illness during which it was made, nor if he survives the person to whom it was made.

When it fails.

Illustrations.

(a.) A being ill, and in expectation of death, delivers to B, to be retained by him in case of A's death—

a watch:

a bond granted by C to A:

a bank-note:

a promissory note of the Government of India endorsed in blank:

a bill of exchange endorsed in blank:

certain mortgage-deeds.

A dies of the illness during which he delivered these articles.

B is entitled to—

the watch:

the debt secured by C's bond:

the bank-note:

the promissory note of the Government of India:

the bill of exchange:

the money secured by the mortgage-deeds.

(b.) A being ill, and in expectation of death, delivers to B the key of a trunk, or the key of a warehouse in which goods of bulk belonging to A are deposited, with the intention of giving him the control over the contents of the trunk, or over the deposited goods, and desires him to keep them in case of A's death. A dies of the illness during which he delivered these articles. B is entitled to the trunk and its contents, or to A's goods of bulk in the warehouse.

(c.) A being ill, and in expectation of death, puts aside certain articles in separate parcels, and marks upon the parcels respectively the names of B and C. The parcels are not delivered during the life of A. A dies of the illness during which he set aside the parcels. B and C are not entitled to the contents of the parcels.

SCHEDULE.

(See Section 42.)

Note.—Modifications are shewn in italics; omissions by asterisks.

PART VII.

Of Wills and Codicils.

Persons capable of making wills.

46. Every person of sound mind and not a minor may dispose of his property by will.

Explanation 1.—A married woman may dispose by will of any property which she could alienate by her own act during her life.

Explanation 2.—Persons who are deaf, or dumb, or blind are not thereby incapacitated for making a will if they are able to know what they do by it.

Explanation 3.—One who is ordinarily insane may make a will during an interval in which he is of sound mind.

Explanation 4.—No person can make a will while he is in such a state of mind, whether arising from drunkenness, or from illness, or from any other cause, that he does not know what he is doing.

Illustrations.

(a.) A can perceive what is going on in his immediate neighbourhood, and can answer familiar questions, but has not a competent understanding as to the nature of his property, or the persons who are of kindred to him, or in whose favour it would be proper that he should make his will. A cannot make a valid will.

(b.) A executes an instrument purporting to be his will, but he does not understand the nature of the instrument nor the effect of its provisions. This instrument is not a valid will.

(c.) A, being very feeble and debilitated, but capable of exercising a judgment as to the proper mode of disposing of his property, makes a will. This is a valid will.

Testamentary guardian.

47. A father, whatever his age may be, may by will appoint a guardian or guardians for his child during minority.

Will obtained by fraud, coercion or importunity.

Illustrations.

(a.) A falsely and knowingly represents to the testator that the testator's only child is dead, or that he has done some undutiful act, and thereby induces the testator to make a will in his, A's, favour; such will has been obtained by fraud and is invalid.

(b.) A by fraud and deception prevails upon the testator to bequeath a legacy to him. The bequest is void.

(c.) A, being a prisoner by lawful authority, makes his will. The will is not invalid by reason of the imprisonment.

(d.) A threatens to shoot B, or to burn his house, or to cause him to be arrested on a criminal charge, unless he makes a bequest in favour of C. B in consequence makes a bequest in favour of C. The bequest is void, the making of it having been caused by coercion.

(e.) A being of sufficient intellect, if undisturbed by the influence of others, to make a will, yet being so much under the control of B that he is not a free agent, makes a will dictated by B. It appears that he would not have executed the will but for fear of B. The will is invalid.

(f.) A, being in so feeble a state of health as to be unable to resist importunity, is pressed by B to make a will of a certain purport, and does so merely to purchase peace, and in submission to B. The will is invalid.

(g.) A being in such a state of health as to be capable of exercising his own judgment and volition, B uses urgent intercession and persuasion with him to induce him to make a will of a certain purport. A, in consequence of the intercession and persuasion, but in the free exercise of his judgment and volition, makes his will in the manner recommended by B. The will is not rendered invalid by the intercession and persuasion of B.

(h.) A, with a view to obtaining a legacy from B, pays him attention and flatters him, and thereby produces in him a capricious partiality to A. B, in consequence of such attention and flattery, makes his will, by which he leaves a legacy to A. The bequest is not rendered invalid by the attention and flattery of A.

Will may be revoked or altered.

49. A will is liable to be revoked or altered by the maker of it at any time when he is competent to dispose of his property by will.

PART VIII.

Of the Execution of Unprivileged Wills.

Execution of unprivileged wills.

50. Every testator, not being a soldier employed in an expedition, or engaged in actual warfare, or a mariner at sea, must execute his will according to the following rules:—

First.—The testator shall sign or shall affix his mark to the will, or it shall be signed by some other person in his presence and by his direction.

Second.—The signature or mark of the testator, or the signature of the person signing for him, shall be so placed that it shall appear that it was intended thereby to give effect to the writing as a will.

Third.—The will shall be attested by two or more witnesses, each of whom must have seen the testator sign or affix his mark to the will, or have seen some other person sign the will in the presence and by the direction of the testator, or have received from the testator a personal acknowledgment of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person; and each of the witnesses must sign or affix his mark to the will in the presence of the testator, but it shall not be necessary that more than one witness be present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary.

Incorporation of papers by reference.

51. If a testator, in a will or codicil duly attested, refers to any other document then actually written, as expressing any part of his intentions, such document shall be considered as forming a part of the will or codicil in which it is referred to.

PART IX.

Of Privileged Wills.

Privileged wills.

52. Any soldier being employed in an expedition, or engaged in actual warfare, or any mariner being at sea, may, if he has completed the age of eighteen years, dispose of his property by a will made as is mentioned in the fifty-third section. Such wills are called privileged wills.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, the surgeon of a regiment, is actually employed in an expedition. He is a soldier actually employed in an expedition, and can make a privileged will.

(b.) A is at sea in a merchant-ship, of which he is the purser. He is a mariner, and being at sea can make a privileged will.

(c.) A, a soldier serving in the field against insurgents, is a soldier engaged in actual warfare, and as such can make a privileged will.

(d.) A, a mariner of a ship in the course of a voyage, is temporarily on shore, while she is lying in harbour. He is, in the sense of the words used in this clause, a mariner at sea, and can make a privileged will.

(e.) A, an admiral who commands a naval force, but who lives on shore, and only occasionally goes on board his ship, is not considered as at sea, and cannot make a privileged will.

(f.) A, a mariner serving on a military expedition, but not being at sea, is considered as a soldier, and can make a privileged will.

Mode of making, and rules for executing, privileged wills.

53. Privileged wills may be in writing, or may be made by word of mouth.

The execution of them shall be governed by the following rules:—

First.—The will may be written wholly by the testator, with his own hand. In such case it need not be signed nor attested.

Second.—It may be written wholly or in part by another person, and signed by the testator. In such case it need not be attested.

Third.—If the instrument purporting to be a will is written wholly or in part by another person, and is not signed by the testator, it shall be considered to be his will, if it be shown that it was written by the testator's directions, or that he recognized it as his will.

If it appear on the face of the instrument that the execution of it in the manner intended by him was not completed, the instrument shall not by reason of that circumstance be invalid, provided that his non-execution of it can be reasonably ascribed to some cause other than the abandonment of the testamentary intentions expressed in the instrument.

Fourth.—If the soldier or mariner shall have written instructions for the preparation of his will, but shall have died before it could be prepared and executed, such instructions shall be considered to constitute his will.

Fifth.—If the soldier or mariner shall, in the presence of two witnesses, have given verbal instructions for the preparation of his will, and they shall have been reduced into writing in his lifetime, but he shall have died before the instrument could be prepared and executed, such instructions shall be considered to constitute his will, although they may not have been reduced into writing in his presence, nor read over to him.

Sixth.—Such soldier or mariner as aforesaid may make a will by word of mouth by declaring his intentions before two witnesses present at the same time.

Seventh.—A will made by word of mouth shall be null at the expiration of one month after the testator shall have ceased to be entitled to make a privileged will.

PART X.

Of the Attestation, Revocation, Alteration and Revival of Wills.

* * * * * * * * *

Witness not disqualified by interest or by being executor.

55. No person, by reason of interest in, or of his being an executor of, a will, is disqualified as a witness to prove the execution of the will or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof.

* * * * * * * * *

Revocation of unprivileged will or codicil.

57. No unprivileged will or codicil, nor any part thereof, shall be revoked otherwise than * * * * * by another will or codicil, or by some writing declaring an intention to revoke the same, and executed in the manner in which an unprivileged will is hereinbefore required to be executed, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same.

Illustrations.

(a.) A has made an unprivileged will. Afterwards A makes another unprivileged will which purports to revoke the first. This is a revocation.

(b.) A has made an unprivileged will. Afterwards, A being entitled to make a privileged will, makes a privileged will which purports to revoke his unprivileged will. This is a revocation.

Effect of obliteration, interlineation or alteration in unprivileged will.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

as so altered, shall be deemed to be duly executed if the signature of the testator and the subscription of the witnesses be made in the margin or on some other part of the will opposite or near to such alteration, or at the foot or end of or opposite to a memorandum referring to such alteration, and written at the end or some other part of the will.

Revocation of privileged will or codicil.

59. A privileged will or codicil may be revoked by the testator, by an unprivileged will or codicil, or by any act expressing an intention to revoke it, and accompanied with such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged will, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same.

Explanation.—In order to the revocation of a privileged will or codicil by an act accompanied with such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged will, it is not necessary that the testator should at the time of doing that act be in a situation which entitles him to make a privileged will.

Revival of unprivileged will.

60. No unprivileged will or codicil, nor any part thereof, which shall be in any manner revoked, shall be revived otherwise than by the re-execution thereof, or by a codicil executed in manner hereinbefore required, and showing an intention to revive the same; and when any will or codicil which shall be partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked shall be revived, such revival shall not extend to so much thereof as shall have been revoked before the revocation of the whole thereof, unless an intention to the contrary shall be shown by the will or codicil.

Extent of revival of will or codicil partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked.

PART XI.

Of the Construction of Wills.

Wording of will.

Enquiries to determine questions as to object or subject of will.

62. For the purpose of determining questions as to what person or what property is denoted by any words used in a will, a Court must inquire into every material fact relating to the persons who claim to be interested under such will, the property which is claimed as the subject of disposition, the circumstances of the testator and of his family, and into every fact a knowledge of which may conduce to the right application of the words which the testator has used.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, by his will, bequeaths 1,000 rupees to his eldest son or to his youngest grandchild, or to his cousin Mary. A Court may make inquiry in order to ascertain to what person the description in the will applies.

(b.) A, by his will, leaves to B "his estate called Black Acre." It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what is the subject-matter of the bequest; that is to say, what estate of the testator's is called Black Acre.

(c.) A, by his will, leaves to B "the estate which he purchased of C." It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what estate the testator purchased of C.

Misnomer or misdescription of object.

63. Where the words used in the will to designate or describe a legatee, or a class of legatees, sufficiently show what is meant, an error in the name or description shall not prevent the legacy from taking effect.

A mistake in the name of a legatee may be corrected by a description of him, and a mistake in the description of a legatee may be corrected by the name.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths a legacy "to Thomas, the second son of his brother John." The testator has an only brother, named John, who has no son named Thomas, but has a second son whose name is William. William shall have the legacy.

(b.) A bequeaths a legacy "to Thomas, the second son of his brother John." The testator has an only brother named John, whose first son is named Thomas, and whose second son is named William. Thomas shall have the legacy.

(c.) The testator bequeaths his property "to A and B, the legitimate children of C." C has no legitimate child, but has two illegitimate children, A and B. The bequest to A and B takes effect, although they are illegitimate.

(d.) The testator gives his residuary estate to be divided among "his seven children," and proceeding to enumerate them, mentions six names only. This omission shall not prevent the seventh child from taking a share with the others.

(e.) The testator, having six grand-children, makes a bequest to "his six grand-children," and proceeding to mention them by their Christian names, mentions one twice over, omitting another altogether. The one whose name is not mentioned shall take a share with the others.

(f.) The testator bequeaths "1,000 rupees to each of the three children of A." At the date of the will A has four children. Each of these four children shall, if he survives the testator, receive a legacy of 1,000 rupees.

When words may be supplied.

64. Where any word material to the full expression of the meaning has been omitted, it may be supplied by the context.

Illustration.

The testator gives a legacy of "five hundred" to his daughter A, and a legacy of "five hundred rupees" to his daughter B. A shall take a legacy of five hundred rupees.

Rejection of erroneous particulars in description of subject.

65. If the thing which the testator intended to bequeath can be sufficiently identified from the description of it given in the will, but some parts of the description do not apply, such parts of the description shall be rejected as erroneous and the bequest shall take effect.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, but had no marsh-lands in the occupation of X. The words "in the occupation of X" shall be rejected as erroneous, and the marsh-lands of the testator lying in L shall pass by the bequest.

(b.) The testator bequeaths to A "his zamíndárí of Rámpúr." He had an estate at Rámpúr, but it was a taluq and not a zamíndárí. The taluq passes by this bequest.

When part of description may not be rejected as erroneous.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Explanation.—In judging whether a case falls within the meaning of this section, any words which would be liable to rejection under the sixty-fifth section are to be considered as struck out of the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The bequest shall be considered as limited to such of the testator's marsh-lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X.

(b.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X, comprising 1,000 bighás of land." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The measurement is wholly inapplicable to the marsh lands of either class, or to the whole taken together. The measurement shall be considered as struck out of the will, and such of the testator's marsh-lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X shall alone pass by the bequest.

Extrinsic evidence admissible in case of latent ambiguity.

67. Where the words of the will are unambiguous, but it is found by extrinsic evidence that they admit of applications one only of which can have been intended by the testator, extrinsic evidence may be taken to show which of these applications was intended.

Illustrations.

(a.) A man, having two cousins of the name of Mary, bequeaths a sum of money to "his cousin Mary." It appears that there are two persons each answering the description in the will. That description, therefore, admits of two applications, only one of which can have been intended by the testator. Evidence is admissible to show which of the two applications was intended.

(b.) A, by his will, leaves to B "his estate called Sultánpur Khurd." It turns out that he had two estates called Sultánpur Khurd. Evidence is admissible to show which estate was intended.

Extrinsic evidence inadmissible in cases of patent ambiguity or deficiency.

68. Where there is an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of the will, no extrinsic evidence as to the intentions of the testator shall be admitted.

Illustrations.

(a.) A man has an aunt Caroline and a cousin Mary, and has no aunt of the name of Mary. By his will he bequeaths 1,000 rupees to "his aunt Caroline" and 1,000 rupees to "his cousin Mary," and afterwards bequeaths 2,000 rupees to "his before-mentioned aunt Mary." There is no person to whom the description given in the will can apply, and evidence is not admissible to show who was meant by "his before-mentioned aunt Mary." The bequest is therefore void for uncertainty under the seventy-sixth section.

(b.) A bequeaths 1,000 rupees to , leaving a blank for the name of the legatee. Evidence is not admissible to show what name the testator intended to insert.

(c.) A bequeaths to B rupees, or "his estate of ." Evidence is not admissible to show what sum or what estate the testator intended to insert.

Meaning of clause to be collected from entire will.

69. The meaning of any clause in a will is to be collected from the entire instrument, and all its parts are to be construed with reference to each other; and for this purpose a codicil is to be considered as part of the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator gives to B a specific fund or property at the date of A, and by a subsequent clause gives the whole of his property to A. The effect of the several clauses taken together is to vest the specific fund or property in A for life and after his decease in B; it appearing from the bequest to B that the testator meant to use in a restricted sense the words in which he describes what he gives to A.

(b.) Where a testator, having an estate one part of which is called Black Acre, bequeaths the whole of his estate to A, and in another part of his will bequeaths Black Acre to B, the latter bequest is to be read as an exception out of the first, as if he had said, "I give Black Acre to B and all the rest of my estate to A."

When words may be understood in restricted sense, and when in sense wider than usual.

70. General words may be understood in a restricted sense where it may be collected from the will that the testator meant to use them in a restricted sense; and words may be understood in a wider sense than that which they usually bear, where it may be collected from the other words of the will that the testator meant to use them in such wider sense.

Illustrations.

(b.) The testator (a sailor on ship-board) bequeathed to his mother his gold ring, buttons and chest of clothes, and to his friend A (a shipmate) his red box, clasp-knife and all things not before bequeathed. The testator's share in a house does not pass to A under this bequest.

(c.) A, by his will, bequeathed to B all his household furniture, plate, linen, china, books, pictures and all other goods of whatever kind; and afterwards bequeathed to B a specified part of his property. Under the first bequest, B is entitled only to such articles of the testator's as are of the same nature with the articles therein enumerated.

Which of two possible constructions preferred.

71. Where a clause is susceptible of two meanings, according to one of which it has some effect, and according to the other it can have none, the former is to be preferred.

No part rejected, if it can be reasonably construed.

72. No part of a will is to be rejected as destitute of meaning if it is possible to put a reasonable construction upon it.

Interpretation of words repeated in different parts of will.

73. If the same words occur in different parts of the same will, they must be taken to have been used everywhere in the same sense, unless there appears an intention to the contrary.

Testator's intention to be effectuated as far as possible.

74. The intention of the testator is not to be set aside because it cannot take effect to the full extent, but effect is to be given to it as far as possible.

* * * * * *

The last of two inconsistent clauses prevails.

75. Where two clauses or gifts in a will are irreconcileable, so that they cannot possibly stand together, the last shall prevail.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator by the first clause of his will leaves his estate of Rámnagar "to A," and by the last clause of his will leaves it "to B and not to A." B shall have it.

(b.) If a man at the commencement of his will gives his house to A, and at the close of it directs that his house shall be sold and the proceeds invested for the benefit of B, the latter disposition shall prevail.

Will or bequest void for uncertainty.

76. A will or bequest not expressive of any definite intention is void for uncertainty.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Illustration.

If a testator says—"I bequeath goods to A"; or "I bequeath to A"; or "I leave to A all the goods mentioned in a schedule," and no schedule is found; or "I bequeath 'money,' 'wheat,' 'oil,'" or the like, without saying how much, this is void.

77. The description contained in a will, of property the subject of gift, shall, unless a contrary intention appear by the will, be deemed to refer to and comprise the property answering that description at the death of the testator.

Words describing subject refer to property answering description at testator's death.

* * * * * *

82. Where property is bequeathed to any person, he is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless it appears from the will that only a restricted interest was intended for him.

Bequest without words of limitation.

83. Where property is bequeathed to a person with a bequest in the alternative to another person or to a class of persons, if a contrary intention does not appear by the will, the legatee first named shall be entitled to the legacy, if he be alive at the time when it takes effect; but if he be then dead, the person or class of persons named in the second branch of the alternative shall take the legacy.

Bequest in alternative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A survives the testator. B takes nothing.

(b.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A dies after the date of the will, and before the testator. The legacy goes to B.

(c.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A is dead at the date of the will. The legacy goes to B.

(e.) Property is bequeathed to A or his nearest of kin. A dies in the lifetime of the testator. Upon the death of the testator, the bequest to A's nearest of kin takes effect.

* * * * * *

84. Where property is bequeathed to a person, and words are added which describe a class of persons, but do not denote them as direct objects of a distinct and independent gift, such person is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless a contrary intention appears by the will.

Effect of words describing a class added to bequest to a person.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made—

to A and his children,
to A and his children by his present wife,
to A and his heirs,
to A and the heirs of his body,
to A and the heirs male of his body,
to A and the heirs female of his body,
to A and his issue,
to A and his family,
to A and his descendants,
to A and his representatives,
to A and his personal representatives,
to A, his executors and administators.

In each of these cases, A takes the whole interest which the testator had in the property.

(b.) A bequest is made to A and his brothers. A and his brothers are jointly entitled to the legacy.

* * * * * *

85. Where a bequest is made to a class of persons under a general description only, no one to whom the words of the description are not in their ordinary sense applicable shall take the legacy.

Bequest to class of persons under general description only.

88. Where a will purports to make two bequests to the same person, and a question arises whether the testator intended to make the second bequest instead of or in addition to the first, if there is nothing in the will to show what he intended, the following rules shall prevail in determining the construction to be put upon the will:—

Rules of construction where will purports to make two bequests to same person.

First.—If the same specific thing is bequeathed twice to the same legatee in the same will, or in the will and again in a codicil, he is entitled to receive that specific thing only.

Second.—Where one and the same will or one and the same codicil purports to make, in two places, a bequest to the same person of the same quantity or amount of anything, he shall be entitled to one such legacy only.

Third.—Where two legacies of unequal amount are given to the same person in the same will, or in the same codicil, the legatee is entitled to both.

Fourth.—Where two legacies, whether equal or unequal in amount, are given to the same legatee, one by a will and the other by a codicil, or each by a different codicil, the legatee is entitled to both legacies.

Explanation.—In the four last rules, the word "will" does not include a codicil.

Illustrations.

(a.) A having ten shares, and no more, in the Bank of Bengal, made his will, which contains near its commencement the words "I bequeath my ten shares in the Bank of Bengal to B." After other bequests, the will concludes with the words "and I bequeath my ten shares in the Bank of Bengal to B." B is entitled simply to receive A's ten shares in the Bank of Bengal.

(b.) A having one diamond-ring, which was given him by B, bequeathed to C the diamond-ring which was given him by B. A afterwards made a codicil to his will, and thereby, after giving other legacies, he bequeathed to C the diamond-ring which was given him by B. C can claim nothing except the diamond-ring which was given to A by B.

(c.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees, and afterwards, in the same will, repeats the bequest in the same words. B is entitled to one legacy of 5,000 rupees only.

(d.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees, and afterwards, by the same will, bequeaths to B the sum of 6,000 rupees. B is entitled to 11,000 rupees.

(e.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees, and by a codicil to the will he bequeaths to him 5,000 rupees. B is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees.

(f.) A, by one codicil to his will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees, and by another codicil, bequeaths to him 6,000 rupees. B is entitled to receive 11,000 rupees.

(g.) A, by his will, bequeaths "500 rupees to B because she was his nurse," and in another part of the will bequeaths 500 rupees to B "because she went to England with his children." B is entitled to receive 1,000 rupees.

(h.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also, in another part of the will, an annuity of 400 rupees. B is entitled to both legacies.

(i.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also bequeaths to him the sum of 5,000 rupees if he shall attain the age of 18. B is entitled absolutely to one sum of 5,000 rupees, and take a contingent interest in another sum of 5,000 rupees.

89. A residuary legatee may be constituted by any words that show an intention on the part of the testator that the person designated shall take the surplus or residue of his property.

Constitution of residuary legatee.

(a.) A makes her will, consisting of several testamentary papers, in one of which are contained the following words:—"I think there will be something left, after all funeral expenses, &c., to give to B, now at school, towards equipping him to any profession he may hereafter be appointed to." B is constituted residuary legatee.

(b.) A makes his will, with the following passage at the end of it:—"I believe there will be found sufficient in my banker's hands to defray and discharge my debts, which I hereby desire B to do, and keep the residue for her own use and pleasure." B is constituted the residuary legatee.

(c.) A bequeaths all his property to B, except certain stocks and funds, which he bequeaths to C. B is the residuary legatee.

90. Under a residuary bequest, the legatee is entitled to all property belonging to the testator at the time of his death, of which he has not made any other testamentary disposition which is capable of taking effect.

Property to which residuary legatee entitled.

* * * * * * *

91. If a legacy be given in general terms, without specifying the time when it is to be paid, the legatee has a vested interest in it from the day of the death of the testator, and, if he dies without having received it, it shall pass to his representatives.

Time of vesting of legacy in general terms.

92. If the legatee does not survive the testator, the legacy cannot take effect, but shall lapse and form part of the residue of the testator's property, unless it appear by the will that the testator intended that it should go to some other person.

In what case legacy lapses.

In order to entitle the representatives of the legatee to receive the legacy, it must be proved that he survived the testator.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator bequeaths to B "500 rupees which B owes him." B dies before the testator; the legacy lapses.

(b.) A bequest is made to A and his children. A dies before the testator or happens to be dead when the will is made. The legacy to A and his children lapses.

(e.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A on his completing his eighteenth year, and in case he should die before he completes his eighteenth year, to B. A completes his eighteenth year, and dies in the lifetime of the testator. The legacy to A lapses, and the bequest to B does not take effect.

(f.) The testator and the legatee perished in the same shipwreck. There is no evidence to show which died first. The legacy will laspe.

93. If a legacy be given to two persons jointly, and one of them die before the testator, the other legatee takes the whole.

Legacy does not lapse if one of two joint legatees die before testator.

Illustration.

The legacy is simply to A and B. A dies before the testator. B takes the legacy.

94. But where a legacy is given to legatees in words which show that the testator intended to give them distinct shares of it, then if any legatee die before the testator, so much of the legacy as was intended for him shall fall into the residue of the testator's property.

Effect of words showing testator's intention to give distinct shares.

Illustration.

A sum of money is bequeathed to A, B and C, to be equally divided among them. A dies before the testator. B and C shall only take so much as they would have had if A had survived the testator.

95. Where the share that lapses is a part of the general residue bequeathed by the will, that share shall go as undisposed of.

When lapsed share goes as undisposed of.

Illustration.

The testator bequeaths the residue of his estate to A, B and C, to be equally divided between them. A dies before the testator. His one-third of the residue goes as undisposed of.

96. Where a bequest shall have been made to any son or other legitimate lineal male descendant of the testator, and the legatee shall die in the lifetime of the testator, but any legitimate lineal male descendant of his shall survive the testator, the bequest shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of the legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will.

When bequest to testator's lineal descendant does not lapse on his death in testator's lifetime.

Illustration.

A makes his will, by which he bequeaths a sum of money to his son B for his own absolute use and benefit. B dies before A, leaving a son C who survives A, and having made his will whereby he bequeaths all his property to his widow D. The money goes to D.

97. Where a bequest is made to one person for the benefit of another, the legacy does not lapse by the death, in the testator's lifetime, of the person to whom the bequest is made.

Bequest to A for benefit of B does not lapse by A's death.

98. Where a bequest is made simply to a described class of persons, the thing bequeathed shall go only to such as shall be alive at the testator's death.

Survivorship in case of bequest to described class.

(a.) A bequeaths 1,000 rupees to "the children of B" without saying when it is to be distributed among them. B had died previous to the date of the will, leaving three children, C, D and E. E died after the date of the will, but for the death of A. C and D survive A. The legacy shall belong to C and D, to the exclusion of the representatives of E.

(b.) A bequeaths a legacy to the children of B. At the time of the testator's death, B has no chidren. The bequest is void.

PART XII.

OF VOID BEQUESTS.

99. Where a bequest is made to a person by a particular description, and there is no person in existence at the testator's death who answers the description, the bequest is void.

Bequest to person by particular description, who is not in existence at testator's death.

101. No bequest is valid whereby the vesting of the thing bequeathed may be delayed beyond the lifetime of one or more persons living at the testator's decease.

Rule against perpetuity.

* * * * * *

102. If a bequest is made to a class of persons, with regard to some of whom it is inoperative by reason of the rules contained in the last preceding section, such bequest shall be wholly void.

Bequest to a class, some of whom may come under rules in section 101.

* * * * * *

Bequest to take effect on failure of bequest void under section 101 or 102.

104. A direction to accumulate the income arising from any property shall be void; and the property shall be disposed of as if no accumulation had been directed.

Effect of direction for accumulation.

Exception.—Where the property is immoveable, or where accumulation is directed to be made from the death of the testator, the direction shall be valid in respect only of the income arising from the property within one year next following the testator's death;

and at the end of the year such property and income shall be disposed of respectively, as if the period during which the accumulation has been directed to be made had elapsed.

Illustrations.

(a.) The will directs that the sum of 10,000 rupees shall be invested in Government securities, and the income accumulated for 20 years, and that the principal, together with the accumulations, shall then be divided between A, B and C. A, B and C are entitled to receive the sum of 10,000 rupees at the end of the year from the testator's death.

(b.) The will directs that 10,000 rupees shall be invested and the income accumulated until A shall marry, and shall then be paid to him. A is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees at the end of a year from the testator's death.

(c.) The will directs that the rents of the farm of Sultánpur shall be accumulated for ten years, and that the accumulation shall be then paid to the eldest son of A. At the death of the testator, A has an eldest son living, named B. B shall receive at the end of one year from the testator's death the rents which have accrued during the year, together with any interest which may have been made by investing them.

(e.) A bequeaths a sum of money to B, to be paid to him when he shall attain the age of 18, and directs the interest to be accumulated till he shall arrive at that age. At A's death the legacy becomes vested in B; and so much of the interest as is not required for his maintenance and education is accumulated, not by reason of the direction contained in the will, but in consequence of B's minority.

PART XIII.

OF THE VESTING OF LEGACIES.

106. Where by the terms of a bequest the legatee is not entitled to immediate possession of the thing bequeathed, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the will, become vested in the legatee on the testator's death, and shall pass to the legatee's representatives if he dies before that time and without having received the legacy.

Date of vesting of legacy when payment or possession postponed.

And in such cases the legacy is from the testator's death said to be vested in interest.

Explanation.—An intention that a legacy to any person shall not become vested in interest in him is not to be inferred merely from a provision whereby the payment or possession of the thing bequeathed is postponed, or whereby a prior interest therein is bequeathed to some other person, or whereby the income arising from the fund bequeathed is directed to be accumulated until the time of payment arrives, or from a provision that, if a particular event shall happen, the legacy shall go over to another person.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 100 rupees, to be paid to him at the death of C. On A's death the legacy becomes vested in interest in B, and if he dies before C, his representatives are entitled to the legacy.

(b.) A bequeaths to B 100 rupees, to be paid to him upon his attaining the age of 18. On A's death the legacy becomes vested in interest in B.

(c.) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B. On the testator's death the legacy to B becomes vested in interest in B.

(d.) A fund is bequeathed to A until B attains the age of 18, and then to B. The legacy to B is vested in interest from the testator's death.

(e.) A bequeaths the whole of his property to B upon trust to pay certain debts out of the income, and then to make over the fund to C. At A's death the gift to C becomes vested in interest in him.

(f.) A fund is bequeathed to A, B and C in equal shares, to be paid to them on their attaining the age of 18 respectively, with a proviso that, if all of them die under the age of 18, the legacy shall devolve upon D. On the death of the testator, the shares vest in interest in A, B and C, subject to be devested in case A, B and C shall all die under 18, and upon the death of any of them (except the last survivor) under the age of 18, his vested interest passes, so subject, to his representatives.

107. A legacy bequeathed in case a specified uncertain event shall happen does not vest until that event happens.

Date of vesting when legacy contingent upon specified uncertain event.

A legacy bequeathed in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen does not vest until the happening of that event becomes impossible.

In either case, until the condition has been fulfilled, the interest of the legatee is called contingent.

Exception.—Where a fund is bequeathed to any person upon his attaining a particular age, and the will also gives to him absolutely the income to arise from the fund before he reaches that age, or directs the income, or so much of it as may be necessary, to be applied for his benefit, the bequest of the fund is not contingent.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to D in case A, B and C shall all die under the age of 18. D has a contingent interest in the legacy until A, B and C all die under 18, or one of them attains that age.

(b.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A "in case he shall attain the age of 18," or, "when he shall attain the age of 18." A's interest in the legacy is contingent until the condition shall be fulfilled by his attaining that age.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, if B shall then be living; but if B shall not be then living, to C. A, B and C survive the testator. B and C each take a contingent interest in the estate until the event which is to vest it in one or in the other shall have happened.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(d.) An estate is bequeathed as in the case last supposed. B dies in the lifetime of A and C. Upon the death of B, C acquires a vested right to obtain possession of the estate upon A's death.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A when she shall attain the age of 18, or shall marry under that age with the consent of B, with a proviso that, if she shall not attain 18, or marry under that age with B's consent, the legacy shall go to C. A and C each take a contingent interest in the legacy. A attains the age of 18. A becomes absolutely entitled to the legacy, although she may have married under 18 without the consent of B.

(f.) An estate is bequeathed to A until he shall marry, and after that event to B. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until the condition shall be fulfiled by A's marrying.

(g.) An estate is bequeathed to A until he shall take advantage of the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, and after that event to B. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until A takes advantage of the Act.

(h.) An estate is bequeathed to A if he shall pay 500 rupees to B. A's interest in the bequest is contingent until he has paid 500 rupees to B.

(i.) A leaves his farm of Sultánpur Khurd to B, if B shall convey his own farm of Sultánpur Buzurg to C. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until he has conveyed the latter farm to C.

(j.) A fund is bequeathed to A if B shall not marry C within five years after the testator's death. A's interest in the legacy is contingent, until the condition shall be fulfilled by the expiration of the five years without B's having married C, or by the occurrence, within that period, of an event which makes the fulfilment of the condition impossible.

(k.) A fund is bequeathed to A if B shall not make any provision for him by will. The legacy is contingent until B's death.

(l.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees a year upon his attaining the age of 18, and directs that the interest, or a competent part thereof, shall be applied for his benefit until he reaches that age. The legacy is vested.

(m.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees when he shall attain the age of 18, and directs that a certain sum, out of another fund, shall be applied for his maintenance until he arrives at that age. The legacy is contingent.

108. Where a bequest is made only to such members of a class as shall have attained a particular age, a person who has not attained that age cannot have a vested interest in the legacy.

Vesting of interest in bequest to such members of a class as shall have attained particular age.

PART XIV.

OF ONEROUS BEQUESTS.

109. Where a bequest imposes an obligation on the legatee, he can take nothing by it unless he accepts it fully.

Onerous bequest.

Illustration.

A having shares in (X), a prosperous joint stock company, and also shares in (Y), a joint stock company in difficulties, in respect of which shares heavy calls are expected to be made, bequeaths to B all his shares in joint stock companies. B refuses to accept the shares in (Y). He forfeits the shares in (X).

110. Where a will contains two separate and independent bequests to the same person, the legatee is at liberty to accept one of them and refuse the other, although the former may be beneficial and the latter onerous.

One of two separate and independent bequests to same person may be accepted, and other refused.

Illustration.

A having a lease for a term of years of a house at a rent which he and his representatives are bound to pay during the term, and which is higher than the house can be let for, bequeaths to B the lease and a sum of money. B refuses to accept the lease. He shall not by this refusal forfeit the money.

PART XV.

OF CONTINGENT BEQUESTS.

111. Where a legacy is given if a specified uncertain event shall happen, and no time is mentioned in the will for the occurrence of that event, the legacy cannot take effect unless such event happens before the period when the fund bequeathed is payable or distributable.

Bequest contingent upon specified uncertain event, no time being mentioned for its occurrence.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, and in case of his death, to B. If A survives the testator, the legacy to B does not take effect.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, and in case of his death without children, to B. If A survives the testator or dies in his lifetime leaving a child, the legacy to B does not take effect.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A when and if he attains the age of 18, and in case of his death, to B. A attains the age of 18. The legacy to B does not take effect.

(d.) A legacy is bequeathed to A for life and after his death to B, and, "in case of B's death without children," to C. The words "in case of B's death without children" are to be understood as meaning in case B shall die without children during the lifetime of A.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, and, "in case of B's death," to C. The words "in case of B's death" are to be considered as meaning "in case B shall die in the lifetime of A."

112. Where a bequest is made to such of certain persons as shall be surviving at some period but the exact period is not specified, the legacy shall go to such of them as shall be alive at the time of payment or distribution, unless a contrary intention appear by the will.

Bequest to such of certain persons as shall be surviving at some period not specified.

Illustrations.

(a.) Property is bequeathed to A and B, to be equally divided between them, or to the survivor of them. If both A and B survive the testator, the legacy is equally divided between them. If A dies before the testator, and B survives the testator, it goes to B.

(b.) Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B and C, to be equally divided between them, or to the survivor of them. B dies during the life of A; C survives A. At A's death the legacy goes to C.

* * * * *

(d.) Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B and C, with a direction that, in case either of them dies in the lifetime of A, the whole shall go to the survivor. B dies in the lifetime of A. Afterwards C dies in the lifetime of A. The legacy goes to the representative of C.

PART XVI.

OF CONDITIONAL BEQUESTS.

113. A bequest upon an impossible condition is void.

Bequest upon impossible condition.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall walk one hundred miles in an hour. The bequest is void.

(b.) A bequeaths 500 rupees to B on condition that he shall marry A's daughter. A's daughter was dead at the date of the will. The bequest is void.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

114. A bequest upon a condition the fulfilment of which would be contrary to law or to morality is void.

Bequest upon illegal or immoral condition.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 500 rupees to B on condition that he shall murder C. The bequest is void.

(b.) A bequeaths 5,000 rupees to his niece if she will desert her husband. The bequest is void.

115. Where a will imposes a condition to be fulfilled before the legatee can take a vested interest in the thing bequeathed, the condition shall be considered to have been fulfilled if it has been substantially complied with.

Fulfilment of condition precedent to vesting of legacy.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C, D and E. A marries with the written consent of B. C is present at the marriage. D sends a present to A previous to the marriage. E has been personally informed by A of his intentions, and has made no objection. A has fulfilled the condition.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. D dies. A marries with the consent of B and C. A has fulfilled the condition.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A marries in the lifetime of B, C and D, with the consent of B and C only. A has not fulfilled the condition.

(d.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A obtains the unconditional assent of B, C and D to his marriage with E. Afterwards B, C and D capriciously retract their consent. A marries E. A has fulfilled the condition.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A marries without the consent of B, C and D, but obtains their consent after the marriage. A has not fulfilled the condition.

(f.) A makes his will, whereby he bequeaths a sum of money to B if B shall marry with the consent of A's executors. B marries during the lifetime of A, and A afterwards expresses his approbation of the marriage. A dies. The bequest to B takes effect.

(g.) A legacy is bequeathed to A if he executes a certain document within a time specified in the will. The document is executed by A within a reasonable time, but not within the time specified in the will. A has not performed the condition, and is not entitled to receive the legacy.

116. Where there is a bequest to one person and a bequest of the same thing to another, if the prior bequest shall fail, the second bequest shall take effect upon the failure of the prior bequest, although the failure may not have occurred in the manner contemplated by the testator.

Bequest to A and on failure of prior bequest, to B.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths a sum of money to his own children surviving him, and if they all die under 18, to B. A dies without having ever had a child. The bequest to B takes effect.

(b.) A bequeaths a sum of money to B, on condition that he shall execute a certain document within three months after A's death, and if he should neglect to do so, to C. B dies in the testator's lifetime. The bequest to C takes effect.

117. Where the will shows an intention that the second bequest shall take effect only in the event of the first bequest failing in a particular manner, the second bequest shall not take effect unless the prior bequest fails in that particular manner.

When second bequest not to take effect on failure of first.

Illustration.

A makes a bequest to his wife, but in case she should die in his lifetime, bequeaths to B that which he had bequeathed to her. A and his wife perish together, under circumstances which make it impossible to prove that she died before him. The bequest to B does not take effect.

118. A bequest may be made to any person with the condition superadded that in case a specified uncertain event shall happen, the thing bequeathed shall go to another person; or, that in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen, the thing bequeathed shall go over to another person.

Bequest over, conditional upon happening or not happening of specified uncertain event.

In each case the ulterior bequest is subject to the rules contained in sections 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 117.

Illustrations.

(a.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A, to be paid to him at the age of 18, and if he shall die before he attains that age, to B. A takes a vested interest in the legacy, subject to be devested and to go to B in case A shall die under 18.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A with a proviso that, if A shall dispute the competency of the testator to make a will, the estate shall go to B. A disputes the competency of the testator to make a will. The estate goes to B.

* * * * *

(d.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A and B, and if either should die during the life of C, then to the survior living at the death of C. A and B die before C. The gift over cannot take effect, but the representative of A takes one-half of the money and the representative of B takes the other half.

(e.) A bequeaths to B the interest of a fund for life, and directs the fund to be divided, at her death, equally among her three children, or such of them as shall be living at her death. All the children of B die in B's lifetime. The bequest over cannot take effect, but the interests of the children pass to their representatives.

119. An ulterior bequest of the kind contemplated by the last preceding section cannot take effect unless the condition is strictly fulfilled.

Condition must be strictly fulfilled.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if he marries without the consent of B, C and D, the legacy shall go to E. D dies. Even if A marries without the consent of B and C, the gift to E does not take effect.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if he marries without the consent of B, the legacy shall go to C. A marries with the consent of B. He afterwards becomes a widower and marries again without the consent of B. The bequest to C does not take effect.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, to be paid at 18, or marriage, with a proviso that, if A dies under 18, or marries without the consent of B, the legacy shall go to C. A marries under 18, without the consent of B. The bequest to C takes effect.

120. If the ulterior bequest be not valid, the original bequest is not affected by it.

Original bequest not affected by invalidity of second.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A for his life, with a condition superadded that if he shall not on a given day walk 100 miles in an hour, the estate shall go to B. The condition being void, A retains his estate as if no condition had been inserted in the will.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A for her life, and if she do not desert her husband, to B. A is entitled to the estate during her life as if no condition had been inserted in the will.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A for life, and, if he marries, to the eldest son of B for life. B, at the date of the testator's death, had not had a son. The bequest over is void under section 92, and A is entitled to the estate during his life.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

121. A bequest may be made with the condition superadded that it shall cease to have effect in case a specified uncertain event shall happen, or in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen.

Bequest conditioned that it shall cease to have effect in case specified uncertain event shall happen or not happen.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A for his life, with a proviso that, in case he shall cut down a certain wood, the bequest shall cease to have any effect. A cuts down the wood; he loses his life-interest in the estate.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A, provided that, if he marries under the age of 25 without the consent of the executors named in the will, the estate shall cease to belong to him. A marries under 25 without the consent of the executors. The estate ceases to belong to him.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A, provided that, if he shall not go to England within three years after the testator's death, his interest in the estate shall cease. A does not go to England within the time prescribed. His interest in the estate ceases.

(d.) An estate is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if she becomes a nun, she shall cease to have any interest in the estate. A becomes a nun. She loses her interest under the will.

(e.) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, if B shall be then living, with a proviso that, if B shall become a nun, the bequest to her shall cease to have any effect. B becomes a nun in the lifetime of A. She thereby loses her contingent interest in the fund.

122. In order that a condition that a bequest shall cease to have effect may be valid, it is necessary that the event to which it relates be one which could legally constitute the condition of a bequest as contemplated by the one hundred and seventh section.

Such condition must not be invalid under section 107.

123. Where a bequest is made with a condition superadded that, unless the legatee shall perform a certain act, the subject-matter of the bequest shall go to another person, or the bequest shall cease to have effect, but no time is specified for the performance of the act, if the legatee takes any step which renders impossible or indefinitely postpones the performance of the act required, the legacy shall go as if the legatee had died without performing such act.

Result of legatee rendering impossible or indefinitely postponing act for which no time specified and on non-performance of which subject-matter to go over.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made to A with a proviso that, unless he enters the army, the legacy shall go over to B. A takes holy orders, and thereby renders it impossible that he should fulfil the condition. B is entitled to receive the legacy.

(b.) A bequest is made to A with a proviso that it shall cease to have any effect if he does not marry B's daughter. A marries a stranger, and thereby indefinitely postpones the fulfilment of the condition. The bequest ceases to have effect.

124. Where the will requires an act to be performed by the legatee within a specified time, either as a condition to be fulfilled before the legacy is enjoyed or as a condition upon the non-fulfilment of which the subject-matter of the bequest is to go over to another person, or the bequest is to cease to have effect, the act must be performed within the time specified, unless the performance of it be prevented by fraud, in which case such further time shall be allowed as shall be requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud.

Performance of condition, precedent or subsequent, within specified time.

Further time in case of fraud.

PART XVII.

Of Bequests with directions as to application or enjoyment.

125. Where a fund is bequeathed absolutely to or for the benefit of any person, but the will contains a direction that it shall be applied or enjoyed in a particular manner, the legatee shall be entitled to receive the fund as if the will had contained no such direction.

Direction that funds be employed in particular manner following absolute bequest of same to or for benefit of any person.

Illustration.

A sum of money is bequeathed towards purchasing a country-residence for A, or to purchase an annuity for A, or to purchase a commission in the army for A, or to place A in any business. A chooses to receive the legacy in money. He is entitled to do so.

126. Where a testator absolutely bequeaths a fund, so as to sever it from his own estate, but directs that the mode of enjoyment of it by the legatee shall be restricted so as to secure a specified benefit for the legatee; if that benefit cannot be obtained for the legatee, the fund belongs to him as if the will had contained no such direction.

Direction that mode of enjoyment of absolute bequest is to be restricted, to secure specified benefit for legatee.

* * * * * *

Bequest of fund for certain purposes, some of which cannot be fulfilled.

PART XVIII.

Of Bequests to an Executor.

128. If a legacy is bequeathed to a person who is named an executor of the will, he shall not take the legacy unless he proves the will or otherwise manifests an intention to act as executor.

Legatee named as executor cannot take unless he shews intention to act as executor.

Illustration.

A legacy is given to A, who is named an executor. A orders the funeral according to the directions contained in the will, and dies a few days after the testator, without having proved the will. A has manifested an intention to act as executor.

PART XIX.

Of Specific Legacies.

129. Where a testator bequeaths to any person a specified part of his property, which is distinguished from all other parts of his property, the legacy is said to be specific.

Specific legacy defined.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.
(Schedule.—Portions of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) modified for application to Wills made by Khojás.)

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—
"the diamond-ring presented to him by C:"
"his gold chain:"
"a certain bale of wool:"
"a certain piece of cloth:"
"all his household-goods, which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in M Street, in Calcutta, at the time of his death:"
"the sum of 1,000 rupees in a certain chest:"
"the debt which B owes him:"
"all his bills, bonds and securities belonging to him lying in his lodgings in Calcutta:"
"all his furniture in his house in Calcutta:"
"all his goods on board a certain ship then lying in the river Hughly:"
"2,000 rupees which he has in the hands of C:"
"the money due to him on the bond of D:"
"his mortgage on the Rámpur factory:"
"one-half of the money owing to him on his mortgage of Rámpur factory:"
"1,000 rupees being part of a debt due to him from C:"
"his capital stock of 1,000 l. in East India stock:"
"his promissory notes of the Government of India for 10,000 rupees in their 4 per cent. loan:"
"all such sums of money as his executors may, after his death, receive in respect of the debt due to him from the insolvent firm of D and Company:"
"all the wine which he may have in his cellar at the time of his death:"
"such of his horses as B may select:"
"all his shares in the Bank of Bengal:"
"all the shares in the Bank of Bengal which he may possess at the time of his death:"
"all the money which he has in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India:"
"all the Government-securities he shall be entitled to at the time of his decease."

Each of these legacies is specific.

(b.) A having Government promissory notes for 10,000 rupees, bequeaths to his executors "Government promissory notes for 10,000 rupees in trust to sell" for the benefit of B.

The legacy is specific.

(c.) A having property at Benares, and also in other places, bequeaths to B all his property at Benares.

The legacy is specific.

(d.) A bequeaths to B—
his house in Calcutta:
his zamíndárí of Rámpur:
his taluq of Rámnagar:
his lease of the indigo-factory of Salkya:
an annuity of 500 rupees out of the rents of his zamíndárí of W.

A directs his zamíndárí of X to be sold, and the proceeds to be invested for the benefit of B.

Each of these bequests is specific.

(e.) A by his will charges his zamíndárí of Y with an annuity of 1,000 rupees to C during his life, and subject to this charge he bequeaths the zamíndárí to D. Each of these bequests is specific.

(f.) A bequeaths a sum of money—
to buy a house in Calcutta for B:
to buy an estate in zila Faridpur for B:
to buy a diamond-ring for B:
to buy a horse for B:
to be invested in shares in the Bank of Bengal for B:
to be invested in Government-securities for B.

A bequeaths to B—
"a diamond-ring:"
"a horse:"
"10,000 rupees worth of Government securities:"
"an annuity of 500 rupees:"
"2,000 rupees, to be paid in cash;"
"so much money as will produce 5,000 rupees 4 per cent. Government-securities."

These bequests are not specific.

(g.) A, having property in England and property in India, bequeaths a legacy to B, and directs that it shall be paid out of the property which he may leave in India. He also bequeaths a legacy to C, and directs that it shall be paid out of the property which he may leave in England.

No one of these legacies is specific.

130. Where a sum certain is bequeathed, the legacy is not specific merely because the stocks, funds or securities in which it is invested are described in the will.

Bequest of sum certain where stocks, &c., in which invested are described.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—
"10,000 rupees of his funded property:"
"10,000 rupees of his property now invested in shares of the East Indian Railway Company:"
"10,000 rupees at present secured by mortgage of Rámpur factory."

No one of these legacies is specific.

Bequest of stock where testator had, at date of will, equal or greater amount of stock of same kind.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees 5 per cent. Government securities. A had at the date of the will five per cent. Government securities for 5,000 rupees.

The legacy is not specific.

132. A money-legacy is not specific merely because the will directs its payment to be postponed until some part of the property of the testator shall have been reduced to a certain form, or remitted to a certain place.

Bequest of money where not payable until part of testator's property disposed of in certain way.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B 10,000 rupees, and directs that this legacy shall be paid as soon as A's property in India shall be realized in England.

The legacy is not specific.

133. Where a will contains a bequest of the residue of the testator's property along with an enumeration of some items of property not previously bequeathed, the articles enumerated shall not be deemed to be specifically bequeathed.

When enumerated articles not deemed specifically bequeathed.

* * * * * *

136. If there be a deficiency of assets to pay legacies, a specific legacy is not liable to abate with the general legacies.

Where deficiency of assets to pay legacies, specific legacy not to abate with general legacies.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

PART XX.

Of Demonstrative Legacies.

137. Where a testator bequeaths a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of any other commodity, and refers to a particular fund or stock so as to constitute the same the primary fund or stock out of which payment is to be made, the legacy is said to be demonstrative.

Demonstrative legacy defined.

Explanation.—The distinction between a specific legacy and a demonstrative legacy consists in this, that—where specified property is given to the legatee, the legacy is specific;

where the legacy is directed to be paid out of specified property, it is demonstrative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The legacy to B is specific; the legacy to C is demonstrative.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—
"ten bushels of the corn which shall grow in his field of Greenacre:"
"80 chests of the indigo which shall be made at his factory of Rámpur:"
"10,000 rupees out of his five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India:"
an annuity of 500 rupees "from his funded property:"
"1,000 rupees out of the sum of 2,000 rupees due to him by C."

A bequeaths to B an annuity, and directs it to be paid out of the rents arising from his taluq of Rámnagar.

A bequeaths to B—
"10,000 rupees out of his estate at Rámnagar," or charges it on his estate at Rámnagar:
"10,000 rupees, being his share of the capital embarked in a certain business."

Each of these bequests is demonstrative.

138. Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed and a legacy is directed to be paid out of the same fund, the portion specifically bequeathed shall first be paid to the legatee, and the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the residue of the fund, and, so far as the residue shall be deficient, out of the general assets of the testator.

Order of payment when legacy directed to be paid out of fund the subject of specific legacy.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The debt due to A from W is only 1,500 rupees; of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B, and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator.

PART XXI.

Of Ademption of Legacies.

139. If anything which has been specifically bequeathed does not belong to the testator at the time of his death, or has been converted into property of a different kind, the legacy is adeemed; that is, it cannot take effect by reason of the subject-matter having been withdrawn from the operation of the will.

Ademption explained.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—
"the diamond-ring presented to him by C:"
"his gold chain:"
"a certain bale of wool:"
"a certain piece of cloth:"
"all his household-goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in M Street, in Calcutta, at the time of his death."

A, in his lifetime,
sells or gives away the ring;
converts the chain into a cup;
converts the wool into cloth:
makes the cloth into a garment:
takes another house into which he removes all his goods

Each of these legacies is adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—
"the sum of 1,000 rupees in a certain chest:"
"all the horses in his stable."

At the death of A, no money is found in the chest, and no horses in the stable.

The legacies are adeemed.

(c.) A bequeaths to B certain bales of goods. A takes the goods with him on a voyage. The ship and goods are lost at sea, and A is drowned.

The legacy is adeemed.

140. A demonstrative legacy is not adeemed by reason that the property on which it is charged by the will does not exist at the time of the death of the testator, or has been converted into property of a different kind; but it shall in such case be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Non-ademption of demonstrative legacy.

141. Where the thing specifically bequeathed is the right to receive something of value from a third party, and the testator himself receives it, the bequest is adeemed.

Ademption of specific bequest of right to receive something from third party.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—
"the debt which C owes him:"
"2,000 rupees which he has in the hands of D:"
"the money due to him on the bond of E:"
"his mortgage on the Rámpur factory."

All these debts are extinguished in A's lifetime, some with and some without his consent.

All the legacies are adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—
"his interest in certain policies of life-assurance."

A in his lifetime receives the amount of the policies. The legacy is adeemed.

142. The receipt by the testator of a part of an entire thing specifically bequeathed shall operate as an ademption of the legacy to the extent of the sum received.

Ademption pro tanto by testator's receipt of part of entire thing specifically bequeathed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B "the debt due to him by C." The debt amounts to 10,000 rupees. C pays to A 5,000 rupees, the one-half of the debt. The legacy is revoked by ademption, so far as regards the 5,000 rupees received by A.

143. If a portion of an entire fund or stock be specifically bequeathed, the receipt by the testator of a portion of the fund or stock shall operate as an ademption only to the extent of the amount so received; and the residue of the fund or stock shall be applicable to the discharge of the specific legacy.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B one-half of the sum of 10,000 rupees due to him from W. A in his lifetime receives 6,000 rupees, part of the 10,000 rupees. The 4,000 rupees which are due from W to A at the time of his death belong to B under the specific bequest.

144. Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and a legacy charged on the same fund is bequeathed to another legatee, if the testator receives a portion of that fund, and the remainder of the fund is insufficient to pay both the specific and the demonstrative legacy, the specific legacy shall be paid first, and the residue (if any) of the fund shall be applied so far as it will extend in payment of the demonstrative legacy, and the rest of the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Order of payment where portion of fund specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and legacy charged on same fund to another, and testator having received portion of that fund, remainder insufficient to pay both legacies.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, part of the debt of 2,000 rupees due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. A afterwards receives 500 rupees, part of that debt, and dies leaving only 1,500 rupees due to him from W. Of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B, and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator.

145. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does not exist at the testator's death, the legacy is adeemed.

Ademption where stock, specifically bequeathed, does not exist at testator's death.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"his capital stock of 1,000*l.* in East India Stock:"

"his promissory notes of the Government of India for 10,000 rupees in their 4 per cent. loan."

A sells the stock and the notes.

The legacies are adeemed.

146. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does only in part exist at the testator's death, the legacy is adeemed so far as regards that part of the stock which has ceased to exist.

Ademption pro tanto where stock, specifically bequeathed, exists in part only at testator's death.

A bequeaths to B—

"his 10,000 rupees in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India."

A sells one-half of his 10,000 rupees in the loan in question.

One-half of the legacy is adeemed.

147. A specific bequest of goods under a description connecting them with a certain place is not adeemed by reason that they have been removed from such place from any temporary cause, or by fraud or without the knowledge or sanction of the testator.

Non-ademption of specific bequest of goods described as connected with certain place, by reason of removal.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B "all his household goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in Calcutta at the time of his death." The goods are removed from the house to save them from fire. A dies before they are brought back.

A bequeaths to B "all his household goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in Calcutta at the time of his death." During A's absence upon a journey, the whole of the goods are removed from the house. A dies without having sanctioned their removal.

Neither of these legacies is adeemed.

148. The removal of the thing bequeathed from the place in which it is stated in the will to be situated does not constitute an ademption where the place is only referred to in order to complete the description of what the testator meant to bequeath.

When removal of thing bequeathed does not constitute ademption.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B all the bills, bonds and other securities for money belonging to him then lying in his lodgings in Calcutta. At the time of his death these effects had been removed from his lodgings in Calcutta.

A bequeaths to B all his furniture then in his house in Calcutta. The testator has a house at Calcutta and another at Chinsurah, in which he lives alternately, being possessed of one set of furniture only, which he removes with himself to each house. At the time of his death the furniture is in the house at Chinsurah.

A bequeaths to B all his goods on board a certain ship then lying in the river Hugli. The goods are removed by A's directions to a warehouse, in which they remain at the time of A's death.

No one of these legacies is revoked by ademption.

149. Where the thing bequeathed is not the right to receive something of value from a third person, but the money or other commodity which shall be received from the third person by the testator himself or by his representatives, the receipt of such sum of money or other commodity by the testator shall not constitute an ademption;

When thing bequeathed is a valuable to be received by testator from third person, and testator himself, or his representative, receives it.

but if he mixes it up with the general mass of his property, the legacy is adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B whatever sum may be received from his claim on C. A receives the whole of his claim on C and sets it apart from the general mass of his property. The legacy is not adeemed.

150. Where a thing specifically bequeathed undergoes a change between the date of the will and the testator's death, and the change takes place by operation of law or in the course of execution of the provisions of any legal instrument under which the thing bequeathed was held, the legacy is not adeemed by reason of such change.

Change by operation of law of subject of specific bequest between date of will and testator's death.

A bequeaths to B "all the money which he has in the 5% per cent. loan of the Government of India."

The securities for the 5½ per cent. loan are converted during A's lifetime into 5 per cent. stock.

A's bequeaths to B the sum of 2,000*l.*, invested in consols in the names of trustees for A.

The sum of 2,000*l.* is transferred by the trustees into A's own name.

A bequeaths to B the sum of 10,000 rupees in promissory notes of the Government of India which he has power under his marriage-settlement to dispose of by will. Afterwards in A's lifetime, the fund is converted into consols by virtue of an authority contained in the settlement.

No one of these legacies has been adeemed.

151. Where a thing specifically bequeathed undergoes a change between the date of the will and the testator's death, and the change takes place without the knowledge or sanction of the testator, the legacy is not adeemed.

Change of subject without testator's knowledge.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B "all his 3 per cent. consols." The consols are, without A's knowledge, sold by his agent, and the proceeds converted into East India stock. This legacy is not adeemed.

152. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed is lent to a third party on condition that it shall be replaced, and it is replaced accordingly, the legacy is not adeemed.

Stock specifically bequeathed, lent to third party on condition that it be replaced.

153. Where stock specifically bequeathed is sold, and an equal quantity of the same stock is afterwards purchased and belongs to the testator at his death, the legacy is not adeemed.

Stock specifically bequeathed, sold but replaced and belonging to testator at his death.

PART XXII.

Of the Payment of Liabilities in respect of the subject of a Bequest.

154. Where property specifically bequeathed is subject at the death of the testator to any pledge, lien or incumbrance, created by the testator himself or by any person under whom he claims, then, unless a contrary intention appears by the will, the legatee, if he accepts the bequest, shall accept it subject to such pledge or incumbrance, and shall (as between himself and the testator's estate) be liable to make good the amount of such pledge or incumbrance.

Non-liability of executor to exonerate specific legatees.

A contrary intention shall not be inferred from any direction which the will may contain for the payment of the testator's debts generally.

Explanation.—A periodical payment in the nature of land-revenue or in the nature of rent is not such an incumbrance as is contemplated by this section.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B the diamond-ring given him by C. At A's death the ring is held in pawn by D, to whom it has been pledged by A. It is the duty of A's executors, if the state of the testator's assets will allow them, to allow B to redeem the ring.

(b.) A bequeaths to B a zamíndárí which at A's death is subject to a mortgage for 10,000 rupees, and the whole of the principal sum, together with interest to the amount of 1,000 rupees, is due at A's death. B, if he accepts the bequest, accepts it subject to this charge, and is liable, as between himself and A's estate, to pay the sum of 11,000 rupees thus due.

155. Where anything is to be done to complete the testator's title to the thing bequeathed, it is to be done at the cost of the testator's estate.

Completion of testator's title to things bequeathed to be at cost of his estate.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, having contracted in general terms for the purchase of a piece of land at a certain price, bequeaths it to B, and dies before he has paid the purchase-money. The purchase-money must be made good out of A's assets.

(b.) A having contracted for the purchase of a piece of land for a certain sum of money, one-half of which is to be paid down, and the other half secured by mortgage of the land, bequeaths it to B, and dies before he has paid or secured any part of the purchase-money. One-half of the purchase-money must be paid out of A's assets.

156. Where there is a bequest of any interest in immoveable property, in respect of which payment in the nature of land-revenue or in the nature of rent has to be made periodically, the estate of the testator shall (as between such estate and the legatee) make good such payments or a proportion of them up to the day of his death.

Exoneration of legatee's immoveable property for which land-revenue or rent payable periodically.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B a house, in respect of which 365 rupees are payable annually by way of rent. A pays his rent at the usual time, and dies 25 days after. A's estate shall make good 25 rupees in respect of the rent.

157. In the absence of any direction in the will where there is a specific bequest of stock in a joint stock company, if any call or other payment is due from the testator at the time of his death in respect of such stock, such call or payment shall, as between the testator's estate and the legatee, be borne by such estate;

Exoneration of specific legatee's stock in joint stock company.

but if any call or other payment shall, after the testator's death become due in respect of such stock, the same shall, as between the testator's estate and the legatee, be borne by the legatee if he accept the bequest.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeathed to B his shares in a certain railway. At A's death there was due from him the sum of 5*l.* in respect of each share, being the amount of a call which had been duly made, and the sum of 5*s.* in respect of each share, being the amount of interest which had accrued due in respect of the call. These payments must be borne by A's estate.

(b.) A has agreed to take 50 shares in an intended joint stock company, and has contracted to pay up 5*l.* in respect of each share, which sum must be paid before his title to the shares can be completed. A bequeaths these shares to B. The estate of A must make good the payments which were necessary to complete A's title.

(c.) A bequeaths to B his shares in a certain railway. B accepts the legacy. After A's death, a call is made in respect of the shares. B must pay the call.

(d.) A bequeaths to B his shares in a joint stock company. B accepts the bequest. Afterwards the affairs of the company are wound up and each shareholder is called upon for contribution. The amount of the contribution must be borne by the legatee.

(e.) A is the owner of ten shares in a railway company. At a meeting held during his lifetime a call is made of 3*l.* per share payable by three instalments. A bequeaths his shares to B, and dies between the day fixed for the payment of the first and the day fixed for the payment of the second instalment and without having paid the first instalment. A's estate must pay the first instalment, and B, if he accepts the legacy, must pay the remaining instalments.

PART XXIII.

Of Bequests of Things described in general terms.

158. If there be a bequest of something described in general terms, the executor must purchase for the legatee what may reasonably be considered to answer the description.

Bequest of thing described in general terms.

(b.) A bequeaths to B "his pair of carriage-horses." A had no carriage-horses at the time of his death. The legacy fails.

PART XXIV.

Of Bequests of the Interest or Produce of a Fund.

Bequest of interest or produce of fund.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B the interest of his five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India. There is no other clause in the will affecting those securities. B is entitled to A's five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India.

(b.) A bequeaths the interest of his 5½ per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India to B for his life, and after his death to C. B is entitled to the interest of the notes during his life and C is entitled to the notes upon B's death.

(c.) A bequeaths to B the rents of his lands at X. B is entitled to the lands.

PART XXV.

Of Bequests of Annuities.

160. Where an annuity is created by will, the legatee is entitled to receive it for his life only unless a contrary intention appears by the will. And this rule shall not be varied by the circumstance that the annuity is directed to be paid out of the property generally, or that a sum of money is bequeathed to be invested in the purchase of it.

Annuity created by will payable for life only, unless contrary intention appears by will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees a year. B is entitled during his life to receive the annual sum of 500 rupees.

(b.) A bequeaths to B the sum of 500 rupees monthly. B is entitled during his life to receive the sum of 500 rupees every month.

(c.) A bequeaths an annuity of 500 rupees to B for life, and on B's death to C. B is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees during his life. C, if he survives B, is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees from B's death until his own death.

161. Where the will directs that an annuity shall be provided for any person out of the proceeds of property, or out of property generally, or where money is bequeathed to be invested in the purchase of any annuity for any person, on the testator's death the legacy vests in interest in the legatee, and he is entitled at his option to have an annuity purchased for him or to receive the money appropriated for that purpose by the will.

Period of vesting where will directs that annuity be provided out of proceeds of property, or out of property generally or where money bequeathed to be invested in purchase of annuity.

Illustrations.

(a.) A by his will directs that his executors shall out of his property purchase an annuity of 1,000 rupees for B. B is entitled at his option to have an annuity of 1,000 rupees for his life purchased for him, or to receive such a sum as will be sufficient for the purchase of such an annuity.

(b.) A bequeaths a fund to B for his life, and directs that after B's death it shall be laid out in the purchase of an annuity for C. B and C survive the testators. C dies in B's lifetime. On B's death the fund belongs to the representative of C.

162. Where an annuity is bequeathed, but the assets of the testator are not sufficient to pay all the legacies given by the will, the annuity shall abate in the same proportion as the other pecuniary legacies given by the will.

Abatement of annuity.

163. Where there is a gift of an annuity and a residuary gift, the whole of the annuity is to be satisfied before any part of the residue is paid to the residuary legatee, and, if necessary, the capital of the testator's estate shall be applied for that purpose.

Where gift of annuity and residuary gift, whole annuity to be first satisfied.

PART XXVI.

Of Legacies to Creditors and Portioners.

164. Where a debtor bequeaths a legacy to his creditor, and it does not appear from the will that the legacy is meant as a satisfaction of the debt, the creditor shall be entitled to the legacy as well as to the amount of the debt.

Creditor primâ facie entitled to legacy as well as debt.

165. Where a parent, who is under obligation by contract to provide a portion for a child, fails to do so, and afterwards bequeaths a legacy to the child, and does not intimate by his will that the legacy is meant as a satisfaction of the portion, the child shall be entitled to receive the legacy as well as the portion.

Child primâ facie entitled to legacy as well as portion.

A, by articles entered into in contemplation of his marriage with B, covenanted that he would pay to each of the daughters of the intended marriage a portion of 20,000 rupees on her marriage. This covenant having been broken, A bequeaths 20,000 rupees to each of the married daughters of himself and B. The legatees are entitled to the benefit of this bequest in addition to their portions.

166. No bequest shall be wholly or partially adeemed by a subsequent provision made by settlement or otherwise for the legatee.

No ademption by subsequent provision for legatee.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 20,000 rupees to his son B. He afterwards gives to B the sum of 20,000 rupees. The legacy is not thereby adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths 40,000 rupees to B, his orphan-niece, whom he had brought up from her infancy. Afterwards on the occasion of B's marriage, A settles upon her the sum of 30,000 rupees. The legacy is not thereby diminished.

PART XXVII.

Of Election.

167. Where a man, by his will, professes to dispose of something which he has no right to dispose of, the person to whom the thing belongs shall elect either to confirm such disposition or to dissent from it, and in the latter case he shall give up any benefits which may have been provided for him by the will.

Circumstances in which election takes place.

168. The interest so relinquished shall devolve as if it had not been disposed of by the will in favour of the legatee, subject, nevertheless, to the charge of making good to the disappointed legatee the amount or value of the gift attempted to be given to him by the will.

Devolution of interest relinquished by owner.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

169. This rule will apply whether the testator does or does not believe that which he professes to dispose of by his will to be his own.

Testator's belief as to his ownership immaterial.

(a.) The farm of Sultánpur was the property of C. A bequeathed it to B, giving a legacy of 1,000 rupees to C. C has elected to retain his farm of Sultánpur, which is worth 800 rupees. C forfeits his legacy of 1,000 rupees, of which 800 rupees goes to B, and the remaining 200 rupees falls into the residuary bequest, or devolves according to the rules of intestate succession, as the case may be.

(b.) A bequeaths an estate to B in case B's elder brother (who is married and has children) shall leave no issue living at his death. A also bequeaths to C a jewel, which belongs to B. B must elect to give up the jewel, or to lose the estate.

(c.) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, and to C an estate which will, under a settlement, belong to B if his elder brother (who is married and has children) shall leave no issue living at his death. B must elect to give up the estate, or to lose the legacy.

(d.) A, a person of the age of 18 domiciled in British India, but owning real property in England, to which C is heir-at-law, bequeaths a legacy to C, and, subject thereto, devises and bequeaths to B "all his property, whatsoever and wheresoever," and dies under 21. The real property in England does not pass by the will. C may claim his legacy without giving up the real property in England.

170. A bequest for a man's benefit is, for the purpose of election, the same thing as a bequest made to himself.

Bequest for man's benefit how regarded for purpose of election.

Illustration.

The farm of Sultánpur Khurd being the property of B, A bequeathed it to C, and bequeathed another farm called Sultánpur Buzurg to his own executors, with a direction that it should be sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of B's debts. B must elect whether he will abide by the will, or keep his farm of Sultánpur Khurd in opposition to it.

171. A person taking no benefit directly under the will, but deriving a benefit under it indirectly, is not put to his election.

Person deriving benefit indirectly not put to election.

Illustration.

The lands of Sultánpur are settled upon C for life, and after his death upon D, his only child. A bequeaths the lands of Sultánpur to B, and 1,000 rupees to C. C dies intestate shortly after the testator, and without having made any election. D takes out administration to C, and as administrator elects on behalf of C's estate to take under the will. In that capacity he receives the legacy of 1,000 rupees, and accounts to B for the rents of the lands of Sultánpur which accrued after the death of the testator and before the death of C. In his individual character he retains the lands of Sultánpur in opposition to the will.

172. A person who in his individual capacity takes a benefit under the will may in another character elect to take in opposition to the will.

Person taking in individual capacity under will may in other character elect to take in opposition.

Illustration.

The estate of Sultánpur is settled upon A for life, and after his death upon B. A leaves the estate of Sultánpur to D, and 2,000 rupees to B, and 1,000 rupees to C, who is B's only child. B dies intestate, shortly after the testator, without having made an election. C takes out administration to B, and as administrator elects to keep the estate of Sultánpur in opposition to the will, and to relinquish the legacy of 2,000 rupees. C may do this, and yet claim his legacy of 1,000 rupees under the will.

Exception to the six last Rules.—Where a particular gift is expressed in the will to be in lieu of something belonging to the legatee, which is also in terms disposed of by the will, if the legatee claims that thing, he must relinquish the particular gift, but he is not bound to relinquish any other benefit given to him by the will.

Illustration.

A by his will bequeaths to his wife an annuity of 200*l.* during her life, in lieu of her interest in the estate of Sultánpur, which estate he bequeaths to his son. He also gives his wife a legacy of 1,000*l.* The widow elects to take what she is entitled to under the settlement. She is bound to relinquish the annuity, but not the legacy of 1,000*l.*

173. Acceptance of a benefit given by the will constitutes an election by the legatee to take under the will, if he has knowledge of his right to elect, and of those circumstances which would influence the judgment of a reasonable man in making an election, or if he waives inquiry into the circumstances.

When acceptance of benefit given by will constitutes election to take under will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A is owner of an estate called Sultánpur Khurd, and has a life-interest in another estate called Sultánpur Buzurg, to which, upon his death, his son B will be absolutely entitled. The will of A gives the estate of Sultánpur Khurd to B, and the estate of Sultánpur Buzurg to C. B, in ignorance of his own right to the estate of Sultánpur Buzurg, allows C to take possession of it, and enters into possession of the estate of Sultánpur Khurd. B has not confirmed the bequest of Sultánpur Buzurg to C.

(b.) B, the eldest son of A, is the possessor of an estate called Sultánpur. A bequeaths Sultánpur to C, and to B the residue of A's property. He afterwards discovers that the residue does not amount to more than 500 rupees. B has not confirmed the bequest of the estate of Sultánpur to C.

174. Such knowledge or waiver of inquiry shall, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be presumed if the legatee has enjoyed for two years the benefits provided for him by the will without doing any act to express dissent.

Presumption arising from enjoyment by legatee for two years.

175. Such knowledge or waiver of inquiry may be inferred from any act of the legatee which renders it impossible to place the persons interested in the subject-matter of the bequest in the same condition as if such act had not been done.

Confirmation of bequest by act of legatee.

A bequeaths to B an estate to which C is entitled and to C a coal-mine. C takes possession of the mine, and exhausts it. He has thereby confirmed the bequest of the estate to B.

176. If the legatee shall not, within one year after the death of the testator, signify to the testator's representatives his intention to confirm or to dissent from the will, the representatives shall, upon the expiration of that period, require him to make his election;

When testator's representatives may call upon legatee to elect.

Effect of non-compliance.

177. In case of disability the election shall be postponed until the disability ceases, or until the election shall be made by some competent authority.

Postponement of election in case of disability.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Khojás are members of a sect which was originally Hindu but was converted to Muhammadanism about 400 years ago. They still, however, as has been more than once held by the highest Court in the Bombay Presidency, retain their former law to such an extent in matters connected with property and succession that it is to be presumed to apply to them until the contrary is shown. This state of things has at times given rise to great difficulties in litigation between Khojás.

2. In the case of Hirbai v. Gorbai, 12 Bom. High Court Rep. 294, which appears to have occupied the Lower Court for twenty-four sitting days and the Appellate Court for four days, Sir Michael Westropp, C. J., after describing the state of the law, observed as follows :—

"It is, however, evident that the Khojás are not as firmly bound in matters of succession and inheritance by the Hindu law as Muhammadans proper are by the Muhammadan law and the Hindus by the Hindu law, and hence it is that it would not be reasonable to require such stringent proof of a custom of inheritance amongst them differing from ordinary Hindu law as from a Hindu.

"Now, it is manifest that such a state of the law must greatly encourage litigation, and we cannot help thinking that it would be most desirable that the Government should take steps, as was done in the case of the Pársís, to ascertain the views of the majority of the community on the subject of succession, and should then pass an enactment giving effect to those views. Unanimity, of course, could not be expected, but the rules which were found generally to prevail might be made law; and though the religious differences existing among members of the Khojá caste might create some difficulty, it would not, we think, be insuperable."

3. The Government of Bombay, acting upon this suggestion, appointed about the end of the year 1878 a Commission consisting of four gentlemen taken from the Shia division of the Khojás, which acknowledged His Highness the late Ágha Khán as its spiritual superior, one taken from the Sunni division, and Mr. Spencer, Acting First Judge of the Court of Small Causes, with the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Melvill, of the Bombay High Court, as president.

The Commission took the greatest pains to inform themselves of the customs and views of both divisions of the Khojá sect in the Presidency of Bombay and elsewhere, and after much consideration and discussion agreed upon a draft Bill, subject to a dissent on a few specific points which was signed by His Highness Aghá Alí Sháh, son of His Highness the late Ágha Khán, and Mr. Dhurrumsey Poonjabhoy but not by Mr. Jairajbhoy Peerboy and Mr. Rahimtula Syance, the two other Shia members of the Commission. That draft, having been submitted to the Government of Bombay by the president on the 23rd of December, 1879, and approved of by that Government, was forwarded to the Government of India, and forms the basis of the present Bill.

4. It will be convenient to refer to the provisions of the present Bill as nearly as possible in their order, noticing in their proper place the few points in regard to which His Highness Ágha Alí Sháh and Mr. Dhurrumsey Poonjabhoy differed from the majority of the Commission, and the points of substantive importance in which the present Bill deviates from the draft framed by the Commission.

5. The first provision calling for notice is section 2, which defines the application of the Act—a matter which was not clearly provided for in the Bill prepared by the Commission. The main enactment of the section is that succession to the property, whether moveable or immoveable, in British India of a Khojá dying on or after the first day of January, 1885, shall be regulated by the rules contained in the Act wherever he may have had his domicile at the time of his death. So far as regards immoveable property, this provision coincides with section 5 of the Indian Succession Act, but, as regards moveable property, it involves an important deviation from that section, inasmuch as it applies the Act to all successions to such property though the deceased person may have been domiciled outside British India at the time of his death.

As the rule, which makes the law of the domicile of a deceased person regulate the succession to his moveable property, is not merely the rule of the Indian Succession Act but has obtained very general acceptance elsewhere, it seems desirable to state the reasons which have led the Government of India to think that it is not suitable to the Khojá community.

6. The choice as regards succession to moveable property appears to lie between the law of the domicile of the deceased and the law of the situs of the assets. The objections urged against the latter in Western countries are chiefly that a man's moveables are apt to be scattered over many jurisdictions each having a readily ascertainable law of its own, and that accordingly, if the law of the situs is made applicable to them, his estate will be broken up into many fragments, all governed by different laws; that a man's moveables may change their place; that the most important class of them, goods employed in commerce, are constantly changing their place; and that accordingly, if the law of the situs is applied, it will be impossible for him to foresee the particular law under which they will fall upon his death; and lastly, that the rule of the law of the situs does not clearly provide for that portion of the assets which consists of debts or other obligations existing in favour of the deceased. To avoid these difficulties it has been generally agreed to adopt the law of the domicile of the deceased for the whole of his moveable estate. Various attempts have been made to rest this rule on some á priori principle; but it would seem to have had its actual origin in mere considerations of convenience.

7. Looking to the arguments by which it is supported, and to the peculiar circumstances of the Khojá community, it is questionable, to say the least, whether such a rule would meet the requirements of their case. The places beyond the limits of British India, as, for example, Kutch, the Persian Gulf and Zanzibar, in which any considerable number of Khojás is to be found have no law such as can properly be called a territorial law of succession. The tribunals in such places, in so far as they make any rational attempt to apply a law at all, would apply the personal law of the parties, and that in the case of Khojás is ex hypothesi altogether unsettled and unascertainable. There is thus in the case of Khojás domiciled out of British India practically speaking no law of the situs of the foreign assets to conflict with the law which would apply to the British Indian assets, and no law of the domicile to which recourse could be had; and, therefore, to give the law of the domicile a preference over the Indian law would be simply to substitute a congeries of indefinite and half-established customs for a law, to the application of which there could be no reasonable objection.

It may be added that, in the absence of a law of the domicile, the case is very analogous to those cases in which it is impossible to fix the domicile of the deceased, and the solution which Lord Alvanley appears to have suggested in a case of this latter class was to fall back, as is proposed in this case, on the law of the situs of the property; in other words, to put moveables on the same footing as immoveables.

8. If this solution is adopted, and the Indian law is applied to all moveables left by a deceased Khojá in British India, without regard to his domicile, and if, moreover, the same rule is applied, as it naturally would be, in cases arising in Consular jurisdictions in the Persian Gulf, Zanzibar and elsewhere, this further advantage will probably in time be gained, that the law in British India will come to be adopted as a personal law applicable to Khojás in all foreign States in this part of the world.

9. The above remarks apply equally to intestate and to testamentary succession. A question might indeed be raised as to whether a testamentary disposition made beyond the limits of British India should as regards its form be made absolutely subject to British Indian law; but, seeing that the effect of taking any other course would certainly be to admit oral dispositions, it seems clear that the risk of failures of justice will be on the whole less by subjecting completely to our law all dispositions, wherever made, of moveable property in British India.

10. In connection with the definitions it is convenient to notice one of the few important questions on which any difference of opinion has arisen, namely, the question as to the status to be assigned to a woman who is not a Khojá but who is legally married to a Khojá according to the rules of the Muhammadan law, and to her children by him.

The Khojás of the Sunni Jamát, though apparently unwilling to go so far as to recognize any other than a Khojá widow as entitled to inherit from her husband, proposed that the sons of a Khojá by a wife who is not a Khojá should have some share in the inheritance. To this the Khojás of the Shia Jamát would not agree, and the Commission ultimately adopted as a compromise the plan of assigning to the offspring of the marriages in question a status nominally intermediate between those of legitimacy and illegitimacy and giving them in the definition-clauses the designation of "alien sons", but allowing them nothing more than illegitimate sons in the later sections of their Bill. It is stated that the Khojás as a rule are very exclusive and rarely take wives from outside their own community, and so long as this state of things continues the mode in which this point is dealt with is not of great practical moment; but there is an important principle involved, against which even the compromise adopted by the Commission appears to the Government of India to offend. The exclusion of the non-Khojá wife from inheritance and the degradation of her sons to a position altogether lower than that of the legitimate son involves a view as to restrictions on marriage which, even though it may have obtained acceptance with a majority of the Khojá sect, and though the Government has no desire to interfere with it, it is manifestly undesirable to have affirmed by the legislature. The present Bill will accordingly be found to contain no reference either in its definition-clauses or elsewhere to the so-called "alien son." It defines "son" to be a legitimate son and leaves "widow" undefined, and then proceeds to declare the rights of sons and widows, trusting to the Courts to decide, as they will on principles lying outside the law of succession, who are legally entitled to the status of sons and widows.

11. Chapter II of the Bill deals with "succession to the undivided property of a male Khojá dying intestate," and in the previous chapter "undivided property" has been defined as meaning "a share in property belonging to an undivided family." The Bill prepared by the Commission purported to define the phrase "undivided family," but the definition proposed has on inquiry been found to be unsafe. The undivided family among the Khojás appears to come into existence chiefly in connection with trade, and would seem to be an institution of a peculiar nature, somewhat resembling the undivided family among the Hindus; but, on the other hand, it is clear, from the rules laid down in certain sections of the Bill prepared by the Commission, and from the papers submitted with that Bill, that it differs in important respects from the Hindu undivided family. What exactly it is, and when property is to be regarded as its undivided property, it is difficult to ascertain from the papers before the Government of India; but, judging from the analogous case in Hindu law, it would seem that these are matters which it would be almost hopeless to attempt to define in an Act of the legislature; nor does it appear to be necessary to define them in a Succession Act. It may well be assumed that a fundamental distinction which goes to the root of the family constitution, and which is not confined in its operation to matters of succession, but applies also inter vivos, is established outside this Bill. For these reasons, it has been thought best to make no attempt to define "undivided family" or "undivided property" in the present Bill.

12. It will be observed, on comparing Chapters II and III, that the only peculiarity connected with the intestate succession to undivided property is (section 6) that, in default of legitimate lineal male descendants of the intestate within the fourth degree, the property is equally divided among all the male members of the undivided family living at his death.

13. Chapter III of the Bill treats of "succession to the separate property of a male Khojá dying intestate," and the order of succession marked out in sections 7 to 20 will be found to be based on that of the Hindu law.

The subjoined statement has been prepared by the Hon'ble Mr. Melvill, the President of the Commission, with a view to showing at a glance the extent to which the two differ—

Order of succession according to Hindu law.	Order of succession for Khojás proposed by the Bill.
1. Sons.	1. Sons.
2. Grandsons.	2. Grandsons.
3. Great-grandsons.	3. Great-grandsons.
4. Widow.	4. Great-great-grandsons.
5. Daughters.	5. Father.
6. Daughters' sons.	6. Mother.
7. Mother.	7. Widow.
8. Father.	8. Daughters.
9. Brothers.	9. Daughters' sons. }
10. Half-brothers.	10. Brothers. }
11. Brothers' sons.	11. Sons' daughters.
12. Half-brothers' sons.	12. Brothers' sons.
13. Grandmother.	13. Half-brothers.
14. Sister (under the Mayukha).	14. Half-brothers' sons.
15. Grandfather.	15. Grandfather.
16. More distant relatives.	16. Grandmother.
	17. Paternal uncle.
	18. Sister.
	19. More distant relatives.

"It will be seen," Mr. Melvill observes, "that the only very noticeable point of difference is that among the Khojás the father and mother are elevated to a rank in the order of succession superior to that of the widow. This precedence of the mother has been judicially settled in the case of Hirbai v. *Gorbai, already referred to; and although the Khojá members of the Commission were not unanimously in favour of the view taken in that case, they all agreed that, having once been judicially determined, the rule should not be disturbed."

* Reported 12 Bom. H. C. Rep., 294.

14. Section 20 of the present Bill differs in one important particular from the corresponding section (29) of the Bill prepared by the Commission.

The latter admitted to the succession only those of the "more distant relatives" of the intestate who were on the father's side, and confined it to such of them as are within the seventh degree of kindred. On failure of this limited class of distant kindred, section 42 gave the property "to the Jamát of that sect of the Khojás to which the intestate belonged at the time of his death, to be held and applied according to the customs of the said Jamát." Even this did not satisfy the two dissenting members of the Commission and some of the other adherents of His Highness the late Aghá Khán, who, as Imám, was the person chiefly interested in the succession of the Jamát. They contended that the Jamát should come in immediately after the nearer relations.

15. Apart from this fundamental objection in point of principle, there appear to be practical objections to the proposal as formulated by the Commission. The Jamát is said to be an assembly in council of all the adult male members of the Khojá community of the place, and it is not unlikely that doubts would arise, in connection with matters of religious belief, residence, attendance at the Jamát, and so forth, as to the particular Jamát (if any) to which the deceased person belonged. Similar doubts might also arise as to who were the other persons actually belonging to the Jamát to which the deceased belonged, so as to take the property. There might further be doubts as to how the property of a deceased intestate Khojá is to be held, and the objects to which it is to be applied. It is true that the section proposed by the Commission says that the property is to be held and applied "according to the customs of the said Jamát." But from a judgment of Sir J. Arnould in the case marginally noted, it would appear that there are no customs to look to. Though a Jamát collects large sums of money through its officers, it only does so on behalf of the Imám; the money collected is passed on to him; and if the Jamát wants any portion of it, even for the expenses of its Jamát-kháná (the council-hall or guildhall of the community), it can procure it only as a grant from the Imám. It appears to be absolutely in the discretion of the Imám to spend the money as he pleases, and as a matter of fact he spends a large portion of it, or at least is said by Sir J. Arnould to have done so at the time the judgment was delivered, on his own private purposes. Indeed, in a set of draft rules of succession for Shia Khojás submitted by His Highness Ágha Alí Sháh the succession of the Jamát is treated as the same thing with the succession of the Imám. The Jamát, therefore, does not seem to have any property or control over property, and it is not clear how there can be any custom governing the application of property by it. It has been argued that no such difficulties as those suggested ordinarily arise at present, but it would be clearly impossible to put the succession of the Jamát on a legislative basis without defining its conditions and incidents, and it would be equally impossible to place the property at the absolute disposal of any individual in whatever degree of veneration he might be held.

Dayá Muhammad and others versus H. H. Aghá Khán and others (page 323 of the Bombay High Court Reports, Vol. XII).

16. For these reasons section 20 of the present Bill extends the succession to relatives of the intestate both on the father's and on the mother's side without limit of degree, and it may be added that section 18 applies the ordinary rule, which makes the Crown the ultimate heir, in the rare case in which an owner of property may die intestate and leave no person entitled to succeed under the previous sections.

17. Section 21 is one of the leading sections of the Bill. It provides in effect that, when a female inherits under any of the foregoing sections, she shall, if certain near male relatives are living and are thus postponed to her, take the property only as "restricted owner"—a position to be presently explained at length. With this section should be read section 49, from which it will be seen that in other cases she takes the same interest in the property and has the same powers in respect of it as if she were a male.

18. Chapter IV treats of succession to the absolute property of a female Khojá dying intestate, that is to say, the succession to such of her property as belongs to her otherwise than as restricted owner. The provisions of this chapter call for no remark. Mr. Melvill states that they differ from the Hindu law but that they are approved by all classes of the Khojás, and are not, he thinks, open to any objection. The particulars in which they deviate from the Hindu law or the reasons for the deviations are not explained. They have been accepted by the Government of India as settled by the Commission, such details only being filled in after consultation with the local authorities as seemed necessary to give effect to what is understood to be the intention of those who framed them.

19. Chapter V, which treats of "property which a female takes as restricted owner and the further succession to the same," calls for more detailed notice.

It applies not only in the ordinary case of property taken by a female as restricted owner under Chapter III (supra, paragraph 17), but also in cases where she may take a similar interest in property under section 23 (2), section 24 (1), section 27 and section 39.

Its provisions are merely a development, with the requisite amplifications and with the addition of the necessary machinery, of the corresponding provisions of the Bill framed by the Commission. It has been settled in consultation with the local authorities and with a view to giving effect to what are understood to be the views of the Commission; but, having regard to the novelty and complication of the subject, it is not unlikely that when subjected to criticism it will be found susceptible of improvement in many particulars.

The limited estate taken by a Khojá female under this Bill resembles the estate taken by a Hindu widow, but there are many important differences between them. Mr. Melvill observes that the Khojá female estate is the more restricted of the two, but on this point he says the Khojás hold very strong views which he is of opinion must be respected.

20. In proceeding to notice the details of the chapter, the first point calling for attention is the phrase "restricted owner." It has been chosen merely on the ground that it is new and connotes nothing, and it is not unlikely that some more appropriate phrase may be suggested. The phrase "life-estate" and its correlative "reversion," used in the Bombay Bill, are not only open to the objection that ordinarily lies against all terms imported from another legal system, but further, as has been constantly observed of them in the case of the Hindu widow's estate, they suggest an altogether false analogy. The position, if it is necessary to illustrate it by reference to English law, is rather like that of a fee-simple estate subject to an executory devise.

21. As regards the attempt made in the Bill to define the estate, it will be observed that section 28 enacts that the female shall be absolutely entitled to the use of, and the income accruing from, the property during her life, and, except as otherwise provided by the Act, shall have all the other rights and powers of an absolute owner.

An objection has been taken to this on the ground that money saved by a widow from the income of the property should not belong to her absolutely but should go to her husband's heirs.

This contention is not based on any alleged actual practice, but is put forward merely as a "necessary consequence of the invariable custom" which limits the widow's interest in the corpus of her husband's property to the time during which she remains unmarried.

Now, not only is it not a necessary consequence of the custom in question, but it is, as admitted by the objectors themselves, in a certain sense illogical; for why should a person who has absolute power to dispose of the income as it comes in, in whatever way she pleases, be restricted from dealing with her savings from it?

Again, the only effect of adopting the proposed suggestion would, as the objectors themselves admit, generally be that the widow would squander the income as it came in; and, in the rare cases in which she allowed some of it to accumulate, the probability is that litigation would result from the difficulty of identifying the fund and separating it from the rest of her property. For these reasons the section has been allowed to stand.

22. Section 30 defines the obligations of the restricted owner as regards—

(a) the preservation of the substance of the property for those who are to come after her; and

(b) the protection of the title.

As regards "waste," it stands on a footing altogether peculiar in the case of the Hindu widow; and clause (a) of this section has been drawn with a view to placing it on a somewhat similar footing in the case of the restricted owner.

23. As regards the powers of alienation, in the limitations on which the restricted nature of the estate chiefly consists, the only powers of alienation for any time beyond the life of the restricted owner allowed to her by the Bill, besides a limited power of leasing conferred by section 29, are those specified in section 31, which runs as follows:—

Restricted owner's power of transfer.

"31. A female taking property as restricted owner shall have power to transfer the same, so that the transfer may have effect beyond her life, when, the income being insufficient, such transfer is necessary in order to raise money for any of the following purposes, namely:—

"(a) to discharge any of the obligations imposed by section 30;*

* Viz., obligations to preserve the substance of the property and protect the title.

"(b) to discharge the debts of the absolute owner from whom the property descended;

"(c) to provide for the maintenance of any persons entitled under this Act to have their maintenance provided for out of the property, for the payment of any marriage expenses or funeral expenses payable under this Act out of the property, and for the performance of any ordinary family ceremonies; and

"(d) to support herself where she has no other sufficient means of support."

24. It has been urged by the two dissenting members of the Commission and by some other adherents of His Highness the Imám that a mother taking a restricted estate should have larger powers of alienation and that she or a widow taking a like estate should be empowered to alienate for religious objects; that is, as explained in the set of draft rules submitted by His Highness Aghá Alí Sháh, to give the property to the Imám; but, upon considering the arguments adduced and consulting the local authorities, the Government of India have determined to uphold the decision of the majority of the Commission, which is against the concession of any such powers.

25. In order to avoid as far as possible the great difficulties which arise in the case of a Hindu widow exceeding her power of alienation, an alienation in excess of the power has (section 29 of the Bill) been made absolutely void for any period beyond the restricted owner's life, except where the purchaser takes for consideration and without notice of the ownership being restricted. This, no doubt, standing alone, would place too great difficulties in the way of alienation; but sufficient relief will probably be afforded by the power to apply to a Court for sanction, which is given by section 32. It may be objected that it is undesirable to force people to resort to a Court in such matters; but the case is one of a choice of evils, and it is probably better that they should resort to the Court in every case where there is any room for doubt than run the risk of being involved in troublesome and expensive litigation later on.

A Court dealing with an application under section 32 is empowered (section 33) to accord its sanction to the transfer subject to the condition that the money thereby raised shall be paid into Court or to trustees appointed by the Court, and to give such further directions as it may think fit with a view to ensuring that the money shall be applied to the purpose for which it is raised, or that any balance that is not so applied shall be secured for the benefit of those entitled after the restricted owner.

26. It will be observed that no provision is made in the draft for alienation with the consent of the so-called "reversioners." This matter is one which gives rise to great difficulties in the case of the Hindu widow, and it seems impossible, having regard to the system of succession established by the Bill, to provide for it in any satisfactory manner. If provision had only to be made to meet the case of "reversioners" who claim under section 37 (1) and section 38 (3) by descent from the last absolute owner, the matter would be much simpler than in the case of the Hindu widow, inasmuch as these "reversioners" would always be known living persons or persons who would claim through them; but there are, besides these, the "reversioners" mentioned in section 38 (1) and (2), and it is thus impossible to fix upon any person whose consent would be sufficient.

27. Further, even if we were, as has been suggested, to waive this objection, and accept the consent of a merely presumptive "reversioner," there is another difficulty, namely, that the presumptive "reversioner" might (see section 39 of the Bill) be another restricted owner, possibly an old woman on the verge of the grave, whose prospect of succeeding would be extremely small. There might be several such persons intervening between the restricted owner and the first person who would take as absolute owner. We could hardly rest satisfied with anything short of the consent of this last person and all the intervening ones, and thus we should be landed in a considerable complication, leading in many cases to no very satisfactory result, inasmuch as the interest of the first person who would take as absolute owner, and to whose consent we would chiefly look, would often be of a remotely contingent nature. It is, of course, on economical grounds desirable to provide a means of freeing the property from the limited ownership, but the advantage would be dearly purchased if the basis of the purchaser's title were to be complicated in this way.

28. As regards the sale of property in execution of a decree against a restricted owner, it will be seen that the effect of section 34 of the Bill is that a person lending money for any of the purposes mentioned in section 31 can sell in execution nothing more than the so-called "life-interest" of the restricted owner, unless his loan is secured by a mortgage. The position of the restricted owner as regards anything beyond her so-called life-interest is, in fact, in this particular, somewhat similar to that of an English executor with power to charge the real estate. If it were otherwise, there might arise, in cases of execution for unsecured debts, the same difficult questions which the preceding sections are intended to shut out in cases of voluntary alienation.

29. It will be observed that, by sections 37 (2) and 38 (4) of the Bill the Crown is postponed to the general heirs of the restricted owner. This appears to be right, though it is gathered from the case of The Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narrainapah (8 Moo. I. A. 529),—this precise point was not there decided,—that it is otherwise in the case of a Hindu woman's estate.

30. Sections 35 and 36 in effect provide that the restricted owner shall represent the property in judicial proceedings and compromises of disputes and for the purposes of laws of limitation and prescription, so as to bind those who take after her.

31. Sections 37 to 39, which regulate the devolution of property after the death of the restricted owner, have been drawn with a view to carry out what is understood to be the intentions of the Commission.

Their main provisions are that—

(b) when the restricted owner has been married, the property shall on her death go to certain of her descendants, and if there are no such descendants shall devolve as just stated.

32. From section 39 it will be seen, as already observed, that property may devolve upon two or more restricted owners in succession. This is to be regretted, but it seems to be an essential part of the scheme.

33. Section 40 regulates the legal relations arising where two or more widows of a deceased Khojá take his property together as restricted owners, and provides that there shall be a right of survivorship between them.

34. Section 41 provides that a widow marrying again after her husband's death shall not be entitled to take as restricted owner his property or any property of any of his lineal descendants which has descended to them from him, and that, if a widow taking any such property as restricted owner subsequently marries again, she shall be deemed for the purposes of certain sections of the chapter to have died. One effect of this latter provision is that the restricted ownership of the widow ceases on her re-marriage.

35. Coming now to Chapter VI, relating to the wills of Khojás, it will be observed that all matters connected with probate and letters of administration are in the case of Khojás, as in the case of other persons not subject to the Indian Succession Act, left to be dealt with under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. The result of this is that the matters remaining to be provided for under this chapter are in the main the same as those which are provided for by the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, as amended by the Act just mentioned; and, as a matter of fact, the specification of the sections of the Indian Succession Act made applicable to the wills of Khojás by this chapter is based on the specification contained in the Hindu Wills Act as cut down by the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. There are, however, some important differences between the two which call for explanation here.

36. The most important of these differences is connected with the limitation on the powers of testamentary disposition. The specification of the sections of the Indian Succession Act applicable to Hindus, &c., contained in the Hindu Wills Act comprises several sections which either confer, or assume the existence of, a power of disposition in favour of unborn persons, but the Act contains a proviso to the effect that nothing therein contained shall authorize any Hindu, &c., to create in property any interest which he could not previously have created, and the Calcutta High Court have held in the recent case of Alangamonjori Dabee v. Soonamoni Dabee (I. L. R. 8 Cal. 637) that the effect of that proviso is to cut down the power of disposition, which the sections in question confer or assume to exist, to the limits imposed on a testator by the Hindu law, that is to say, as held in the well-known Tagore case, to a mere power of disposition in favour of persons who are either in fact or in contemplation of law in existence at the death of the testator.

37. It will be seen, on reference to the report of Alangamonjori Dabee's case, that, though there was no difference of opinion in the Appellate Court which finally heard it, much difficulty arose from the form in which the Hindu Wills Act had been drafted, and that the learned Judge in the Court below had been led by this to take the opposite view. This being so, it was obvious that the drafting of the Hindu Wills Act could not be followed in this particular. Moreover, it was seen that to adopt this form of drafting would in a considerable number of cases expose the testamentary dispositions of Khojás to be called in question for reasons drawn or supposed to be drawn from the extremely vague and unsettled customary law now prevailing among them, and thus the object of the present measure, which is intended to supply a definite body of law, would be to a great extent defeated. It was accordingly resolved to enact directly either that a Khojá's power of testamentary disposition should be co-extensive with that allowed by the Indian Succession Act, or should be limited somewhat in accordance with the ruling in the Tagore case.

38. It was clear that the question as to which of these courses should be adopted stood on grounds altogether independent of those on which the perpetuity question among Hindus had been discussed. The considerations with reference to which it should, in the opinion of the Government of India, be decided will be best seen from the remarks made on referring it to the local authorities for opinion. It was observed that the point was one in regard to which there was no recognized definite rule among the Khojás, and that if, having regard to the family system of that sect and its requirements in this particular, it was considered that it would be desirable to confer upon Khojás a power of disposition as large as that conferred by the Succession Act, the Governor General in Council would be prepared to confer that power; that the circumstance that, in the absence of any other rule, the Courts presume the Hindu law to be applicable to Khojás, and so might possibly, if the question then arose, hold a Khojá testator limited by the rule in the Tagore case, ought not, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, to be permitted to stand in the way of such legislation. "The Government of India," it was said, "has ever been reluctant to alter, by legislation, personal laws like those of the Hindus and Muhammadans, which are definitely ascertainable and are established on a religious or quasi-religious basis; but a rule of Hindu law, which is applied not as such, but merely by virtue of the presumption above referred to, in the absence of any other ascertainable rule, to persons who are by religion not Hindus but Mussulmans, stands in its application to such persons on a totally different footing; and, if it appears expedient to set it aside as regards them, there need be no hesitation about doing so. The rule of the Tagore case, assuming that it would at this moment be applied by the Courts to Khojás, is as applied to them no more sacred or immutable than any of the other rules of Hindu law which at this moment may be applicable to Khojás, but which will be modified by the Bill if it becomes law. No difficulty will, therefore, be raised here on this score."

If, on the other hand, it was observed, it should appear that the rule prohibiting dispositions in favour of unborn persons had, as a matter of fact, been recognised and observed among the Khojás, or if, there being no recognized rule or established practice either way, it should be considered that the powers of disposition allowed by the Succession Act were larger than were needed for the requirements of Khojás, it would probably be desirable to limit the power of disposition in some such way as it is limited by the Hindu law as interpreted in the Tagore case. The system of intestate succession established by the Bill was in certain respects a complicated one; and if to this were to be added a power of making complicated dispositions by will, it was to be feared that we should bring about, in regard to the property of this wealthy and important sect, a state of things which it was desirable if possible to avoid.

any attempt had hitherto been made among them to create by will an interest in favour of an unborn person; that there was thus a tabula rasa; and that it was quite open to the legislature to legislate on the subject as it thought best without any fear of violating an existing custom or of running counter to any prejudice or desire of the Khojá community.

This being so, the Government of India have come to the conclusion that it is undesirable to confer on Khojás any power of testamentary disposition in favour of persons not in existence at the time of the testator's death; and accordingly all portions of the Indian Succession Act which confer, or assume the existence of, such a power have, as far as practicable, been omitted, a proviso at the same time being inserted to the effect that a bequest by a Khojá in favour of any person who has not come into existence at the death of the testator shall be void.

40. The remaining differences between this Bill and the Hindu Wills Act as regards the provisions of the Indian Succession Act applied by them are of less importance.

It may, however, be stated that the following additional provisions of the Succession Act have been made applicable, namely:—

(a) section 47, giving a father power to appoint a guardian by will—a power the existence of which was assumed by the Commission;

(b) sections 52 and 53, relating to privileged wills;

(c) section 84, which provides that, when property is bequeathed to a person and words are added which describe a class of persons but do not denote them as direct objects of a distinct and independent gift, such person is entitled to the whole of the interest of the testator therein unless a contrary intention appears by the will;

(d) section 104, which limits directions for accumulation.

It should be added that section 187 of the Indian Succession Act, which provides that no right as executor or legatee can be established until a grant of probate or letters of administration is obtained, has been omitted for reasons similar to those which led to its being ultimately omitted from the Probate and Administration Act, 1881; and that sections 134 and 135, determining whether property bequeathed to two or more persons in succession should when its value is liable to decrease be retained in its original form, have been omitted, as it seems safer in this country to lay down no hard-and-fast rules on the subject.

41. The only other point calling for notice in connection with this chapter is that section 43, following the proviso to section 10 of the Transfer of Property Act, confers a power of bequeathing property to or for the benefit of a woman, so that she shall not have power to transfer or charge the same or her beneficial interest therein. The existence of such a power appears to have been assumed in the Bill prepared by the Commission.

43. Chapter VII, relating to maintenance and marriage and funeral expenses, calls for little notice. There was some obscurity about the corresponding provisions of the Bill prepared by the Commission, and this chapter has now been settled in accordance with what is understood from the local authorities to have been the original intention. It is believed that the only change of a substantive nature made here is in section 46, where provision has been made for the maintenance, &c., of a daughter while she remains unmarried. The chapter, however, will probably be found open to further amendment when it has been more fully considered.

43. Section 47, which provides for the recovery of sums due under this chapter, has been drawn with a view to precluding, as far as possible, the difficulties which have arisen under the Hindu law in regard to claims for maintenance, and in particular as to how far a person having a right to maintenance is entitled to follow the property of the deceased. As regards this last point, it has been thought best to place the claim for maintenance, &c., on the footing of a debt, postponing it, however, to debts proper. This will not absolutely remove all difficulty, but, by bringing the case within an existing class, it will avoid the creation of a new difficulty.

Explanation of abbreviation used in the margin.

"Bo. Bill" refers to the draft Bill prepared by the Commission and received with the letter from the Government of Bombay, No. 216, dated 14th January, 1880.

A Bill to amend and define the law of Testamentary and Intestate Succession to Khojás.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend and define the law applicable to testamentary and intestate succession to Khojás; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called the Khojá Succession Act, 1884; and it shall extend to the whole of British India.

Short title. Local extent.

2. Except as provided by any other law for the time being in force, succession to the property, whether moveable or immoveable, in British India of a Khojá dying on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-five shall be regulated by the rules contained in this Act, wherever he may have had his domicile at the time of his death. [Act X of 1865, s. 5.]

Application.

Explanation.—Property in British India includes obligations enforceable there.

3. (1) In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,— [Bo. Bill, s. 3.]

Definitions.

"son" means a legitimate son, and does not include an adopted son:

"grandson" means a son's son:

"great-grandson" means a grandson's son:

"daughter" means a legitimate daughter:

"father" and "mother" do not include step-father and step-mother:

"grandfather" and "grandmother" do not include a father's step-father or step-mother:

"brother" and "sister" do not include step-brother and step-sister, nor half-brother and half-sister:

"half-brother" means son of the same father but by another wife:

"lineal male descendant," used with reference to any person, means a male descended from that person through males only: [New.]

"degree" means a degree of kindred computed according to the rules laid down in sections 21, 22 and 24 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, and the table of consanguinity thereto annexed: X of 1865. [Home Dept. Office Memo. dated 12th August, 1882, para. 7.]

"undivided property" means a share in the property belonging to an undivided family:

"restricted owner," used with reference to any property, means a female acquiring that property in the manner specified in section 21, section 23, sub-section (2), section 24, sub-section (1), section 27 and section 39. [New.]

(2) When it is provided in this Act that the members of any class shall take property and the shares which they are respectively to take therein are not specified, they shall take equal shares therein.

4. For the purposes of this Act there shall be no distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property, nor between moveable and immoveable property, nor between those born in the lifetime of a deceased owner of property and those who at the date of his death were only conceived in the womb, but who have been subsequently born alive. [Bo. Bill, s. 7.] [Act X of 1865, s. 28.]

No distinction between ancestral and self-acquired, nor between moveable and immoveable, property. Child in womb.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter II.—Of Succession to the Undivided Property of a Male Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 5-6.)

(Chapter III.—Of Succession to the Separate Property of a Male Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 7-20.)

CHAPTER II.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE UNDIVIDED PROPERTY OF A MALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 8-12.]

5. (1) When a male Khojá owning undivided property dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal male descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, every such descendant shall be entitled to a share in that property unless one of the persons through whom he is descended from the intestate is living.

Where there are lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

(2) When the sharers under sub-section (1) all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, their shares shall be equal.

[Act X of 1865, s. 33.]

(3) When the sharers under sub-section (1) do not all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, the property shall be divided into such a number of equal shares as will correspond with the number of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to him at his decease, and of his lineal male descendants of the like degree of kindred who died before him, and through whom the other sharers are descended from him; and one such share shall be allotted to each of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate at his decease; and one such share shall be allotted in respect of each such deceased male descendant; and the share allotted in respect of each such deceased male descendant shall be divided among the sharers descended through him, in such manner that the sons of any person shall always take that which their father would have been entitled to if he had survived the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, s. 18.]

6. In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the property of the intestate shall be divided equally among all the male members of his undivided family living at his death.

Where there are no lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

CHAPTER III.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE SEPARATE PROPERTY OF A MALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

[Bo. Bill, s. 16.]

7. When a male Khojá owning property, not being undivided property, dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal male descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, the property shall descend in the manner provided in section 5.

Where there are lineal male descendants within fourth degree.

[Bo. Bill, s. 17.]

8. In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the intestate's father shall succeed to the property.

In default of such lineal male descendants, property to belong to the intestate's father.

[Bo. Bill, s. 18.]

9. In default of the father, the intestate's mother shall succeed to the property.

In default of the father, to the mother.

[Bo. Bill, s. 19, see infra, s. 34.]

10. In default of the mother, the widow or widows of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

In default of the mother, to the widows.

[Bo. Bill, s. 20.]

11. In default of widows, the daughters of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

In default of widows, to the daughters.

[Bo. Bill, s. 21.]

12. (1) In default of daughters, the sons of daughters shall succeed to the property, the sons of each daughter taking an equal share:

In default of daughters, to daughters' sons and to brothers.

Provided that, if the intestate has left brothers surviving him, the daughters' sons shall succeed to a moiety of the property, the sons of each daughter taking an equal share, and the brothers shall take the other moiety.

(2) In default of daughters' sons, the brothers shall take the whole of the property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 22.]

13. In default of brothers, the daughters of the intestate's sons shall succeed to the property, the daughters of each son taking an equal share.

In default of brothers, to sons' daughters.

[Bo. Bill, s. 23.]

14. In default of sons' daughters, the sons of the intestate's brothers shall succeed to the property, the sons of each brother taking an equal share.

In default of sons' daughters, to brothers' sons.

[Bo. Bill, s. 24.]

15. In default of brothers' sons, the half-brothers of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

In default of brothers' sons, to half-brothers.

[Bo. Bill, s. 25.]

16. In default of half-brothers, the sons of half-brothers shall succeed to the property, the sons of each half-brother taking an equal share.

In default of half-brothers, to half-brothers' sons.

[Bo. Bill, s. 26.]

17. In default of sons of half-brothers, the paternal grandfather shall succeed to the property; and in default of the paternal grandfather, the paternal grandmother shall succeed to it.

In default of half-brothers' sons, to the grandfather; and in default of the grandfather, to the grandmother.

[Bo. Bill, s. 27.]

18. In default of the paternal grandmother, the paternal uncles shall succeed to the property.

In default of the grandmother, to paternal uncles.

[Bo. Bill, s. 28.]

19. In default of paternal uncles, the sisters of the intestate shall succeed to the property.

In default of paternal uncles, to sisters.

[Bo. Bill, s. 29.]

20. In default of sisters, the property shall belong to those of the intestate's relatives on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate; and, in default of relatives on the father's side, to those of the intestate's relatives on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate:

In default of sisters, to the nearest of kin.

Provided that no female relative shall be entitled to share in the property if there is a male relative standing on the same side in the same degree of kindred to the intestate.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter IV.—Of Succession to the Absolute Property of a Female Khojá dying intestate.—Sections 23-27.)

[Bo. Bill, s. 33. See sec. 48, infra.]

When female takes as restricted owner under foregoing sections.

21. If, at the death of the intestate, any of the male heirs mentioned in sections 7 to 18 (both inclusive), or any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate, is living, a female succeeding under any of the foregoing sections shall take the property as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 30.]

Widow's right to retain possession of ornaments.

22. When a male Khojá dies intestate in respect of any ornaments belonging to him, and not being undivided property, which are in the possession of his wife with his consent, and the wife does not acquire the ownership, whether absolute or restricted, of the ornaments under this Act, she shall be entitled to retain possession of them until she dies or re-marries.

CHAPTER IV.

OF SUCCESSION TO THE ABSOLUTE PROPERTY OF A FEMALE KHOJÁ DYING INTESTATE.

[Bo. Bill, s. 38.]

Descent of unmarried female's absolute property.

23. (1) When an unmarried female Khojá owning property otherwise than as a restricted owner dies intestate in respect of that property, it shall belong to her brothers; in default of brothers, to her father; in default of the father, to her mother; in default of the mother, to the relatives of the intestate on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate; and, in default of such relatives, to the relatives on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 32 & 33.]

(2) If at the death of the intestate any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate is living, a female succeeding under this section, whether in preference to or together with that male relative, shall take the property as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 40.]

Descent of married female's absolute property.

24. (1) When a married female Khojá owning property otherwise than as restricted owner dies intestate in respect of that property, it shall belong to her sons and daughters; and the daughters shall take it as restricted owners.

[Bo. Bill, s. 32.]

(2) In default of sons and daughters, the property shall, except as provided in sub-section (3), belong to her husband.

(3) If the property has been given to the female on the occasion of her marriage separately from the "Dej" for her sole use and benefit by her parents or relatives, it shall, in default of sons and daughters, belong—

(4) A female taking property under clause (b) of sub-section (3) shall not take it as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 37.]

Descent of absolute property of widow or divorced female leaving lineal descendants within the fourth degree.

25. (1) When a female Khojá, being a widow or divorced and owning property otherwise than as restricted owner, dies intestate in respect of that property, leaving legitimate lineal descendants not more remote than the fourth degree, every such descendant shall be entitled to a share of the property unless one of the persons through whom he is descended from the intestate is living.

(2) When the sharers under sub-section (1) all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, their shares shall be equal.

[Act X of 1865, s. 33.]

(3) When the sharers under sub-section (1) do not all stand in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, the property shall be divided into such a number of equal shares as may correspond with the number of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to her at her decease, and of lineal descendants of the like degree of kindred who died before her and through whom the other sharers are descended from her; and one such share shall be allotted to each of the sharers who stood in the nearest degree of kindred to the intestate at her decease; and one such share shall be allotted in respect of each such deceased descendant; and the share allotted in respect of each such deceased descendant shall be divided among the sharers descended through him, in such manner that the children of any person shall always take what that person would have been entitled to if he had survived the intestate.

[Bo. Bill, s. 37.]

Where there are no such lineal descendants.

26. (1) In default of the descendants mentioned in section 25, the property shall belong to the brothers of the intestate; in default of brothers, to her father; in default of the father, to her mother.

(2) In default of the mother, the property shall belong to the relatives of the intestate on the father's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred, and, in default of such relatives, to the relatives of the intestate on the mother's side who stand in the nearest degree of kindred.

When female taking under section 25 or 26 takes as restricted owner.

27. If, at the death of the intestate, any of the male heirs mentioned in section 25 and the first sub-section of section 26, or any male relative of the intestate on the father's side not more remote than the seventh degree of kindred to the intestate, is living, a female succeeding under section 25 or section 26, whether in preference to or together with that heir or relative, shall take the property as restricted owner.

CHAPTER V.

OF PROPERTY WHICH A FEMALE TAKES AS RESTRICTED OWNER, AND THE FURTHER SUCCESSION TO THE SAME.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate," "stridhan."]

Nature of restricted ownership generally.

28. A female taking property as restricted owner shall be absolutely entitled to the use of, and the income accruing from, that property during her life, and, except as otherwise provided by this Act, shall have all the other rights and powers of an absolute owner in respect of that property.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter V.—Of Property which a Female takes as Restricted Owner, and the further Succession to the same.—Sections 29-36.)

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate."]

Powers of alienation limited.

29. Except as provided by section 31, no right to, over or in respect of property created by a restricted owner of that property shall have effect for any time beyond her life:

[New.]

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect a lease granted at a fair rent for a term not exceeding twenty years, and without payment of any fine or premium, or a right created for consideration in favour of a person acting in good faith, and without notice of the ownership being restricted.

[Act II of 1882, s. 3.]

Explanation.—A person has notice of the ownership being restricted when he actually knows that it is restricted, or when, but for wilful abstention from enquiry or gross negligence, he would have known it, or when information of it is given to, or obtained by, his agent under the circumstances mentioned in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 229.

IX of 1872.

Obligations of restricted owner.

30. A female taking property as restricted owner shall be bound, so far as it is possible for her to do so without applying her other property for that purpose,—

(b) to make such payments, institute, maintain and defend such suits and other proceedings, and take such other steps as, regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the property, may be reasonably requisite for the assertion and protection of the title thereto, for the protection of the interest of those who are to take it after her, or for the recovery of any portion of it which is not in her possession.

[Bo. Bill, s. 3; "life-estate."]

Restricted owner's power of transfer.

31. A female taking property as restricted owner shall have power to transfer the same, so that the transfer may have effect beyond her life when, the income being insufficient, such transfer is necessary in order to raise money for any of the following purposes, namely:—

(a) to discharge any of the obligations imposed by section 30;

(b) to discharge the debts of the absolute owner from whom the property descended;

(c) to provide for the maintenance of any persons entitled under this Act to have their maintenance provided for out of the property, for the payment of any marriage expenses or funeral expenses payable under this Act out of the property, and for the performance of any ordinary family ceremonies; and

(d) to support herself where she has no other sufficient means of support.

[New]. [Act II of 1882, s. 34.]

32. (1) A restricted owner of property may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction to sanction any transfer of that property which she proposes to make under section 31.

(2) The petition must state the names of all the persons interested in the application so far as they can be ascertained, and must be verified by the applicant or by some other competent person in the manner required by law for the verification of plaints; and, if it contains any averment which the person making the verification knows or believes to be false, or does not know or believe to be true, that person shall be deemed to have intentionally given false evidence within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(3) A copy of the petition shall be served upon, and the hearing thereof may be attended by, such of the persons interested in the application as the Court thinks fit.

(4) A transfer made with the sanction of a Court obtained under this section shall be deemed to be warranted by section 31.

[New].

Power to direct money raised to be paid into Court.

33. A Court dealing with an application under section 32 may, if it thinks fit, sanction the transfer proposed subject to the condition that the money raised by the transfer shall be paid into Court or to trustees apppointed by the Court, and may give such further directions as it thinks fit with a view to ensuring that the money shall be applied to the purpose for which it is raised, or that any balance thereof which is not required for that purpose, shall be secured for the benefit of those who would take the property after the restricted owner.

Effect of sale in execution against restricted owner.

34. When property belonging to a female as restricted owner is sold in execution of a decree passed against her, the interest taken by the purchaser shall cease on her death,— except when, without any collusion between her and the plaintiff,—

(b) the decree is one for sale passed on a mortgage made under section 31 so as to take effect beyond the life of the female.

Effect of decision or compromise to which the restricted owner is a party.

35. A decision in any suit or other proceeding, or a compromise of any dispute, relating to the property to which the restricted owner is a party, shall, except where she acts in collusion with the party opposed to her, bind those who take the property after her under this Act in the same manner and to the same extent as if she were an absolute owner of the property.

Effect of lapse of time during continuance of restricted ownership.

36. In any case in which, under any enactment for the time being in force, an owner of property would by lapse of time lose any right to, over or in respect of that property, or any means of enforcing any such right, or another person would by lapse of time acquire any right to, over or in respect of, that property, any period which elapses during the continuance of the restricted ownership shall be reckoned as against those taking the property after the termination of that ownership in the same manner and to the same extent as if the restricted owner had been an absolute owner of the property and it had been taken by them as her heirs.

[Bo. Bill, s. 36.]

37. (1) When property has descended to a female as restricted owner and she dies unmarried, it shall belong to the person to whom it would then have belonged if she had died before the absolute owner from whom it descended and it had descended under this Act without having been alienated.

Further descent of property held by unmarried female as restricted owner.

(2) In default of such person, the property shall descend as if the female were not a restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 41.]

38. (1) When property has descended to a female as restricted owner and she dies, being at the time of her death married, a widow or divorced from her husband, the property shall be divided among her legitimate lineal male descendants, not being more remote than the fourth degree, those nearest in degree of kindred to her excluding the more remote, and, when those nearest in degree are not her sons, the property being so divided amongst them that the sons of any person shall take the share which he would have taken if the fathers of all had survived the restricted owner.

Further descent of restricted property of married or divorced female or widow.

(2) In default of legitimate lineal male descendants as aforesaid, the property shall belong to the daughters of the deceased; in default of daughters, the property shall belong to the legitimate lineal male descendants of daughters, not being more remote from the deceased than the fourth degree, those nearest in degree excluding the more remote; the descendants of each daughter, when they take, taking an equal share, and when they are not sons of the daughters, that share being so divided among them that the sons of any person shall take what he would have taken if the fathers of all had survived the restricted owner.

(3) In default of legitimate lineal male descendants of daughters as aforesaid, the property shall belong to the person to whom it would then have belonged if the restricted owner had died before the absolute owner from whom it descended, and it had descended under this Act without having been alienated.

(4) In default of such person, the property shall descend as if the female were not a restricted owner.

39. When property, having descended to a female as restricted owner, subsequently descends to another female under section 37, sub-section (1), or section 38, sub-section (3), that female shall take it as restricted owner.

When female taking property under sections 37 and 38 taken as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 40.]

40. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing sections, when two or more widows of a deceased Khojá take his property under this Act as restricted owners,—

Widows taking together as restricted owners to have a right of survivorship.

(1) there shall be as between them a right of survivorship in respect of that property;

(2) the proviso to section 29 shall not apply to any charge of or any right to, over or in respect of the property, or any part or share thereof, granted or created by one or more of them without the consent in writing of the other or others of them then surviving;

41. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing sections, a widow marrying again after her husband's death shall not be entitled to take as restricted owner his property or any property of any of his lineal descendants which has descended to them from him; and a widow taking any such property as restricted owner under the foregoing sections and subsequently marrying again shall, for the purpose of applying sections 28, 29, 34, 38 and 40, to that property, be deemed to have died.

Effect of re-marriage of widow claiming or holding as restricted owner.

[Bo. Bill, s. 34; Act XV of 1856, s. 2.]

CHAPTER VI.

OF WILLS OF KHOJÁS.

42. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the portions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, set forth in the schedule hereto annexed, with the modifications shown in that schedule, shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 331 of that Act, apply to all wills made by a Khojá, whether male or female, dying on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-five; and in the portions of the Act so applying all words defined in section 3 of the Act shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to have the same meaning as that section has attached to them respectively;

Extension of portions of Act X of 1865 with certain modifications to wills of Khojás.

X of 1865.

Provided that—

(a) For the purpose of the portions of the Act so applying, no person to whom the Indian Majority Act, 1875, applies shall be deemed to have attained his majority before the time specified in this behalf in that Act.

IX of 1875.

(b) A bequest by a Khojá in favour of any person who has not come into existence at the death of the testator, or in favour of a class of persons any one of whom has not come into existence at that time, shall be void.

(c) When a bequest is void under clause (b), any bequest contained in the same will and intended to take effect after or upon failure of such prior bequest shall also be void.

43. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sections, a Khojá may bequeath property to or for the benefit of a woman so that she shall not have power to transfer or charge the same or her beneficial interest therein.

Bequest of property to woman without power to transfer or charge.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(Chapter VII.—Of Maintenance and Marriage and Funeral Expenses.—Secs. 44-47.)

(Chapter VIII.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 48-51.)

CHAPTER VII.

OF MAINTENANCE AND MARRIAGE AND FUNERAL EXPENSES.

[Bo. Bill, ss. 34 & 43.]

44. (1) The amount requisite for the maintenance of the following persons and the amount of their necessary funeral expenses shall, if they do not possess or leave means sufficient for the purpose, be payable out of any property of a deceased male Khojá in respect of which he has died intestate.

Maintenance and funeral expenses payable out of intestate's property.

(2) The persons referred to are—

(a) the widow or widows of the deceased Khojá and the widows of his legitimate lineal male descendants, provided they have not married again;

(b) every daughter and sister (whether legitimate or not) of the deceased Khojá, and every legitimate daughter of his son, grandson or great-grandson, except when she has been married and her husband is living;

(c) the father, mother, grandfather and grandmother of the deceased Khojá; and

(d) his illegitimate sons until they attain their majority.

[Bo. Bill, s. 43.]

45. The expenses of the first or only marriage of every daughter (whether legitimate or not) of a deceased male Khojá, and of every legitimate daughter of his deceased son, grandson or great-grandson, if not otherwise sufficiently provided for, shall be payable out of any of his property in respect of which he has died intestate.

Marriage expenses payable out of intestate's property.

[Bo. Bill, s. 45.]

Maintenance and funeral expenses payable out of property of testator.

47. Any sum claimable for maintenance or marriage expenses or funeral expenses under section 44, section 45 or section 46 out of any property of a deceased male Khojá shall be recoverable as if it was due under a contract made by the Khojá in his lifetime and he had died leaving only that property:

Recovery of sums claimable under sections 44, 45 and 46.

Provided that—

first, the property shall be applied to the payment of debts due by the deceased before being applied to the payment of sums so claimable;

thirdly, when a suit is instituted for the purpose of having any such allowance fixed against a person taking the property by intestate succession, and that person is able and willing to maintain or provide for the maintenance of the person by or on whose behalf the suit is instituted, and gives security to the satisfaction of the Court for his so doing, the Court may, if it thinks fit, dismiss the suit.

CHAPTER VIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

[Bo. Bill, s. 42. Act X of 1865, s. 28.]

48. When a Khojá dies intestate in respect of any of his property, and there is no person entitled to take that property under the foregoing sections, it shall go to the Crown.

Property when to go to the Crown.

49. Except as otherwise provided by this Act—

Females succeeding under this Act to take as males, except in certain cases.

(2) a female taking property under any testamentary disposition under this Act shall have the same interest in it, and the same powers in respect of it, as a male taking under a like disposition.

[Bo. Bill, s. 35. Act XV of 1856, s. 3.]

50. If a widow of a deceased Khojá, not having been appointed by his will to be guardian for his children, marries again, she shall not be entitled as of right to be appointed guardian of the children by a Court under any law for the time being in force relating to the appointment of guardians, and, when she has before her re-marriage been so appointed, a Court having jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for the children may in its discretion remove her from the guardianship.

Guardianship of children where widow re-marries.

51. A Khojá may dispose, by gift made in contemplation of death, of any moveable property which he could dispose of by will.

Property transferable by gift made in contemplation of death.

A gift is said to be made in contemplation of death where a person who is ill and expects to die shortly of his illness delivers to another the possession of any moveable property to keep as a gift in case the donor shall die of that illness.

When gift said to be made in contemplation of death.

Such a gift may be resumed by the giver.

Such gift resumable.

It does not take effect if he recovers from the illness during which it was made, nor if he survives the person to whom it was made.

When it fails.

(a.) A being ill, and in expectation of death, delivers to B, to be retained by him in case of A's death—

a watch:

a bond granted by C to A:

a bank-note:

a promissory note of the Government of India endorsed in blank:

a bill of exchange endorsed in blank:

certain mortgage-deeds.

A dies of the illness during which he delivered these articles.

B is entitled to—

the watch:

the debt secured by C's bond:

the bank-note:

the promissory note of the Government of India:

the bill of exchange:

the money secured by the mortgage-deeds.

(b.) A being ill, and in expectation of death, delivers to B the key of a trunk, or the key of a warehouse in which goods of bulk belonging to A are deposited, with the intention of giving him the control over the contents of the trunk, or over the deposited goods, and desires him to keep them in case of A's death. A dies of the illness during which he delivered these articles. B is entitled to the trunk and its contents, or to A's goods of bulk in the warehouse.

(c.) A being ill, and in expectation of death, puts aside certain articles in separate parcels, and marks upon the parcels respectively the names of B and C. The parcels are not delivered during the life of A. A dies of the illness during which he set aside the parcels. B and C are not entitled to the contents of the parcels.

SCHEDULE.

(See Section 42.)

Note.—Modifications are shewn in italics; omissions by asterisks.

PART VII.

Of Wills and Codicils.

Persons capable of making wills.

46. Every person of sound mind and not a minor may dispose of his property by will.

Explanation 1.—A married woman may dispose by will of any property which she could alienate by her own act during her life.

Explanation 2.—Persons who are deaf, or dumb, or blind are not thereby incapacitated for making a will if they are able to know what they do by it.

Explanation 3.—One who is ordinarily insane may make a will during an interval in which he is of sound mind.

Explanation 4.—No person can make a will while he is in such a state of mind, whether arising from drunkenness, or from illness, or from any other cause, that he does not know what he is doing.

Illustrations.

(a.) A can perceive what is going on in his immediate neighbourhood, and can answer familiar questions, but has not a competent understanding as to the nature of his property, or the persons who are of kindred to him, or in whose favour it would be proper that he should make his will. A cannot make a valid will.

(b.) A executes an instrument purporting to be his will, but he does not understand the nature of the instrument nor the effect of its provisions. This instrument is not a valid will.

(c.) A, being very feeble and debilitated, but capable of exercising a judgment as to the proper mode of disposing of his property, makes a will. This is a valid will.

Testamentary guardian.

47. A father, whatever his age may be, may by will appoint a guardian or guardians for his child during minority.

Will obtained by fraud, coercion or importunity.

Illustrations.

(a.) A falsely and knowingly represents to the testator that the testator's only child is dead, or that he has done some undutiful act, and thereby induces the testator to make a will in his, A's, favour; such will has been obtained by fraud and is invalid.

(b.) A by fraud and deception prevails upon the testator to bequeath a legacy to him. The bequest is void.

(c.) A, being a prisoner by lawful authority, makes his will. The will is not invalid by reason of the imprisonment.

(d.) A threatens to shoot B, or to burn his house, or to cause him to be arrested on a criminal charge, unless he makes a bequest in favour of C. B in consequence makes a bequest in favour of C. The bequest is void, the making of it having been caused by coercion.

(e.) A being of sufficient intellect, if undisturbed by the influence of others, to make a will, yet being so much under the control of B that he is not a free agent, makes a will dictated by B. It appears that he would not have executed the will but for fear of B. The will is invalid.

(f.) A, being in so feeble a state of health as to be unable to resist importunity, is pressed by B to make a will of a certain purport, and does so merely to purchase peace, and in submission to B. The will is invalid.

(g.) A being in such a state of health as to be capable of exercising his own judgment and volition, B uses urgent intercession and persuasion with him to induce him to make a will of a certain purport. A, in consequence of the intercession and persuasion, but in the free exercise of his judgment and volition, makes his will in the manner recommended by B. The will is not rendered invalid by the intercession and persuasion of B.

(h.) A, with a view to obtaining a legacy from B, pays him attention and flatters him, and thereby produces in him a capricious partiality to A. B, in consequence of such attention and flattery, makes his will, by which he leaves a legacy to A. The bequest is not rendered invalid by the attention and flattery of A.

Will may be revoked or altered.

49. A will is liable to be revoked or altered by the maker of it at any time when he is competent to dispose of his property by will.

PART VIII.

Of the Execution of Unprivileged Wills.

Execution of unprivileged wills.

50. Every testator, not being a soldier employed in an expedition, or engaged in actual warfare, or a mariner at sea, must execute his will according to the following rules:—

First.—The testator shall sign or shall affix his mark to the will, or it shall be signed by some other person in his presence and by his direction.

Second.—The signature or mark of the testator, or the signature of the person signing for him, shall be so placed that it shall appear that it was intended thereby to give effect to the writing as a will.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Third.—The will shall be attested by two or more witnesses, each of whom must have seen the testator sign or affix his mark to the will, or have seen some other person sign the will in the presence and by the direction of the testator, or have received from the testator a personal acknowledgment of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person; and each of the witnesses must sign or affix his mark to the will in the presence of the testator, but it shall not be necessary that more than one witness be present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary.

Incorporation of papers by reference.

51. If a testator, in a will or codicil duly attested, refers to any other document then actually written, as expressing any part of his intentions, such document shall be considered as forming a part of the will or codicil in which it is referred to.

PART IX.

Of Privileged Wills.

Privileged wills.

52. Any soldier being employed in an expedition, or engaged in actual warfare, or any mariner being at sea, may, if he has completed the age of eighteen years, dispose of his property by a will made as is mentioned in the fifty-third section. Such wills are called privileged wills.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, the surgeon of a regiment, is actually employed in an expedition. He is a soldier actually employed in an expedition, and can make a privileged will.

(b.) A is at sea in a merchant-ship, of which he is the purser. He is a mariner, and being at sea can make a privileged will.

(c.) A, a soldier serving in the field against insurgents, is a soldier engaged in actual warfare, and as such can make a privileged will.

(d.) A, a mariner of a ship in the course of a voyage, is temporarily on shore, while she is lying in harbour. He is, in the sense of the words used in this clause, a mariner at sea, and can make a privileged will.

(e.) A, an admiral who commands a naval force, but who lives on shore, and only occasionally goes on board his ship, is not considered as at sea, and cannot make a privileged will.

(f.) A, a mariner serving on a military expedition, but not being at sea, is considered as a soldier, and can make a privileged will.

Mode of making, and rules for executing, privileged wills.

53. Privileged wills may be in writing, or may be made by word of mouth.

The execution of them shall be governed by the following rules:—

First.—The will may be written wholly by the testator, with his own hand. In such case it need not be signed nor attested.

Second.—It may be written wholly or in part by another person, and signed by the testator. In such case it need not be attested.

Third.—If the instrument purporting to be a will is written wholly or in part by another person, and is not signed by the testator, it shall be considered to be his will, if it be shown that it was written by the testator's directions, or that he recognized it as his will.

If it appear on the face of the instrument that the execution of it in the manner intended by him was not completed, the instrument shall not by reason of that circumstance be invalid, provided that his non-execution of it can be reasonably ascribed to some cause other than the abandonment of the testamentary intentions expressed in the instrument.

Fourth.—If the soldier or mariner shall have written instructions for the preparation of his will, but shall have died before it could be prepared and executed, such instructions shall be considered to constitute his will.

Fifth.—If the soldier or mariner shall, in the presence of two witnesses, have given verbal instructions for the preparation of his will, and they shall have been reduced into writing in his lifetime, but he shall have died before the instrument could be prepared and executed, such instructions shall be considered to constitute his will, although they may not have been reduced into writing in his presence, nor read over to him.

Sixth.—Such soldier or mariner as aforesaid may make a will by word of mouth by declaring his intentions before two witnesses present at the same time.

Seventh.—A will made by word of mouth shall be null at the expiration of one month after the testator shall have ceased to be entitled to make a privileged will.

PART X.

Of the Attestation, Revocation, Alteration and Revival of Wills.

* * * * * * * * *

Witness not disqualified by interest or by being executor.

55. No person, by reason of interest in, or of his being an executor of, a will, is disqualified as a witness to prove the execution of the will or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof.

* * * * * * * * *

Revocation of unprivileged will or codicil.

57. No unprivileged will or codicil, nor any part thereof, shall be revoked otherwise than * * * * * by another will or codicil, or by some writing declaring an intention to revoke the same, and executed in the manner in which an unprivileged will is hereinbefore required to be executed, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same.

Illustrations.

(a.) A has made an unprivileged will. Afterwards A makes another unprivileged will which purports to revoke the first. This is a revocation.

(b.) A has made an unprivileged will. Afterwards, A being entitled to make a privileged will, makes a privileged will which purports to revoke his unprivileged will. This is a revocation.

Effect of obliteration, interlineation or alteration in unprivileged will.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

as so altered, shall be deemed to be duly executed if the signature of the testator and the subscription of the witnesses be made in the margin or on some other part of the will opposite or near to such alteration, or at the foot or end of or opposite to a memorandum referring to such alteration, and written at the end or some other part of the will.

Revocation of privileged will or codicil.

59. A privileged will or codicil may be revoked by the testator, by an unprivileged will or codicil, or by any act expressing an intention to revoke it, and accompanied with such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged will, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same.

Explanation.—In order to the revocation of a privileged will or codicil by an act accompanied with such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged will, it is not necessary that the testator should at the time of doing that act be in a situation which entitles him to make a privileged will.

Revival of unprivileged will.

60. No unprivileged will or codicil, nor any part thereof, which shall be in any manner revoked, shall be revived otherwise than by the re-execution thereof, or by a codicil executed in manner hereinbefore required, and showing an intention to revive the same; and when any will or codicil which shall be partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked shall be revived, such revival shall not extend to so much thereof as shall have been revoked before the revocation of the whole thereof, unless an intention to the contrary shall be shown by the will or codicil.

Extent of revival of will or codicil partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked.

PART XI.

Of the Construction of Wills.

Wording of will.

Enquiries to determine questions as to object or subject of will.

62. For the purpose of determining questions as to what person or what property is denoted by any words used in a will, a Court must inquire into every material fact relating to the persons who claim to be interested under such will, the property which is claimed as the subject of disposition, the circumstances of the testator and of his family, and into every fact a knowledge of which may conduce to the right application of the words which the testator has used.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, by his will, bequeaths 1,000 rupees to his eldest son or to his youngest grandchild, or to his cousin Mary. A Court may make inquiry in order to ascertain to what person the description in the will applies.

(b.) A, by his will, leaves to B "his estate called Black Acre." It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what is the subject-matter of the bequest; that is to say, what estate of the testator's is called Black Acre.

(c.) A, by his will, leaves to B "the estate which he purchased of C." It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what estate the testator purchased of C.

Misnomer or misdescription of object.

63. Where the words used in the will to designate or describe a legatee, or a class of legatees, sufficiently show what is meant, an error in the name or description shall not prevent the legacy from taking effect.

A mistake in the name of a legatee may be corrected by a description of him, and a mistake in the description of a legatee may be corrected by the name.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths a legacy "to Thomas, the second son of his brother John." The testator has an only brother, named John, who has no son named Thomas, but has a second son whose name is William. William shall have the legacy.

(b.) A bequeaths a legacy "to Thomas, the second son of his brother John." The testator has an only brother named John, whose first son is named Thomas, and whose second son is named William. Thomas shall have the legacy.

(c.) The testator bequeaths his property "to A and B, the legitimate children of C." C has no legitimate child, but has two illegitimate children, A and B. The bequest to A and B takes effect, although they are illegitimate.

(d.) The testator gives his residuary estate to be divided among "his seven children," and proceeding to enumerate them, mentions six names only. This omission shall not prevent the seventh child from taking a share with the others.

(e.) The testator, having six grand-children, makes a bequest to "his six grand-children," and proceeding to mention them by their Christian names, mentions one twice over, omitting another altogether. The one whose name is not mentioned shall take a share with the others.

(f.) The testator bequeaths "1,000 rupees to each of the three children of A." At the date of the will A has four children. Each of these four children shall, if he survives the testator, receive a legacy of 1,000 rupees.

When words may be supplied.

64. Where any word material to the full expression of the meaning has been omitted, it may be supplied by the context.

Illustration.

The testator gives a legacy of "five hundred" to his daughter A, and a legacy of "five hundred rupees" to his daughter B. A shall take a legacy of five hundred rupees.

Rejection of erroneous particulars in description of subject.

65. If the thing which the testator intended to bequeath can be sufficiently identified from the description of it given in the will, but some parts of the description do not apply, such parts of the description shall be rejected as erroneous and the bequest shall take effect.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, but had no marsh-lands in the occupation of X. The words "in the occupation of X" shall be rejected as erroneous, and the marsh-lands of the testator lying in L shall pass by the bequest.

(b.) The testator bequeaths to A "his zamíndárí of Rámpúr." He had an estate at Rámpúr, but it was a taluq and not a zamíndárí. The taluq passes by this bequest.

When part of description may not be rejected as erroneous.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Explanation.—In judging whether a case falls within the meaning of this section, any words which would be liable to rejection under the sixty-fifth section are to be considered as struck out of the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The bequest shall be considered as limited to such of the testator's marsh-lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X.

(b.) A bequeaths to B "his marsh-lands lying in L, and in the occupation of X, comprising 1,000 bighás of land." The testator had marsh-lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The measurement is wholly inapplicable to the marsh lands of either class, or to the whole taken together. The measurement shall be considered as struck out of the will, and such of the testator's marsh-lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X shall alone pass by the bequest.

Extrinsic evidence admissible in case of latent ambiguity.

67. Where the words of the will are unambiguous, but it is found by extrinsic evidence that they admit of applications one only of which can have been intended by the testator, extrinsic evidence may be taken to show which of these applications was intended.

Illustrations.

(a.) A man, having two cousins of the name of Mary, bequeaths a sum of money to "his cousin Mary." It appears that there are two persons each answering the description in the will. That description, therefore, admits of two applications, only one of which can have been intended by the testator. Evidence is admissible to show which of the two applications was intended.

(b.) A, by his will, leaves to B "his estate called Sultánpur Khurd." It turns out that he had two estates called Sultánpur Khurd. Evidence is admissible to show which estate was intended.

Extrinsic evidence inadmissible in cases of patent ambiguity or deficiency.

68. Where there is an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of the will, no extrinsic evidence as to the intentions of the testator shall be admitted.

Illustrations.

(a.) A man has an aunt Caroline and a cousin Mary, and has no aunt of the name of Mary. By his will he bequeaths 1,000 rupees to "his aunt Caroline" and 1,000 rupees to "his cousin Mary," and afterwards bequeaths 2,000 rupees to "his before-mentioned aunt Mary." There is no person to whom the description given in the will can apply, and evidence is not admissible to show who was meant by "his before-mentioned aunt Mary." The bequest is therefore void for uncertainty under the seventy-sixth section.

(b.) A bequeaths 1,000 rupees to , leaving a blank for the name of the legatee. Evidence is not admissible to show what name the testator intended to insert.

(c.) A bequeaths to B rupees. or "his estate of ." Evidence is not admissible to show what sum or what estate the testator intended to insert.

Meaning of clause to be collected from entire will.

69. The meaning of any clause in a will is to be collected from the entire instrument, and all its parts are to be construed with reference to each other; and for this purpose a codicil is to be considered as part of the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator gives to B a specific fund or property at the date of A, and by a subsequent clause gives the whole of his property to A. The effect of the several clauses taken together is to vest the specific fund or property in A for life and after his decease in B; it appearing from the bequest to B that the testator meant to use in a restricted sense the words in which he describes what he gives to A.

(b.) Where a testator, having an estate one part of which is called Black Acre, bequeaths the whole of his estate to A, and in another part of his will bequeaths Black Acre to B, the latter bequest is to be read as an exception out of the first, as if he had said, "I give Black Acre to B and all the rest of my estate to A."

When words may be understood in restricted sense, and when in sense wider than usual.

70. General words may be understood in a restricted sense where it may be collected from the will that the testator meant to use them in a restricted sense; and words may be understood in a wider sense than that which they usually bear, where it may be collected from the other words of the will that the testator meant to use them in such wider sense.

Illustrations.

(a.) A testator gives to A "his farm in the occupation of B," and to C "all his marsh-lands in L." Part of the farm in the occupation of B consists of marsh-lands in L, and the testator also has other marsh-lands in L. The general words, "all his marsh-lands in L," are restricted by the gift to A. A takes the whole of the farm in the occupation of B, including that portion of the farm which consists of marsh-lands in L.

(b.) The testator (a sailor on ship-board) bequeathed to his mother his gold ring, buttons and chest of clothes, and to his friend A (a shipmate) his red box, clasp-knife and all things not before bequeathed. The testator's share in a house does not pass to A under this bequest.

(c.) A, by his will, bequeathed to B all his household furniture, plate, linen, china, books, pictures and all other goods of whatever kind; and afterwards bequeathed to B a specified part of his property. Under the first bequest, B is entitled only to such articles of the testator's as are of the same nature with the articles therein enumerated.

Which of two possible constructions preferred.

71. Where a clause is susceptible of two meanings, according to one of which it has some effect, and according to the other it can have none, the former is to be preferred.

No part rejected, if it can be reasonably construed.

72. No part of a will is to be rejected as destitute of meaning if it is possible to put a reasonable construction upon it.

Interpretation of words repeated in different parts of will.

73. If the same words occur in different parts of the same will, they must be taken to have been used everywhere in the same sense, unless there appears an intention to the contrary.

Testator's intention to be effectuated as far as possible.

74. The intention of the testator is not to be set aside because it cannot take effect to the full extent, but effect is to be given to it as far as possible.

* * * * * *

The last of two inconsistent clauses prevails.

75. Where two clauses or gifts in a will are irreconcileable, so that they cannot possibly stand together, the last shall prevail.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator by the first clause of his will leaves his estate of Rámnagar "to A," and by the last clause of his will leaves it "to B and not to A." B shall have it.

(b.) If a man at the commencement of his will gives his house to A, and at the close of it directs that his house shall be sold and the proceeds invested for the benefit of B, the latter disposition shall prevail.

Will or bequest void for uncertainty.

76. A will or bequest not expressive of any definite intention is void for uncertainty.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.
(Schedule.—Portions of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) modified for application to Wills made by Khojás.)

Illustration.

If a testator says—"I bequeath goods to A"; or "I bequeath to A"; or "I leave to A all the goods mentioned in a schedule," and no schedule is found; or "I bequeath money,' 'wheat,' 'oil,'" or the like, without saying how much, this is void.

77. The description contained in a will, of property the subject of gift, shall, unless a contrary intention appear by the will, be deemed to refer to and comprise the property answering that description at the death of the testator.

Words describing subject refer to property answering description at testator's death.

* * * * * *

82. Where property is bequeathed to any person, he is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless it appears from the will that only a restricted interest was intended for him.

Bequest without words of limitation.

83. Where property is bequeathed to a person with a bequest in the alternative to another person or to a class of persons, if a contrary intention does not appear by the will, the legatee first named shall be entitled to the legacy, if he be alive at the time when it takes effect; but if he be then dead, the person or class of persons named in the second branch of the alternative shall take the legacy.

Bequest in alternative.

(a.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A survives the testator. B takes nothing.

(b.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A dies after the date of the will, and before the testator. The legacy goes to B.

(c.) A bequest is made to A or to B. A is dead at the date of the will. The legacy goes to B.

(d.) Property is bequeathed to A or his heirs. A survives the testator. A takes the property absolutely.

(e.) Property is bequeathed to A or his nearest of kin. A dies in the lifetime of the testator. Upon the death of the testator, the bequest to A's nearest of kin takes effect.

* * * * * *

84. Where property is bequeathed to a person, and words are added which describe a class of persons, but do not denote them as direct objects of a distinct and independent gift, such person is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless a contrary intention appears by the will.

Effect of words describing a class added to bequest to a person.

(a.) A bequest is made—

to A and his children,
to A and his children by his present wife,
to A and his heirs,
to A and the heirs of his body,
to A and the heirs male of his body,
to A and the heirs female of his body,
to A and his issue,
to A and his family,
to A and his descendants,
to A and his representatives,
to A and his personal representatives,
to A, his executors and administators.

In each of these cases, A takes the whole interest which the testator had in the property.

(b.) A bequest is made to A and his brothers. A and his brothers are jointly entitled to the legacy.

88. Where a will purports to make two bequests to the same person, and a question arises whether the testator intended to make the second bequest instead of or in addition to the first, if there is nothing in the will to show what he intended, the following rules shall prevail in determining the construction to be put upon the will:—

Rules of construction where will purports to make two bequests to same person.

First.—If the same specific thing is bequeathed twice to the same legatee in the same will, or in the will and again in a codicil, he is entitled to receive that specific thing only.

Second.—Where one and the same will or one and the same codicil purports to make, in two places, a bequest to the same person of the same quantity or amount of anything, he shall be entitled to one such legacy only.

Third.—Where two legacies of unequal amount are given to the same person in the same will, or in the same codicil, the legatee is entitled to both.

Fourth.—Where two legacies, whether equal or unequal in amount, are given to the same legatee, one by a will and the other by a codicil, or each by a different codicil, the legatee is entitled to both legacies.

Explanation.*—In the four last rules, the word "will" does not include a codicil.

Illustrations.

(a.) A having ten shares, and no more, in the Bank of Bengal, made his will, which contains near its commencement the words "I bequeath my ten shares in the Bank of Bengal to B." After other bequests, the will concludes with the words "and I bequeath my ten shares in the Bank of Bengal to B." B is entitled simply to receive A's ten shares in the Bank of Bengal.

(b.) A having one diamond-ring, which was given him by B, bequeathed to C the diamond-ring which was given him by B. A afterwards made a codicil to his will, and thereby, after giving other legacies, he bequeathed to C the diamond-ring which was given him by B. C can claim nothing except the diamond-ring which was given to A by B.

(c.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees, and afterwards, in the same will, repeats the bequest in the same words. B is entitled to one legacy of 5,000 rupees only.

(d.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees, and afterwards, by the same will, bequeaths to B the sum of 6,000 rupees. B is entitled to 11,000 rupees.

(e.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees, and by a codicil to the will he bequeaths to him 5,000 rupees. B is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees.

(f.) A, by one codicil to his will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees, and by another codicil, bequeaths to him 6,000 rupees. B is entitled to receive 11,000 rupees.

(g.) A, by his will, bequeaths "500 rupees to B because she was his nurse," and in another part of the will bequeaths 500 rupees to B "because she went to England with his children." B is entitled to receive 1,000 rupees.

(h.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also, in another part of the will, an annuity of 400 rupees. B is entitled to both legacies.

(i.) A, by his will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also bequeaths to him the sum of 5,000 rupees if he shall attain the age of 18. B is entitled absolutely to one sum of 5,000 rupees, and take a contingent interest in another sum of 5,000 rupees.

89. A residuary legatee may be constituted by any words that show an intention on the part of the testator that the person designated shall take the surplus or residue of his property.

(a.) A makes her will, consisting of several testamentary papers, in one of which are contained the following words:—"I think there will be something left, after all funeral expenses, &c., to give to B, now at school, towards equipping him to any profession he may hereafter be appointed to." B is constituted residuary legatee.

(b.) A makes his will, with the following passage at the end of it:—"I believe there will be found sufficient in my banker's hands to defray and discharge my debts, which I hereby desire B to do, and keep the residue for her own use and pleasure." B is constituted the residuary legatee.

(c.) A bequeaths all his property to B, except certain stocks and funds, which he bequeaths to C. B is the residuary legatee.

90. Under a residuary bequest, the legatee is entitled to all property belonging to the testator at the time of his death, of which he has not made any other testamentary disposition which is capable of taking effect.

Property to which residuary legatee entitled.

91. If a legacy be given in general terms, without specifying the time when it is to be paid, the legatee has a vested interest in it from the day of the death of the testator, and, if he dies without having received it, it shall pass to his representatives.

Time of vesting of legacy in general terms.

92. If the legatee does not survive the testator, the legacy cannot take effect, but shall lapse and form part of the residue of the testator's property, unless it appear by the will that the testator intended that it should go to some other person.

In what case legacy lapses.

In order to entitle the representatives of the legatee to receive the legacy, it must be proved that he survived the testator.

Illustrations.

(a.) The testator bequeaths to B "500 rupees which B owes him." B dies before the testator; the legacy lapses.

(b.) A bequest is made to A and his children. A dies before the testator or happens to be dead when the will is made. The legacy to A and his children lapses.

(d.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B. A dies in the lifetime of the testator. B survives the testator. The bequest to B takes effect.

(e.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A on his completing his eighteenth year, and in case he should die before he completes his eighteenth year, to B. A completes his eighteenth year, and dies in the lifetime of the testator. The legacy to A lapses, and the bequest to B does not take effect.

(f.) The testator and the legatee perished in the same shipwreck. There is no evidence to show which died first. The legacy will laspe.

93. If a legacy be given to two persons jointly, and one of them die before the testator, the other legatee takes the whole.

Legacy does not lapse if one of two joint legatees die before testator.

Illustration.

The legacy is simply to A and B. A dies before the testator. B takes the legacy.

94. But where a legacy is given to legatees in words which show that the testator intended to give them distinct shares of it, then if any legatee die before the testator, so much of the legacy as was intended for him shall fall into the residue of the testator's property.

Effect of words showing testator's intention to give distinct shares.

Illustration.

A sum of money is bequeathed to A, B and C, to be equally divided among them. A dies before the testator. B and C shall only take so much as they would have had if A had survived the testator.

95. Where the share that lapses is a part of the general residue bequeathed by the will, that share shall go as undisposed of.

When lapsed share goes as undisposed of.

Illustration.

The testator bequeaths the residue of his estate to A, B and C, to be equally divided between them. A dies before the testator. His one-third of the residue goes as undisposed of.

96. Where a bequest shall have been made to any son or other legitimate lineal male descendant of the testator, and the legatee shall die in the lifetime of the testator, but any legitimate lineal male descendant of his shall survive the testator, the bequest shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of the legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will.

When bequest to testator's lineal descendant does not lapse on his death in testator's lifetime.

Illustration.

A makes his will, by which he bequeaths a sum of money to his son B for his own absolute use and benefit. B dies before A, leaving a son C who survives A, and having made his will whereby he bequeaths all his property to his widow D. The money goes to D.

97. Where a bequest is made to one person for the benefit of another, the legacy does not lapse by the death, in the testator's lifetime, of the person to whom the bequest is made.

Bequest to A for benefit of B does not lapse by A's death.

98. Where a bequest is made simply to a described class of persons, the thing bequeathed shall go only to such as shall be alive at the testator's death.

(a.) A bequeaths 1,000 rupees to "the children of B" without saying when it is to be distributed among them. B had died previous to the date of the will, leaving three children, C, D and E. E died after the date of the will, but for the death of A. C and D survive A. The legacy shall belong to C and D, to the exclusion of the representatives of E.

(b.) A bequeaths a legacy to the children of B. At the time of the testator's death, B has no chidren. The bequest is void.

PART XII.

OF VOID BEQUESTS.

99. Where a bequest is made to a person by a particular description, and there is no person in existence at the testator's death who answers the description, the bequest is void.

Bequest to person by particular description, who is not in existence at testator's death.

101. No bequest is valid whereby the vesting of the thing bequeathed may be delayed beyond the lifetime of one or more persons living at the testator's decease.

Rule against perpetuity.

* * * * * *

102. If a bequest is made to a class of persons, with regard to some of whom it is inoperative by reason of the rules contained in the last preceding section, such bequest shall be wholly void.

Bequest to a class, some of whom may come under rules in section 101.

* * * * * *

Bequest to take effect on failure of bequest void under section 101 or 102.

104. A direction to accumulate the income arising from any property shall be void; and the property shall be disposed of as if no accumulation had been directed.

Effect of direction for accumulation.

Exception.—Where the property is immoveable, or where accumulation is directed to be made from the death of the testator, the direction shall be valid in respect only of the income arising from the property within one year next following the testator's death;

and at the end of the year such property and income shall be disposed of respectively, as if the period during which the accumulation has been directed to be made had elapsed.

Illustrations.

(a.) The will directs that the sum of 10,000 rupees shall be invested in Government-securities, and the income accumulated for 20 years, and that the principal, together with the accumulations, shall then be divided between A, B and C. A, B and C are entitled to receive the sum of 10,000 rupees at the end of the year from the testator's death.

(b.) The will directs that 10,000 rupees shall be invested and the income accumulated until A shall marry, and shall then be paid to him. A is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees at the end of a year from the testator's death.

(c.) The will directs that the rents of the farm of Sultánpur shall be accumulated for ten years, and that the accumulation shall be then paid to the eldest son of A. At the death of the testator, A has an eldest son living, named B. B shall receive at the end of one year from the testator's death the rents which have accrued during the year, together with any interest which may have been made by investing them.

* * * * *

(e.) A bequeaths a sum of money to B, to be paid to him when he shall attain the age of 18, and directs the interest to be accumulated till he shall arrive at that age. At A's death the legacy becomes vested in B; and so much of the interest as is not required for his maintenance and education is accumulated, not by reason of the direction contained in the will, but in consequence of B's minority.

PART XIII.

OF THE VESTING OF LEGACIES.

106. Where by the terms of a bequest the legatee is not entitled to immediate possession of the thing bequeathed, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the will, become vested in the legatee on the testator's death, and shall pass to the legatee's representatives if he dies before that time and without having received the legacy.

Date of vesting of legacy when payment or possession postponed.

And in such cases the legacy is from the testator's death said to be vested in interest.

Explanation.—An intention that a legacy to any person shall not become vested in interest in him is not to be inferred merely from a provision whereby the payment or possession of the thing bequeathed is postponed, or whereby a prior interest therein is bequeathed to some other person, or whereby the income arising from the fund bequeathed is directed to be accumulated until the time of payment arrives, or from a provision that, if a particular event shall happen, the legacy shall go over to another person.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 100 rupees, to be paid to him at the death of C. On A's death the legacy becomes vested in interest in B, and if he dies before C, his representatives are entitled to the legacy.

(b.) A bequeaths to B 100 rupees, to be paid to him upon his attaining the age of 18. On A's death the legacy becomes vested in interest in B.

(c.) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B. On the testator's death the legacy to B becomes vested in interest in B.

(d.) A fund is bequeathed to A until B attains the age of 18, and then to B. The legacy to B is vested in interest from the testator's death.

(e.) A bequeaths the whole of his property to B upon trust to pay certain debts out of the income, and then to make over the fund to C. At A's death the gift to C becomes vested in interest in him.

(f.) A fund is bequeathed to A, B and C in equal shares, to be paid to them on their attaining the age of 18 respectively, with a proviso that, if all of them die under the age of 18, the legacy shall devolve upon D. On the death of the testator, the shares vest in interest in A, B and C, subject to be devested in case A, B and C shall all die under 18, and upon the death of any of them (except the last survivor) under the age of 18, his vested interest passes, so subject, to his representatives.

107. A legacy bequeathed in case a specified uncertain event shall happen does not vest until that event happens.

Date of vesting when legacy contingent upon specified uncertain event.

A legacy bequeathed in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen does not vest until the happening of that event becomes impossible.

In either case, until the condition has been fulfilled, the interest of the legatee is called contingent.

Exception.—Where a fund is bequeathed to any person upon his attaining a particular age, and the will also gives to him absolutely the income to arise from the fund before he reaches that age, or directs the income, or so much of it as may be necessary, to be applied for his benefit, the bequest of the fund is not contingent.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to D in case A, B and C shall all die under the age of 18. D has a contingent interest in the legacy until A, B and C all die under 18, or one of them attains that age.

(b.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A "in case he shall attain the age of 18," or, "when he shall attain the age of 18." A's interest in the legacy is contingent until the condition shall be fulfilled by his attaining that age.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, if B shall then be living; but if B shall not be then living, to C. A, B and C survive the testator. B and C each take a contingent interest in the estate until the event which is to vest it in one or in the other shall have happened.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

(d.) An estate is bequeathed as in the case last supposed. B dies in the lifetime of A and C. Upon the death of B, C acquires a vested right to obtain possession of the estate upon A's death.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A when she shall attain the age of 18, or shall marry under that age with the consent of B, with a proviso that, if she shall not attain 18, or marry under that age with B's consent, the legacy shall go to C. A and C each take a contingent interest in the legacy. A attains the age of 18. A becomes absolutely entitled to the legacy, although she may have married under 18 without the consent of B.

(f.) An estate is bequeathed to A until he shall marry, and after that event to B. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until the condition shall be fulfiled by A's marrying.

(g.) An estate is bequeathed to A until he shall take advantage of the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, and after that event to B. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until A takes advantage of the Act.

(h.) An estate is bequeathed to A if he shall pay 500 rupees to B. A's interest in the bequest is contingent until he has paid 500 rupees to B.

(i.) A leaves his farm of Sultánpur Khurd to B, if B shall convey his own farm of Sultánpur Buzurg to C. B's interest in the bequest is contingent until he has conveyed the latter farm to C.

(j.) A fund is bequeathed to A if B shall not marry C within five years after the testator's death. A's interest in the legacy is contingent, until the condition shall be fulfilled by the expiration of the five years without B's having married C, or by the occurrence, within that period, of an event which makes the fulfilment of the condition impossible.

(k.) A fund is bequeathed to A if B shall not make any provision for him by will. The legacy is contingent until B's death.

(l.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees a year upon his attaining the age of 18, and directs that the interest, or a competent part thereof, shall be applied for his benefit until he reaches that age. The legacy is vested.

(m.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees when he shall attain the age of 18, and directs that a certain sum, out of another fund, shall be applied for his maintenance until he arrives at that age. The legacy is contingent.

108. Where a bequest is made only to such members of a class as shall have attained a particular age, a person who has not attained that age cannot have a vested interest in the legacy.

Vesting of interest in bequest to such members of a class as shall have attained particular age.

PART XIV.

OF ONEROUS BEQUESTS.

109. Where a bequest imposes an obligation on the legatee, he can take nothing by it unless he accepts it fully.

Onerous bequest.

Illustration.

A having shares in (X), a prosperous joint stock company, and also shares in (Y), a joint stock company in difficulties, in respect of which shares heavy calls are expected to be made, bequeaths to B all his shares in joint stock companies. B refuses to accept the shares in (Y). He forfeits the shares in (X).

110. Where a will contains two separate and independent bequests to the same person, the legatee is at liberty to accept one of them and refuse the other, although the former may be beneficial and the latter onerous.

One of two separate and independent bequests to same person may be accepted, and other refused.

Illustration.

A having a lease for a term of years of a house at a rent which he and his representatives are bound to pay during the term, and which is higher than the house can be let for, bequeaths to B the lease and a sum of money. B refuses to accept the lease. He shall not by this refusal forfeit the money.

PART XV.

OF CONTINGENT BEQUESTS.

111. Where a legacy is given if a specified uncertain event shall happen, and no time is mentioned in the will for the occurrence of that event, the legacy cannot take effect unless such event happens before the period when the fund bequeathed is payable or distributable.

Bequest contingent upon specified uncertain event, no time being mentioned for its occurrence.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, and in case of his death, to B. If A survives the testator, the legacy to B does not take effect.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, and in case of his death without children, to B. If A survives the testator or dies in his lifetime leaving a child, the legacy to B does not take effect.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A when and if he attains the age of 18, and in case of his death, to B. A attains the age of 18. The legacy to B does not take effect.

(d.) A legacy is bequeathed to A for life and after his death to B, and, "in case of B's death without children," to C. The words "in case of B's death without children" are to be understood as meaning in case B shall die without children during the lifetime of A.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, and, "in case of B's death," to C. The words "in case of B's death" are to be considered as meaning "in case B shall die in the lifetime of A."

112. Where a bequest is made to such of certain persons as shall be surviving at some period but the exact period is not specified, the legacy shall go to such of them as shall be alive at the time of payment or distribution, unless a contrary intention appear by the will.

Bequest to such of certain persons as shall be surviving at some period not specified.

Illustrations.

(a.) Property is bequeathed to A and B, to be equally divided between them, or to the survivor of them. If both A and B survive the testator, the legacy is equally divided between them. If A dies before the testator, and B survives the testator, it goes to B.

(b.) Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B and C, to be equally divided between them, or to the survivor of them. B dies during the life of A; C survives A. At A's death the legacy goes to C.

* * * * *

(d.) Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B and C, with a direction that, in case either of them dies in the lifetime of A, the whole shall go to the survivor. B dies in the lifetime of A. Afterwards C dies in the lifetime of A. The legacy goes to the representative of C.

PART XVI.

OF CONDITIONAL BEQUESTS.

113. A bequest upon an impossible condition is void.

Bequest upon impossible condition.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall walk one hundred miles in an hour. The bequest is void.

(b.) A bequeaths 500 rupees to B on condition that he shall marry A's daughter. A's daughter was dead at the date of the will. The bequest is void.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

114. A bequest upon a condition the fulfilment of which would be contrary to law or to morality is void.

Bequest upon illegal or immoral condition.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 500 rupees to B on condition that he shall murder C. The bequest is void.

(b.) A bequeaths 5,000 rupees to his niece if she will desert her husband. The bequest is void.

115. Where a will imposes a condition to be fulfilled before the legatee can take a vested interest in the thing bequeathed, the condition shall be considered to have been fulfilled if it has been substantially complied with.

Fulfilment of condition precedent to vesting of legacy.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C, D and E. A marries with the written consent of B. C is present at the marriage. D sends a present to A previous to the marriage. E has been personally informed by A of his intentions, and has made no objection. A has fulfilled the condition.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. D dies. A marries with the consent of B and C. A has fulfilled the condition.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A marries in the lifetime of B, C and D, with the consent of B and C only. A has not fulfilled the condition.

(d.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A obtains the unconditional assent of B, C and D to his marriage with E. Afterwards B, C and D capriciously retract their consent. A marries E. A has fulfilled the condition.

(e.) A legacy is bequeathed to A on condition that he shall marry with the consent of B, C and D. A marries without the consent of B, C and D, but obtains their consent after the marriage. A has not fulfilled the condition.

(f.) A makes his will, whereby he bequeaths a sum of money to B if B shall marry with the consent of A's executors. B marries during the lifetime of A, and A afterwards expresses his approbation of the marriage. A dies. The bequest to B takes effect.

(g.) A legacy is bequeathed to A if he executes a certain document within a time specified in the will. The document is executed by A within a reasonable time, but not within the time specified in the will. A has not performed the condition, and is not entitled to receive the legacy.

116. Where there is a bequest to one person and a bequest of the same thing to another, if the prior bequest shall fail, the second bequest shall take effect upon the failure of the prior bequest, although the failure may not have occurred in the manner contemplated by the testator.

Bequest to A and on failure of prior bequest, to B.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths a sum of money to his own children surviving him, and if they all die under 18, to B. A dies without having ever had a child. The bequest to B takes effect.

(b.) A bequeaths a sum of money to B, on condition that he shall execute a certain document within three months after A's death, and if he should neglect to do so, to C. B dies in the testator's lifetime. The bequest to C takes effect.

117. Where the will shows an intention that the second bequest shall take effect only in the event of the first bequest failing in a particular manner, the second bequest shall not take effect unless the prior bequest fails in that particular manner.

When second bequest not to take effect, on failure of first.

Illustration.

A makes a bequest to his wife, but in case she should die in his lifetime, bequeaths to B that which he had bequeathed to her. A and his wife perish together, under circumstances which make it impossible to prove that she died before him. The bequest to B does not take effect.

118. A bequest may be made to any person with the condition superadded that in case a specified uncertain event shall happen, the thing bequeathed shall go to another person; or, that in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen, the thing bequeathed shall go over to another person.

Bequest over, conditional upon happening or not happening of specified uncertain event.

In each case the ulterior bequest is subject to the rules contained in sections 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 117.

Illustrations.

(a.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A, to be paid to him at the age of 18, and if he shall die before he attains that age, to B. A takes a vested interest in the legacy, subject to be devested and to go to B in case A shall die under 18.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A with a proviso that, if A shall dispute the competency of the testator to make a will, the estate shall go to B. A disputes the competency of the testator to make a will. The estate goes to B.

* * * * *

(d.) A sum of money is bequeathed to A and B, and if either should die during the life of C, then to the survivor living at the death of C. A and B die before C. The gift over cannot take effect, but the representative of A takes one-half of the money and the representative of B takes the other half.

(e.) A bequeaths to B the interest of a fund for life, and directs the fund to be divided, at her death, equally among her three children, or such of them as shall be living at her death. All the children of B die in B's lifetime. The bequest over cannot take effect, but the interests of the children pass to their representatives.

119. An ulterior bequest of the kind contemplated by the last preceding section cannot take effect unless the condition is strictly fulfilled.

Condition must be strictly fulfilled.

Illustrations.

(a.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if he marries without the consent of B, C and D, the legacy shall go to E. D dies. Even if A marries without the consent of B and C, the gift to E does not take effect.

(b.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if he marries without the consent of B, the legacy shall go to C. A marries with the consent of B. He afterwards becomes a widower and marries again without the consent of B. The bequest to C does not take effect.

(c.) A legacy is bequeathed to A, to be paid at 18, or marriage, with a proviso that, if A dies under 18, or marries without the consent of B, the legacy shall go to C. A marries under 18, without the consent of B. The bequest to C takes effect.

120. If the ulterior bequest be not valid, the original bequest is not affected by it.

Original bequest not affected by invalidity of second.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A for his life, with a condition superadded that if he shall not on a given day walk 100 miles in an hour, the estate shall go to B. The condition being void, A retains his estate as if no condition had been inserted in the will.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A for her life, and if she do not desert her husband, to B. A is entitled to the estate during her life as if no condition had been inserted in the will.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A for life, and, if he marries, to the eldest son of B for life. B, at the date of the testator's death, had not had a son. The bequest over is void under section 92, and A is entitled to the estate during his life.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.
(Schedule.—Portions of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) modified for application to Wills made by Khojás.)

121. A bequest may be made with the condition superadded that it shall cease to have effect in case a specified uncertain event shall happen, or in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen.

Bequest conditioned that it shall cease to have effect in case specified uncertain event shall happen or not happen.

Illustrations.

(a.) An estate is bequeathed to A for his life, with a proviso that, in case he shall cut down a certain wood, the bequest shall cease to have any effect. A cuts down the wood; he loses his life-interest in the estate.

(b.) An estate is bequeathed to A, provided that, if he marries under the age of 25 without the consent of the executors named in the will, the estate shall cease to belong to him. A marries under 25 without the consent of the executors. The estate ceases to belong to him.

(c.) An estate is bequeathed to A, provided that, if he shall not go to England within three years after the testator's death, his interest in the estate shall cease. A does not go to England within the time prescribed. His interest in the estate ceases.

(d.) An estate is bequeathed to A, with a proviso that, if she becomes a nun, she shall cease to have any interest in the estate. A becomes a nun. She loses her interest under the will.

(e.) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B, if B shall be then living, with a proviso that, if B shall become a nun, the bequest to her shall cease to have any effect. B becomes a nun in the lifetime of A. She thereby loses her contingent interest in the fund.

122. In order that a condition that a bequest shall cease to have effect may be valid, it is necessary that the event to which it relates be one which could legally constitute the condition of a bequest as contemplated by the one hundred and seventh section.

Such condition must not be invalid under section 107.

123. Where a bequest is made with a condition superadded that, unless the legatee shall perform a certain act, the subject-matter of the bequest shall go to another person, or the bequest shall cease to have effect, but no time is specified for the performance of the act, if the legatee takes any step which renders impossible or indefinitely postpones the performance of the act required, the legacy shall go as if the legatee had died without performing such act.

Result of legatee rendering impossible or indefinitely postponing act for which no time specified and on non-performance of which subject-matter to go over.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequest is made to A with a proviso that, unless he enters the army, the legacy shall go over to B. A takes holy orders, and thereby renders it impossible that he should fulfil the condition. B is entitled to receive the legacy.

(b.) A bequest is made to A with a proviso that it shall cease to have any effect if he does not marry B's daughter. A marries a stranger, and thereby indefinitely postpones the fulfilment of the condition. The bequest ceases to have effect.

124. Where the will requires an act to be performed by the legatee within a specified time, either as a condition to be fulfilled before the legacy is enjoyed or as a condition upon the non-fulfilment of which the subject-matter of the bequest is to go over to another person, or the bequest is to cease to have effect, the act must be performed within the time specified, unless the performance of it be prevented by fraud, in which case such further time shall be allowed as shall be requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud.

Performance of condition, precedent or subsequent, within specified time.

Further time in case of fraud.

PART XVII.

Of Bequests with directions as to application or enjoyment.

125. Where a fund is bequeathed absolutely to or for the benefit of any person, but the will contains a direction that it shall be applied or enjoyed in a particular manner, the legatee shall be entitled to receive the fund as if the will had contained no such direction.

Direction that funds be employed in particular manner following absolute bequest of same to or for benefit of any person.

Illustration.

A sum of money is bequeathed towards purchasing a country-residence for A, or to purchase an annuity for A, or to purchase a commission in the army for A, or to place A in any business. A chooses to receive the legacy in money. He is entitled to do so.

126. Where a testator absolutely bequeaths a fund, so as to sever it from his own estate, but directs that the mode of enjoyment of it by the legatee shall be restricted so as to secure a specified benefit for the legatee; if that benefit cannot be obtained for the legatee, the fund belongs to him as if the will had contained no such direction.

Direction that mode of enjoyment of absolute bequest is to be restricted, to secure specified benefit for legatee.

* * * * * *

Bequest of fund for certain purposes, some of which cannot be fulfilled.

PART XVIII.

Of Bequests to an Executor.

128. If a legacy is bequeathed to a person who is named an executor of the will, he shall not take the legacy unless he proves the will or otherwise manifests an intention to act as executor.

Legatee named as executor cannot take unless he shews intention to act as executor.

Illustration.

A legacy is given to A, who is named an executor. A orders the funeral according to the directions contained in the will, and dies a few days after the testator, without having proved the will. A has manifested an intention to act as executor.

PART XIX.

Of Specific Legacies.

129. Where a testator bequeaths to any person a specified part of his property, which is distinguished from all other parts of his property, the legacy is said to be specific.

Specific legacy defined.

"one-half of the money owing to him on his mortgage of Rámpur factory:"

"1,000 rupees being part of a debt due to him from C:"

"his capital stock of 1,000 l. in East India stock:"

"his promissory notes of the Government of India for 10,000 rupees in their 4 per cent. loan:"

"all such sums of money as his executors may, after his death, receive in respect of the debt due to him from the insolvent firm of D and Company:"

"all the wine which he may have in his cellar at the time of his death:"

"such of his horses as B may select:"

"all his shares in the Bank of Bengal:"

"all the shares in the Bank of Bengal which he may possess at the time of his death:"

"all the money which he has in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India:"

"all the Government-securities he shall be entitled to at the time of his decease."

Each of these legacies is specific.

(b.) A having Government promissory notes for 10,000 rupees, bequeaths to his executors "Government promissory notes for 10,000 rupees in trust to sell" for the benefit of B.

The legacy is specific.

(c.) A having property at Benares, and also in other places, bequeaths to B all his property at Benares.

The legacy is specific.

(d.) A bequeaths to B—

his house in Calcutta:

his zamíndárí of Rámpur:

his taluq of Rámnagar:

his lease of the indigo-factory of Salkya:

an annuity of 500 rupees out of the rents of his zamíndárí of W.

A directs his zamíndárí of X to be sold, and the proceeds to be invested for the benefit of B.

Each of these bequests is specific.

(e.) A by his will charges his zamíndárí of Y with an annuity of 1,000 rupees to C during his life, and subject to this charge he bequeaths the zamíndárí to D. Each of these bequests is specific.

(f.) A bequeaths a sum of money—

to buy an estate in zila Faridpur for B:

to buy a diamond-ring for B:

to buy a horse for B:

to be invested in shares in the Bank of Bengal for B:

to be invested in Government-securities for B.

A bequeaths to B—

"a diamond-ring:"

"a horse:"

"10,000 rupees worth of Government securities:"

"an annuity of 500 rupees:"

"2,000 rupees, to be paid in cash:"

"so much money as will produce 5,000 rupees 4 per cent. Government-securities."

These bequests are not specific.

(g.) A, having property in England and property in India, bequeaths a legacy to B, and directs that it shall be paid out of the property which he may leave in India. He also bequeaths a legacy to C, and directs that it shall be paid out of the property which he may leave in England.

No one of these legacies is specific.

130. Where a sum certain is bequeathed, the legacy is not specific merely because the stocks, funds or securities in which it is invested are described in the will.

Bequest of sum certain where stocks, &c., in which invested are described.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"10,000 rupees of his funded property:"

"10,000 rupees of his property now invested in shares of the East Indian Railway Company:"

"10,000 rupees at present secured by mortgage of Rámpur factory."

No one of these legacies is specific.

Bequest of stock where testator had, at date of will, equal or greater amount of stock of same kind.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees 5 per cent. Government securities. A had at the date of the will five per cent. Government securities for 5,000 rupees.

The legacy is not specific.

132. A money-legacy is not specific merely because the will directs its payment to be postponed until some part of the property of the testator shall have been reduced to a certain form, or remitted to a certain place.

Bequest of money where not payable until part of testator's property disposed of in certain way.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B 10,000 rupees, and directs that this legacy shall be paid as soon as A's property in India shall be realized in England.

The legacy is not specific.

133. Where a will contains a bequest of the residue of the testator's property along with an enumeration of some items of property not previously bequeathed, the articles enumerated shall not be deemed to be specifically bequeathed.

When enumerated articles not deemed specifically bequeathed.

PART XX.

Of Demonstrative Legacies.

137. Where a testator bequeaths a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of any other commodity, and refers to a particular fund or stock so as to constitute the same the primary fund or stock out of which payment is to be made, the legacy is said to be demonstrative.

Demonstrative legacy defined.

Explanation.—The distinction between a specific legacy and a demonstrative legacy consists in this, that—where specified property is given to the legatee, the legacy is specific;

where the legacy is directed to be paid out of specified property, it is demonstrative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The legacy to B is specific; the legacy to C is demonstrative.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—

"ten bushels of the corn which shall grow in his field of Greenacre:"

"80 chests of the indigo which shall be made at his factory of Rámpur:"

"10,000 rupees out of his five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India:"

an annuity of 500 rupees "from his funded property:"

"1,000 rupees out of the sum of 2,000 rupees due to him by C."

A bequeaths to B an annuity, and directs it to be paid out of the rents arising from his taluq of Rámnagar.

A bequeaths to B—

"10,000 rupees out of his estate at Rámnagar," or charges it on his estate at Rámnagar:

"10,000 rupees, being his share of the capital embarked in a certain business."

Each of these bequests is demonstrative.

138. Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed and a legacy is directed to be paid out of the same fund, the portion specifically bequeathed shall first be paid to the legatee, and the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the residue of the fund, and, so far as the residue shall be deficient, out of the general assets of the testator.

Order of payment when legacy directed to be paid out of fund the subject of specific legacy.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The debt due to A from W is only 1,500 rupees; of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B, and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator.

PART XXI.

Of Ademption of Legacies.

139. If anything which has been specifically bequeathed does not belong to the testator at the time of his death, or has been converted into property of a different kind, the legacy is adeemed; that is, it cannot take effect by reason of the subject-matter having been withdrawn from the operation of the will.

Ademption explained.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—

"the diamond-ring presented to him by C:"

"his gold chain:"

"a certain bale of wool:"

"a certain piece of cloth:"

"all his household-goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in M Street, in Calcutta, at the time of his death."

A, in his lifetime,

sells or gives away the ring;
converts the chain into a cup:
converts the wool into cloth:
makes the cloth into a garment:
takes another house into which he removes all his goods

Each of these legacies is adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—

"the sum of 1,000 rupees in a certain chest:"

"all the horses in his stable."

At the death of A, no money is found in the chest, and no horses in the stable.

The legacies are adeemed.

(c.) A bequeaths to B certain bales of goods. A takes the goods with him on a voyage. The ship and goods are lost at sea, and A is drowned.

The legacy is adeemed.

140. A demonstrative legacy is not adeemed by reason that the property on which it is charged by the will does not exist at the time of the death of the testator, or has been converted into property of a different kind; but it shall in such case be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Non-ademption of demonstrative legacy.

141. Where the thing specifically bequeathed is the right to receive something of value from a third party, and the testator himself receives it, the bequest is adeemed.

Ademption of specific bequest of right to receive something from third party.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B—

"the debt which C owes him:"

"2,000 rupees which he has in the hands of D:"

"the money due to him on the bond of E:"

"his mortgage on the Rámpur factory."

All these debts are extinguished in A's lifetime, some with and some without his consent.

All the legacies are adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths to B—

"his interest in certain policies of life-assurance."

A in his lifetime receives the amount of the policies. The legacy is adeemed.

142. The receipt by the testator of a part of an entire thing specifically bequeathed shall operate as an ademption of the legacy to the extent of the sum received.

Ademption pro tanto by testator's receipt of part of entire thing specifically bequeathed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B "the debt due to him by C." The debt amounts to 10,000 rupees. C pays to A 5,000 rupees, the one-half of the debt. The legacy is revoked by ademption, so far as regards the 5,000 rupees received by A.

143. If a portion of an entire fund or stock be specifically bequeathed, the receipt by the testator of a portion of the fund or stock shall operate as an ademption only to the extent of the amount so received; and the residue of the fund or stock shall be applicable to the discharge of the specific legacy.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B one-half of the sum of 10,000 rupees due to him from W. A in his lifetime receives 6,000 rupees, part of the 10,000 rupees. The 4,000 rupees which are due from W to A at the time of his death belong to B under the specific bequest.

Order of payment where portion of fund specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and legacy charged on same fund to another, and testator having received portion of that fund, remainder insufficient to pay both legacies.

144. Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and a legacy charged on the same fund is bequeathed to another legatee, if the testator receives a portion of that fund, and the remainder of the fund is insufficient to pay both the specific and the demonstrative legacy, the specific legacy shall be paid first, and the residue (if any) of the fund shall be applied so far as it will extend in payment of the demonstrative legacy, and the rest of the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, part of the debt of 2,000 rupees due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. A afterwards receives 500 rupees, part of that debt, and dies leaving only 1,500 rupees due to him from W. Of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B, and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator.

Ademption where stock, specifically bequeathed, does not exist at testator's death.

145. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does not exist at the testator's death, the legacy is adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"his capital stock of 1,000*l.* in East India Stock:"

"his promissory notes of the Government of India for 10,000 rupees in their 4 per cent. loan."

A sells the stock and the notes.

The legacies are adeemed.

Ademption pro tanto where stock, specifically bequeathed, exists in part only at testator's death.

146. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does only in part exist at the testator's death, the legacy is adeemed so far as regards that part of the stock which has ceased to exist.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B—

"his 10,000 rupees in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India."

A sells one-half of his 10,000 rupees in the loan in question.

One-half of the legacy is adeemed.

Non-ademption of specific bequest of goods described as connected with certain place, by reason of removal.

147. A specific bequest of goods under a description connecting them with a certain place is not adeemed by reason that they have been removed from such place from any temporary cause, or by fraud or without the knowledge or sanction of the testator.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B "all his household goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in Calcutta at the time of his death." The goods are removed from the house to save them from fire. A dies before they are brought back.

A bequeaths to B "all his household goods which shall be in or about his dwelling-house in Calcutta at the time of his death." During A's absence upon a journey, the whole of the goods are removed from the house. A dies without having sanctioned their removal.

Neither of these legacies is adeemed.

When removal of thing bequeathed does not constitute ademption.

148. The removal of the thing bequeathed from the place in which it is stated in the will to be situated does not constitute an ademption where the place is only referred to in order to complete the description of what the testator meant to bequeath.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B all the bills, bonds and other securities for money belonging to him then lying in his lodgings in Calcutta. At the time of his death these effects had been removed from his lodgings in Calcutta.

A bequeaths to B all his furniture then in his house in Calcutta. The testator has a house at Calcutta and another at Chinsurah, in which he lives alternately, being possessed of one set of furniture only, which he removes with himself to each house. At the time of his death the furniture is in the house at Chinsurah.

A bequeaths to B all his goods on board a certain ship then lying in the river Hugli. The goods are removed by A's directions to a warehouse, in which they remain at the time of A's death.

No one of these legacies is revoked by ademption.

When thing bequeathed is a valuable to be received by testator from third person, and testator himself, or his representative, receives it.

149. Where the thing bequeathed is not the right to receive something of value from a third person, but the money or other commodity which shall be received from the third person by the testator himself or by his representatives, the receipt of such sum of money or other commodity by the testator shall not constitute an ademption;

but if he mixes it up with the general mass of his property, the legacy is adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B whatever sum may be received from his claim on C. A receives the whole of his claim on C and sets it apart from the general mass of his property. The legacy is not adeemed.

Change by operation of law of subject of specific bequest between date of will and testator's death.

150. Where a thing specifically bequeathed undergoes a change between the date of the will and the testator's death, and the change takes place by operation of law or in the course of execution of the provisions of any legal instrument under which the thing bequeathed was held, the legacy is not adeemed by reason of such change.

Illustrations.

A bequeaths to B "all the money which he has in the 5½ per cent. loan of the Government of India."

The securities for the 5½ per cent. loan are converted during A's lifetime into 5 per cent. stock.

A's bequeaths to B the sum of 2,000*l.*, invested in consols in the names of trustees for A.

The sum of 2,000*l.* is transferred by the trustees into A's own name.

A bequeaths to B the sum of 10,000 rupees in promissory notes of the Government of India which he has power under his marriage-settlement to dispose of by will. Afterwards in A's lifetime, the fund is converted into consols by virtue of an authority contained in the settlement.

No one of these legacies has been adeemed.

The Khojá Succession Bill, 1884.

Change of subject without testator's knowledge.

151. Where a thing specifically bequeathed undergoes a change between the date of the will and the testator's death, and the change takes place without the knowledge or sanction of the testator, the legacy is not adeemed.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B "all his 3 per cent. consols." The consols are, without A's knowledge, sold by his agent, and the proceeds converted into East India stock. This legacy is not adeemed.

Stock specifically bequeathed, lent to third party on condition that it be replaced.

152. Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed is lent to a third party on condition that it shall be replaced, and it is replaced accordingly, the legacy is not adeemed.

Stock specifically bequeathed, sold but replaced and belonging to testator at his death.

153. Where stock specifically bequeathed is sold, and an equal quantity of the same stock is afterwards purchased and belongs to the testator at his death, the legacy is not adeemed.

PART XXII.

Of the Payment of Liabilities in respect of the subject of a Bequest.

Non-liability of executor to exonerate specific legatees.

154. Where property specifically bequeathed is subject at the death of the testator to any pledge, lien or incumbrance, created by the testator himself or by any person under whom he claims, then, unless a contrary intention appears by the will, the legatee, if he accepts the bequest, shall accept it subject to such pledge or incumbrance, and shall (as between himself and the testator's estate) be liable to make good the amount of such pledge or incumbrance.

A contrary intention shall not be inferred from any direction which the will may contain for the payment of the testator's debts generally.

Explanation.—A periodical payment in the nature of land-revenue or in the nature of rent is not such an incumbrance as is contemplated by this section.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B the diamond-ring given him by C. At A's death the ring is held in pawn by D, to whom it has been pledged by A. It is the duty of A's executors, if the state of the testator's assets will allow them, to allow B to redeem the ring.

(b.) A bequeaths to B a zamíndárí which at A's death is subject to a mortgage for 10,000 rupees, and the whole of the principal sum, together with interest to the amount of 1,000 rupees, is due at A's death. B, if he accepts the bequest, accepts it subject to this charge, and is liable, as between himself and A's estate, to pay the sum of 11,000 rupees thus due.

Completion of testator's title to things bequeathed to be at cost of his estate.

155. Where anything is to be done to complete the testator's title to the thing bequeathed, it is to be done at the cost of the testator's estate.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, having contracted in general terms for the purchase of a piece of land at a certain price, bequeaths it to B, and dies before he has paid the purchase-money. The purchase-money must be made good out of A's assets.

(b.) A having contracted for the purchase of a piece of land for a certain sum of money, one-half of which is to be paid down, and the other half secured by mortgage of the land, bequeaths it to B, and dies before he has paid or secured any part of the purchase-money. One-half of the purchase-money must be paid out of A's assets.

Exoneration of legatee's immoveable property for which land-revenue or rent payable periodically.

156. Where there is a bequest of any interest in immoveable property, in respect of which payment in the nature of land-revenue or in the nature of rent has to be made periodically, the estate of the testator shall (as between such estate and the legatee) make good such payments or a proportion of them up to the day of his death.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B a house, in respect of which 365 rupees are payable annually by way of rent. A pays his rent at the usual time, and dies 25 days after. A's estate shall make good 25 rupees in respect of the rent.

Exoneration of specific legatee's stock in joint stock company.

157. In the absence of any direction in the will where there is a specific bequest of stock in a joint stock company, if any call or other payment is due from the testator at the time of his death in respect of such stock, such call or payment shall, as between the testator's estate and the legatee, be borne by such estate;

but if any call or other payment shall, after the testator's death become due in respect of such stock, the same shall, as between the testator's estate and the legatee, be borne by the legatee if he accept the bequest.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeathed to B his shares in a certain railway. At A's death there was due from him the sum of 5*l.* in respect of each share, being the amount of a call which had been duly made, and the sum of 5*s.* in respect of each share, being the amount of interest which had accrued due in respect of the call. These payments must be borne by A's estate.

(b.) A has agreed to take 50 shares in an intended joint stock company, and has contracted to pay up 5*l.* in respect of each share, which sum must be paid before his title to the shares can be completed. A bequeaths these shares to B. The estate of A must make good the payments which were necessary to complete A's title.

(c.) A bequeaths to B his shares in a certain railway. B accepts the legacy. After A's death, a call is made in respect of the shares. B must pay the call.

(d.) A bequeaths to B his shares in a joint stock company. B accepts the bequest. Afterwards the affairs of the company are wound up and each shareholder is called upon for contribution. The amount of the contribution must be borne by the legatee.

(e.) A is the owner of ten shares in a railway company. At a meeting held during his lifetime a call is made of 3*l.* per share payable by three instalments. A bequeaths his shares to B, and dies between the day fixed for the payment of the first and the day fixed for the payment of the second instalment and without having paid the first instalment. A's estate must pay the first instalment, and B, if he accepts the legacy, must pay the remaining instalments.

PART XXIII.

Of Bequests of Things described in general terms.

Bequest of thing described in general terms.

158. If there be a bequest of something described in general terms, the executor must purchase for the legatee what may reasonably be considered to answer the description.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B a pair of carriage-horses, or a diamond-ring. The executor must provide the legatee with such articles, if the state of the assets will allow it.

(b.) A bequeaths to B "his pair of carriage-horses." A had no carriage-horses at the time of his death. The legacy fails.

PART XXIV.

Of Bequests of the Interest or Produce of a Fund.

Bequest of interest or produce of fund.

159. Where the interest or produce of a fund is bequeathed to any person, and the will affords no indication of an intention that the enjoyment of the bequest should be of limited duration, the principal as well as the interest shall belong to the legatee.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B the interest of his five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India. There is no other clause in the will affecting those securities. B is entitled to A's five per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India.

(b.) A bequeaths the interest of his 5½ per cent. promissory notes of the Government of India to B for his life, and after his death to C. B is entitled to the interest of the notes during his life and C is entitled to the notes upon B's death.

(c.) A bequeaths to B the rents of his lands at X. B is entitled to the lands.

PART XXV.

Of Bequests of Annuities.

Annuity created by will payable for life only, unless contrary intention appears by will.

160. Where an annuity is created by will, the legatee is entitled to receive it for his life only unless a contrary intention appears by the will. And this rule shall not be varied by the circumstance that the annuity is directed to be paid out of the property generally, or that a sum of money is bequeathed to be invested in the purchase of it.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B 500 rupees a year. B is entitled during his life to receive the annual sum of 500 rupees.

(b.) A bequeaths to B the sum of 500 rupees monthly. B is entitled during his life to receive the sum of 500 rupees every month.

(c.) A bequeaths an annuity of 500 rupees to B for life, and on B's death to C. B is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees during his life. C, if he survives B, is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees from B's death until his own death.

Period of vesting where will directs that annuity be provided out of proceeds of property, or out of property generally or where money bequeathed to be invested in purchase of annuity.

161. Where the will directs that an annuity shall be provided for any person out of the proceeds of property, or out of property generally, or where money is bequeathed to be invested in the purchase of any annuity for any person, on the testator's death the legacy vests in interest in the legatee, and he is entitled at his option to have an annuity purchased for him or to receive the money appropriated for that purpose by the will.

Illustrations.

(a.) A by his will directs that his executors shall out of his property purchase an annuity of 1,000 rupees for B. B is entitled at his option to have an annuity of 1,000 rupees for his life purchased for him, or to receive such a sum as will be sufficient for the purchase of such an annuity.

(b.) A bequeaths a fund to B for his life, and directs that after B's death it shall be laid out in the purchase of an annuity for C. B and C survive the testators. C dies in B's lifetime. On B's death the fund belongs to the representative of C.

Abatement of annuity.

162. Where an annuity is bequeathed, but the assets of the testator are not sufficient to pay all the legacies given by the will, the annuity shall abate in the same proportion as the other pecuniary legacies given by the will.

Where gift of annuity and residuary gift, whole annuity to be first satisfied.

163. Where there is a gift of an annuity and a residuary gift, the whole of the annuity is to be satisfied before any part of the residue is paid to the residuary legatee, and, if necessary, the capital of the testator's estate shall be applied for that purpose.

PART XXVI.

Of Legacies to Creditors and Portioners.

Creditor primâ facie entitled to legacy as well as debt.

164. Where a debtor bequeaths a legacy to his creditor, and it does not appear from the will that the legacy is meant as a satisfaction of the debt, the creditor shall be entitled to the legacy as well as to the amount of the debt.

Child primâ facie entitled to legacy as well as portion.

Illustration.

A, by articles entered into in contemplation of his marriage with B, covenanted that he would pay to each of the daughters of the intended marriage a portion of 20,000 rupees on her marriage. This covenant having been broken, A bequeaths 20,000 rupees to each of the married daughters of himself and B. The legatees are entitled to the benefit of this bequest in addition to their portions.

No ademption by subsequent provision for legatee.

166. No bequest shall be wholly or partially adeemed by a subsequent provision made by settlement or otherwise for the legatee.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths 20,000 rupees to his son B. He afterwards gives to B the sum of 20,000 rupees. The legacy is not thereby adeemed.

(b.) A bequeaths 40,000 rupees to B, his orphan-niece, whom he had brought up from her infancy. Afterwards on the occasion of B's marriage, A settles upon her the sum of 30,000 rupees. The legacy is not thereby diminished.

PART XXVII.

Of Election.

Circumstances in which election takes place.

167. Where a man, by his will, professes to dispose of something which he has no right to dispose of, the person to whom the thing belongs shall elect either to confirm such disposition or to dissent from it, and in the latter case he shall give up any benefits which may have been provided for him by the will.

Devolution of interest relinquished by owner.

168. The interest so relinquished shall devolve as if it had not been disposed of by the will in favour of the legatee, subject, nevertheless, to the charge of making good to the disappointed legatee the amount or value of the gift attempted to be given to him by the will.

Testator's belief as to his ownership immaterial.

169. This rule will apply whether the testator does or does not believe that which he professes to dispose of by his will to be his own.

Illustrations.

(a.) The farm of Sultánpur was the property of C. A bequeathed it to B, giving a legacy of 1,000 rupees to C. C has elected to retain his farm of Sultánpur, which is worth 800 rupees. C forfeits his legacy of 1,000 rupees, of which 800 rupees goes to B, and the remaining 200 rupees falls into the residuary bequest, or devolves according to the rules of intestate succession, as the case may be.

(b.) A bequeaths an estate to B in case B's elder brother (who is married and has children) shall leave no issue living at his death. A also bequeaths to C a jewel, which belongs to B. B must elect to give up the jewel, or to lose the estate.

(c.) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, and to C an estate which will, under a settlement, belong to B if his elder brother (who is married and has children) shall leave no issue living at his death. B must elect to give up the estate, or to lose the legacy.

(d.) A, a person of the age of 18 domiciled in British India, but owning real property in England, to which C is heir-at-law, bequeaths a legacy to C, and, subject thereto, devises and bequeaths to B "all his property, whatsoever and wheresoever," and dies under 21. The real property in England does not pass by the will. C may claim his legacy without giving up the real property in England.

Bequest for man's benefit how regarded for purpose of election.

170. A bequest for a man's benefit is, for the purpose of election, the same thing as a bequest made to himself.

Illustration.

The farm of Sultánpur Khurd being the property of B, A bequeathed it to C, and bequeathed another farm called Sultánpur Buzurg to his own executors, with a direction that it should be sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of B's debts. B must elect whether he will abide by the will, or keep his farm of Sultánpur Khurd in opposition to it.

Person deriving benefit indirectly not put to election.

171. A person taking no benefit directly under the will, but deriving a benefit under it indirectly, is not put to his election.

Illustration.

The lands of Sultánpur are settled upon C for life, and after his death upon D, his only child. A bequeaths the lands of Sultánpur to B, and 1,000 rupees to C. C dies intestate shortly after the testator, and without having made any election. D takes out administration to C, and as administrator elects on behalf of C's estate to take under the will. In that capacity he receives the legacy of 1,000 rupees, and accounts to B for the rents of the lands of Sultánpur which accrued after the death of the testator, and before the death of C. In his individual character he retains the lands of Sultánpur in opposition to the will.

Person taking in individual capacity under will may in other character elect to take in opposition.

172. A person who in his individual capacity takes a benefit under the will may in another character elect to take in opposition to the will.

Illustration.

The estate of Sultánpur is settled upon A for life, and after his death upon B. A leaves the estate of Sultánpur to D, and 2,000 rupees to B, and 1,000 rupees to C, who is B's only child. B dies intestate, shortly after the testator, without having made an election. C takes out administration to B, and as administrator elects to keep the estate of Sultánpur in opposition to the will, and to relinquish the legacy of 2,000 rupees. C may do this, and yet claim his legacy of 1,000 rupees under the will.

Exception to the six last Rules.—Where a particular gift is expressed in the will to be in lieu of something belonging to the legatee, which is also in terms disposed of by the will, if the legatee claims that thing, he must relinquish the particular gift, but he is not bound to relinquish any other benefit given to him by the will.

Illustration.

Under A's marriage-settlement his wife is entitled, if she survives him, to the enjoyment of the estate of Sultánpur during her life.

A by his will bequeaths to his wife an annuity of 200*l.* during her life, in lieu of her interest in the estate of Sultánpur, which estate he bequeaths to his son. He also gives his wife a legacy of 1,000*l.* The widow elects to take what she is entitled to under the settlement. She is bound to relinquish the annuity, but not the legacy of 1,000*l.*

When acceptance of benefit given by will constitutes election to take under will.

173. Acceptance of a benefit given by the will constitutes an election by the legatee to take under the will, if he has knowledge of his right to elect, and of those circumstances which would influence the judgment of a reasonable man in making an election, or if he waives inquiry into the circumstances.

Illustrations.

(a.) A is owner of an estate called Sultánpur Khurd, and has a life-interest in another estate called Sultánpur Buzurg, to which, upon his death, his son B will be absolutely entitled. The will of A gives the estate of Sultánpur Khurd to B, and the estate of Sultánpur Buzurg to C. B, in ignorance of his own right to the estate of Sultánpur Buzurg, allows C to take possession of it, and enters into possession of the estate of Sultánpur Khurd. B has not confirmed the bequest of Sultánpur Buzurg to C.

(b.) B, the eldest son of A, is the possessor of an estate called Sultánpur. A bequeaths Sultánpur to C, and to B the residue of A's property. B, having been informed by A's executors that the residue will amount to 5,000 rupees, allows C to take possession of Sultánpur. He afterwards discovers that the residue does not amount to more than 500 rupees. B has not confirmed the bequest of the estate of Sultánpur to C.

Presumption arising from enjoyment by legatee for two years.

174. Such knowledge or waiver of inquiry shall, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be presumed if the legatee has enjoyed for two years the benefits provided for him by the will without doing any act to express dissent.

Confirmation of bequest by act of legatee.

175. Such knowledge or waiver of inquiry may be inferred from any act of the legatee which renders it impossible to place the persons interested in the subject-matter of the bequest in the same condition as if such act had not been done.

Illustration.

A bequeaths to B an estate to which C is entitled and to C a coal-mine. C takes possession of the mine, and exhausts it. He has thereby confirmed the bequest of the estate to B.

When testator's representatives may call upon legatee to elect.

176. If the legatee shall not, within one year after the death of the testator, signify to the testator's representatives his intention to confirm or to dissent from the will, the representatives shall, upon the expiration of that period, require him to make his election;

Effect of non-compliance.

and if he does not comply with such requisition within a reasonable time after he has received it, he shall be deemed to have elected to confirm the will.

Postponement of election in case of disability.

177. In case of disability the election shall be postponed until the disability ceases, or until the election shall be made by some competent authority.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Khojás are members of a sect which was originally Hindu but was converted to Muhammadanism about 400 years ago. They still, however, as has been more than once held by the highest Court in the Bombay Presidency, retain their former law to such an extent in matters connected with property and succession that it is to be presumed to apply to them until the contrary is shown. This state of things has at times given rise to great difficulties in litigation between Khojás.

2. In the case of Hirbai v. Gorbai, 12 Bom. High Court Rep. 294, which appears to have occupied the Lower Court for twenty-four sitting days and the Appellate Court for four days, Sir Michael Westropp, C. J., after describing the state of the law, observed as follows :—

"It is, however, evident that the Khojás are not as firmly bound in matters of succession and inheritance by the Hindu law as Muhammadans proper are by the Muhammadan law and the Hindus by the Hindu law, and hence it is that it would not be reasonable to require such stringent proof of a custom of inheritance amongst them differing from ordinary Hindu law as from a Hindu.

"Now, it is manifest that such a state of the law must greatly encourage litigation, and we cannot help thinking that it would be most desirable that the Government should take steps, as was done in the case of the Pársís, to ascertain the views of the majority of the community on the subject of succession, and should then pass an enactment giving effect to those views. Unanimity, of course, could not be expected, but the rules which were found generally to prevail might be made law ; and though the religious differences existing among members of the Khojá caste might create some difficulty, it would not, we think, be insuperable."

3. The Government of Bombay, acting upon this suggestion, appointed about the end of the year 1878 a Commission consisting of four gentlemen taken from the Shia division of the Khojás, which acknowledged His Highness the late Aghá Khán as its spiritual superior, one taken from the Sunni division, and Mr. Spencer, Acting First Judge of the Court of Small Causes, with the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Melvill, of the Bombay High Court, as president.

The Commission took the greatest pains to inform themselves of the customs and views of both divisions of the Khojá sect in the Presidency of Bombay and elsewhere, and after much consideration and discussion agreed upon a draft Bill, subject to a dissent on a few specific points which was signed by His Highness Aghá Alí Sháh, son of His Highness the late Aghá Khán, and Mr. Dhurrumsey Poonjabhoy but not by Mr. Jairajbhoy Peerboy and Mr. Rahimtula Syance, the two other Shia members of the Commission. That draft, having been submitted to the Government of Bombay by the president on the 23rd of December, 1879, and approved of by that Government, was forwarded to the Government of India, and forms the basis of the present Bill.

4. It will be convenient to refer to the provisions of the present Bill as nearly as possible in their order, noticing in their proper place the few points in regard to which His Highness Aghá Alí Sháh and Mr. Dhurrumsey Poonjabhoy differed from the majority of the Commission, and the points of substantive importance in which the present Bill deviates from the draft framed by the Commission.

5. The first provision calling for notice is section 2, which defines the application of the Act—a matter which was not clearly provided for in the Bill prepared by the Commission. The main enactment of the section is that succession to the property, whether moveable or immoveable, in British India of a Khojá dying on or after the first day of January, 1885, shall be regulated by the rules contained in the Act wherever he may have had his domicile at the time of his death. So far as regards immoveable property, this provision coincides with section 5 of the Indian Succession Act, but, as regards moveable property, it involves an important deviation from that section, inasmuch as it applies the Act to all successions to such property though the deceased person may have been domiciled outside British India at the time of his death.

As the rule, which makes the law of the domicile of a deceased person regulate the succession to his moveable property, is not merely the rule of the Indian Succession Act but has obtained very general acceptance elsewhere, it seems desirable to state the reasons which have led the Government of India to think that it is not suitable to the Khojá community.

6. The choice as regards succession to moveable property appears to lie between the law of the domicile of the deceased and the law of the situs of the assets. The objections urged against the latter in Western countries are chiefly that a man's moveables are apt to be scattered over many jurisdictions each having a readily ascertainable law of its own, and that accordingly, if the law of the situs is made applicable to them, his estate will be broken up into many fragments, all governed by different laws; that a man's moveables may change their place; that the most important class of them, goods employed in commerce, are constantly changing their place; and that accordingly, if the law of the situs is applied, it will be impossible for him to foresee the particular law under which they will fall upon his death; and lastly, that the rule of the law of the situs does not clearly provide for that portion of the assets which consists of debts or other obligations existing in favour of the deceased. To avoid these difficulties it has been generally agreed to adopt the law of the domicile of the deceased for the whole of his moveable estate. Various attempts have been made to rest this rule on some á priori principle; but it would seem to have had its actual origin in mere considerations of convenience.

7. Looking to the arguments by which it is supported, and to the peculiar circumstances of the Khojá community, it is questionable, to say the least, whether such a rule would meet the requirements of their case. The places beyond the limits of British India, as, for example, Kutch, the Persian Gulf and Zanzibar, in which any considerable number of Khojás is to be found have no law such as can properly be called a territorial law of succession. The tribunals in such places, in so far as they make any rational attempt to apply a law at all, would apply the personal law of the parties, and that in the case of Khojás is ex hypothesi altogether unsettled and unascertainable. There is thus in the case of Khojás domiciled out of British India practically speaking no law of the situs of the foreign assets to conflict with the law which would apply to the British Indian assets, and no law of the domicile to which recourse could be had; and, therefore, to give the law of the domicile a preference over the Indian law would be simply to substitute a congeries of indefinite and half-established customs for a law, to the application of which there could be no reasonable objection.

It may be added that, in the absence of a law of the domicile, the case is very analogous to those cases in which it is impossible to fix the domicile of the deceased, and the solution which Lord Alvanley appears to have suggested in a case of this latter class was to fall back, as is proposed in this case, on the law of the situs of the property; in other words, to put moveables on the same footing as immoveables.

8. If this solution is adopted, and the Indian law is applied to all moveables left by a deceased Khojá in British India, without regard to his domicile, and if, moreover, the same rule is applied, as it naturally would be, in cases arising in Consular jurisdictions in the Persian Gulf, Zanzibar and elsewhere, this further advantage will probably in time be gained, that the law in British India will come to be adopted as a personal law applicable to Khojás in all foreign States in this part of the world.

9. The above remarks apply equally to intestate and to testamentary succession. A question might indeed be raised as to whether a testamentary disposition made beyond the limits of British India should as regards its form be made absolutely subject to British Indian law; but, seeing that the effect of taking any other course would certainly be to admit oral dispositions, it seems clear that the risk of failures of justice will be on the whole less by subjecting completely to our law all dispositions, wherever made, of moveable property in British India.

10. In connection with the definitions it is convenient to notice one of the few important questions on which any difference of opinion has arisen, namely, the question as to the status to be assigned to a woman who is not a Khojá but who is legally married to a Khojá according to the rules of the Muhammadan law, and to her children by him.

The Khojás of the Sunni Jamát, though apparently unwilling to go so far as to recognize any other than a Khojá widow as entitled to inherit from her husband, proposed that the sons of a Khojá by a wife who is not a Khojá should have some share in the inheritance. To this the Khojás of the Shia Jamát would not agree, and the Commission ultimately adopted as a compromise the plan of assigning to the offspring of the marriages in question a status nominally intermediate between those of legitimacy and illegitimacy and giving them in the definition-clauses the designation of "alien sons", but allowing them nothing more than illegitimate sons in the later sections of their Bill. It is stated that the Khojás as a rule are very exclusive and rarely take wives from outside their own community, and so long as this state of things continues the mode in which this point is dealt with is not of great practical moment; but there is an important principle involved, against which even the compromise adopted by the Commission appears to the Government of India to offend. The exclusion of the non-Khojá wife from inheritance and the degradation of her sons to a position altogether lower than that of the legitimate son involves a view as to restrictions on marriage which, even though it may have obtained acceptance with a majority of the Khojá sect, and though the Government has no desire to interfere with it, it is manifestly undesirable to have affirmed by the legislature. The present Bill will accordingly be found to contain no reference either in its definition-clauses or elsewhere to the so-called "alien son." It defines "son" to be a legitimate son and leaves "widow" undefined, and then proceeds to declare the rights of sons and widows, trusting to the Courts to decide, as they will on principles lying outside the law of succession, who are legally entitled to the status of sons and widows.

11. Chapter II of the Bill deals with "succession to the undivided property of a male Khojá dying intestate," and in the previous chapter "undivided property" has been defined as meaning "a share in property belonging to an undivided family." The Bill prepared by the Commission purported to define the phrase "undivided family," but the definition proposed has on inquiry been found to be unsafe. The undivided family among the Khojás appears to come into existence chiefly in connection with trade, and would seem to be an institution of a peculiar nature, somewhat resembling the undivided family among the Hindus; but, on the other hand, it is clear, from the rules laid down in certain sections of the Bill prepared by the Commission, and from the papers submitted with that Bill, that it differs in important respects from the Hindu undivided family. What exactly it is, and when property is to be regarded as its undivided property, it is difficult to ascertain from the papers before the Government of India; but, judging from the analogous case in Hindu law, it would seem that these are matters which it would be almost hopeless to attempt to define in an Act of the legislature; nor does it appear to be necessary to define them in a Succession Act. It may well be assumed that a fundamental distinction which goes to the root of the family constitution, and which is not confined in its operation to matters of succession, but applies also inter vivos, is established outside this Bill. For these reasons, it has been thought best to make no attempt to define "undivided family" or "undivided property" in the present Bill.

12. It will be observed, on comparing Chapters II and III, that the only peculiarity connected with the intestate succession to undivided property is (section 6) that, in default of legitimate lineal male descendants of the intestate within the fourth degree, the property is equally divided among all the male members of the undivided family living at his death.

13. Chapter III of the Bill treats of "succession to the separate property of a male Khojá dying intestate," and the order of succession marked out in sections 7 to 20 will be found to be based on that of the Hindu law.

The subjoined statement has been prepared by the Hon'ble Mr. Melvill, the President of the Commission, with a view to showing at a glance the extent to which the two differ—

Order of succession according to Hindu law.	Order of succession for Khojás proposed by the Bill.

2. Grandsons.	2. Grandsons.
3. Great-grandsons.	3. Great-grandsons.

5. Daughters.	5. Father.
6. Daughters' sons.	6. Mother.
7. Mother.	7. Widow.
8. Father.	8. Daughters.
9. Brothers.	9. Daughters' sons. }
10. Half-brothers.	10. Brothers. }
11. Brothers' sons.	11. Sons' daughters.
12. Half-brothers' sons.	12. Brothers' sons.
13. Great-grandmother.	13. Half-brothers.

15. Grandfather.	15. Grandfather.
16. More distant relatives.	16. Grandmother.
	17. Paternal uncle.
	18. Sister.
	19. More distant relatives.

"It will be seen," Mr. Melvill observes, "that the only very noticeable point of difference is that among the Khojás the father and mother are elevated to a rank in the order of succession superior to that of the widow. This precedence of the mother has been judicially settled in the case of Hirbai v. *Gorbai, already referred to; and although the Khojá members of the Commission were not unanimously in favour of the view taken in that case, they all agreed that, having once been judicially determined, the rule should not be disturbed."

* Reported 12 Bom. H. C. Rep., 294.

14. Section 20 of the present Bill differs in one important particular from the corresponding section (29) of the Bill prepared by the Commission.

The latter admitted to the succession only those of the "more distant relatives" of the intestate who were on the father's side, and confined it to such of them as are within the seventh degree of kindred. On failure of this limited class of distant kindred, section 42 gave the property "to the Jamát of that sect of the Khojás to which the intestate belonged at the time of his death, to be held and applied according to the customs of the said Jamát." Even this did not satisfy the two dissenting members of the Commission and some of the other adherents of His Highness the late Aghá Khán, who, as Imám, was the person chiefly interested in the succession of the Jamát. They contended that the Jamát should come in immediately after the nearer relations.

15. Apart from this fundamental objection in point of principle, there appear to be practical objections to the proposal as formulated by the Commission. The Jamát is said to be an assembly in council of all the adult male members of the Khojá community of the place, and it is not unlikely that doubts would arise, in connection with matters of religious belief, residence, attendance at the Jamát, and so forth, as to the particular Jamát (if any) to which the deceased person belonged. Similar doubts might also arise as to who were the other persons actually belonging to the Jamát to which the deceased belonged, so as to take the property. There might further be doubts as to how the property of a deceased intestate Khojá is to be held, and the objects to which it is to be applied. It is true that the section proposed by the Commission says that the property is to be held and applied "according to the customs of the said Jamát." But from a judgment of Sir J. Arnould in the case marginally noted, it would appear that there are no customs to look to. Though a Jamát collects large sums of money through its officers, it only does so on behalf of the Imám; the money collected is passed on to him; and if the Jamát wants any portion of it, even for the expenses of its Jamát-kháná (the council-hall or guildhall of the community), it can procure it only as a grant from the Imám. It appears to be absolutely in the discretion of the Imám to spend the money as he pleases, and as a matter of fact he spends a large portion of it, or at least is said by Sir J. Arnould to have done so at the time the judgment was delivered, on his own private purposes. Indeed, in a set of draft rules of succession for Shia Khojás submitted by His Highness Ágha Alí Sháh the succession of the Jamát is treated as the same thing with the succession of the Imám. The Jamát, therefore, does not seem to have any property or control over property, and it is not clear how there can be any custom governing the application of property by it. It has been argued that no such difficulties as those suggested ordinarily arise at present, but it would be clearly impossible to put the succession of the Jamát on a legislative basis without defining its conditions and incidents, and it would be equally impossible to place the property at the absolute disposal of any individual in whatever degree of veneration he might be held.

Dayá Muhammad and others versus H. H. Ágha Khán and others (page 323 of the Bombay High Court Reports, Vol. XII).

16. For these reasons section 20 of the present Bill extends the succession to relatives of the intestate both on the father's and on the mother's side without limit of degree, and it may be added that section 48 applies the ordinary rule, which makes the Crown the ultimate heir, in the rare case in which an owner of property may die intestate and leave no person entitled to succeed under the previous sections.

17. Section 21 is one of the leading sections of the Bill. It provides in effect that, when a female inherits under any of the foregoing sections, she shall, if certain near male relatives are living and are thus postponed to her, take the property only as "restricted owner"—a position to be presently explained at length. With this section should be read section 49, from which it will be seen that in other cases she takes the same interest in the property and has the same powers in respect of it as if she were a male.

18. Chapter IV treats of succession to the absolute property of a female Khojá dying intestate, that is to say, the succession to such of her property as belongs to her otherwise than as restricted owner. The provisions of this chapter call for no remark. Mr. Melvill states that they differ from the Hindu law but that they are approved by all classes of the Khojás, and are not, he thinks, open to any objection. The particulars in which they deviate from the Hindu law or the reasons for the deviations are not explained. They have been accepted by the Government of India as settled by the Commission, such details only being filled in after consultation with the local authorities as seemed necessary to give effect to what is understood to be the intention of those who framed them.

19. Chapter V, which treats of "property which a female takes as restricted owner and the further succession to the same," calls for more detailed notice.

It applies not only in the ordinary case of property taken by a female as restricted owner under Chapter III (supra, paragraph 17), but also in cases where she may take a similar interest in property under section 23 (2), section 24 (1), section 27 and section 39.

Its provisions are merely a development, with the requisite amplifications and with the addition of the necessary machinery, of the corresponding provisions of the Bill framed by the Commission. It has been settled in consultation with the local authorities and with a view to giving effect to what are understood to be the views of the Commission; but, having regard to the novelty and complication of the subject, it is not unlikely that when subjected to criticism it will be found susceptible of improvement in many particulars.

The limited estate taken by a Khojá female under this Bill resembles the estate taken by a Hindu widow, but there are many important differences between them. Mr. Melvill observes that the Khojá female estate is the more restricted of the two, but on this point he says the Khojás hold very strong views which he is of opinion must be respected.

20. In proceeding to notice the details of the chapter, the first point calling for attention is the phrase "restricted owner." It has been chosen merely on the ground that it is new and connotes nothing, and it is not unlikely that some more appropriate phrase may be suggested. The phrase "life-estate" and its correlative "reversion," used in the Bombay Bill, are not only open to the objection that ordinarily lies against all terms imported from another legal system, but further, as has been constantly observed of them in the case of the Hindu widow's estate, they suggest an altogether false analogy. The position, if it is necessary to illustrate it by reference to English law, is rather like that of a fee-simple estate subject to an executory devise.

21. As regards the attempt made in the Bill to define the estate, it will be observed that section 28 enacts that the female shall be absolutely entitled to the use of, and the income accruing from, the property during her life, and, except as otherwise provided by the Act, shall have all the other rights and powers of an absolute owner.

An objection has been taken to this on the ground that money saved by a widow from the income of the property should not belong to her absolutely but should go to her husband's heirs.

This contention is not based on any alleged actual practice, but is put forward merely as a "necessary consequence of the invariable custom" which limits the widow's interest in the corpus of her husband's property to the time during which she remains unmarried.

Now, not only is it not a necessary consequence of the custom in question, but it is, as admitted by the objectors themselves, in a certain sense illogical; for why should a person who has absolute power to dispose of the income as it comes in, in whatever way she pleases, be restricted from dealing with her savings from it?

Again, the only effect of adopting the proposed suggestion would, as the objectors themselves admit, generally be that the widow would squander the income as it came in; and, in the rare cases in which she allowed some of it to accumulate, the probability is that litigation would result from the difficulty of identifying the fund and separating it from the rest of her property. For these reasons the section has been allowed to stand.

22. Section 30 defines the obligations of the restricted owner as regards—

(a) the preservation of the substance of the property for those who are to come after her; and

(b) the protection of the title,

As regards "waste," it stands on a footing altogether peculiar in the case of the Hindu widow; and clause (a) of this section has been drawn with a view to placing it on a somewhat similar footing in the case of the restricted owner.

23. As regards the powers of alienation, in the limitations on which the restricted nature of the estate chiefly consists, the only powers of alienation for any time beyond the life of the restricted owner allowed to her by the Bill, besides a limited power of leasing conferred by section 29, are those specified in section 31, which runs as follows:—

"31. A female taking property as restricted owner shall have power to transfer the same, so that the transfer may have effect beyond her life, when, the income being insufficient, such transfer is necessary in order to raise money for any of the following purposes, namely:—

Restricted owner's power of transfer.

"(a) to discharge any of the obligations imposed by section 30;*

* Viz., obligations to preserve the substance of the property and protect the title.

"(b) to discharge the debts of the absolute owner from whom the property descended;

"(c) to provide for the maintenance of any persons entitled under this Act to have their maintenance provided for out of the property, for the payment of any marriage expenses or funeral expenses payable under this Act out of the property, and for the performance of any ordinary family ceremonies; and

"(d) to support herself where she has no other sufficient means of support."

24. It has been urged by the two dissenting members of the Commission and by some other adherents of His Highness the Imám that a mother taking a restricted estate should have larger powers of alienation and that she or a widow taking a like estate should be empowered to alienate for religious objects; that is, as explained in the set of draft rules submitted by His Highness Aghá Alí Sháh, to give the property to the Imám; but, upon considering the arguments adduced and consulting the local authorities, the Government of India have determined to uphold the decision of the majority of the Commission, which is against the concession of any such powers.

25. In order to avoid as far as possible the great difficulties which arise in the case of a Hindu widow exceeding her power of alienation, an alienation in excess of the power has (section 29 of the Bill) been made absolutely void for any period beyond the restricted owner's life, except where the purchaser takes for consideration and without notice of the ownership being restricted. This, no doubt, standing alone, would place too great difficulties in the way of alienation; but sufficient relief will probably be afforded by the power to apply to a Court for sanction, which is given by section 32. It may be objected that it is undesirable to force people to resort to a Court in such matters; but the case is one of a choice of evils, and it is probably better that they should resort to the Court in every case where there is any room for doubt than run the risk of being involved in troublesome and expensive litigation later on.

A Court dealing with an application under section 32 is empowered (section 33) to accord its sanction to the transfer subject to the condition that the money thereby raised shall be paid into Court or to trustees appointed by the Court, and to give such further directions as it may think fit with a view to ensuring that the money shall be applied to the purpose for which it is raised, or that any balance that is not so applied shall be secured for the benefit of those entitled after the restricted owner.

26. It will be observed that no provision is made in the draft for alienation with the consent of the so-called "reversioners." This matter is one which gives rise to great difficulties in the case of the Hindu widow, and it seems impossible, having regard to the system of succession established by the Bill, to provide for it in any satisfactory manner. If provision had only to be made to meet the case of "reversioners" who claim under section 37 (1) and section 38 (3) by descent from the last absolute owner, the matter would be much simpler than in the case of the Hindu widow, inasmuch as these "reversioners" would always be known living persons or persons who would claim through them; but there are, besides these, the "reversioners" mentioned in section 38 (1) and (2), and it is thus impossible to fix upon any person whose consent would be sufficient.

27. Further, even if we were, as has been suggested, to waive this objection, and accept the consent of a merely presumptive "reversioner," there is another difficulty, namely, that the presumptive "reversioner" might (see section 39 of the Bill) be another restricted owner, possibly an old woman on the verge of the grave, whose prospect of succeeding would be extremely small. There might be several such persons intervening between the restricted owner and the first person who would take as absolute owner. We could hardly rest satisfied with anything short of the consent of this last person and all the intervening ones, and thus we should be landed in a considerable complication, leading in many cases to no very satisfactory result, inasmuch as the interest of the first person who would take as absolute owner, and to whose consent we would chiefly look, would often be of a remotely contingent nature. It is, of course, on economical grounds desirable to provide a means of freeing the property from the limited ownership, but the advantage would be dearly purchased if the basis of the purchaser's title were to be complicated in this way.

28. As regards the sale of property in execution of a decree against a restricted owner, it will be seen that the effect of section 34 of the Bill is that a person lending money for any of the purposes mentioned in section 31 can sell in execution nothing more than the so-called "life-interest" of the restricted owner, unless his loan is secured by a mortgage. The position of the restricted owner as regards anything beyond her so-called life-interest is, in fact, in this particular, somewhat similar to that of an English executor with power to charge the real estate. If it were otherwise, there might arise, in cases of execution for unsecured debts, the same difficult questions which the preceding sections are intended to shut out in cases of voluntary alienation.

29. It will be observed that, by sections 37 (2) and 38 (4) of the Bill the Crown is postponed to the general heirs of the restricted owner. This appears to be right, though it is gathered from the case of The Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narrainapah (8 Moo. I. A. 529),—this precise point was not there decided,—that it is otherwise in the case of a Hindu woman's estate.

30. Sections 35 and 36 in effect provide that the restricted owner shall represent the property in judicial proceedings and compromises of disputes and for the purposes of laws of limitation and prescription, so as to bind those who take after her.

31. Sections 37 to 39, which regulate the devolution of property after the death of the restricted owner, have been drawn with a view to carry out what is understood to be the intentions of the Commission.

Their main provisions are that—

(b) when the restricted owner has been married, the property shall on her death go to certain of her descendants, and if there are no such descendants shall devolve as just stated.

32. From section 39 it will be seen, as already observed, that property may devolve upon two or more restricted owners in succession. This is to be regretted, but it seems to be an essential part of the scheme.

33. Section 40 regulates the legal relations arising where two or more widows of a deceased Khojá take his property together as restricted owners, and provides that there shall be a right of survivorship between them.

34. Section 41 provides that a widow marrying again after her husband's death shall not be entitled to take as restricted owner his property or any property of any of his lineal descendants which has descended to them from him, and that, if a widow taking any such property as restricted owner subsequently marries again, she shall be deemed for the purposes of certain sections of the chapter to have died. One effect of this latter provision is that the restricted ownership of the widow ceases on her re-marriage.

35. Coming now to Chapter VI, relating to the wills of Khojás, it will be observed that all matters connected with probate and letters of administration are in the case of Khojás, as in the ease of other persons not subject to the Indian Succession Act, left to be dealt with under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. The result of this is that the matters remaining to be provided for under this chapter are in the main the same as those which are provided for by the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, as amended by the Act just mentioned; and, as a matter of fact, the specification of the sections of the Indian Succession Act made applicable to the wills of Khojás by this chapter is based on the specification contained in the Hindu Wills Act as cut down by the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. There are, however, some important differences between the two which call for explanation here.

36. The most important of these differences is connected with the limitation on the powers of testamentary disposition. The specification of the sections of the Indian Succession Act applicable to Hindus, &c., contained in the Hindu Wills Act comprises several sections which either confer, or assume the existence of, a power of disposition in favour of unborn persons, but the Act contains a proviso to the effect that nothing therein contained shall authorize any Hindu, &c., to create in property any interest which he could not previously have created, and the Calcutta High Court have held in the recent case of Alangamonjori Dabee v. Sonamoni Dabee (I. L. R. 8 Cal. 637) that the effect of that proviso is to cut down the power of disposition, which the sections in question confer or assume to exist, to the limits imposed on a testator by the Hindu law, that is to say, as held in the well-known Tagore case, to a mere power of disposition in favour of persons who are either in fact or in contemplation of law in existence at the death of the testator.

37. It will be seen, on reference to the report of Alangamonjori Dabee's case, that, though there was no difference of opinion in the Appellate Court which finally heard it, much difficulty arose from the form in which the Hindu Wills Act had been drafted, and that the learned Judge in the Court below had been led by this to take the opposite view. This being so, it was obvious that the drafting of the Hindu Wills Act could not be followed in this particular. Moreover, it was seen that to adopt this form of drafting would in a considerable number of cases expose the testamentary dispositions of Khojás to be called in question for reasons drawn or supposed to be drawn from the extremely vague and unsettled customary law now prevailing among them, and thus the object of the present measure, which is intended to supply a definite body of law, would be to a great extent defeated. It was accordingly resolved to enact directly either that a Khojá's power of testamentary disposition should be co-extensive with that allowed by the Indian Succession Act, or should be limited somewhat in accordance with the ruling in the Tagore case.

38. It was clear that the question as to which of these courses should be adopted stood on grounds altogether independent of those on which the perpetuity question among Hindus had been discussed. The considerations with reference to which it should, in the opinion of the Government of India, be decided will be best seen from the remarks made on referring it to the local authorities for opinion. It was observed that the point was one in regard to which there was no recognized definite rule among the Khojás, and that if, having regard to the family system of that sect and its requirements in this particular, it was considered that it would be desirable to confer upon Khojás a power of disposition as large as that conferred by the Succession Act, the Governor General in Council would be prepared to confer that power; that the circumstance that, in the absence of any other rule, the Courts presume the Hindu law to be applicable to Khojás, and so might possibly, if the question then arose, hold a Khojá testator limited by the rule in the Tagore case, ought not, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, to be permitted to stand in the way of such legislation. "The Government of India," it was said, "has ever been reluctant to alter, by legislation, personal laws like those of the Hindus and Muhammadans, which are definitely ascertainable and are established on a religious or quasi-religious basis; but a rule of Hindu law, which is applied not as such, but merely by virtue of the presumption above referred to, in the absence of any other ascertainable rule, to persons who are by religion not Hindus but Mussulmans, stands in its application to such persons on a totally different footing; and, if it appears expedient to set it aside as regards them, there need be no hesitation about doing so. The rule of the Tagore case, assuming that it would at this moment be applied by the Courts to Khojás, is as applied to them no more sacred or immutable than any of the other rules of Hindu law which at this moment may be applicable to Khojás, but which will be modified by the Bill if it becomes law. No difficulty will, therefore, be raised here on this score."

If, on the other hand, it was observed, it should appear that the rule prohibiting dispositions in favour of unborn persons had, as a matter of fact, been recognised and observed among the Khojás, or if, there being no recognized rule or established practice either way, it should be considered that the powers of disposition allowed by the Succession Act were larger than were needed for the requirements of Khojás, it would probably be desirable to limit the power of disposition in some such way as it is limited by the Hindu law as interpreted in the Tagore case. The system of intestate succession established by the Bill was in certain respects a complicated one; and if to this were to be added a power of making complicated dispositions by will, it was to be feared that we should bring about, in regard to the property of this wealthy and important sect, a state of things which it was desirable if possible to avoid.

any attempt had hitherto been made among them to create by will an interest in favour of an unborn person; that there was thus a tabula rasa; and that it was quite open to the legislature to legislate on the subject as it thought best without any fear of violating an existing custom or of running counter to any prejudice or desire of the Khojá community.

This being so, the Government of India have come to the conclusion that it is undesirable to confer on Khojás any power of testamentary disposition in favour of persons not in existence at the time of the testator's death; and accordingly all portions of the Indian Succession Act which confer, or assume the existence of, such a power have, as far as practicable, been omitted, a proviso at the same time being inserted to the effect that a bequest by a Khojá in favour of any person who has not come into existence at the death of the testator shall be void.

40. The remaining differences between this Bill and the Hindu Wills Act as regards the provisions of the Indian Succession Act applied by them are of less importance.

It may, however, be stated that the following additional provisions of the Succession Act have been made applicable, namely:—

(a) section 47, giving a father power to appoint a guardian by will—a power the existence of which was assumed by the Commission;

(b) sections 52 and 53, relating to privileged wills;

(c) section 84, which provides that, when property is bequeathed to a person and words are added which describe a class of persons but do not denote them as direct objects of a distinct and independent gift, such person is entitled to the whole of the interest of the testator therein unless a contrary intention appears by the will;

(d) section 104, which limits directions for accumulation.

It should be added that section 187 of the Indian Succession Act, which provides that no right as executor or legatee can be established until a grant of probate or letters of administration is obtained, has been omitted for reasons similar to those which led to its being ultimately omitted from the Probate and Administration Act, 1881; and that sections 134 and 135, determining whether property bequeathed to two or more persons in succession should when its value is liable to decrease be retained in its original form, have been omitted, as it seems safer in this country to lay down no hard-and-fast rules on the subject.

41. The only other point calling for notice in connection with this chapter is that section 43, following the proviso to section 10 of the Transfer of Property Act, confers a power of bequeathing property to or for the benefit of a woman, so that she shall not have power to transfer or charge the same or her beneficial interest therein. The existence of such a power appears to have been assumed in the Bill prepared by the Commission.

43. Chapter VII, relating to maintenance and marriage and funeral expenses, calls for little notice. There was some obscurity about the corresponding provisions of the Bill prepared by the Commission, and this chapter has now been settled in accordance with what is understood from the local authorities to have been the original intention. It is believed that the only change of a substantive nature made here is in section 46, where provision has been made for the maintenance, &c., of a daughter while she remains unmarried. The chapter, however, will probably be found open to further amendment when it has been more fully considered.

43. Section 47, which provides for the recovery of sums due under this chapter, has been drawn with a view to precluding, as far as possible, the difficulties which have arisen under the Hindu law in regard to claims for maintenance, and in particular as to how far a person having a right to maintenance is entitled to follow the property of the deceased. As regards this last point, it has been thought best to place the claim for maintenance, &c., on the footing of a debt, postponing it, however, to debts proper. This will not absolutely remove all difficulty, but, by bringing the case within an existing class, it will avoid the creation of a new difficulty.

2. We have at the instance of the Government of Bombay made the Bill applicable by its own force to that Presidency, and repealed sections 4 and 5 of Act XV of 1880, the similar law at present in force there.

3. We have considered the objections taken by the British Indian Association to sections 5 and 6, but they appear to us to be based on a misapprehension as to the effect of those sections. The Association fear that a landlord's interest may be in some way affected by a sale for arrears of advances due by his tenant, but there is nothing in the Bill to warrant anything of the kind.

Section 6 relates merely to contribution between those taking the loan, and section 5, which provides for the recovery of arrears, does not enact that they shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of any particular land, but merely as if they were arrears of land-revenue due by the defaulter, and accordingly no charge is created over land even when the loan has been taken by its owner.

4. We have also considered the suggestion of the Government of the Panjáb that the lambardárs of a village should be empowered to engage for a loan on behalf of the whole proprietory body, but we do not think that it would be safe to confer any such power. As regards the inconvenience which it is suggested may arise "when it might be desirable to make a loan to a village-community as such" from requiring "the signature of each member of the community," we would observe that loans of the description contemplated by the Bill would, as a rule, be made not to village-communities as such but to individuals, and that when, with a view to having better security for the recovery of the money, it is proposed that a large number of persons should join and make themselves jointly and severally responsible for the aggregate of the loans to all, it would be comparatively immaterial whether a few more or a few less so joined.

We have, however, in order to facilitate the working of section 6, inserted words to make it clear that the signature required by that section may be affixed by an agent duly authorized.

2. We have at the instance of the Government of Bombay made the Bill applicable by its own force to that Presidency, and repealed sections 4 and 5 of Act XV of 1880, the similar law at present in force there.

3. We have considered the objections taken by the British Indian Association to sections 5 and 6, but they appear to us to be based on a misapprehension as to the effect of those sections. The Association fear that a landlord's interest may be in some way affected by a sale for arrears of advances due by his tenant, but there is nothing in the Bill to warrant anything of the kind.

Section 6 relates merely to contribution between those taking the loan, and section 5, which provides for the recovery of arrears, does not enact that they shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of any particular land, but merely as if they were arrears of land-revenue due by the defaulter, and accordingly no charge is created over land even when the loan has been taken by its owner.

4. We have also considered the suggestion of the Government of the Panjáb that the lambardárs of a village should be empowered to engage for a loan on behalf of the whole proprietory body, but we do not think that it would be safe to confer any such power,

As regards the inconvenience which it is suggested may arise "when it might be desirable to make a loan to a village-community as such" from requiring "the signature of each member of the community," we would observe that loans of the description contemplated by the Bill would, as a rule, be made not to village-communities as such but to individuals, and that when, with a view to having better security for the recovery of the money, it is proposed that a large number of persons should join and make themselves jointly and severally responsible for the aggregate of the loans to all, it would be comparatively immaterial whether a few more or a few less so joined.

We have, however, in order to facilitate the working of section 6, inserted words to make it clear that the signature required by that section may be affixed by an agent duly authorized.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 9 OF 1884.

A Bill to legalize the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of certain functions assigned to the Governor General in Council.

WHEREAS certain functions which are by enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces assigned to the Governor General in Council are in practice discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those Provinces, and it is expedient that these functions should continue to be so discharged, and that their discharge in the past should be legalized;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Transfer to Lieutenant-Governor of certain functions of Governor General in Council.

The sections of the enactments hereto scheduled which are specified in the third column of the schedule shall have effect, and, so far as may be necessary to validate anything heretofore done under them by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall be deemed to have had effect, as if the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces were therein referred to instead of the Governor General in Council.

THE SCHEDULE.

(a) Regulations of the Bengal Code.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
V of 1799	To limit the interference of the Zilá and City Courts of Díwání Adálat in the execution of wills and administration to the estates of persons dying intestate.	7
II of 1800	For laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty.	10 & 14
IX of 1833.	To modify certain portions of Regulation VII of 1882 and Regulation IV of 1828; to provide for the more speedy and satisfactory decision of judicial questions cognizable by officers of Revenue employed in making settlements under the above Regulations; for enforcing the production of the village accounts; for the more extensive employment of native agency in the Revenue Department; and to declare the intent of section 5, Regulation VII of 1822, touching claims to málikána.	16, 17 & 25

(b) Act of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
XII of 1856.	To amend the law respecting the employment of amíns of the Civil Courts in the Presidency of Fort William.	2

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER certain enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces certain functions are assigned to the Governor General in Council, which in practice are now discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces. Thus, by sections 10 and 14 of Bengal Regulation XXXIII of 1800 (for laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty), the Governor General in Council is empowered to sanction the allowances and establishment of the dároghas of the stone-quarries referred to, to fix the rate of duty payable in respect of stone excavated from those quarries, and to make further rules respecting the quarries. As these quarries have now become Provincial both financially and administratively, they have long been under the control of the Local Government, which has been in the habit of exercising the powers above noticed, though they are by law assigned to the Governor General in Council.

2. As the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of these and similar functions assigned by other enactments to the Governor General in Council, though in accordance with existing administrative arrangements, would seem to be of doubtful legality, the present Bill has been prepared with the object of empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to continue to discharge these functions in the future and legalizing their discharge by him in the past.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 10 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows :— IV of 1882.

1. For the fifth clause of section 1 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely :— Amendment of section 1 of Act IV of 1882.

"And any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

"(a) exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, any part of the territories administered by such Local Government from all or any of the following provisions, namely :—

"Sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one-hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three; or

"(b) direct, either retrospectively or prospectively, that section forty-one shall not apply throughout any part of those territories to any property in which a member of any race, sect, tribe or class specified in the notification is interested."

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely :— Addition to same section.

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely :— Addition to section 4 of same Act.

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

4. In section 69 of the said Act— Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette in this behalf."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE last clause of section 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, throughout the whole or any part of the territories administered by such Local Government, the members of any race, sect, tribe or class from all or any of the following provisions, namely, sections 41, 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3), 59, 69, 107 and 123.

54. * * Such transfer, in the case of tangible immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument.

In the case of tangible immoveable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property.

59. Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

107. A lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument.

All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement.

123. For the purpose of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

For the purpose of making a gift of moveable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery.

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered.

2. In a letter, dated the 6th September, 1882, the Chief Commissioner of Assam asked for an expression of opinion from the Government of India as to the effect which the exemption under that clause, of "any race, sect, tribe or class" from the provisions of section 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3) and sections 59, 107 and 123, which are set out on the margin, has upon transactions, one of the parties concerned in which is a member of such race, sect, tribe or class, while the other party does not belong to an exempted class.

3. To this reference the Government of India, on the 13th December, 1882, replied that the precise manner in which the exemption would operate under the circumstances described was a matter of some difficulty; and the only satisfactory means by which an intelligible operation might be given to section 1 of the Act seemed to be the amendment of that section so as to make the exemption from sections 54, 59, 107 and 123 local and not personal.

4. The Chief Commissioner, in a letter dated 12th January, 1883, suggested as an alternative, and in his opinion a preferable one, a power to exempt not persons or places but transactions in which one or both of the parties might be members of the race, sect, tribe or class for which the sections in question might be deemed unsuitable.

5. It was thought desirable to obtain the opinions of the other Local Governments on the two alternative proposals thus put forward, and accordingly, on the 7th May, 1883, a circular was issued for this purpose.

6. It will be observed that the question thus raised was confined to the power conferred by section 1 of the Act to exempt from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123; but, attention having been once drawn to the subject, it was natural that the effect of an exemption from the other two sections of the Act (41 and 69) mentioned in section 1 and set out in the margin should also be considered; and, on looking into the matter, it was found that, while an exemption under either of those sections would give rise to questions very similar to those raised by the Chief Commissioner of Assam in the case of the sections referred to by him, there was this further difficulty in regard to section 69 that the object of allowing any power to exempt from it was not apparent. The circular accordingly asked for the opinions of the Local Governments in regard to these sections also.

41. Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith.

69. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases (namely)—

(a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist;

(b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council;

(c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

(2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised; but any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorized to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate, when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

7. The replies of the Local Governments have now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the following are the conclusions to which they seem to point.

8. In the first place, as regards the power of exempting from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123, it seems to the Governor General in Council best to make it simply a power of exempting locally, that is to say, the exemption should be absolute and cover transactions relating to any immoveable property within the specified area, whether both or one or none of the parties may belong to those races or tribes for whose benefit the exemption is intended. To give a personal character to the exemption and restrict it, as some suggest, to transactions within the area, to which either both parties or one of the parties are of particular races, would give rise to uncertainty of title and other difficulties and doubts noticed by Sir C. Turner and others. With a local exemption clause of an absolute character an intending purchaser has to look to nothing but the situation of the property.

9. It is true that there may be advanced people living in exempted localities for whom the sections in question would provide a law more suitable than that which prevails where they do not apply, but it must be remembered that these people always could, and Europeans, it is believed, generally would, follow the practice of having formally executed and registered documents, and this would to a great extent give them the benefits aimed at by the Act; for it must be borne in mind that in the places in question titles would not usually be complicated, and in any case the sections of the Act referred to are not an essential part of the law, but merely an improvement of it, which is not in force as yet in great provinces like Bombay, the Panjáb and British Burma. Again, on the other hand, it is true that there may be members of wild tribes settled in some non-exempted localities, and that they may find it difficult to learn to act up to the law; but, as has been observed by some of the authorities consulted, wild people scattered in this way among a population the great mass of which is civilized soon get into the ways of the people among whom they live.

In either case the objection is one that must apply to most of our enacted laws, and indeed to a good deal of the customary law of the country. We cannot get a law that will suit everybody; we must be content with a reasonably close approximation.

10. The first section of the Bill accordingly amends section 1 of the Act so as to empower a Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt any part of the territories under its administration from the operation of any of these sections.

11. Next, as regards the powers to exclude the operation of section 41, the considerations to be borne in mind are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras in his opinion.

Sir C. Turner observes that the general rule that no one can confer a higher right in property than he himself possesses in some cases worked obvious hardship; and, as the science of jurisprudence advanced, it was limited by the exception declared in section 41, on the principle that, where one of two innocent persons must suffer from the fraud of a third party, the loss should fall on him who has created or could have prevented the opportunity for the fraud. To races which have not made a substantial progress in civilization, this rule appears to Sir Charles Turner to be unsuited for the following reasons, as stated in his own words:—

"Regarding the question in its sentimental aspect, it is certain that a member of a race unacquainted with the refinements of equity would fail to recognize the justice of a rule which caused him to be deprived of his property by what is ex hypothesi a fraud.

"I do not contend that legislation is to be governed by sentimental considerations, but I have heretofore asserted, and still hold, that legislation should only be so far in advance of the general understanding that its justice should be recognized by the more enlightened.

"There is, however, a substantial reason to be deduced from the rule itself, which shows its inapplicability to uncivilized races. The rule affords protection only to a purchaser for consideration who acts in good faith after reasonable inquiry.

"The imposition of these conditions on the purchaser suggests to persons, who have occasion to create an ostensible ownership of their property in others, the prudence of providing certain safeguards. If they are well advised, they are careful to secure evidence of the actual ownership, so that a purchaser, on making due inquiry, must either ascertain the true character of the transaction, or entertain such suspicion of its character that he can no longer assert that he acted in good faith.

"The transactions of uncivilized races in the matter of property are of the simplest character; they are unacquainted with the precautions which technical skill has devised to secure property.

"Again, as society progresses, men are habituated to exercise greater caution in their dealings with their fellows, and have larger opportunities for selecting agents who are reputed either to be worthy of confidence or to be in a position to answer for a breach of confidence. A prudent man selects for an office of trust a person of tried probity and some substance. The uncivilized races have less choice in the selection of agents and less opportunity for forming a judgment of the character and position of their agents."

area to any property in which a member of any particular race, sect, tribe or class is interested, and it is on these lines that sub-clause (b) of the new fifth clause which the Bill proposes to insert in the first section of the Act has been framed.

13. The discussion regarding section 69 has opened out questions extending beyond the particular difficulty first brought to notice, and it is fortunate that the Government have had in considering them the assistance of Sir C. Turner, who was a member of the Commission by which the Transfer of Property Bill was settled.

The circumstances under which the section was enacted will be found stated in the following extract from his Minute :

"In England, it is usual to confer on a mortgagee, in case of default, a power to sell the mortgaged property without the intervention of a Court of justice ; and, where the instrument of mortgage does not confer the power, but does not in express terms negative it, a mortgagee is empowered by statute to sell on the expiry of twelve months after the date of default and of six months from the date on which notice is given of his intention to exercise the power—23 & 24 Vic., c. 145. This statutory provision was, by Act XXVIII of 1866, extended to mortgages in this country to which the English law is applicable.

"On the other hand, the simple mortgage in India did not authorize a sale without the order of a Court, and by Regulation XVII of 1806 in the Bengal Presidency it had been enacted that a mortgage by conditional sale should not become foreclosed without the service of a notice through the District Court, and on the expiry of a year of grace. Inferring the policy of the legislature from this Regulation, the Sadr Díwání Adálat refused to give effect to an express power of sale—S. D. A., 1847-354. In the Bombay Presidency, Mr. Justice Melville expressed a doubt whether a private sale of property in the Mufassal, effected by a mortgagee under a power, would be valid—VIII Bombay H. C., A. C., 143.

"On the other hand, I entertained the opinion, and I believe acted on it before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, that, in the absence of a prohibition of law, the owner of property was competent to confer on a mortgagee what powers he himself possessed, and that, if a mortgagor having, as owner, authority to sell, created a power of sale in a mortgagee, and the mortgagee duly exercised the power, the Courts were bound to recognize the validity of the sale.

"In Bhanoomutty Chowdiam vs. Premchund Nesgee, XV B. L. R. 28, property in the Mufassal had been mortgaged by an instrument in the English form containing a power of sale, and subsequently mortgaged to a third party by a conditional sale. The first mortgagee then exercised his power of sale, and subsequently to the sale the second mortgagee took proceedings to foreclose. It was held that the purchaser under the power was entitled to notice of foreclosure, and impliedly that a sale under a power might be valid."

"In this state of the authorities," Sir Charles Turner continues, "it fell to the Law Commission to offer for the acceptance of the legislature a proposal to settle the law. It was felt that, in accordance with the principles of freedom of contract, an owner of property should be at liberty to confer on a mortgagee any of the powers which he could himself exercise, and that a borrower might more readily obtain accommodation, or obtain it on easier terms, if he could offer a security which would be speedily converted by the tender without the delay and the cost of an application to a Court of justice. On the other hand, it was recognized that in this country the large majority of mortgage-securities are created by persons who are poor and illiterate in favour of more sharpwitted creditors, and that, in an agricultural country, landed securities are subject to sudden and excessive variations in value, which are rarely foreseen by borrowers. The Commission came to the conclusion that, while more wealthy borrowers in the country and all borrowers in the presidency-towns might be left to deal with their property as they pleased, it was necessary in the present state of British India to create a legislative safeguard for the poorer classes in the country. They, therefore, proposed that the creation of a power of sale should be declared invalid except in mortgages where the principal money secured exceeded Rs. 500, or in mortgages to the Secretary of State or in mortgages of property in the presidency-towns. In Committee, the section was recast. Instead of declaring that a power of sale conferred by the instrument of mortgage is invalid except in the cases specified, the section, as it now stands, declares that in certain cases it is valid."

Sir Charles Turner adds—

"Unless it be held that the express declaration of the validity of such a power in certain cases is tantamount to a declaration of its invalidity in other cases, which I incline to doubt, the object sought by the Law Commission has not been attained, and the validity of the power in cases other than those specified is still left an open question.

"It may have been desirable that the protection the Law Commission intended to confer in the case of mortgages for small amounts should have been extended to mortgages for somewhat larger sums, but I think it is to be regretted that the amendment should have been effected in such terms as to leave the question doubtful whether any protection is given to mortgages of any class or amount, and I trust advantage may be taken of the opportunity to re-consider the provisions of the section. It will be seen that the section, as it now stands, affects only—

"(1) parties to an English mortgage, i.e., a mortgage in the English form, who are not Hindús, Muhammadans or Buddhists (an inexact enumeration of the creeds held by natives of India) ;

"(2) parties to a mortgage to the Secretary of State ;

"(3) parties to mortgages of property in the presidency-towns.

"As the section now stands, I do not see any reason for including it in the class of sections for which certain races may be exempted ; I apprehend it was included before it was recast."

14. Section 4 of the Bill accordingly amends section 69 of the Act so as to express clearly what was actually intended, and no power to exempt from the main provisions of the section has been retained ; but, as Mr Justice Muthuswami Aiyar has pointed out that there are other classes whom it is even more necessary to exclude from the operation of the exceptional provision in clause (a) than Hindús, Muhammadans and Buddhists, words have been added to that clause to provide a power of excluding them.

15. Section 2 of the Bill is intended merely to remove a formal defect in the Act which has been brought to notice in the course of the recent discussions. It was of course never intended that the provisions of the Act which assume the existence of a registration system should take effect in those tracts which are excluded from the operation of the Registration Act ; but the Act omitted to make any express provision to that effect, and that omission is now supplied.

16. The addition which it is proposed to make to section 4 of the Act by section 3 of the Bill has for its object merely to remove a difficulty which has been felt in some quarters as to the bearing which the provisions of the Act relating to registration and the Registration Act have on one another.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 11 OF 1884.

A Bill to facilitate the construction of Telegraphs, and to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

WHEREAS it is expedient to give power to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon immoveable property;

And whereas it is also expedient to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876; I of 1876.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preliminary.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Telegraph Act, 1884. Short title, local extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall come into force at once:

Provided that nothing in this Act shall affect any right acquired by the Government or a licensee under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, or any contract entered into before the passing of this Act. I of 1876.

2. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,— Definitions.

[cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 3.] I of 1876. (1) "Telegraph line" means a wire or wires used for the purpose of a telegraph as defined in the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, with any casing, coating, tube or pipe enclosing the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for that purpose.

[cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 3.] (2) "Post" means a post, pole, standard, stay, strut or other above-ground contrivance for carrying, suspending or supporting a telegraph line.

[cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 3.] (3) "Telegraph authority" means—

(a) the Director General of Telegraphs or any officer appointed by him in this behalf; and

(b) in respect of any particular matter, any person holding a license from the Governor General in Council under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and empowered, by such authority as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf, to discharge the functions of a telegraph authority in respect of that matter. I of 1876.

(4) "Local authority" means any municipal committee, local board, body of port commissioners or other body created for the public benefit and legally entitled to any immoveable property or the control thereof.

Power to place Telegraph Lines and Posts.

3. A telegraph authority may, from time to time, place and maintain a telegraph line under, over, along or across, and posts in or upon, any immoveable property, and repair, alter or remove the same: Power for telegraph authority to place and maintain, alter and remove a telegraph line and post.

Provided that—

(a) a telegraph authority shall not acquire any right other than that of user only in the property under, over, along, across, in or upon which it places any telegraph line or post; [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 6.]

(b) in the exercise of the powers conferred by this section, a telegraph authority shall do as little damage as possible; [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 7].

(c) a telegraph authority shall not exercise those powers in respect of any property vested in or under the control of any local authority except with the consent of the local authority;

(d) a telegraph authority shall not exercise those powers in respect of any other property unless it has paid or tendered full compensation to all persons interested for all damage which will be sustained by them by reason or in consequence of the exercise of those powers.

Provisions applicable to Property of Local Authorities.

4. Any consent given by a local authority under section 3 may be given subject to such reasonable conditions as to the payment of any expenses to which it is estimated the local authority will be put in consequence of the exercise of the powers, or as to the time or mode of execution of any work, or as to any other thing Power to local authority to consent under section 3 subject to condition. [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 5 (3).]

connected with or relative to any work, as the local authority giving consent thinks fit to prescribe.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property of local authority.

5. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in, or upon any property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and the local authority, having regard to circumstances which have arisen since the telegraph line or post was so placed, considers it expedient that it should be removed or altered, the local authority may call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter it, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the Local Government to order its removal or alteration.

(2) A Local Government receiving an application under this section may in its discretion reject the same, or make an order for the removal or alteration of the telegraph line or post, absolutely or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit; and the decision of the Local Government shall be final and conclusive.

Power to alter position of gas or water pipes.

6. A telegraph authority may, for the purpose of exercising the powers conferred upon it by this Act in respect of any property vested in or under the control of a local authority, alter the position thereunder of any pipe (not being a main) for the supply of gas or water:

Provided that—

(a) when a telegraph authority desires to alter the position of any such pipe, it shall give reasonable notice of its intention to do so, specifying the time at which it will begin to do so, to the local authority, and, when the pipe is not under the control of the local authority, to the person under whose control the pipe is;

(b) a local authority or person receiving notice under clause (a) may send a person to superintend the work, and the telegraph authority shall execute the work to the reasonable satisfaction of the person so sent.

Disputes between telegraph authorities and local authorities.

7. If any dispute arises between a telegraph authority and a local authority in consequence of the local authority refusing its consent under section 3 or prescribing any condition under section 4, or otherwise in respect of the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, it shall be determined by the Local Government, and the decision of the Local Government thereon shall be final and conclusive.

Telegraph line and posts placed before the passing of this Act.

8. A telegraph line or post placed by a telegraph authority before the passing of this Act under, over, along, across, in or upon any property vested in or under the control of a local authority shall be deemed to have been placed in exercise of the powers conferred by this Act.

Provisions applicable to other Property.

Disputes as to compensation under section 3.

9. If any dispute arises concerning the sufficiency of the amount of the compensation paid or tendered under section 3, clause (d), it shall, on application for that purpose by either of the disputing parties to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate, be determined by him, and his determination thereof shall be final and conclusive.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property not belonging to a local authority.

10. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in or upon any property, not being property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and any person entitled to do so desires to deal with that property in such a manner as to render it necessary or convenient that the telegraph line or post should be removed to another part thereof or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he may tender to the telegraph authority the amount requisite to defray the expense of the removal or alteration and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post accordingly, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate to order the removal or alteration.

(2) A District Judge receiving an application under this section may, in his discretion, reject the same or make an order absolutely or subject to conditions for the removal of the telegraph line or post to any other part of the property or to a higher or lower level or for the alteration of its form, and the order so made shall be final and conclusive.

Amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

Amendment of the definition of "telegraph" in Act I of 1876.

11. To the definition of "telegraph" in section 3 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, the following shall be added, namely:— I of 1876.

"and includes any apparatus for transmitting or making telegraphic, telephonic or other communications by means of electricity."

Amendment of section 8, clause (a), of same Act.

12. To clause (a) of section 8 of the same Act the following shall be added, namely:—

"or of any telegraph established by Government and leased to any person."

Addition to section 8 of same Act.

13. To the same section the following words shall be added, namely:—

"When prescribing rules under clause (a) of this section, the Governor General in Council may by the rules impose fines for any breach of the same:

"Provided that the fines so imposed shall not exceed the following limits, namely:—

"(1) when the licensee or lessee is punishable for the breach, one thousand rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach a further fine of two hundred rupees for every day after the first during the whole or any part of which the breach continues;

"(2) when a servant of the licensee or lessee or any other person is punishable for the breach, one-fourth of those amounts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to give power to the Government, and to any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially empowered in this behalf, to place telegraph lines under or over property belonging whether to private persons or to public bodies.

3. Section 3 empowers the Government or any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially authorized by a Government officer to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon the property of any "person", which term includes a body corporate. It is considered that licensees should have these powers, because the licenses granted always strictly limit the area of the operations of the licensees, and it would be somewhat anomalous for local bodies and private persons to have the power to neutralize the licenses granted by the Governor General in Council by objecting to the licensees' operations, or by hampering them by the exaction of fees for permission to work under their licenses. The powers thus given are, however, to be exercised so as to do as little damage as possible, and their exercise is moreover made subject to important restrictions and conditions.

4. When the property belongs to a municipal board or other local authority, the powers conferred by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and that consent may be given subject to conditions. Among other conditions which can be imposed is one requiring that any expenses to which the local authority may be put by the exercise of the power shall be made good; but it will be observed that no provision is made for the payment of compensation on any other account to a local authority whose property is made use of for this purpose, it being considered that, as the construction of telegraphs is a matter in which the public are interested, no charge should be made for accommodation of this sort when it can be granted without inconvenience to the public or expense to the local authority concerned.

5. It may sometimes happen that, though at the time when a telegraph authority desires to exercise its powers over some property of a local authority there may be no reasonable ground for objecting, and the local authority may thus find itself compelled to consent, a state of things may subsequently arise under which the continued exercise of the powers would be felt as a grave public inconvenience or a cause of serious loss. Land, e.g., which was waste at the time the telegraph line was constructed over it might afterwards be required for some important public object or might acquire great value for building purposes, and, as no compensation (except for actual expenses out of pocket) would have been paid to the local authority at the time the line was constructed, it is but just that provision should be made for the removal or alteration of the line in such an event. This accordingly is done by section 5 of the Bill, which empowers the local authority to call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter its telegraph or post, and, in the event of the telegraph authority refusing or neglecting to do so, gives an appeal to the Local Government.

6. In the event, which it is believed will be rare, of a local authority arbitrarily refusing its consent to the exercise by a telegraph authority of the powers conferred by the Bill or clogging its consent with unreasonable conditions, it will (section 7) be open to the telegraph authority to appeal to the Local Government, whose decision will be final.

7. Turning now to the case in which it may be desired to exercise the powers given by the Bill over the property of private persons, it will be seen that here provision is made for the payment of full compensation, the amount of which in the event of dispute will (section 9) be determined by the Civil Court, and that, in the event of a person upon whose property a telegraph line or post has been placed desiring subsequently to deal with the property in such a way as would make it necessary or convenient that the line or post should be removed to another part of it or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he can (section 10) tender the cost of the work and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post, and, if that authority refuses to do so, can appeal to the Civil Court.

8. It may be observed, however, that in practice in this country the power of taking telegraph lines through private property is not likely to be exercised either by the Government or by its licensees except on rare occasions, and then as a rule only to the extent of crossing with the wire, a post being scarcely ever erected on private land. Private property has hitherto been always avoided as much as possible, and it is likely to be still more carefully avoided in future if it is made clear, as it is proposed to do by this Bill, that full compensation will have to be paid for exercising the power over private and not for exercising it over public property.

9. The present opportunity has been taken to make three amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, which experience has shown to be desirable. The first has for its object the emendation of the definition of "telegraph" so as to bring it into more exact conformity with the construction put upon the definitions in the English Acts by a recent decision of the High Court of Justice in England.

10. The second is intended to provide for the regulation of telegraph lines constructed by the Government but leased to companies or individuals by whom they are worked. The position of such lines under the Act as it at present stands is far from clear, and the object of the amendment proposed in section 12 of the Bill is to put them on much the same footing as licensed lines.

11. The object of the third amendment, which is made by section 13 of the Bill, is to prescribe penalties for the breach of the rules made under section 8 of the Act for the conduct of telegraphs worked under license or lease. In such cases, as the Act now stands, the only remedy is to revoke the license or lease, but this course would in most cases cause such great public inconvenience that it is impracticable. The result is that at present there is virtually no penalty for the infringement of the rules made under section 8 of the Act. To remedy this state of things, the Bill adds a clause to that section empowering the Governor General in Council to prescribe by the rules moderate fines for the breach of them.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make better provision for the organization and administration of Municipalities in the Panjáb was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th August, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to make better provision for the organization and administration of Municipalities in the Panjáb was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 211, dated 10th April, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 1].
From E. vs. Cullin, Esq., dated 27th April, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 2].

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 74S., dated 16th May, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 4].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 79S., dated 21st May, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 5].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 88S., dated 27th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 6].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 94S., dated 29th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 121S., dated 9th June, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
Extract from the Tribune of 14th June, 1884 [Papers No. 9].

2. Instead of repealing the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, and bringing the new law into force at once, as was proposed in the Bill as introduced, we have thought it better (section 4 of the amended Bill) to require the Local Government to apply the new law to any place to which that Act had been extended, unless the Local Government comes to the conclusion, and declares by notification in the official Gazette, that the provisions of the Act are not suited to any such place. The Local Government is at the same time empowered to continue in office the members of the present committees as if they had been elected or appointed under the new law for any term not exceeding three years which it may fix. When the new law is thus made applicable to any place to which the Act of 1873 had been extended, that Act will cease to apply, and other consequences will follow, which are set forth in section 12. In the Supplemental chapter, the Local Government is further empowered to withdraw the area of any municipality from the operation either of Act IV of 1873 or of the new law, if the latter has been made applicable. The Local Government will thus be enabled to abolish any municipality constituted under Act IV of 1873, if it appears undesirable to continue municipal institutions in the area under its control.

3. The provisions as to the term of office of members, the removal of members and the filling up of casual vacancies in the committee have been assimilated, as nearly as possible, to the corresponding provisions in the District Boards Act.

4. On the recommendation of the Local Government, we have by section 14 empowered the Commissioner of a division to approve of the election of a president by a second class committee, and to appoint the president of a committee of this class where the committee is not empowered to elect, or fails or does not desire to exercise the power.

5. The provision in section 25 enabling the president or, in his absence, a vice-president to exercise the powers of the committee in cases of emergency has been limited to the power, at the cost of the municipality, to direct the execution of any work or the doing of any act which he considers necessary for the service or safety of the public; and, when he exercises this power, he is required to report his proceedings to the next following meeting of the committee. Where the case is sufficiently provided for by the rules of business under section 24, as to the exercise of the executive authority of the committee, the extraordinary powers given by section 25 of course will not arise, as there would not then be a case of emergency.

6. In section 27 we have provided that nothing done under the Act should be questioned on account of the existence of a vacancy in a committee or joint committee or of any merely formal defect.

7. We have not retained the provision of the Bill as introduced requiring the sanction of the Commissioner of the division to the removal of a paid secretary, and his sanction to the appointment is confined (section 28) to the appointment of a paid secretary and to the rate of pay to be allowed, and does not extend to approval of the person selected. The responsibility for appointing a proper person will thus rest exclusively with the committee. In cases, however, in which Government officers were employed in the service of a municipality before the passing of this Bill into law, section 12 provides for their remaining in the service of the new committee, and prohibits their dismissal unless under the sanction of the Local Government.

8. The employment of other officers and servants (when there is available budget provision) is made subject only (section 29) to what is necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the duties of the committee, and to any rules which the Local Government may make as to the employment of persons appointed to offices requiring professional skill; but power is given to the Commissioner of the division, subject to an appeal by the committee to the Local Government (section 30), to require the reduction of excessively large or expensive establishments or of unduly high rates of pay.

9. We have raised the limit of the power of first class committees (section 33) to delegate the authority to enter into contracts on their behalf to 500 rupees, and have required all contracts for larger amounts on behalf of any committee to be sanctioned at a meeting of the committee before they can be entered into. It has been suggested that separate provision is required for contracts which do not fix the quantity of work to be done, but only the rate to be paid per unit of work; but we are of opinion that these contracts can be brought within this section by fixing a maximum limit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, on the sum which may become payable under them.

10. In section 34 the limit of value above which contracts are required to be in writing has been increased from Rs. 20 to Rs. 100 in the case of first class committees, and Rs. 50 in the case of second class committees.

11. The prohibition in section 35 of members, officers or servants of the committee being interested in contracts with the committee, unless with the Commissioner's permission, has been assimilated to section 62 of the District Boards Act.

12. Section 36, which takes the place of section 99 of the Bill as introduced, has been modified so as to require notice to be given of all suits against committees, or against their officers for their official acts; the sub-sections as to limitation and as to tender of amends being omitted as unnecessary. The protection thus given corresponds with that given to Government and to public officers by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, except that the notice required is shorter.

13. In the Taxation chapter the taxes which committees are empowered to propose for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a higher rate of tax on buildings and lands being allowed in certain scheduled municipalities, all of which are hill-stations, than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere.

14. In the second sub-section of section 39 we have defined the expression "annual value" as meaning the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands might reasonably be expected to let, and we have omitted the first proviso, as, though it has been the practice in hill-stations to let houses furnished, the furniture supplied is ordinarily of small value; and as most of us are of opinion that the rent to be considered in estimating the annual value is the sum for which they would let if unfurnished, we have added words making this clear.

15. Special powers are also given to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payment for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit. No special power has been thought necessary to enable committees to charge fees for the use of schools or other public institutions maintained by them, as they may impose any conditions they may think proper upon persons who wish to avail themselves of the benefit of such institutions.

16. We have modified the procedure for imposing and assessing taxes (section 42) by providing that new taxes leviable by the year should not come into force except at the commencement of the year, and other new taxes until at least six months have elapsed from the date of the meeting at which, after the requisite sanction has been obtained, their imposition is directed.

17. We have enabled the Local Government (section 45), where any tax appears unfair in its incidence or injurious to the interests of the public, to require the committee to take the necessary measures to remove the objection and, if it fails to comply with the requisition, to suspend the levy of the tax.

18. We have (section 49) given an appeal against assessments, on account of octroi, as in the case of other taxes, and we have also enabled officers hearing appeals against assessments, if they entertain reasonable doubt on any question as to the liability to, or principle of, the assessment, to state a case for the decision of the Chief Court.

19. We have (section 52) saved taxes leviable under the Municipal Act now in force so far as they are consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, the new law.

20. We have in section 59 conferred upon the committee a power to remit a tax on buildings on certain equitable grounds.

21. We have made taxes on buildings and lands, other than the scavenging-tax and the water-tax, payable by the owner and also a charge upon the property, and have therefore found it unnecessary to make them recoverable from the occupier if not paid by the owner after notice.

22. We have added a section (62) giving power to inspect the contents of a conveyance or package to ascertain whether octroi is payable by having it brought before a Magistrate for the purpose, if the person bringing or receiving it within the municipality refuses to allow the necessary inspection, and have in other respects amended the provisions of the Bill as introduced on the subject of the recovery of octroi.

23. The provisions of the Bill on the subject of the municipal fund and of municipal property have been brought together in a new chapter (Chapter IV). In this chapter we have provided (section 68) for prior charges on the municipal fund for loans, establishment-charges and payments for maintenance of pauper-lunatics, audit of accounts, and services rendered to the committee by Provincial Departments of Government, and have empowered the Local Government to make rules with respect to the relative priority to be given to the other duties of the committee. We have also (section 71) declared certain descriptions of property held for municipal purposes to vest in the committee, and have (section 72) introduced a clause, based on a somewhat similar provision of the Bombay Municipal Act, providing that the administration of every public institution maintained out of municipal funds shall vest in the committee, but that the extent of the independent authority of the committee may be prescribed by the Local Government.

24. The sections relating to municipal police have also been collected in a separate chapter (Chapter V). We have added a section (78) defining the powers and duties of the police in respect of offences against the Act or rules made thereunder. By this section they are empowered to arrest persons committing such offences when necessary, and are required to give immediate information of the commission of such offences to the committee, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

25. Another new chapter (Chapter VI) sets forth the powers of the committee to do, or to require others to do, or to abstain from doing, particular acts. This and the following chapter, which deals with offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, take the place of the powers to make rules for the prevention of nuisances, and for entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, given by section 67 of the Bill as introduced, and of the powers to issue injunctions and make conditional orders as to nuisances given by sections 68 to 70, and this chapter also embodies the additional powers to make rules and other powers expressly given by the Bill as introduced.

26. In framing these sections, the existing bye-laws of the principal municipalities, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India, have been referred to, and we have endeavoured to give all the powers not elsewhere given in the Bill which it appears to be necessary or proper that Panjáb municipalities should possess. While there may be municipalities in which some of these powers are not required, these municipalities can be excepted by the Local Government under one of the provisions contained in the Supplemental chapter from the sections giving the powers which the circumstances of the municipality render unnecessary.

27. Instead of enabling committees to make rules regulating for sanitary reasons the crops which may be grown within municipal limits, we have, by section 116, empowered the Local Government to prohibit by notification the cultivation of any crop, the use of any manure or the irrigation of land in any manner, which is reported by the Sanitary Commissioner to be injurious to health, or to impose such conditions thereupon as may remove the risk of injury, and have provided for compensation where the practice prohibited was of long standing.

28. In section 117, which relates to the regulation of offensive or dangerous trades, and corresponds with section 74 of the Bill as introduced, we have omitted manufactories of gunpowder or fireworks, which can now be regulated by rules made by the Local Government under the Explosives Act, IV of 1884, and shops for smoking opium, as these must be licensed under the Opium Act, and the Local Government may, if it thinks proper, instruct Deputy Commissioners to consult municipalities before granting a license under that Act.

29. In section 119 we have extended the power given by the Bill as introduced to make rules for the inspection and proper regulation of lodging-houses to houses occupied by members of more than one family, and have stated in greater detail the subjects with which such rules may deal. This power, with that given in section 115, to prohibit the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used, will enable committees to exercise more effective control than hitherto over the arrangements for the accommodation of human beings where this appears necessary for the preservation of the public health, and will, it is believed, be of special importance, not only in hill-stations, but in places the population of which is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

30. Chapter VII provides for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety and convenience and of disobedience to orders given by the committee under the powers conferred by the preceding chapter.

31. In Chapter VIII, which deals with control, the changes made have been in the direction of assimilation with the provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act. We have also revised the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules.

32. In the Supplemental chapter (Chapter IX) we have added provisions that copies of rules should be kept by committees available for inspection and for sale to the public (section 160); that rules or bye-laws made under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, should, so far as consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, this Bill, continue in force until repealed by new rules, which the proper authority is required to make and take the necessary steps for bringing into force so soon as may be (section 161); and we have included provisions for altering the boundaries of municipalities or the class to which they belong (sections 165 to 169), for excepting them from the operation of such parts of the Bill as are not suited to their circumstances (section 170), and for withdrawing them from the operation of the law relating to municipalities (section 171).

33. A special section applicable only to Simla (section 177) has also been added to save the land-tax which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 9 OF 1884.

A Bill to legalize the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of certain functions assigned to the Governor General in Council.

WHEREAS certain functions which are by enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces assigned to the Governor General in Council are in practice discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those Provinces, and it is expedient that these functions should continue to be so discharged, and that their discharge in the past should be legalized;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Transfer to Lieutenant-Governor of certain functions of Governor General in Council.

The sections of the enactments hereto scheduled which are specified in the third column of the schedule shall have effect, and, so far as may be necessary to validate anything heretofore done under them by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall be deemed to have had effect, as if the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces were therein referred to instead of the Governor General in Council.

THE SCHEDULE.

(a) Regulations of the Bengal Code.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
V of 1799	To limit the interference of the Zilá and City Courts of Díwání Adálat in the execution of wills and administration to the estates of persons dying intestate.	7
II of 1800	For laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty.	10 & 14
IX of 1833.	To modify certain portions of Regulation VII of 1882 and Regulation IV of 1828; to provide for the more speedy and satisfactory decision of judicial questions cognizable by officers of Revenue employed in making settlements under the above Regulations; for enforcing the production of the village accounts; for the more extensive employment of native agency in the Revenue Department; and to declare the intent of section 5, Regulation VII of 1822, touching claims to málikána.	16, 17 & 25

(b) Act of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
XII of 1856.	To amend the law respecting the employment of amíns of the Civil Courts in the Presidency of Fort William.	2

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER certain enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces certain functions are assigned to the Governor General in Council, which in practice are now discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces. Thus, by sections 10 and 11 of Bengal Regulation XXXIII of 1800 (for laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty), the Governor General in Council is empowered to sanction the allowances and establishment of the dároghas of the stone-quarries referred to, to fix the rate of duty payable in respect of stone excavated from those quarries, and to make further rules respecting the quarries. As these quarries have now become Provincial both financially and administratively, they have long been under the control of the Local Government, which has been in the habit of exercising the powers above noticed, though they are by law assigned to the Governor General in Council.

2. As the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of these and similar functions assigned by other enactments to the Governor General in Council, though in accordance with existing administrative arrangements, would seem to be of doubtful legality, the present Bill has been prepared with the object of empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to continue to discharge these functions in the future and legalizing their discharge by him in the past.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 10 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows :— IV of 1882.

1. For the fifth clause of section 1 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely :— Amendment of section 1 of Act IV of 1882.

"And any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

"(a) exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, any part of the territories administered by such Local Government from all or any of the following provisions, namely :—

"Sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one-hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three; or

"(b) direct, either retrospectively or prospectively, that section forty-one shall not apply throughout any part of those territories to any property in which a member of any race, sect, tribe or class specified in the notification is interested."

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely :— Addition to same section.

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely :— Addition to section 4 of same Act.

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

4. In section 69 of the said Act— Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette in this behalf."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE last clause of section 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, throughout the whole or any part of the territories administered by such Local Government, the members of any race, sect, tribe or class from all or any of the following provisions, namely, sections 41, 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3), 59, 69, 107 and 123.

54. * * Such transfer, in the case of tangible immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument.

In the case of tangible immoveable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property.

59. Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

107. A lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument.

All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement.

123. For the purpose of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

For the purpose of making a gift of moveable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery.

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered.

2. In a letter, dated the 6th September, 1882, the Chief Commissioner of Assam asked for an expression of opinion from the Government of India as to the effect which the exemption under that clause, of "any race, sect, tribe or class" from the provisions of section 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3) and sections 59, 107 and 123, which are set out on the margin, has upon transactions, one of the parties concerned in which is a member of such race, sect, tribe or class, while the other party does not belong to an exempted class.

3. To this reference the Government of India, on the 13th December, 1882, replied that the precise manner in which the exemption would operate under the circumstances described was a matter of some difficulty; and the only satisfactory means by which an intelligible operation might be given to section 1 of the Act seemed to be the amendment of that section so as to make the exemption from sections 54, 59, 107 and 123 local and not personal.

4. The Chief Commissioner, in a letter dated 12th January, 1883, suggested as an alternative, and in his opinion a preferable one, a power to exempt not persons or places but transactions in which one or both of the parties might be members of the race, sect, tribe or class for which the sections in question might be deemed unsuitable.

5. It was thought desirable to obtain the opinions of the other Local Governments on the two alternative proposals thus put forward, and accordingly, on the 7th May, 1883, a circular was issued for this purpose.

6. It will be observed that the question thus raised was confined to the power conferred by section 1 of the Act to exempt from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123; but, attention having been once drawn to the subject, it was natural that the effect of an exemption from the other two sections of the Act (41 and 69) mentioned in section 1 and set out in the margin should also be considered; and, on looking into the matter, it was found that, while an exemption under either of those sections would give rise to questions very similar to those raised by the Chief Commissioner of Assam in the case of the sections referred to by him, there was this further difficulty in regard to section 69 that the object of allowing any power to exempt from it was not apparent. The circular accordingly asked for the opinions of the Local Governments in regard to these sections also.

41. Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith.

69. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases (namely)—

(a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist;

(b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council;

(c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

(2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised; but any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorized to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate, when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

7. The replies of the Local Governments have now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the following are the conclusions to which they seem to point.

8. In the first place, as regards the power of exempting from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123, it seems to the Governor General in Council best to make it simply a power of exempting locally, that is to say, the exemption should be absolute and cover transactions relating to any immoveable property within the specified area, whether both or one or none of the parties may belong to those races or tribes for whose benefit the exemption is intended. To give a personal character to the exemption and restrict it, as some suggest, to transactions within the area, to which either both parties or one of the parties are of particular races, would give rise to uncertainty of title and other difficulties and doubts noticed by Sir C. Turner and others. With a local exemption clause of an absolute character an intending purchaser has to look to nothing but the situation of the property.

9. It is true that there may be advanced people living in exempted localities for whom the sections in question would provide a law more suitable than that which prevails where they do not apply, but it must be remembered that these people always could, and Europeans, it is believed, generally would, follow the practice of having formally executed and registered documents, and this would to a great extent give them the benefits aimed at by the Act; for it must be borne in mind that in the places in question titles would not usually be complicated, and in any case the sections of the Act referred to are not an essential part of the law, but merely an improvement of it, which is not in force as yet in great provinces like Bombay, the Panjáb and British Burma. Again, on the other hand, it is true that there may be members of wild tribes settled in some non-exempted localities, and that they may find it difficult to learn to act up to the law; but, as has been observed by some of the authorities consulted, wild people scattered in this way among a population the great mass of which is civilized soon get into the ways of the people among whom they live.

In either case the objection is one that must apply to most of our enacted laws, and indeed to a good deal of the customary law of the country. We cannot get a law that will suit everybody; we must be content with a reasonably close approximation.

10. The first section of the Bill accordingly amends section 1 of the Act so as to empower a Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt any part of the territories under its administration from the operation of any of these sections.

11. Next, as regards the powers to exclude the operation of section 41, the considerations to be borne in mind are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras in his opinion.

Sir C. Turner observes that the general rule that no one can confer a higher right in property than he himself possesses in some cases worked obvious hardship; and, as the science of jurisprudence advanced, it was limited by the exception declared in section 41, on the principle that, where one of two innocent persons must suffer from the fraud of a third party, the loss should fall on him who has created or could have prevented the opportunity for the fraud. To races which have not made a substantial progress in civilization, this rule appears to Sir Charles Turner to be unsuited for the following reasons, as stated in his own words:—

"Regarding the question in its sentimental aspect, it is certain that a member of a race unacquainted with the refinements of equity would fail to recognize the justice of a rule which caused him to be deprived of his property by what is ex hypothesi a fraud.

"I do not contend that legislation is to be governed by sentimental considerations, but I have heretofore asserted, and still hold, that legislation should only be so far in advance of the general understanding that its justice should be recognized by the more enlightened.

"There is, however, a substantial reason to be deduced from the rule itself, which shows its inapplicability to uncivilized races. The rule affords protection only to a purchaser for consideration who acts in good faith after reasonable inquiry.

"The imposition of these conditions on the purchaser suggests to persons, who have occasion to create an ostensible ownership of their property in others, the prudence of providing certain safeguards. If they are well advised, they are careful to secure evidence of the actual ownership, so that a purchaser, on making due inquiry, must either ascertain the true character of the transaction, or entertain such suspicion of its character that he can no longer assert that he acted in good faith.

"The transactions of uncivilized races in the matter of property are of the simplest character; they are unacquainted with the precautions which technical skill has devised to secure property.

"Again, as society progresses, men are habituated to exercise greater caution in their dealings with their fellows, and have larger opportunities for selecting agents who are reputed either to be worthy of confidence or to be in a position to answer for a breach of confidence. A prudent man selects for an office of trust a person of tried probity and some substance. The uncivilized races have less choice in the selection of agents and less opportunity for forming a judgment of the character and position of their agents."

area to any property in which a member of any particular race, sect, tribe or class is interested, and it is on these lines that sub-clause (b) of the new fifth clause which the Bill proposes to insert in the first section of the Act has been framed.

13. The discussion regarding section 69 has opened out questions extending beyond the particular difficulty first brought to notice, and it is fortunate that the Government have had in considering them the assistance of Sir C. Turner, who was a member of the Commission by which the Transfer of Property Bill was settled.

The circumstances under which the section was enacted will be found stated in the following extract from his Minute:

"In England, it is usual to confer on a mortgagee, in case of default, a power to sell the mortgaged property without the intervention of a Court of justice; and, where the instrument of mortgage does not confer the power, but does not in express terms negative it, a mortgagee is empowered by statute to sell on the expiry of twelve months after the date of default and of six months from the date on which notice is given of his intention to exercise the power—23 & 24 Vic., c. 145. This statutory provision was, by Act XXVIII of 1866, extended to mortgages in this country to which the English law is applicable.

"On the other hand, the simple mortgage in India did not authorize a sale without the order of a Court, and by Regulation XVII of 1806 in the Bengal Presidency it had been enacted that a mortgage by conditional sale should not become foreclosed without the service of a notice through the District Court, and on the expiry of a year of grace. Inferring the policy of the legislature from this Regulation, the Sadr Díwání Adálat refused to give effect to an express power of sale—S. D. A., 1847-354. In the Bombay Presidency, Mr. Justice Melville expressed a doubt whether a private sale of property in the Mufassal, effected by a mortgagee under a power, would be valid—VIII Bombay H. C., A. C., 143.

"On the other hand, I entertained the opinion, and I believe acted on it before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, that, in the absence of a prohibition of law, the owner of property was competent to confer on a mortgagee what powers he himself possessed, and that, if a mortgagor having, as owner, authority to sell, created a power of sale in a mortgagee, and the mortgagee duly exercised the power, the Courts were bound to recognize the validity of the sale.

"In Bhanoomutty Chawdiam vs. Premchund Nesgee, XV B. L. R. 28, property in the Mufassal had been mortgaged by an instrument in the English form containing a power of sale, and subsequently mortgaged to a third party by a conditional sale. The first mortgagee then exercised his power of sale, and subsequently to the sale the second mortgagee took proceedings to foreclose. It was held that the purchaser under the power was entitled to notice of foreclosure, and impliedly that a sale under a power might be valid."

"In this state of the authorities," Sir Charles Turner continues, "it fell to the Law Commission to offer for the acceptance of the legislature a proposal to settle the law. It was felt that, in accordance with the principles of freedom of contract, an owner of property should be at liberty to confer on a mortgagee any of the powers which he could himself exercise, and that a borrower might more readily obtain accommodation, or obtain it on easier terms, if he could offer a security which would be speedily converted by the tender without the delay and the cost of an application to a Court of justice. On the other hand, it was recognized that in this country the large majority of mortgage-securities are created by persons who are poor and illiterate in favour of more sharpwitted creditors, and that, in an agricultural country, landed securities are subject to sudden and excessive variations in value, which are rarely foreseen by borrowers. The Commission came to the conclusion that, while more wealthy borrowers in the country and all borrowers in the presidency-towns might be left to deal with their property as they pleased, it was necessary in the present state of British India to create a legislative safeguard for the poorer classes in the country. They, therefore, proposed that the creation of a power of sale should be declared invalid except in mortgages where the principal money secured exceeded Rs. 500, or in mortgages to the Secretary of State or in mortgages of property in the presidency-towns. In Committee, the section was recast. Instead of declaring that a power of sale conferred by the instrument of mortgage is invalid except in the cases specified, the section, as it now stands, declares that in certain cases it is valid."

Sir Charles Turner adds—

"Unless it be held that the express declaration of the validity of such a power in certain cases is tantamount to a declaration of its invalidity in other cases, which I incline to doubt, the object sought by the Law Commission has not been attained, and the validity of the power in cases other than those specified is still left an open question.

"It may have been desirable that the protection the Law Commission intended to confer in the case of mortgages for small amounts should have been extended to mortgages for somewhat larger sums, but I think it is to be regretted that the amendment should have been effected in such terms as to leave the question doubtful whether any protection is given to mortgages of any class or amount, and I trust advantage may be taken of the opportunity to re-consider the provisions of the section. It will be seen that the section, as it now stands, affects only—

"(1) parties to an English mortgage, i.e., a mortgage in the English form, who are not Hindús, Muhammadans or Buddhists (an inexact enumeration of the creeds held by natives of India);

"(2) parties to a mortgage to the Secretary of State;

"(3) parties to mortgages of property in the presidency-towns.

"As the section now stands, I do not see any reason for including it in the class of sections for which certain races may be exempted; I apprehend it was included before it was recast."

14. Section 4 of the Bill accordingly amends section 69 of the Act so as to express clearly what was actually intended, and no power to exempt from the main provisions of the section has been retained; but, as Mr Justice Muthuswami Aiyar has pointed out that there are other classes whom it is even more necessary to exclude from the operation of the exceptional provision in clause (a) than Hindús, Muhammadans and Buddhists, words have been added to that clause to provide a power of excluding them.

15. Section 2 of the Bill is intended merely to remove a formal defect in the Act which has been brought to notice in the course of the recent discussions. It was of course never intended that the provisions of the Act which assume the existence of a registration system should take effect in those tracts which are excluded from the operation of the Registration Act; but the Act omitted to make any express provision to that effect, and that omission is now supplied.

16. The addition which it is proposed to make to section 4 of the Act by section 3 of the Bill has for its object merely to remove a difficulty which has been felt in some quarters as to the bearing which the provisions of the Act relating to registration and the Registration Act have on one another.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 11 OF 1884.

A Bill to facilitate the construction of Telegraphs, and to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

WHEREAS it is expedient to give power to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon immoveable property;

And whereas it is also expedient to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876; I of 1876.

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preliminary.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Telegraph Act, 1884. Short title, local extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall come into force at once :

Provided that nothing in this Act shall affect any right acquired by the Government or a licensee under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, or any contract entered into before the passing of this Act. I of 1876.

2. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,— Definitions.

[cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 3.] I of 1876. (1) "Telegraph line" means a wire or wires used for the purpose of a telegraph as defined in the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, with any casing, coating, tube or pipe enclosing the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for that purpose.

[cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 3.] (3) "Telegraph authority" means—

(a) the Director General of Telegraphs or any officer appointed by him in this behalf; and

(b) in respect of any particular matter, any person holding a license from the Governor General in Council under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and empowered, by such authority as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf, to discharge the functions of a telegraph authority in respect of that matter. I of 1876.

(4) "Local authority" means any municipal committee, local board, body of port commissioners or other body created for the public benefit and legally entitled to any immoveable property or the control thereof.

Power to place Telegraph Lines and Posts.

3. A telegraph authority may, from time to time, place and maintain a telegraph line under, over, along or across, and posts in or upon, any immoveable property, and repair, alter or remove the same : Power for telegraph authority to place and maintain, alter and remove a telegraph line and post.

Provided that—

(a) a telegraph authority shall not acquire any right other than that of user only in the property under, over, along, across, in or upon which it places any telegraph line or post; [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 6.]

(b) in the exercise of the powers conferred by this section, a telegraph authority shall do as little damage as possible; [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 7].

(c) a telegraph authority shall not exercise those powers in respect of any property vested in or under the control of any local authority except with the consent of the local authority;

(d) a telegraph authority shall not exercise those powers in respect of any other property unless it has paid or tendered full compensation to all persons interested for all damage which will be sustained by them by reason or in consequence of the exercise of those powers.

Provisions applicable to Property of Local Authorities.

4. Any consent given by a local authority under section 3 may be given subject to such reasonable conditions as to the payment of any expenses to which it is estimated the local authority will be put in consequence of the exercise of the powers, or as to the time or mode of execution of any work, or as to any other thing. Power to local authority to consent under section 3 subject to condition. [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 5 (3).]

connected with or relative to any work, as the local authority giving consent thinks fit to prescribe.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property of local authority.

5. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in, or upon any property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and the local authority, having regard to circumstances which have arisen since the telegraph line or post was so placed, considers it expedient that it should be removed or altered, the local authority may call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter it, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the Local Government to order its removal or alteration.

(2) A Local Government receiving an application under this section may in its discretion reject the same, or make an order for the removal or alteration of the telegraph line or post, absolutely or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit; and the decision of the Local Government shall be final and conclusive.

Power to alter position of gas or water pipes.

6. A telegraph authority may, for the purpose of exercising the powers conferred upon it by this Act in respect of any property vested in or under the control of a local authority, alter the position thereunder of any pipe (not being a main) for the supply of gas or water:

Provided that—

(a) when a telegraph authority desires to alter the position of any such pipe, it shall give reasonable notice of its intention to do so, specifying the time at which it will begin to do so, to the local authority, and, when the pipe is not under the control of the local authority, to the person under whose control the pipe is;

(b) a local authority or person receiving notice under clause (a) may send a person to superintend the work, and the telegraph authority shall execute the work to the reasonable satisfaction of the person so sent.

Disputes between telegraph authorities and local authorities.

7. If any dispute arises between a telegraph authority and a local authority in consequence of the local authority refusing its consent under section 3 or prescribing any condition under section 4, or otherwise in respect of the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, it shall be determined by the Local Government, and the decision of the Local Government thereon shall be final and conclusive.

Telegraph line and posts placed before the passing of this Act.

8. A telegraph line or post placed by a telegraph authority before the passing of this Act under, over, along, across, in or upon any property vested in or under the control of a local authority shall be deemed to have been placed in exercise of the powers conferred by this Act.

Provisions applicable to other Property.

Disputes as to compensation under section 3.

9. If any dispute arises concerning the sufficiency of the amount of the compensation paid or tendered under section 3, clause (d), it shall, on application for that purpose by either of the disputing parties to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate, be determined by him, and his determination thereof shall be final and conclusive.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property not belonging to a local authority.

10. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in or upon any property, not being property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and any person entitled to do so desires to deal with that property in such a manner as to render it necessary or convenient that the telegraph line or post should be removed to another part thereof or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he may tender to the telegraph authority the amount requisite to defray the expense of the removal or alteration and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post accordingly, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate to order the removal or alteration.

(2) A District Judge receiving an application under this section may, in his discretion, reject the same or make an order absolutely or subject to conditions for the removal of the telegraph line or post to any other part of the property or to a higher or lower level or for the alteration of its form, and the order so made shall be final and conclusive.

Amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

Amendment of the definition of "telegraph" in Act I of 1876.

11. To the definition of "telegraph" in section 3 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, the following shall be added, namely:— 1 of 1876.

"and includes any apparatus for transmitting or making telegraphic, telephonic or other communications by means of electricity."

Amendment of section 8, clause (a), of same Act.

12. To clause (a) of section 8 of the same Act the following shall be added, namely:—

"or of any telegraph established by Government and leased to any person."

Addition to section 8 of same Act.

13. To the same section the following words shall be added, namely:—

"When prescribing rules under clause (a) of this section, the Governor General in Council may by the rules impose fines for any breach of the same:

"Provided that the fines so imposed shall not exceed the following limits, namely:—

"(1) when the licensee or lessee is punishable for the breach, one thousand rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach a further fine of two hundred rupees for every day after the first during the whole or any part of which the breach continues;

"(2) when a servant of the licensee or lessee or any other person is punishable for the breach, one-fourth of those amounts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to give power to the Government, and to any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially empowered in this behalf, to place telegraph lines under or over property belonging whether to private persons or to public bodies.

3. Section 3 empowers the Government or any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially authorized by a Government officer to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon the property of any "person", which term includes a body corporate. It is considered that licensees should have these powers, because the licenses granted always strictly limit the area of the operations of the licensees, and it would be somewhat anomalous for local bodies and private persons to have the power to neutralize the licenses granted by the Governor General in Council by objecting to the licensees' operations, or by hampering them by the exaction of fees for permission to work under their licenses. The powers thus given are, however, to be exercised so as to do as little damage as possible, and their exercise is moreover made subject to important restrictions and conditions.

4. When the property belongs to a municipal board or other local authority, the powers conferred by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and that consent may be given subject to conditions. Among other conditions which can be imposed is one requiring that any expenses to which the local authority may be put by the exercise of the power shall be made good; but it will be observed that no provision is made for the payment of compensation on any other account to a local authority whose property is made use of for this purpose, it being considered that, as the construction of telegraphs is a matter in which the public are interested, no charge should be made for accommodation of this sort when it can be granted without inconvenience to the public or expense to the local authority concerned.

5. It may sometimes happen that, though at the time when a telegraph authority desires to exercise its powers over some property of a local authority there may be no reasonable ground for objecting, and the local authority may thus find itself compelled to consent, a state of things may subsequently arise under which the continued exercise of the powers would be felt as a grave public inconvenience or a cause of serious loss. Land, e.g., which was waste at the time the telegraph line was constructed over it might afterwards be required for some important public object or might acquire great value for building purposes, and, as no compensation (except for actual expenses out of pocket) would have been paid to the local authority at the time the line was constructed, it is but just that provision should be made for the removal or alteration of the line in such an event. This accordingly is done by section 5 of the Bill, which empowers the local authority to call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter its telegraph or post, and, in the event of the telegraph authority refusing or neglecting to do so, gives an appeal to the Local Government.

6. In the event, which it is believed will be rare, of a local authority arbitrarily refusing its consent to the exercise by a telegraph authority of the powers conferred by the Bill or clogging its consent with unreasonable conditions, it will (section 7) be open to the telegraph authority to appeal to the Local Government, whose decision will be final.

7. Turning now to the case in which it may be desired to exercise the powers given by the Bill over the property of private persons, it will be seen that here provision is made for the payment of full compensation, the amount of which in the event of dispute will (section 9) be determined by the Civil Court, and that, in the event of a person upon whose property a telegraph line or post has been placed desiring subsequently to deal with the property in such a way as would make it necessary or convenient that the line or post should be removed to another part of it or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he can (section 10) tender the cost of the work and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post, and, if that authority refuses to do so, can appeal to the Civil Court.

8. It may be observed, however, that in practice in this country the power of taking telegraph lines through private property is not likely to be exercised either by the Government or by its licensees except on rare occasions, and then as a rule only to the extent of crossing with the wire, a post being scarcely ever erected on private land. Private property has hitherto been always avoided as much as possible, and it is likely to be still more carefully avoided in future if it is made clear, as it is proposed to do by this Bill, that full compensation will have to be paid for exercising the power over private and not for exercising it over public property.

9. The present opportunity has been taken to make three amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, which experience has shown to be desirable. The first has for its object the emendation of the definition of "telegraph" so as to bring it into more exact conformity with the construction put upon the definitions in the English Acts by a recent decision of the High Court of Justice in England.

10. The second is intended to provide for the regulation of telegraph lines constructed by the Government but leased to companies or individuals by whom they are worked. The position of such lines under the Act as it at present stands is far from clear, and the object of the amendment proposed in section 12 of the Bill is to put them on much the same footing as licensed lines.

11. The object of the third amendment, which is made by section 13 of the Bill, is to prescribe penalties for the breach of the rules made under section 8 of the Act for the conduct of telegraphs worked under license or lease. In such cases, as the Act now stands, the only remedy is to revoke the license or lease, but this course would in most cases cause such great public inconvenience that it is impracticable. The result is that at present there is virtually no penalty for the infringement of the rules made under section 8 of the Act. To remedy this state of things, the Bill adds a clause to that section empowering the Governor General in Council to prescribe by the rules moderate fines for the breach of them.

Extract from the Tribune of 14th June, 1884 [Papers No. 9].

2. Instead of repealing the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, and bringing the new law into force at once, as was proposed in the Bill as introduced, we have thought it better (section 4 of the amended Bill) to require the Local Government to apply the new law to any place to which that Act had been extended, unless the Local Government comes to the conclusion, and declares by notification in the official Gazette, that the provisions of the Act are not suited to any such place. The Local Government is at the same time empowered to continue in office the members of the present committees as if they had been elected or appointed under the new law for any term not exceeding three years which it may fix. When the new law is thus made applicable to any place to which the Act of 1873 had been extended, that Act will cease to apply, and other consequences will follow, which are set forth in section 12. In the Supplemental chapter, the Local Government is further empowered to withdraw the area of any municipality from the operation either of Act IV of 1873 or of the new law, if the latter has been made applicable. The Local Government will thus be enabled to abolish any municipality constituted under Act IV of 1873, if it appears undesirable to continue municipal institutions in the area under its control.

3. The provisions as to the term of office of members, the removal of members and the filling up of casual vacancies in the committee have been assimilated, as nearly as possible, to the corresponding provisions in the District Boards Act.

4. On the recommendation of the Local Government, we have by section 14 empowered the Commissioner of a division to approve of the election of a president by a second class committee, and to appoint the president of a committee of this class where the committee is not empowered to elect, or fails or does not desire to exercise the power.

5. The provision in section 25 enabling the president or, in his absence, a vice-president to exercise the powers of the committee in cases of emergency has been limited to the power, at the cost of the municipality, to direct the execution of any work or the doing of any act which he considers necessary for the service or safety of the public; and, when he exercises this power, he is required to report his proceedings to the next following meeting of the committee. Where the case is sufficiently provided for by the rules of business under section 24, as to the exercise of the executive authority of the committee, the extraordinary powers given by section 25 of course will not arise, as there would not then be a case of emergency.

6. In section 27 we have provided that nothing done under the Act should be questioned on account of the existence of a vacancy in a committee or joint committee or of any merely formal defect.

7. We have not retained the provision of the Bill as introduced requiring the sanction of the Commissioner of the division to the removal of a paid secretary, and his sanction to the appointment is confined (section 28) to the appointment of a paid secretary and to the rate of pay to be allowed, and does not extend to approval of the person selected. The responsibility for appointing a proper person will thus rest exclusively with the committee. In cases, however, in which Government officers were employed in the service of a municipality before the passing of this Bill into law, section 12 provides for their remaining in the service of the new committee, and prohibits their dismissal unless under the sanction of the Local Government.

8. The employment of other officers and servants (when there is available budget provision) is made subject only (section 29) to what is necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the duties of the committee, and to any rules which the Local Government may make as to the employment of persons appointed to offices requiring professional skill; but power is given to the Commissioner of the division, subject to an appeal by the committee to the Local Government (section 30), to require the reduction of excessively large or expensive establishments or of unduly high rates of pay.

9. We have raised the limit of the power of first class committees (section 33) to delegate the authority to enter into contracts on their behalf to 500 rupees, and have required all contracts for larger amounts on behalf of any committee to be sanctioned at a meeting of the committee before they can be entered into. It has been suggested that separate provision is required for contracts which do not fix the quantity of work to be done, but only the rate to be paid per unit of work; but we are of opinion that these contracts can be brought within this section by fixing a maximum limit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, on the sum which may become payable under them.

10. In section 34 the limit of value above which contracts are required to be in writing has been increased from Rs. 20 to Rs. 100 in the case of first class committees, and Rs. 50 in the case of second class committees.

11. The prohibition in section 35 of members, officers or servants of the committee being interested in contracts with the committee, unless with the Commissioner's permission, has been assimilated to section 62 of the District Boards Act.

12. Section 36, which takes the place of section 99 of the Bill as introduced, has been modified so as to require notice to be given of all suits against committees, or against their officers for their official acts; the sub-sections as to limitation and as to tender of amends being omitted as unnecessary. The protection thus given corresponds with that given to Government and to public officers by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, except that the notice required is shorter.

13. In the Taxation chapter the taxes which committees are empowered to propose for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a higher rate of tax on buildings and lands being allowed in certain scheduled municipalities, all of which are hill-stations, than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere.

14. In the second sub-section of section 39 we have defined the expression "annual value" as meaning the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands might reasonably be expected to let, and we have omitted the first proviso, as, though it has been the practice in hill-stations to let houses furnished, the furniture supplied is ordinarily of small value; and as most of us are of opinion that the rent to be considered in estimating the annual value is the sum for which they would let if unfurnished, we have added words making this clear.

15. Special powers are also given to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payment for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit. No special power has been thought necessary to enable committees to charge fees for the use of schools or other public institutions maintained by them, as they may impose any conditions they may think proper upon persons who wish to avail themselves of the benefit of such institutions.

16. We have modified the procedure for imposing and assessing taxes (section 42) by providing that new taxes leviable by the year should not come into force except at the commencement of the year, and other new taxes until at least six months have elapsed from the date of the meeting at which, after the requisite sanction has been obtained, their imposition is directed.

17. We have enabled the Local Government (section 45), where any tax appears unfair in its incidence or injurious to the interests of the public, to require the committee to take the necessary measures to remove the objection and, if it fails to comply with the requisition, to suspend the levy of the tax.

18. We have (section 49) given an appeal against assessments, on account of octroi, as in the case of other taxes, and we have also enabled officers hearing appeals against assessments, if they entertain reasonable doubt on any question as to the liability to, or principle of, the assessment, to state a case for the decision of the Chief Court.

19. We have (section 52) saved taxes leviable under the Municipal Act now in force so far as they are consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, the new law.

20. We have in section 59 conferred upon the committee a power to remit a tax on buildings on certain equitable grounds.

21. We have made taxes on buildings and lands, other than the scavenging-tax and the water-tax, payable by the owner and also a charge upon the property, and have therefore found it unnecessary to make them recoverable from the occupier if not paid by the owner after notice.

22. We have added a section (62) giving power to inspect the contents of a conveyance or package to ascertain whether octroi is payable by having it brought before a Magistrate for the purpose, if the person bringing or receiving it within the municipality refuses to allow the necessary inspection, and have in other respects amended the provisions of the Bill as introduced on the subject of the recovery of octroi.

23. The provisions of the Bill on the subject of the municipal fund and of municipal property have been brought together in a new chapter (Chapter IV). In this chapter we have provided (section 68) for prior charges on the municipal fund for loans, establishment-charges and payments for maintenance of pauper-lunatics, audit of accounts, and services rendered to the committee by Provincial Departments of Government, and have empowered the Local Government to make rules with respect to the relative priority to be given to the other duties of the committee. We have also (section 71) declared certain descriptions of property held for municipal purposes to vest in the committee, and have (section 72) introduced a clause, based on a somewhat similar provision of the Bombay Municipal Act, providing that the administration of every public institution maintained out of municipal funds shall vest in the committee, but that the extent of the independent authority of the committee may be prescribed by the Local Government.

24. The sections relating to municipal police have also been collected in a separate chapter (Chapter V). We have added a section (78) defining the powers and duties of the police in respect of offences against the Act or rules made thereunder. By this section they are empowered to arrest persons committing such offences when necessary, and are required to give immediate information of the commission of such offences to the committee, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

25. Another new chapter (Chapter VI) sets forth the powers of the committee to do, or to require others to do, or to abstain from doing, particular acts. This and the following chapter, which deals with offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, take the place of the powers to make rules for the prevention of nuisances, and for entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, given by section 67 of the Bill as introduced, and of the powers to issue injunctions and make conditional orders as to nuisances given by sections 68 to 70, and this chapter also embodies the additional powers to make rules and other powers expressly given by the Bill as introduced.

26. In framing these sections, the existing bye-laws of the principal municipalities, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India, have been referred to, and we have endeavoured to give all the powers not elsewhere given in the Bill which it appears to be necessary or proper that Panjáb municipalities should possess. While there may be municipalities in which some of these powers are not required, these municipalities can be excepted by the Local Government under one of the provisions contained in the Supplemental chapter from the sections giving the powers which the circumstances of the municipality render unnecessary.

27. Instead of enabling committees to make rules regulating for sanitary reasons the crops which may be grown within municipal limits, we have, by section 116, empowered the Local Government to prohibit by notification the cultivation of any crop, the use of any manure or the irrigation of land in any manner, which is reported by the Sanitary Commissioner to be injurious to health, or to impose such conditions thereupon as may remove the risk of injury, and have provided for compensation where the practice prohibited was of long standing.

28. In section 117, which relates to the regulation of offensive or dangerous trades, and corresponds with section 74 of the Bill as introduced, we have omitted manufactories of gunpowder or fireworks, which can now be regulated by rules made by the Local Government under the Explosives Act, IV of 1884, and shops for smoking opium, as these must be licensed under the Opium Act, and the Local Government may, if it thinks proper, instruct Deputy Commissioners to consult municipalities before granting a license under that Act.

29. In section 119 we have extended the power given by the Bill as introduced to make rules for the inspection and proper regulation of lodging-houses to houses occupied by members of more than one family, and have stated in greater detail the subjects with which such rules may deal. This power, with that given in section 115, to prohibit the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used, will enable committees to exercise more effective control than hitherto over the arrangements for the accommodation of human beings where this appears necessary for the preservation of the public health, and will, it is believed, be of special importance, not only in hill-stations, but in places the population of which is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

30. Chapter VII provides for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety and convenience and of disobedience to orders given by the committee under the powers conferred by the preceding chapter.

31. In Chapter VIII, which deals with control, the changes made have been in the direction of assimilation with the provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act. We have also revised the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules.

32. In the Supplemental chapter (Chapter IX) we have added provisions that copies of rules should be kept by committees available for inspection and for sale to the public (section 160); that rules or bye-laws made under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, should, so far as consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, this Bill, continue in force until repealed by new rules, which the proper authority is required to make and take the necessary steps for bringing into force so soon as may be (section 161); and we have included provisions for altering the boundaries of municipalities or the class to which they belong (sections 165 to 169), for excepting them from the operation of such parts of the Bill as are not suited to their circumstances (section 170), and for withdrawing them from the operation of the law relating to municipalities (section 171).

33. A special section applicable only to Simla (section 177) has also been added to save the land-tax which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 12 OF 1884.

A Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Burma Gaming Act, 1884.

(2) It extends to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma; and

(3) It shall come into force at once.

Game of ti and like games to be deemed lotteries.

2. The game known as "ti," and every other game or pretended game of a like nature, shall be deemed a lottery within the meaning of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Application of Act III of 1867 to game of ti and like games.

3. (1) Taking part in the game of "ti," or in any other game or pretended game of a like nature, shall also be deemed gaming within the meaning of Act III of 1867.

(2) Every house, walled enclosure, room or other place, whether public or private, where any such game or pretended game is carried on, shall, for the purposes of that Act, be deemed a common gaming-house, and all expressions referring to the use of any such place as a common gaming-house shall include the use thereof for any such game or pretended game on a single occasion.

(3) All boxes, receptacles, lists, papers, tickets and forms used for the purpose of any such game or pretended game shall be deemed instruments of gaming within the meaning of the said Act.

Penalty on conducting game of ti and like games.

4. Whoever conducts or assists in conducting the game of "ti," or any other game or pretended game of a like nature, as manager, stakeholder or daing, or who is according to the rules of the game or pretended game entitled to receive the surplus proceeds, or any part of the surplus proceeds, of the stakes, after deducting the amount payable to the successful player or players, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may for a first offence extend to six months, and for a subsequent offence to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Power to extend local application of Act III of 1867 within British Burma.

5. (1) The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, by notification published in the official Gazette, extend to the whole or any part of the territories for the time being under his administration any such of the provisions of Act III of 1867 as do not for the time being extend thereto. [See Act III of 1867, ss. 1 and 2.]

(2) From the date of any such extension so much of any rule having the force of law in operation in the territories to which the extension is made as is inconsistent with or repugnant to any provision so extended shall cease to have effect in those territories.

Power to demand security.

6. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or, when he is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, a Magistrate of the first class receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction earns his livelihood, wholly or in part, by carrying on, or assisting in carrying on, the game of ti, or any other game or pretended game of a like nature, he may deal with such person as nearly as may be as if the information received about him were of the description mentioned in section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; and for the purposes of any proceeding under this section the fact that a person earns his livelihood as aforesaid may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise. [See C. C. P., s. 110.] X of 1882. [Act X of 1882, s. 117.]

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma.

3. The answers showed clearly that the Burmans as a body regarded the prevalence of gambling, especially as practised in the ti,* as a very great evil. Government officers were almost equally strong in their denunciations of these tis. With a few exceptions the opinions received were in favour of suppressing this and other forms of public gaming, and the Bill proposed for the Straits Settlements was accepted as a guide to the direction which legislation should take.

4. The history of the means which the Courts have hitherto used to check the opening of tis is briefly as follows. For some years after the passing of Act III of 1867 it was held that a ti was a form of gaming, and that the lists and papers used in the ti were instruments of gaming, within the meaning of that Act. This view was confirmed by the High Court of Calcutta in 1869. In 1876 Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Quinton, as Judges of the Special Court of British Burma, held that tis were lotteries, and that, since the enactment of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, lotteries were punishable under that section and not under Act III of 1867. It is not clear what effect the learned Judges of the Special Court gave to section 15 of Act XXVII of 1870, the Act by which section 294A of the Indian Penal Code was enacted. However, since the date of this judgment, the prosecution of the promoters of tis under Act III of 1867 may be said to have ceased; tis have been regarded as lotteries and the persons concerned in them have been prosecuted under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code; and until lately no doubt of the applicability of that section to this particular kind of gambling has arisen.

5. Two recent rulings of the Judicial Commissioner have presented a different view of the law. In the first of the cases in question the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate, under section 13 of Act III of 1867, as having been engaged in a ti in a zayat or public rest-house beside a public road. The Judicial Commissioner called for the proceedings, and, having come to the conclusion that a ti was not a game of chance and was mere betting or wagering, he referred the matter to the Special Court. The Officiating Recorder, Mr. Allen, dissented from the Judicial Commissioner's opinion, and held that the conviction was right. Under the constitution of the Special Court the opinion of the referring Judge prevails. The Judicial Commissioner accordingly issued a circular in which his own view of the law is enjoined on the Courts subordinate to him,—in other words, on all Courts outside the jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon,—and in which he lays down the doctrine that a ti is not a game nor a lottery, and that the papers used in collecting the money of the persons who take part in the ti are wrongly described as lottery-tickets. In the second of these cases the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate at Rangoon under section 294A of the Penal Code of keeping a lottery-office. On appeal to the Officiating Recorder, that officer referred the question of whether a ti is a lottery to the Special Court. The Judicial Commissioner held that it was not; the Officiating Recorder that it was. In this case also the opinion of the referring Judge prevailed. The Judicial Commissioner, however, has informed the Courts subordinate to him that his own view of the law is to be their guide. There are thus two contradictory judgments of the Special Court, and two diverse rules of law established for different parts of the province, each Judge holding to his own individual opinion.

6. The object of the present Bill is to obviate the effect of the judgments and circulars of the Judicial Commissioner above referred to, which bar all prosecutions for ti-gaming, and the effect of which has already been to give a fresh impetus to that kind of gambling.

It has not been thought expedient to copy the measure proposed by the Government of the Straits Settlements. The draft Ordinance is a very complicated piece of legislation, very stringent in its provisions, and very likely, unless worked under closer supervision than can be given to it in Burma, to become an engine of oppression. Moreover, it does not seem either necessary or desirable to endeavour to check gambling of every kind. A people like the Burmese must have amusement of some sort. It is quite possible to make gambling an expensive amusement, but to stop it altogether, if the people wish to indulge in it, is beyond the power of the law, and the attempt to do it would probably only result in systematic bribery and the corruption of the police. What appears to be chiefly needed is the repression of the professional ti-gambler, the man who makes his living by going about inducing people to game and as often as not swindling them out of their money. The urgent requisite is a law which will enable the authorities to deal with professional gamblers, and all who aid and abet them, with prompt severity, wherever they may be found. For other purposes the Act of 1867 appears to be sufficient, nor does the extension of all its provisions to the province generally appear even to be necessary.

* The nature of the game or lottery or series of bets called ti is as follows:—The banker, or professional gambler, who makes his living by the game, chooses one of 36 animals and deposits a piece of paper on which its name is written in a hollow bamboo or box. Then his emissaries go round asking people to name the animal so chosen and to back their guess by putting down their money. Any one who guesses rightly gets thirty times his stake; the others lose.

7. The present Bill has, therefore, been framed so as to deal particularly with ti-gaming, for which fresh legislation is urgently required.

Section 2 removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of section 294A of the Penal Code, by declaring the game of "ti" and other like games to be "lotteries" within the meaning of that section.

Section 3 similarly removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of Act III of 1867, by declaring that taking part in the game of "ti" and other like games shall be deemed to be "gaming" within the meaning of that Act. It also contains other provisions the chief effect of which will be to make it an offence to take part in such games in a private as well as in a public place.

The penalties imposed by section 4 on those who, as managers, daings, &c., conduct or assist in conducting such games have been advisedly made severe. Experience has shown that nothing but great severity of punishment will suffice to check this profitable form of gambling.

Section 6 of the Bill gives power to the Courts to demand security from persons who notoriously earn their living, or part of their living, by gaming of this description. The necessity for this provision arises to some extent from the fact that gambling of the kind which it is the object of the proposed enactment to suppress has been held to be an ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If this Bill becomes law, the powers in the hands of the authorities for the suppression of gambling will, it is believed, be sufficient and will at the same time be such as to secure, it may be confidently hoped, the desired results without risk of oppression.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 9 OF 1884.

A Bill to legalize the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of certain functions assigned to the Governor General in Council.

WHEREAS certain functions which are by enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces assigned to the Governor General in Council are in practice discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those Provinces, and it is expedient that these functions should continue to be so discharged, and that their discharge in the past should be legalized;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Transfer to Lieutenant-Governor of certain functions of Governor General in Council.

The sections of the enactments hereto scheduled which are specified in the third column of the schedule shall have effect, and, so far as may be necessary to validate anything heretofore done under them by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall be deemed to have had effect, as if the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces were therein referred to instead of the Governor General in Council.

THE SCHEDULE.

(a) Regulations of the Bengal Code.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
V of 1799	To limit the interference of the Zilá and City Courts of Díwání Adálat in the execution of wills and administration to the estates of persons dying intestate.	7
II of 1800	For laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty.	10 & 14
IX of 1833.	To modify certain portions of Regulation VII of 1882 and Regulation IV of 1828; to provide for the more speedy and satisfactory decision of judicial questions cognizable by officers of Revenue employed in making settlements under the above Regulations; for enforcing the production of the village accounts; for the more extensive employment of native agency in the Revenue Department; and to declare the intent of section 5, Regulation VII of 1822, touching claims to málikána.	16, 17 & 25

(b) Act of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
XII of 1856.	To amend the law respecting the employment of amíns of the Civil Courts in the Presidency of Fort William.	2

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER certain enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces certain functions are assigned to the Governor General in Council, which in practice are now discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces. Thus, by sections 10 and 14 of Bengal Regulation XXXIII of 1800 (for laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty), the Governor General in Council is empowered to sanction the allowances and establishment of the dáróghas of the stone-quarries referred to, to fix the rate of duty payable in respect of stone excavated from those quarries, and to make further rules respecting the quarries. As these quarries have now become Provincial both financially and administratively, they have long been under the control of the Local Government, which has been in the habit of exercising the powers above noticed, though they are by law assigned to the Governor General in Council.

2. As the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of these and similar functions assigned by other enactments to the Governor General in Council, though in accordance with existing administrative arrangements, would seem to be of doubtful legality, the present Bill has been prepared with the object of empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to continue to discharge these functions in the future and legalizing their discharge by him in the past.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 10 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows :— IV of 1882.

1. For the fifth clause of section 1 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely :— Amendment of section 1 of Act IV of 1882.

"And any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

"(a) exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, any part of the territories administered by such Local Government from all or any of the following provisions, namely :—

"Sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one-hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three; or

"(b) direct, either retrospectively or prospectively, that section forty-one shall not apply throughout any part of those territories to any property in which a member of any race, sect, tribe or class specified in the notification is interested."

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely :— Addition to same section.

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely :— Addition to section 4 of same Act.

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

4. In section 69 of the said Act— Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette in this behalf."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE last clause of section 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, throughout the whole or any part of the territories administered by such Local Government, the members of any race, sect, tribe or class from all or any of the following provisions, namely, sections 41, 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3), 59, 69, 107 and 123.

54. * * Such transfer, in the case of tangible immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument.

In the case of tangible immoveable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property.

59. Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachí and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

107. A lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument.

All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement.

123. For the purpose of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

For the purpose of making a gift of moveable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery.

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered.

2. In a letter, dated the 6th September, 1882, the Chief Commissioner of Assam asked for an expression of opinion from the Government of India as to the effect which the exemption under that clause, of "any race, sect, tribe or class" from the provisions of section 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3) and sections 59, 107 and 123, which are set out on the margin, has upon transactions, one of the parties concerned in which is a member of such race, sect, tribe or class, while the other party does not belong to an exempted class.

3. To this reference the Government of India, on the 13th December, 1882, replied that the precise manner in which the exemption would operate under the circumstances described was a matter of some difficulty; and the only satisfactory means by which an intelligible operation might be given to section 1 of the Act seemed to be the amendment of that section so as to make the exemption from sections 54, 59, 107 and 123 local and not personal.

4. The Chief Commissioner, in a letter dated 12th January, 1883, suggested as an alternative, and in his opinion a preferable one, a power to exempt not persons or places but transactions in which one or both of the parties might be members of the race, sect, tribe or class for which the sections in question might be deemed unsuitable.

5. It was thought desirable to obtain the opinions of the other Local Governments on the two alternative proposals thus put forward, and accordingly, on the 7th May, 1883, a circular was issued for this purpose.

6. It will be observed that the question thus raised was confined to the power conferred by section 1 of the Act to exempt from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123; but, attention having been once drawn to the subject, it was natural that the effect of an exemption from the other two sections of the Act (41 and 69) mentioned in section 1 and set out in the margin should also be considered; and, on looking into the matter, it was found that, while an exemption under either of those sections would give rise to questions very similar to those raised by the Chief Commissioner of Assam in the case of the sections referred to by him, there was this further difficulty in regard to section 69 that the object of allowing any power to exempt from it was not apparent. The circular accordingly asked for the opinions of the Local Governments in regard to these sections also.

41. Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith.

69. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases (namely)—

(a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist;

(b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council;

(c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

(2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised; but any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorized to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate, when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

7. The replies of the Local Governments have now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the following are the conclusions to which they seem to point.

8. In the first place, as regards the power of exempting from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123, it seems to the Governor General in Council best to make it simply a power of exempting locally, that is to say, the exemption should be absolute and cover transactions relating to any immoveable property within the specified area, whether both or one or none of the parties may belong to those races or tribes for whose benefit the exemption is intended. To give a personal character to the exemption and restrict it, as some suggest, to transactions within the area, to which either both parties or one of the parties are of particular races, would give rise to uncertainty of title and other difficulties and doubts noticed by Sir C. Turner and others. With a local exemption clause of an absolute character an intending purchaser has to look to nothing but the situation of the property.

9. It is true that there may be advanced people living in exempted localities for whom the sections in question would provide a law more suitable than that which prevails where they do not apply, but it must be remembered that these people always could, and Europeans, it is believed, generally would, follow the practice of having formally executed and registered documents, and this would to a great extent give them the benefits aimed at by the Act; for it must be borne in mind that in the places in question titles would not usually be complicated, and in any case the sections of the Act referred to are not an essential part of the law, but merely an improvement of it, which is not in force as yet in great provinces like Bombay, the Panjáb and British Burma. Again, on the other hand, it is true that there may be members of wild tribes settled in some non-exempted localities, and that they may find it difficult to learn to act up to the law; but, as has been observed by some of the authorities consulted, wild people scattered in this way among a population the great mass of which is civilized soon get into the ways of the people among whom they live.

In either case the objection is one that must apply to most of our enacted laws, and indeed to a good deal of the customary law of the country. We cannot get a law that will suit everybody; we must be content with a reasonably close approximation.

10. The first section of the Bill accordingly amends section 1 of the Act so as to empower a Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt any part of the territories under its administration from the operation of any of these sections.

11. Next, as regards the powers to exclude the operation of section 41, the considerations to be borne in mind are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras in his opinion.

Sir C. Turner observes that the general rule that no one can confer a higher right in property than he himself possesses in some cases worked obvious hardship; and, as the science of jurisprudence advanced, it was limited by the exception declared in section 41, on the principle that, where one of two innocent persons must suffer from the fraud of a third party, the loss should fall on him who has created or could have prevented the opportunity for the fraud. To races which have not made a substantial progress in civilization, this rule appears to Sir Charles Turner to be unsuited for the following reasons, as stated in his own words:—

"Regarding the question in its sentimental aspect, it is certain that a member of a race unacquainted with the refinements of equity would fail to recognize the justice of a rule which caused him to be deprived of his property by what is ex hypothesi a fraud.

"I do not contend that legislation is to be governed by sentimental considerations, but I have heretofore asserted, and still hold, that legislation should only be so far in advance of the general understanding that its justice should be recognized by the more enlightened.

"There is, however, a substantial reason to be deduced from the rule itself, which shows its inapplicability to uncivilized races. The rule affords protection only to a purchaser for consideration who acts in good faith after reasonable inquiry.

"The imposition of these conditions on the purchaser suggests to persons, who have occasion to create an ostensible ownership of their property in others, the prudence of providing certain safeguards. If they are well advised, they are careful to secure evidence of the actual ownership, so that a purchaser, on making due inquiry, must either ascertain the true character of the transaction, or entertain such suspicion of its character that he can no longer assert that he acted in good faith.

"The transactions of uncivilized races in the matter of property are of the simplest character; they are unacquainted with the precautions which technical skill has devised to secure property.

"Again, as society progresses, men are habituated to exercise greater caution in their dealings with their fellows, and have larger opportunities for selecting agents who are reputed either to be worthy of confidence or to be in a position to answer for a breach of confidence. A prudent man selects for an office of trust a person of tried probity and some substance. The uncivilized races have less choice in the selection of agents and less opportunity for forming a judgment of the character and position of their agents."

area to any property in which a member of any particular race, sect, tribe or class is interested, and it is on these lines that sub-clause (b) of the new fifth clause which the Bill proposes to insert in the first section of the Act has been framed.

13. The discussion regarding section 69 has opened out questions extending beyond the particular difficulty first brought to notice, and it is fortunate that the Government have had in considering them the assistance of Sir C. Turner, who was a member of the Commission by which the Transfer of Property Bill was settled.

The circumstances under which the section was enacted will be found stated in the following extract from his Minute :

"In England, it is usual to confer on a mortgagee, in case of default, a power to sell the mortgaged property without the intervention of a Court of justice ; and, where the instrument of mortgage does not confer the power, but does not in express terms negative it, a mortgagee is empowered by statute to sell on the expiry of twelve months after the date of default and of six months from the date on which notice is given of his intention to exercise the power—23 & 24 Vic., c. 145. This statutory provision was, by Act XXVIII of 1866, extended to mortgages in this country to which the English law is applicable.

"On the other hand, the simple mortgage in India did not authorize a sale without the order of a Court, and by Regulation XVII of 1806 in the Bengal Presidency it had been enacted that a mortgage by conditional sale should not become foreclosed without the service of a notice through the District Court, and on the expiry of a year of grace. Inferring the policy of the legislature from this Regulation, the Sadr Díwání Adálat refused to give effect to an express power of sale—S. D. A., 1847-554. In the Bombay Presidency, Mr. Justice Melville expressed a doubt whether a private sale of property in the Mufassal, effected by a mortgagee under a power, would be valid—VIII Bombay H. C., A.-C., 143.

"On the other hand, I entertained the opinion, and I believe acted on it before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, that, in the absence of a prohibition of law, the owner of property was competent to confer on a mortgagee what powers he himself possessed, and that, if a mortgagor having, as owner, authority to sell, created a power of sale in a mortgagee, and the mortgagee duly exercised the power, the Courts were bound to recognize the validity of the sale.

"In Bhanoomutty Chawdiam vs. Premchund Nesgee, XV B. L. R. 28, property in the Mufassal had been mortgaged by an instrument in the English form containing a power of sale, and subsequently mortgaged to a third party by a conditional sale. The first mortgagee then exercised his power of sale, and subsequently to the sale the second mortgagee took proceedings to foreclose. It was held that the purchaser under the power was entitled to notice of foreclosure, and impliedly that a sale under a power might be valid."

"In this state of the authorities," Sir Charles Turner continues, "it fell to the Law Commission to offer for the acceptance of the legislature a proposal to settle the law. It was felt that, in accordance with the principles of freedom of contract, an owner of property should be at liberty to confer on a mortgagee any of the powers which he could himself exercise, and that a borrower might more readily obtain accommodation, or obtain it on easier terms, if he could offer a security which would be speedily converted by the tender without the delay and the cost of an application to a Court of justice. On the other hand, it was recognized that in this country the large majority of mortgage-securities are created by persons who are poor and illiterate in favour of more sharpwitted creditors, and that, in an agricultural country, landed securities are subject to sudden and excessive variations in value, which are rarely foreseen by borrowers. The Commission came to the conclusion that, while more wealthy borrowers in the country and all borrowers in the presidency-towns might be left to deal with their property as they pleased, it was necessary in the present state of British India to create a legislative safeguard for the poorer classes in the country. They, therefore, proposed that the creation of a power of sale should be declared invalid except in mortgages where the principal money secured exceeded Rs. 500, or in mortgages to the Secretary of State or in mortgages of property in the presidency-towns. In Committee, the section was recast. Instead of declaring that a power of sale conferred by the instrument of mortgage is invalid except in the cases specified, the section, as it now stands, declares that in certain cases it is valid."

Sir Charles Turner adds—

"Unless it be held that the express declaration of the validity of such a power in certain cases is tantamount to a declaration of its invalidity in other cases, which I incline to doubt, the object sought by the Law Commission has not been attained, and the validity of the power in cases other than those specified is still left an open question.

"It may have been desirable that the protection the Law Commission intended to confer in the case of mortgages for small amounts should have been extended to mortgages for somewhat larger sums, but I think it is to be regretted that the amendment should have been effected in such terms as to leave the question doubtful whether any protection is given to mortgages of any class or amount, and I trust advantage may be taken of the opportunity to re-consider the provisions of the section. It will be seen that the section, as it now stands, affects only—

"(1) parties to an English mortgage, i.e., a mortgage in the English form, who are not Hindús, Muhammadans or Buddhists (an inexact enumeration of the creeds held by natives of India) ;

"(2) parties to a mortgage to the Secretary of State ;

"(3) parties to mortgages of property in the presidency-towns.

"As the section now stands, I do not see any reason for including it in the class of sections for which certain races may be exempted ; I apprehend it was included before it was recast."

14. Section 4 of the Bill accordingly amends section 69 of the Act so as to express clearly what was actually intended, and no power to exempt from the main provisions of the section has been retained; but, as Mr Justice Muthuswami Aiyar has pointed out that there are other classes whom it is even more necessary to exclude from the operation of the exceptional provision in clause (a) than Hindús, Muhammadans and Buddhists, words have been added to that clause to provide a power of excluding them.

15. Section 2 of the Bill is intended merely to remove a formal defect in the Act which has been brought to notice in the course of the recent discussions. It was of course never intended that the provisions of the Act which assume the existence of a registration system should take effect in those tracts which are excluded from the operation of the Registration Act ; but the Act omitted to make any express provision to that effect, and that omission is now supplied.

16. The addition which it is proposed to make to section 4 of the Act by section 3 of the Bill has for its object merely to remove a difficulty which has been felt in some quarters as to the bearing which the provisions of the Act relating to registration and the Registration Act have on one another.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 11 OF 1884.

A Bill to facilitate the construction of Telegraphs, and to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

WHEREAS it is expedient to give power to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon immoveable property;

And whereas it is also expedient to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preliminary.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Telegraph Act, 1884.

Short title, local extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall come into force at once :

Provided that nothing in this Act shall affect any right acquired by the Government or a licensee under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, or any contract entered into before the passing of this Act.

2. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

Definitions.

(1) "Telegraph line" means a wire or wires used for the purpose of a telegraph as defined in the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, with any casing, coating, tube or pipe enclosing the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for that purpose.

(2) "Post" means a post, pole, standard, stay, strut or other above-ground contrivance for carrying, suspending or supporting a telegraph line.

(3) "Telegraph authority" means—

(a) the Director General of Telegraphs or any officer appointed by him in this behalf; and

(b) in respect of any particular matter, any person holding a license from the Governor General in Council under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and empowered, by such authority as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf, to discharge the functions of a telegraph authority in respect of that matter. I of 1876.

(4) "Local authority" means any municipal committee, local board, body of port commissioners or other body created for the public benefit and legally entitled to any immoveable property or the control thereof.

Power to place Telegraph Lines and Posts.

3. A telegraph authority may, from time to time, place and maintain a telegraph line under, over, along or across, and posts in or upon, any immoveable property, and repair, alter or remove the same :

Power for telegraph authority to place and maintain, alter and remove a telegraph line and post.

Provided that—

(a) a telegraph authority shall not acquire any right other than that of user only in the property under, over, along, across, in or upon which it places any telegraph line or post; [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 6.]

(b) in the exercise of the powers conferred by this section, a telegraph authority shall do as little damage as possible; [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 7].

(c) a telegraph authority shall not exercise those powers in respect of any property vested in or under the control of any local authority except with the consent of the local authority;

(d) a telegraph authority shall not exercise those powers in respect of any other property unless it has paid or tendered full compensation to all persons interested for all damage which will be sustained by them by reason or in consequence of the exercise of those powers.

Provisions applicable to Property of Local Authorities.

4. Any consent given by a local authority under section 3 may be given subject to such reasonable conditions as to the payment of any expenses to which it is estimated the local authority will be put in consequence of the exercise of the powers, or as to the time or mode of execution of any work, or as to any other thing [cf. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 112, s. 5 (3).]

Power to local authority to consent under section 3 subject to condition.

connected with or relative to any work, as the local authority giving consent thinks fit to prescribe.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property of local authority.

5. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in, or upon any property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and the local authority, having regard to circumstances which have arisen since the telegraph line or post was so placed, considers it expedient that it should be removed or altered, the local authority may call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter it, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the Local Government to order its removal or alteration.

(2) A Local Government receiving an application under this section may in its discretion reject the same, or make an order for the removal or alteration of the telegraph line or post, absolutely or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit; and the decision of the Local Government shall be final and conclusive.

Power to alter position of gas or water pipes.

6. A telegraph authority may, for the purpose of exercising the powers conferred upon it by this Act in respect of any property vested in or under the control of a local authority, alter the position thereunder of any pipe (not being a main) for the supply of gas or water:

Provided that—

(a) when a telegraph authority desires to alter the position of any such pipe, it shall give reasonable notice of its intention to do so, specifying the time at which it will begin to do so, to the local authority, and, when the pipe is not under the control of the local authority, to the person under whose control the pipe is;

(b) a local authority or person receiving notice under clause (a) may send a person to superintend the work, and the telegraph authority shall execute the work to the reasonable satisfaction of the person so sent.

Disputes between telegraph authorities and local authorities.

7. If any dispute arises between a telegraph authority and a local authority in consequence of the local authority refusing its consent under section 3 or prescribing any condition under section 4, or otherwise in respect of the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, it shall be determined by the Local Government, and the decision of the Local Government thereon shall be final and conclusive.

Telegraph line and posts placed before the passing of this Act.

8. A telegraph line or post placed by a telegraph authority before the passing of this Act under, over, along, across, in or upon any property vested in or under the control of a local authority shall be deemed to have been placed in exercise of the powers conferred by this Act.

Provisions applicable to other Property.

Disputes as to compensation under section 3.

9. If any dispute arises concerning the sufficiency of the amount of the compensation paid or tendered under section 3, clause (d), it shall, on application for that purpose by either of the disputing parties to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate, be determined by him, and his determination thereof shall be final and conclusive.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property not belonging to a local authority.

10. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in or upon any property, not being property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and any person entitled to do so desires to deal with that property in such a manner as to render it necessary or convenient that the telegraph line or post should be removed to another part thereof or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he may tender to the telegraph authority the amount requisite to defray the expense of the removal or alteration and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post accordingly, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate to order the removal or alteration.

(2) A District Judge receiving an application under this section may, in his discretion, reject the same or make an order absolutely or subject to conditions for the removal of the telegraph line or post to any other part of the property or to a higher or lower level or for the alteration of its form, and the order so made shall be final and conclusive.

Amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

Amendment of the definition of "telegraph" in Act I of 1876.

11. To the definition of "telegraph" in section 3 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, the following shall be added, namely:— I of 1876.

"and includes any apparatus for transmitting or making telegraphic, telephonic or other communications by means of electricity."

Amendment of section 8, clause (a), of same Act.

12. To clause (a) of section 8 of the same Act the following shall be added, namely:—

"or of any telegraph established by Government and leased to any person."

Addition to section 8 of same Act.

13. To the same section the following words shall be added, namely:—

"When prescribing rules under clause (a) of this section, the Governor General in Council may by the rules impose fines for any breach of the same:

"Provided that the fines so imposed shall not exceed the following limits, namely:—

"(1) when the licensee or lessee is punishable for the breach, one thousand rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach a further fine of two hundred rupees for every day after the first during the whole or any part of which the breach continues;

"(2) when a servant of the licensee or lessee or any other person is punishable for the breach, one-fourth of those amounts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to give power to the Government, and to any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially empowered in this behalf, to place telegraph lines under or over property belonging whether to private persons or to public bodies.

3. Section 3 empowers the Government or any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially authorized by a Government officer to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon the property of any "person", which term includes a body corporate. It is considered that licensees should have these powers, because the licenses granted always strictly limit the area of the operations of the licensees, and it would be somewhat anomalous for local bodies and private persons to have the power to neutralize the licenses granted by the Governor General in Council by objecting to the licensees' operations, or by hampering them by the exaction of fees for permission to work under their licenses. The powers thus given are, however, to be exercised so as to do as little damage as possible, and their exercise is moreover made subject to important restrictions and conditions.

4. When the property belongs to a municipal board or other local authority, the powers conferred by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and that consent may be given subject to conditions. Among other conditions which can be imposed is one requiring that any expenses to which the local authority may be put by the exercise of the power shall be made good; but it will be observed that no provision is made for the payment of compensation on any other account to a local authority whose property is made use of for this purpose, it being considered that, as the construction of telegraphs is a matter in which the public are interested, no charge should be made for accommodation of this sort when it can be granted without inconvenience to the public or expense to the local authority concerned.

5. It may sometimes happen that, though at the time when a telegraph authority desires to exercise its powers over some property of a local authority there may be no reasonable ground for objecting, and the local authority may thus find itself compelled to consent, a state of things may subsequently arise under which the continued exercise of the powers would be felt as a grave public inconvenience or a cause of serious loss. Land, e.g., which was waste at the time the telegraph line was constructed over it might afterwards be required for some important public object or might acquire great value for building purposes, and, as no compensation (except for actual expenses out of pocket) would have been paid to the local authority at the time the line was constructed, it is but just that provision should be made for the removal or alteration of the line in such an event. This accordingly is done by section 5 of the Bill, which empowers the local authority to call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter its telegraph or post, and, in the event of the telegraph authority refusing or neglecting to do so, gives an appeal to the Local Government.

6. In the event, which it is believed will be rare, of a local authority arbitrarily refusing its consent to the exercise by a telegraph authority of the powers conferred by the Bill or clogging its consent with unreasonable conditions, it will (section 7) be open to the telegraph authority to appeal to the Local Government, whose decision will be final.

7. Turning now to the case in which it may be desired to exercise the powers given by the Bill over the property of private persons, it will be seen that here provision is made for the payment of full compensation, the amount of which in the event of dispute will (section 9) be determined by the Civil Court, and that, in the event of a person upon whose property a telegraph line or post has been placed desiring subsequently to deal with the property in such a way as would make it necessary or convenient that the line or post should be removed to another part of it or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he can (section 10) tender the cost of the work and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post, and, if that authority refuses to do so, can appeal to the Civil Court.

8. It may be observed, however, that in practice in this country the power of taking telegraph lines through private property is not likely to be exercised either by the Government or by its licensees except on rare occasions, and then as a rule only to the extent of crossing with the wire, a post being scarcely ever erected on private land. Private property has hitherto been always avoided as much as possible, and it is likely to be still more carefully avoided in future if it is made clear, as it is proposed to do by this Bill, that full compensation will have to be paid for exercising the power over private and not for exercising it over public property.

9. The present opportunity has been taken to make three amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, which experience has shown to be desirable. The first has for its object the emendation of the definition of "telegraph" so as to bring it into more exact conformity with the construction put upon the definitions in the English Acts by a recent decision of the High Court of Justice in England.

10. The second is intended to provide for the regulation of telegraph lines constructed by the Government but leased to companies or individuals by whom they are worked. The position of such lines under the Act as it at present stands is far from clear, and the object of the amendment proposed in section 12 of the Bill is to put them on much the same footing as licensed lines.

11. The object of the third amendment, which is made by section 13 of the Bill, is to prescribe penalties for the breach of the rules made under section 8 of the Act for the conduct of telegraphs worked under license or lease. In such cases, as the Act now stands, the only remedy is to revoke the license or lease, but this course would in most cases cause such great public inconvenience that it is impracticable. The result is that at present there is virtually no penalty for the infringement of the rules made under section 8 of the Act. To remedy this state of things, the Bill adds a clause to that section empowering the Governor General in Council to prescribe by the rules moderate fines for the breach of them.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make better provision for the organization and administration of Municipalities in the Panjáb was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th August, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to make better provision for the organization and administration of Municipalities in the Panjáb was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 211, dated 10th April, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 1].
From E. vs. Cullin, Esq., dated 27th April, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 2].

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 748., dated 16th May, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 4].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 798., dated 21st May, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 5].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 888., dated 27th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 6].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 948., dated 29th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 1218., dated 9th June, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
Extract from the Tribune of 11th June, 1884 [Papers No. 9].

2. Instead of repealing the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, and bringing the new law into force at once, as was proposed in the Bill as introduced, we have thought it better (section 4 of the amended Bill) to require the Local Government to apply the new law to any place to which that Act had been extended, unless the Local Government comes to the conclusion, and declares by notification in the official Gazette, that the provisions of the Act are not suited to any such place. The Local Government is at the same time empowered to continue in office the members of the present committees as if they had been elected or appointed under the new law for any term not exceeding three years which it may fix. When the new law is thus made applicable to any place to which the Act of 1873 had been extended, that Act will cease to apply, and other consequences will follow, which are set forth in section 12. In the Supplemental chapter, the Local Government is further empowered to withdraw the area of any municipality from the operation either of Act IV of 1873 or of the new law, if the latter has been made applicable. The Local Government will thus be enabled to abolish any municipality constituted under Act IV of 1873, if it appears undesirable to continue municipal institutions in the area under its control.

3. The provisions as to the term of office of members, the removal of members and the filling up of casual vacancies in the committee have been assimilated, as nearly as possible, to the corresponding provisions in the District Boards Act.

4. On the recommendation of the Local Government, we have by section 14 empowered the Commissioner of a division to approve of the election of a president by a second class committee, and to appoint the president of a committee of this class where the committee is not empowered to elect, or fails or does not desire to exercise the power.

5. The provision in section 25 enabling the president or, in his absence, a vice-president to exercise the powers of the committee in cases of emergency has been limited to the power, at the cost of the municipality, to direct the execution of any work or the doing of any act which he considers necessary for the service or safety of the public; and, when he exercises this power, he is required to report his proceedings to the next following meeting of the committee. Where the case is sufficiently provided for by the rules of business under section 24, as to the exercise of the executive authority of the committee, the extraordinary powers given by section 25 of course will not arise, as there would not then be a case of emergency.

6. In section 27 we have provided that nothing done under the Act should be questioned on account of the existence of a vacancy in a committee or joint committee or of any merely formal defect.

7. We have not retained the provision of the Bill as introduced requiring the sanction of the Commissioner of the division to the removal of a paid secretary, and his sanction to the appointment is confined (section 28) to the appointment of a paid secretary and to the rate of pay to be allowed, and does not extend to approval of the person selected. The responsibility for appointing a proper person will thus rest exclusively with the committee. In cases, however, in which Government officers were employed in the service of a municipality before the passing of this Bill into law, section 12 provides for their remaining in the service of the new committee, and prohibits their dismissal unless under the sanction of the Local Government.

8. The employment of other officers and servants (when there is available budget provision) is made subject only (section 29) to what is necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the duties of the committee, and to any rules which the Local Government may make as to the employment of persons appointed to offices requiring professional skill; but power is given to the Commissioner of the division, subject to an appeal by the committee to the Local Government (section 30), to require the reduction of excessively large or expensive establishments or of unduly high rates of pay.

9. We have raised the limit of the power of first class committees (section 33) to delegate the authority to enter into contracts on their behalf to 500 rupees, and have required all contracts for larger amounts on behalf of any committee to be sanctioned at a meeting of the committee before they can be entered into. It has been suggested that separate provision is required for contracts which do not fix the quantity of work to be done, but only the rate to be paid per unit of work; but we are of opinion that these contracts can be brought within this section by fixing a maximum limit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, on the sum which may become payable under them.

10. In section 34 the limit of value above which contracts are required to be in writing has been increased from Rs. 20 to Rs. 100 in the case of first class committees, and Rs. 50 in the case of second class committees.

11. The prohibition in section 35 of members, officers or servants of the committee being interested in contracts with the committee, unless with the Commissioner's permission, has been assimilated to section 62 of the District Boards Act.

12. Section 36, which takes the place of section 99 of the Bill as introduced, has been modified so as to require notice to be given of all suits against committees, or against their officers for their official acts; the sub-sections as to limitation and as to tender of amends being omitted as unnecessary. The protection thus given corresponds with that given to Government and to public officers by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, except that the notice required is shorter.

13. In the Taxation chapter the taxes which committees are empowered to propose for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a higher rate of tax on buildings and lands being allowed in certain scheduled municipalities, all of which are hill-stations, than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere.

14. In the second sub-section of section 39 we have defined the expression "annual value" as meaning the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands might reasonably be expected to let, and we have omitted the first proviso, as, though it has been the practice in hill-stations to let houses furnished, the furniture supplied is ordinarily of small value; and as most of us are of opinion that the rent to be considered in estimating the annual value is the sum for which they would let if unfurnished, we have added words making this clear.

15. Special powers are also given to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payment for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit. No special power has been thought necessary to enable committees to charge fees for the use of schools or other public institutions maintained by them, as they may impose any conditions they may think proper upon persons who wish to avail themselves of the benefit of such institutions.

16. We have modified the procedure for imposing and assessing taxes (section 42) by providing that new taxes leviable by the year should not come into force except at the commencement of the year, and other new taxes until at least six months have elapsed from the date of the meeting at which, after the requisite sanction has been obtained, their imposition is directed.

17. We have enabled the Local Government (section 45), where any tax appears unfair in its incidence or injurious to the interests of the public, to require the committee to take the necessary measures to remove the objection and, if it fails to comply with the requisition, to suspend the levy of the tax.

18. We have (section 49) given an appeal against assessments, on account of octroi, as in the case of other taxes, and we have also enabled officers hearing appeals against assessments, if they entertain reasonable doubt on any question as to the liability to, or principle of, the assessment, to state a case for the decision of the Chief Court.

19. We have (section 52) saved taxes leviable under the Municipal Act now in force so far as they are consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, the new law.

20. We have in section 59 conferred upon the committee a power to remit a tax on buildings on certain equitable grounds.

21. We have made taxes on buildings and lands, other than the scavenging-tax and the water-tax, payable by the owner and also a charge upon the property, and have therefore found it unnecessary to make them recoverable from the occupier if not paid by the owner after notice.

22. We have added a section (62) giving power to inspect the contents of a conveyance or package to ascertain whether octroi is payable by having it brought before a Magistrate for the purpose, if the person bringing or receiving it within the municipality refuses to allow the necessary inspection, and have in other respects amended the provisions of the Bill as introduced on the subject of the recovery of octroi.

23. The provisions of the Bill on the subject of the municipal fund and of municipal property have been brought together in a new chapter (Chapter IV). In this chapter we have provided (section 68) for prior charges on the municipal fund for loans, establishment-charges and payments for maintenance of pauper-lunatics, audit of accounts, and services rendered to the committee by Provincial Departments of Government, and have empowered the Local Government to make rules with respect to the relative priority to be given to the other duties of the committee. We have also (section 71) declared certain descriptions of property held for municipal purposes to vest in the committee, and have (section 72) introduced a clause, based on a somewhat similar provision of the Bombay Municipal Act, providing that the administration of every public institution maintained out of municipal funds shall vest in the committee, but that the extent of the independent authority of the committee may be prescribed by the Local Government.

24. The sections relating to municipal police have also been collected in a separate chapter (Chapter V). We have added a section (78) defining the powers and duties of the police in respect of offences against the Act or rules made thereunder. By this section they are empowered to arrest persons committing such offences when necessary, and are required to give immediate information of the commission of such offences to the committee, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

25. Another new chapter (Chapter VI) sets forth the powers of the committee to do, or to require others to do, or to abstain from doing, particular acts. This and the following chapter, which deals with offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, take the place of the powers to make rules for the prevention of nuisances, and for entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, given by section 67 of the Bill as introduced, and of the powers to issue injunctions and make conditional orders as to nuisances given by sections 68 to 70, and this chapter also embodies the additional powers to make rules and other powers expressly given by the Bill as introduced.

26. In framing these sections, the existing bye-laws of the principal municipalities, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India, have been referred to, and we have endeavoured to give all the powers not elsewhere given in the Bill which it appears to be necessary or proper that Panjáb municipalities should possess. While there may be municipalities in which some of these powers are not required, these municipalities can be excepted by the Local Government under one of the provisions contained in the Supplemental chapter from the sections giving the powers which the circumstances of the municipality render unnecessary.

27. Instead of enabling committees to make rules regulating for sanitary reasons the crops which may be grown within municipal limits, we have, by section 116, empowered the Local Government to prohibit by notification the cultivation of any crop, the use of any manure or the irrigation of land in any manner, which is reported by the Sanitary Commissioner to be injurious to health, or to impose such conditions thereupon as may remove the risk of injury, and have provided for compensation where the practice prohibited was of long standing.

28. In section 117, which relates to the regulation of offensive or dangerous trades, and corresponds with section 74 of the Bill as introduced, we have omitted manufactories of gunpowder or fireworks, which can now be regulated by rules made by the Local Government under the Explosives Act, IV of 1884, and shops for smoking opium, as these must be licensed under the Opium Act, and the Local Government may, if it thinks proper, instruct Deputy Commissioners to consult municipalities before granting a license under that Act.

29. In section 119 we have extended the power given by the Bill as introduced to make rules for the inspection and proper regulation of lodging-houses to houses occupied by members of more than one family, and have stated in greater detail the subjects with which such rules may deal. This power, with that given in section 115, to prohibit the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used, will enable committees to exercise more effective control than hitherto over the arrangements for the accommodation of human beings where this appears necessary for the preservation of the public health, and will, it is believed, be of special importance, not only in hill-stations, but in places the population of which is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

30. Chapter VII provides for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety and convenience and of disobedience to orders given by the committee under the powers conferred by the preceding chapter.

31. In Chapter VIII, which deals with control, the changes made have been in the direction of assimilation with the provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act. We have also revised the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules.

32. In the Supplemental chapter (Chapter IX) we have added provisions that copies of rules should be kept by committees available for inspection and for sale to the public (section 160); that rules or bye-laws made under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, should, so far as consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, this Bill, continue in force until repealed by new rules, which the proper authority is required to make and take the necessary steps for bringing into force so soon as may be (section 161); and we have included provisions for altering the boundaries of municipalities or the class to which they belong (sections 165 to 169), for excepting them from the operation of such parts of the Bill as are not suited to their circumstances (section 170), and for withdrawing them from the operation of the law relating to municipalities (section 171).

33. A special section applicable only to Simla (section 177) has also been added to save the land-tax which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 12 OF 1884.

A Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Burma Gaming Act, 1884.

(2) It extends to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma; and

(3) It shall come into force at once.

Game of ti and like games to be deemed lotteries.

2. The game known as "ti," and every other game or pretended game of a like nature, shall be deemed a lottery within the meaning of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code.

XLV of 1860.

Application of Act III of 1867 to game of ti and like games.

3. (1) Taking part in the game of "ti," or in any other game or pretended game of a like nature, shall also be deemed gaming within the meaning of Act III of 1867.

(2) Every house, walled enclosure, room or other place, whether public or private, where any such game or pretended game is carried on, shall, for the purposes of that Act, be deemed a common gaming-house, and all expressions referring to the use of any such place as a common gaming-house shall include the use thereof for any such game or pretended game on a single occasion.

(3) All boxes, receptacles, lists, papers, tickets and forms used for the purpose of any such game or pretended game shall be deemed instruments of gaming within the meaning of the said Act.

Penalty on conducting game of ti and like games.

4. Whoever conducts or assists in conducting the game of "ti," or any other game or pretended game of a like nature, as manager, stakeholder or daing, or who is according to the rules of the game or pretended game entitled to receive the surplus proceeds, or any part of the surplus proceeds, of the stakes, after deducting the amount payable to the successful player or players, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may for a first offence extend to six months, and for a subsequent offence to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Power to extend local application of Act III of 1867 within British Burma.

5. (1) The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, by notification published in the official Gazette, extend to the whole or any part of the territories for the time being under his administration any such of the provisions of Act III of 1867 as do not for the time being extend thereto. [See Act III of 1867, ss. 1 and 2.]

(2) From the date of any such extension so much of any rule having the force of law in operation in the territories to which the extension is made as is inconsistent with or repugnant to any provision so extended shall cease to have effect in those territories.

Power to demand security.

6. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or, when he is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, a Magistrate of the first class receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction earns his livelihood, wholly or in part, by carrying on, or assisting in carrying on, the game of ti, or any other game or pretended game of a like nature, he may deal with such person as nearly as may be as if the information received about him were of the description mentioned in section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; and for the purposes of any proceeding under this section the fact that a person earns his livelihood as aforesaid may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise. [See C. C. P., s. 110.]

X of 1882. [Act X of 1882, s. 117.]

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma.

3. The answers showed clearly that the Burmans as a body regarded the prevalence of gambling, especially as practised in the ti,* as a very great evil. Government officers were almost equally strong in their denunciations of these tis. With a few exceptions the opinions received were in favour of suppressing this and other forms of public gaming, and the Bill proposed for the Straits Settlements was accepted as a guide to the direction which legislation should take.

4. The history of the means which the Courts have hitherto used to check the opening of tis is briefly as follows. For some years after the passing of Act III of 1867 it was held that a ti was a form of gaming, and that the lists and papers used in the ti were instruments of gaming, within the meaning of that Act. This view was confirmed by the High Court of Calcutta in 1869. In 1876 Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Quinton, as Judges of the Special Court of British Burma, held that tis were lotteries, and that, since the enactment of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, lotteries were punishable under that section and not under Act III of 1867. It is not clear what effect the learned Judges of the Special Court gave to section 15 of Act XXVII of 1870, the Act by which section 294A of the Indian Penal Code was enacted. However, since the date of this judgment, the prosecution of the promoters of tis under Act III of 1867 may be said to have ceased; tis have been regarded as lotteries and the persons concerned in them have been prosecuted under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code; and until lately no doubt of the applicability of that section to this particular kind of gambling has arisen.

5. Two recent rulings of the Judicial Commissioner have presented a different view of the law. In the first of the cases in question the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate, under section 13 of Act III of 1867, as having been engaged in a ti in a zayat or public rest-house beside a public road. The Judicial Commissioner called for the proceedings, and, having come to the conclusion that a ti was not a game of chance and was mere betting or wagering, he referred the matter to the Special Court. The Officiating Recorder, Mr. Allen, dissented from the Judicial Commissioner's opinion, and held that the conviction was right. Under the constitution of the Special Court the opinion of the referring Judge prevails. The Judicial Commissioner accordingly issued a circular in which his own view of the law is enjoined on the Courts subordinate to him,—in other words, on all Courts outside the jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon,—and in which he lays down the doctrine that a ti is not a game nor a lottery, and that the papers used in collecting the money of the persons who take part in the ti are wrongly described as lottery-tickets. In the second of these cases the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate at Rangoon under section 294A of the Penal Code of keeping a lottery-office. On appeal to the Officiating Recorder, that officer referred the question of whether a ti is a lottery to the Special Court. The Judicial Commissioner held that it was not; the Officiating Recorder that it was. In this case also the opinion of the referring Judge prevailed. The Judicial Commissioner, however, has informed the Courts subordinate to him that his own view of the law is to be their guide. There are thus two contradictory judgments of the Special Court, and two diverse rules of law established for different parts of the province, each Judge holding to his own individual opinion.

6. The object of the present Bill is to obviate the effect of the judgments and circulars of the Judicial Commissioner above referred to, which bar all prosecutions for ti-gaming, and the effect of which has already been to give a fresh impetus to that kind of gambling.

It has not been thought expedient to copy the measure proposed by the Government of the Straits Settlements. The draft Ordinance is a very complicated piece of legislation, very stringent in its provisions, and very likely, unless worked under closer supervision than can be given to it in Burma, to become an engine of oppression. Moreover, it does not seem either necessary or desirable to endeavour to check gambling of every kind. A people like the Burmese must have amusement of some sort. It is quite possible to make gambling an expensive amusement, but to stop it altogether, if the people wish to indulge in it, is beyond the power of the law, and the attempt to do it would probably only result in systematic bribery and the corruption of the police. What appears to be chiefly needed is the repression of the professional ti-gambler, the man who makes his living by going about inducing people to game and as often as not swindling them out of their money. The urgent requisite is a law which will enable the authorities to deal with professional gamblers, and all who aid and abet them, with prompt severity, wherever they may be found. For other purposes the Act of 1867 appears to be sufficient, nor does the extension of all its provisions to the province generally appear even to be necessary.

* The nature of the game or lottery or series of bets called ti is as follows:—The banker, or professional gambler, who makes his living by the game, chooses one of 36 animals and deposits a piece of paper on which its name is written in a hollow bamboo or box. Then his emissaries go round asking people to name the animal so chosen and to back their guess by putting down their money. Any one who guesses rightly gets thirty times his stake; the others lose.

7. The present Bill has, therefore, been framed so as to deal particularly with ti-gaming, for which fresh legislation is urgently required.

Section 2 removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of section 294A of the Penal Code, by declaring the game of "ti" and other like games to be "lotteries" within the meaning of that section.

Section 3 similarly removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of Act III of 1867, by declaring that taking part in the game of "ti" and other like games shall be deemed to be "gaming" within the meaning of that Act. It also contains other provisions the chief effect of which will be to make it an offence to take part in such games in a private as well as in a public place.

The penalties imposed by section 4 on those who, as managers, daings, &c., conduct or assist in conducting such games have been advisedly made severe. Experience has shown that nothing but great severity of punishment will suffice to check this profitable form of gambling.

Section 6 of the Bill gives power to the Courts to demand security from persons who notoriously earn their living, or part of their living, by gaming of this description. The necessity for this provision arises to some extent from the fact that gambling of the kind which it is the object of the proposed enactment to suppress has been held to be an ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If this Bill becomes law, the powers in the hands of the authorities for the suppression of gambling will, it is believed, be sufficient and will at the same time be such as to secure, it may be confidently hoped, the desired results without risk of oppression.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th September, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 13 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows: XVIII of 1882.

1. This Act may be called the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1884; and it shall come into force at once. Short title and commencement.

2. In section 4 of the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, after the words "first or second class" the words "or as engine-drivers" shall be added. Amendment of section 4 of Act XVIII of 1882. XVIII of 1882.

3. In section 5, sub-section (2), section 8, clause (b), and section 11, clause (b), of the said Act, after the word "engineer" the words "or in the case of a boiler or prime-mover attached to an engine of not more than twenty horse-power of an engineer or engine-driver" shall be inserted. Amendment of sections 5, 8 and 11 of same Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, in such a manner as to provide for the grant of certificates to engine-drivers, authorizing them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power. Under the Act as it at present stands, certificates can be granted to engineers of the first and second classes only, and all boilers and prime-movers must be in charge of engineers of one or other of these classes. The Board of Examiners appointed under the Act have recently represented to the Chief Commissioner that these provisions cause unnecessary hardship to a class of Native drivers who can be trusted to manage, and actually do manage, small engines. It would be misleading to give these men engineers' certificates of any class, inasmuch as they are in no sense engineers. On the other hand, it is only fair to them and the small millowners who employ them that they should be eligible for some sort of certificate and be permitted to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of low horse-power. Under these circumstances, the Board suggest that the Act should be amended in such a way as to authorize the grant to such persons, when found competent, of engine-drivers' certificates, which will empower them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power, and they point out that there is a precedent for the grant of such certificates in the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, sections 28 and 29. In order to carry out these suggestions, which are supported by the Chief Commissioner, the present Bill, which makes the necessary amendments in the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, has been prepared.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th September, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 13 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows :

XVIII of 1882.

1. This Act may be called the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1884; and it shall come into force at once.

Short title and commencement.

2. In section 4 of the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, after the words "first or second class" the words "or as engine-drivers" shall be added.

Amendment of section 4 of Act XVIII of 1882.

XVIII of 1882.

3. In section 5, sub-section (2), section 8, clause (b), and section 11, clause (b), of the said Act, after the word "engineer" the words "or in the case of a boiler or prime-mover attached to an engine of not more than twenty horse-power of an engineer or engine-driver" shall be inserted.

Amendment of sections 5, 8 and 11 of same Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, in such a manner as to provide for the grant of certificates to engine-drivers, authorizing them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power. Under the Act as it at present stands, certificates can be granted to engineers of the first and second classes only, and all boilers and prime-movers must be in charge of engineers of one or other of these classes. The Board of Examiners appointed under the Act have recently represented to the Chief Commissioner that these provisions cause unnecessary hardship to a class of Native drivers who can be trusted to manage, and actually do manage, small engines. It would be misleading to give these men engineers' certificates of any class, inasmuch as they are in no sense engineers. On the other hand, it is only fair to them and the small millowners who employ them that they should be eligible for some sort of certificate and be permitted to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of low horse-power. Under these circumstances, the Board suggest that the Act should be amended in such a way as to authorize the grant to such persons, when found competent, of engine-drivers' certificates, which will empower them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power, and they point out that there is a precedent for the grant of such certificates in the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, sections 28 and 29. In order to carry out these suggestions, which are supported by the Chief Commissioner, the present Bill, which makes the necessary amendments in the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, has been prepared.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 2nd October, 1884:—

No. 14 OF 1884.

A Bill to repeal the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883.

WHEREAS it is expedient to repeal the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

V of 1877.
XXI of 1883.

1. The Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, is repealed.

Act V of 1877.

2. For section 102 of the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, the following section shall be substituted:—

New section substituted for section 102 of Act XXI of 1883.

XXI of 1883.

"102. On and from such a date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix in this behalf, a Native of India who departs by sea out of British India under an agreement to labour for hire in any protected Native State adjoining the Straits Settlements to which the notification refers shall not be deemed to emigrate within the meaning of this Act."

Power for Governor General in Council to exempt emigration to Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements from Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to repeal Act V of 1877 (the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877), which extends only to the Madras Presidency. It is dictated by the policy which recently led to the enactment of Act VII of 1883, (to repeal the British Burma Labour Law, 1876.) As in the case of Burma, it is found that there is a system of "free emigration" to the Straits which not only competes with, but altogether distances, the Government system for which Act V of 1877 provides. From the information before it, the Government of India is of opinion that that Act has impeded instead of promoting emigration, that labour flows as naturally to and from the Straits as it does between Burma and India, and that attempts to control its movement in British territory merely induce it to seek an outlet from the French ports of Pondicherry and Karikal. Such provisions as in the opinion of the Government are necessary for the protection and control of the Indian immigrant after his arrival in the Straits have been embodied in a revised Labour Regulation, which is now before the Straits legislature, and will, it is expected, shortly become law. Under these circumstances, the Government of India considers that emigration from India to the Straits should be uncontrolled by law in this country save as regards the requirements of the Native Passengers Ships Act.

2. The repeal of Act V of 1877 necessitates, however, an amendment of section 102 of Act XXI of 1883 (the Indian Emigration Act, 1883). The first sub-section of that section provides for the extension of Act V of 1877 to other parts of British India. As the Act is itself now being repealed, it is clear that this sub-section should be repealed also. The second and third sub-sections of that section give the Governor General in Council power by notification to include any of the protected Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements within the scope of any law relating to emigration to those Settlements, and exempt, on and from the date of any such notification, emigration to the protected State specified therein from the operation of Act XXI of 1883. Though there will no longer be any special law relating to emigration to the Straits, it is deemed desirable to retain the power, which these sub-sections confer, of exempting emigration to the protected States from Act XXI of 1883. A new section has therefore been substituted by section 2 of the Bill for section 102 of Act XXI of 1883 empowering the Governor General in Council to exempt emigration to the protected States from that Act whenever he considers such exemption to be desirable.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 25th September, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 289-1L., dated 9th September, 1884 [Paper No. 1].
Telegram from Chief Commissioner, British Burma, dated 15th September, 1884 [Paper No. 2].

2. The following is an extract from the Chief Commissioner's telegram of the 15th instant:—

"Opinions received on Burma Gaming Bill induce me to urge following points:—

"First, we must make touts for ti punishable; so please, after word 'players' in section 4, insert words 'or who promotes the game by soliciting or collecting stakes or otherwise.'

"Second, I fear Courts may unduly restrict meaning of word 'place'; therefore, for first eight words in clause (2), section 3, please substitute words 'every place, whether enclosed or unenclosed.'

Thirdly, our 1st class Magistrates are few; therefore please add clause as follows:—

'The Local Government may specially authorize any Magistrate of the 2nd class to exercise the powers conferred by section 5 of Act III of 1867 on the Magistrate of the district.'

Fourthly, we want power to arrest touts in public places; therefore please add clause as follows:—

'A police-officer may apprehend without warrant any person soliciting or collecting stakes for ti or any other game of like nature in any public street, place or thoroughfare.'

"Fifthly, on advice of officers consulted, I agree that section 2 of Bill may be omitted."

3. We have adopted all these suggestions except the second; and, though the Chief Commissioner adds that he lays much stress on that suggestion, we do not think it would be possible to adopt it, at least in the shape in which he proposes it. It must be remembered that the Bill is not an independent measure, but is to be read with Act III of 1867; and, if the provisions of that Act relating to common gaming-houses be referred to, it will, we think, be found that some at least of them are such that if every "place," without any distinction or limitation whatever, was to be made a "common gaming-house," they could not fairly or reasonably be applied. It may indeed be doubted whether, apart from all consideration of the harshness which the proposed amendment would involve, some of those provisions could be applied to every "place" indiscriminately without giving rise to something approaching an absurdity.

4. We have, we need hardly say, considered whether it might not be desirable to give some extension to the definition of "common gaming-house" short of that proposed by the Chief Commissioner; but we think, having regard to English decisions on the provisions of Statutes worded in a manner somewhat similar to Act III of 1867 and the present Bill, that the definition is as wide as it is desirable to make it. We think we may reasonably count on its being held, with reference to those decisions, to include all places which are sufficiently analogous to a house, walled enclosure or room to admit of being reasonably and fairly treated as gambling-houses for the purposes of the Act.

5. It must be remembered that the question here involved has little or no importance in practice except in its bearing on the position of persons who are induced to take tickets in the ti; for the managers and their assistants will in all cases be subject to severe penalties under separate provisions, which are completely independent of the definition of common gaming-house; and, as regards mere ticket-holders, it appears to us that it is sufficient if they are punishable under the common gaming-house provisions of the Bill and the Act as they now stand, and under the 13th section of the Act for gambling in public. We have, however, amended the last-mentioned section so as to give it a somewhat wider range in British Burma than it has elsewhere.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Local Self-government in British Burma was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 25th September, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to Local Self-government in British Burma was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 678-8R.M, dated 27th September, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 1].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 88-8R.M., dated 4th October, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 2].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 348-8R.M., dated 17th October, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 3].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 537-8R.M., dated 27th December, 1883, and enclosure [Papers No. 4].
Office Memorandum from Home Department, No. 762, dated 9th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 5].
From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 481-1G.M., dated 17th June, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 6].

2. The Bill as now amended by us will be seen at a glance to differ considerably from the Bill as introduced. The difference is due chiefly to three causes.

3. In the first place, there has been a change in the main plan and scope of the measure. As explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, the original Bill was framed with a view to the inclusion within municipalities of adjoining rural areas. This course was taken, on the advice of the Local Government, in order to meet the requirements of certain rural tracts, until such time as it might be found possible to establish a system of local boards for rural districts.

From the papers since submitted, however, it appears that, upon fuller consideration, the weight of opinion is against the attempt to include in one municipality urban and rural tracts; and the Chief Commissioner now recommends that the Bill be confined, as we believe all the Municipal Acts on our Statute-book are, to urban tracts, the matter of local self-government in rural tracts being left to be dealt with separately hereafter.

In this recommendation we concur. The difficulty of framing the provisions of the Bill so as to fit in with conditions so essentially different as those of the towns and the adjoining tracts of country has turned out to be greater than was anticipated, and the call for the establishment of a system of local self-government in the rural tracts of British Burma is not so pressing as to justify our running the risk of passing an unsatisfactory measure for the sake of at once meeting it. We have accordingly reduced the Bill to the form of a Municipal Bill pure and simple.

4. Another difference between the original Bill and the present Bill is due to our having, at the request of the Chief Commissioner, adopted the course taken by the Select Committee on the Panjáb Municipal Bill of substituting for wide general powers to make rules detailed provisions regarding nuisances and other matters affecting the public health, safety and convenience. It is in this way that most of the new sections contained in Chapters VI and VII of the amended Bill are to be accounted for.

5. Lastly, the greater light thrown upon the needs of municipal government and on the difficulties likely to present themselves in the application of a Municipal Act by the prolonged discussions which took place in the Select Committee on the Panjáb Bill has led to numerous amendments in, or additions to, the Bill of minor importance. As examples we may refer to—

Section 27 (e) (distribution of executive powers and duties);

Section 28 (extraordinary powers of president and vice-president in case of emergency);

Sections 44 and 88 (powers to impose a scavenging-tax and to undertake the scavenging of private premises);

Sections 51-57 (special rules applicable to taxation of immoveable property);

Sections 60 and 61 (constitution and application of the municipal fund);

Sections 65-67 (provisions relating to municipal property);

Section 138 (settlement of disputes);

Sections 151-155 (relating to notices); and

Section 158 (which confers a power to exempt a municipality from any provisions of the Act which appear unsuitable to it).

This last section, we may observe, is specially necessary in view of the numerous and somewhat elaborate provisions now contained in Chapters VI and VII, some of which would probably be unsuitable in small municipalities.

6. We have now to notice such of the more important alterations of the Bill as are not accounted for by the foregoing remarks, or as otherwise seem to call for explanation.

7. Section 12 of the original Bill, which required a member of the municipal body to vacate his seat when appointed to a salaried municipal office, and section 29, which provided for the payment of fees to members for attendance at meetings, have been omitted; the former because it is not thought advisable that any person while a member of a committee should be appointed to a salaried office under the committee, and the latter because a municipal area can now comprise only a town and its immediate suburbs, and the members of the committee, being residents of that area and not having to travel any distance to the meetings, may reasonably be expected to give their services gratuitously.

8. We have, following the course taken in the Panjáb Bill, limited the rates to be imposed for water, lighting and scavenging only by providing (in effect) that they shall not exceed what is requisite to defray the cost of the services for which they are levied; and we have, as in the Panjáb Bill, provided that the proceeds of these rates shall be carried to the one municipal fund, separate accounts only being kept, instead of constituting separate funds.

9. We have substituted for section 47 of the original Bill, which required a municipal committee to make grants-in-aid to schools in accordance with such rules as the Government might make, a section (62) specifically appropriating to educational purposes the income for schools and all sums acquired by the committee in trust for educational purposes, and further requiring the assignment for educational purposes from the general municipal revenues of such sum annually, not being more than 5 per cent. of the gross annual income of the municipality, as the Local Government may fix.

This section has been suggested by the Chief Commissioner with the view of meeting practical difficulties which have occurred in British Burma, and is, in his opinion, indispensable for the purpose of carrying out the educational policy which has recently been established in that province, and under which the municipalities, whilst relieved of police-charges, have been required to provide for the maintenance of local schools. It will be observed that the section, while it compels the committee to devote a certain minimum of its funds to educational purposes, imposes no such restriction as might have been imposed under the original section as regards the particular objects on which the money shall be spent.

10. The Chief Commissioner has in an unofficial communication proposed certain modifications in and additions to the new provisions introduced from the Panjáb Bill in Chapters VI and VII. Most of these are of minor importance, and we have in general adopted them, omitting only such as appeared to us superfluous or unnecessarily stringent. In one instance we, however, have found it necessary to omit a section of considerable importance proposed by the Chief Commissioner, namely, a section similar to section 14 of Act XLVIII of 1860 giving a certain power of control over brothels and other disorderly houses; but that section we have omitted merely because we think the matter is one to be dealt with by the Magistrates and police rather than by a municipal committee.

11. The only other point which appears to call for notice in connection with this portion of the Bill is that we have substituted two sections (126 and 127) based on similar sections in the Public Health Act, 1875, for a section proposed by the Chief Commissioner, to guard against the spread of infectious diseases through the medium of public conveyances.

12. Sections 49 to 51 of the original Bill provided for the exercise by a municipal committee or its members of certain magisterial powers in nuisance cases. We have omitted these sections for the same reasons that have led to the omission of the corresponding sections of other Municipal Bills recently before the Council, namely, that a section like section 49 could have little practical effect, and that it is not desirable that the powers given by the other two sections should be conferred.

13. We have not thought it advisable to adopt a proposal made by the Chief Commissioner that the Local Government should be empowered to invest municipal officers with the powers of police-officers for the purposes of section 34 of the Police Act (V of 1861).

14. We have added a clause to section 133 providing that the powers of control over municipalities, conferred by that section on the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner, shall, in the case of the municipalities of Rangoon, Moulmein, Akyab and Bassein, be exercised not by those officers but by the Local Government.

15. Lastly, we have to state that we have considered a proposal of the Chief Commissioner to the effect that the appropriation provisions of the Bill should be modified in such a manner as to admit of a municipal committee subscribing to a public band or contributing to fireworks or the like on great occasions. We have not adopted this proposal, because the objects in question appear to us to lie beyond the sphere of the purposes for which municipal taxation is raised in this country.

2. We have rearranged the provisions of the Bill in a manner which we trust will make them more readily intelligible; and in the following remarks we shall as far as possible take the sections in their new order.

CHAPTER II.

THE CHIEF COURT.

3. It will be observed that under the proviso to section 8, sub-section (1), a single Judge of the Chief Court is prohibited from revising or modifying any proceeding of a lower Court except an "order" within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure. The restriction thus imposed does not, we believe, differ to any important extent from that contained in the corresponding provision (section 21, proviso) of the original Bill, and it relieves us of the necessity of using the phrase "interlocutory order," to which some difficulty attached.

4. We have also modified the last sub-section of section 8 by placing in the hands of the Senior Judge the power of determining which Judges of the Chief Court shall sit alone and which shall constitute benches, instead of leaving the power to be delegated by the Court to such Judge as it might think fit.

5. We have in section 14 added to the matters in respect of which the Chief Court is empowered to make rules—

(1) the translation of papers filed in the Chief Court and copying or printing any such papers or translations, and the payment by parties of the expenses thereby incurred; and

(2) the procedure in cases where a person is entitled to inspect a record of any Court or obtain a copy of it, and the fees payable for searches and copies.

We believe that these matters have long been dealt with by the Chief Court at its discretion, and we think it well that the power to deal with them should be placed on a legal basis.

CHAPTER III.

THE SUBORDINATE CIVIL COURTS.

6. The enumeration of the subordinate Civil Courts in section 17* differs from that in section 4 of the original Bill, but the substantive changes involved are smaller than might at first sight be supposed.

* (a) The Divisional Court.
(b) The Court of the District Judge.
(c) The Court of the Subordinate Judge.
(d) The Court of the Munsif.

The Divisional Court corresponds, with certain modifications, which we shall presently have to notice, to the Divisional Court of the original Bill.

7. The District Judge corresponds to the Assistant Judge of the original Bill, but his position as controlling the administration of civil justice in the district in somewhat the same manner as the District Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code controls the administration of criminal justice is more clearly brought out; and (section 23) his Court is, subject to certain exceptions, made the District Court for the purposes of those Acts which confer special powers on a District Court.

8. The Subordinate Judge corresponds to the Subordinate Judge of the first class of the original Bill, but we have, instead of fixing a pecuniary limit to his jurisdiction as in section 36 of the original Bill, empowered the Local Government to do so (section 26). It will thus be in the power of the Local Government to limit the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge to any sum it thinks fit, or to confer upon him the unlimited jurisdiction exercised by a District Judge in original suits.

9. The Munsif of the amended Bill is intended to comprise the second, third and fourth classes of Subordinate Judges of the original Bill, and his powers in original suits have been dealt with in a manner similar to that just described; that is to say, it is left (section 26) to the Chief Court to invest each Munsif with such powers as it thinks fit, provided that the limit of value does not exceed Rs. 1,000, which was the limit for Subordinate Judges of the second class under section 36 of the original Bill.

10. It will be observed that section 19 introduces an important change as regards the constitution of the Divisional Court; but as that change will be more conveniently explained when we come to speak of the appellate jurisdictions, it only remains to notice here that we have in the proviso to section 21 put the restriction on the powers of one of several Judges of a Divisional Court sitting alone on the same footing as the similar restriction in the case of the Chief Court (supra, paragraph 3).

11. We have inserted a new section (29), similar to section 27 of the Bengal Courts Act, providing for the transfer to a Subordinate Judge or Munsif of business under Act XXVII of 1860, Act XL of 1858 and Act IX of 1861.

12. In the section (now 30) which empowers the Local Government to confer the powers of a Small Cause Court Judge on certain judicial officers, we have, as in other cases, omitted all minute specification of pecuniary limits, and simply provided that the Local Government may confer such powers as it thinks fit within the limit of Rs. 500.

13. In dealing with a Bill of this description it is impossible to overlook the difficulties which present themselves in connection with the valuation of certain classes of suits for the purpose of determining the original jurisdiction and the course of appeal. The question of the simplest mode of valuing suits for the recovery of land is at present under the consideration of the Government of India, and we have not accordingly felt ourselves called upon to take it up; but there are certain other classes of suits which in the absence of any special provision for their valuation would be left in a very unsatisfactory position, namely, suits the subject of which does not admit of valuation on any intelligible basis. Such suits are usually valued at some low figure, and consequently may be heard without any reference to their importance or difficulty by Courts of the inferior grades. The necessity for making some special provision for them on the present occasion is the greater, inasmuch as, under the present Bill, the course of appeal will depend to a greater extent than before on the valuation.

We have accordingly introduced a new section (32) providing that, where the subject-matter of suits of any class is such that in the opinion of the Chief Court it does not admit of being satisfactorily valued, the Chief Court may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, direct that such suits shall be treated as if the subject-matter were of such value as the Chief Court thinks fit to specify in this behalf.

14. The only other provision of this chapter which appears to call for notice is section 38. As we have explained, it is intended that the District Judge should have the general control of the administration of civil justice throughout his district; but there may be cases, as e.g., that of Kulu, in which it would be convenient to delegate this control to a Subordinate Judge in some outlying portion of the district in somewhat the same way as certain powers of a District Magistrate are delegated to a Sub-divisional Officer under the Code of Criminal Procedure; and accordingly a power to effect such a delegation has been taken.

CHAPTER IV.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION IN CIVIL CASES.

15. We have omitted the words in the opening section of this chapter which conferred a power to place other classes of suits on the same footing as mufassal small causes for the purposes of appeal, the object in view being now sufficiently met by the new definition of "small cause" (in section 3), which gives power to place small causes within the meaning of the Presidency-towns Small Cause Courts Act on the same footing as mufassal small causes.

16. We have, moreover, restricted this section, as we have the entire chapter, to appeals from decrees as distinguished from orders, the latter being sufficiently provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure.

17. The subject of further appeals, which is dealt with in the following section, is one which has given rise to much discussion, and which is surrounded on all sides with difficulties of a serious nature. We have given to it the most careful and prolonged consideration, and have come to the conclusion that the right of further appeal allowed by the Bill as introduced must be extended in some important particulars.

The Bill as introduced allowed a further appeal from the appellate decree of a Divisional Bench only in two cases, namely, if the Judges differed or if some question of law or custom or of general interest was involved; and in these cases it did not allow the appeal as a matter of right, but only if both Judges, or when one had left the Court, the remaining one, certified that the case was of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal. Under the Bill as now amended a further appeal will lie as a matter of right and without any certificate from a Divisional Bench in all cases where the Judges differ. There will, moreover, be a further appeal in all cases in which any one Judge certifies that there is a question of law or custom or general interest involved, and that the case is in his opinion of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal. And, lastly, there will be a further appeal in cases of a class altogether new and not contemplated in the original Bill, namely, where the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 500.

The proviso barring a further appeal in small causes when the value does not exceed Rs. 500 is retained.

18. We have, as already indicated, made another alteration which is of considerable importance, and which it is convenient to notice here.

The Bill as introduced required that the Divisional Courts should consist in all instances of at least two Judges, that except as expressly provided no decision should be reversed except by a bench of two Judges, and that the restrictions on further appeal which we have described should apply to all Divisional Courts. To that objection was taken on the ground that there may be a difficulty in finding in the Panjáb a sufficient number of competent officers to furnish two Judges for each of the Divisional Courts proposed. We need hardly say that if the objection were well-founded it would be a serious one, inasmuch as the strict limitations on the right of further appeal to the Chief Court imposed by the original Bill were framed in reliance on the strength of the Divisional Benches; and though those limitations have now been relaxed in the important particulars already described, the Bill still proceeds on the assumption that a Divisional Bench will be a stronger, more reliable and more satisfactory tribunal than the Court of a Commissioner ordinarily now is.

19. It is of course impossible for us to say whether the precise number of competent officers required to constitute Benches in all the proposed Divisions is to be found in the Panjáb at this moment, but we understand that the Lieutenant-Governor has no misgivings on the point, and we think it may be safely affirmed that the difficulty of procuring a sufficient number of competent officers for the Benches has been much exaggerated.

In order, however, to guard against every possibility of miscarriage, we have now modified the Bill in such a way that, if the Lieutenant-Governor finds, at any time, that the materials required for establishing a Bench in any particular Division are not immediately available, he can make the Divisional Court there consist of a single Judge (section 19), and in the event of his doing so a further appeal will, subject only to the proviso as to small causes contained in section 40, lie from that Judge's appellate decrees precisely as they lie at present from the appellate decrees of a Commissioner [section 40, clause (b)].

CHAPTER V.

REVENUE COURTS.

20. We have recast this chapter, assimilating it in form and arrangement to the portion of the Bill relating to Civil Courts, and supplying certain omissions in details, as, e. g., provisions relating to ministerial officers, which it seems unnecessary to notice more particularly.

21. We have omitted from the list of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts given in the first section the so-called suits under section 40 of the Panjáb Tenancy Act, inasmuch as we find on reference to that Act that the proceedings in question are not suits but applications, and we think that the proper mode of dealing with them is to include them among the applications to be heard on the revenue side which are specified in section 42 of that Act, and from which they were apparently omitted by an oversight. We have accordingly added a section (75) to the Bill amending section 42 of the Tenancy Act so as to include them.

22. We have added to the list of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts "suits to determine disputes regarding boundaries of land" (i.e., of agricultural land) "which have been fixed by a Court or Revenue-officer." This addition has been advocated by several of the authorities consulted, and it appears to us to be a proper one, seeing that all that is ordinarily required for the decision of such disputes is the laying down on the ground of a boundary which is to be found in a map.

23. On the other hand, we have appended to the section a proviso which empowers the Local Government, after consulting the Chief Court, to retransfer to the Civil Courts the jurisdiction in any class of revenue cases cognizable in any part of the country where it appears desirable to do so.

24. We have for convenience sake divided the classes of suits into two groups, and at the instance of the Local Government included class (d), suits for ejectment of a tenant, in the group containing suits deemed to be of greater importance or difficulty.

25. We have in defining the powers of Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs [section 46 (2)], following the same course as in the provisions relating to original civil jurisdiction, omitted all minute specification of pecuniary limits, and left it to the Local Government to fix those limits as it thinks fit.

26. We have for the same reason as in the preceding chapter omitted all reference to appeals from orders.

27. We have introduced a clause in the proviso to section 47, based on similar provisions in the Rent Laws of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces, giving power to bar appeals from decrees of certain classes of officers in money-suits when the amount involved does not exceed Rs. 100 and no question of importance, such as a question of title, is involved.

28. We have added a section (51) empowering the Local Government to confer on any person the judicial powers, original or appellate, of a Financial Commissioner, Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner under this chapter.

29. We have, in order further to provide a means of relieving the Revenue Courts of the necessity of disposing of particular matters which may be found to be more proper for consideration by the Civil Courts, introduced two new sections (54 and 55).

The first of these is copied with certain modifications from section 208A of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, and is intended to take the place of section 49 of the original Bill, which has been the subject of adverse criticism. It empowers a Revenue Court, when it considers that any question in issue before it is more proper for decision by a Civil Court, to require any party to institute a suit in the Civil Court with a view to obtaining a decision on the question. If he fails to comply with the requisition, the Revenue Court is empowered to decide the question against him, but is not bound to do so, as under the corresponding provision of the North-Western Provinces Act. If the party institutes the suit in the Civil Court, the Revenue Court will follow the decision of that Court.

30. It has been suggested that any provision of this sort is superfluous, inasmuch as a Revenue Court being a Court of limited jurisdiction, and its decision in one case being accordingly, under section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, binding in other cases only to a limited extent, it may safely be compelled to decide all questions arising incidentally in any suit before it, even though they may be questions which would be obviously more proper for the consideration of a Civil Court.

To this view of the matter we are unable to assent.

31. It is undoubtedly true that in many cases, probably in the great majority of cases, it is best for all parties that the Revenue Court should take upon itself to decide all questions incidentally arising in the suit, even though some of them might be of a nature more proper for the consideration of a Civil Court. This would clearly be the right course for the Revenue Court to take when the question is a simple one and can be quickly disposed of, or when it is one not likely to arise subsequently between the parties in any other connection; but it seems equally clear that when, as must occasionally happen, some complicated and difficult question arises in a revenue-suit, and is certain to arise again between the parties unless it is finally settled, a Revenue Court ought to be allowed some discretion of the sort proposed. For, if some such discretion is not allowed, what must be the result? The question must be tried out at a great expenditure of time and money to all concerned by the Revenue Court, which ex hypothesi is not the best Court to try it. It may then go in appeal to the higher Revenue Courts, probably in the last resort to the Financial Commissioner, and, after all, as the decision obtained will not be binding except for certain limited purposes, the whole litigation may commence de novo and run a similar course through the Civil Courts.

It is in order to provide a means of avoiding scandals of this sort that we have introduced the section in question.

32. We are quite aware that the power it confers might be abused by an indolent Revenue-officer if he were free to resort to it at pleasure, but we have guarded against this by making the sanction of the immediately superior Court a condition precedent to its exercise.

33. Section 55, to which there is nothing corresponding in the original Bill, empowers the Financial Commissioner to refer to the Chief Court a point of law which he considers that Court is more competent to decide.

34. We trust that these two sections and the proviso which we have appended to section 45 (see supra, paragraph 23) will suffice to remove the apprehensions which have been expressed in some quarters that the Bill may force upon the Revenue Courts duties which they will be incompetent to discharge.

CHAPTER VII.

SUPPLEMENTAL PROVISIONS.

35. We have omitted section 63 of the original Bill, which provided for consultations between the two Financial Commissioners, as it is unnecessary to provide for such a matter by legislative enactment and the proposal to do so gave rise to some misapprehension.

36. We have likewise omitted section 66 of the original Bill, which expressly prohibited a judicial officer from disposing of a case in which he might appear to be interested. We are aware that such provisions have long found a place in our Courts Acts, but we think the matter is one on which legislation may well be dispensed with, the general principles applicable to it being perfectly well understood.

37. Section 68 of the original Bill, which reproduced section 48 of the present Panjáb Courts Act, gave power to the Government to appoint a single Judge to exercise the Chief Court's superintending functions. This power has never been exercised, and we are informed that the Government have no desire to retain it. We have accordingly omitted the section.

38. Sections 73 and 74 of the original Bill, which provide for the enhancement of the court-fees upon applications to the Chief Court for revision under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, were introduced with a view to discouraging such applications. We fully approve of their provisions and have retained them in the revised Bill. From statistics put before us by our hon'ble colleague Mr. Barkley it appears that such applications have of late been increasing to a formidable extent in the Panjáb; and, as observed by him when he asked for leave to introduce the Bill, they are certain to increase with greater rapidity if the provisions of the Bill, which give greater finality to the decisions of the Lower Appellate Courts, become law. Moreover, from the circumstance that only about one-sixth of the applications now made to the Chief Court are successful, it may be gathered that Panjáb litigants when debarred from appealing are tempted to incur the serious trouble and expense involved in making such applications, even where there may not be the slightest prospect of success. This appears to us to be a serious evil, and the only question has been whether the increase of the court-fee proposed in the original Bill would be enough to check it. The better opinion appears to us to be that it would have but a slight effect in that direction, and that nothing short of an alteration of section 622 of the Code as applied to the Panjáb will suffice.

39. We find that a considerable divergence of opinion has arisen between some of the highest Courts in the country as to the nature of the grounds required to support an application under that section. A full bench of the Allahabad High Court has held (I. L. R. 3 All. 203) that any grounds on which a second appeal would lie are sufficient. The practical result of this, as admitted by two of the learned Judges, is that section 622 of the Code gives a second appeal in all those cases in which the earlier sections of the Code expressly deny it. It may, no doubt, be said that the Court has a discretion under section 622 to interfere or not as it thinks fit, but we apprehend that as a rule a High Court holding the opinion just referred to, and finding what would be a good ground for special appeal made out, would be in practically the same position as if it were considering a special appeal under section 551.

40. A view which is probably more in accordance with that of those who framed the section was taken by a full bench of the Bombay High Court in a case reported in I. L. R. 7 Bom. 341. The conclusion to which the Court came in that case may be stated to be that the jurisdiction conferred by section 622 of the Code is an extraordinary jurisdiction to be exercised only in extraordinary cases, and that the precise circumstances under which it is to be exercised is left to the discretion of the Court and cannot be defined.

The question has not yet come before a full bench of the Panjáb Chief Court. It is impossible to predict what the result of its being fully considered by that Court would be; and, having regard to its intimate connection with the working of the present Bill, we do not think the matter should be left in uncertainty.

41. The root of the difficulty which has sprung up in connection with the section appears to lie in that portion of the wording introduced into the Code by Act XII of 1879, which empowers the High Court to interfere on the ground that the Lower Court has acted "illegally." The Allahabad High Court has construed this as justifying the High Court's interference whenever the Court below has erred on a question of law, and it is on this point mainly that the Bombay Court has dissented from the Allahabad decision. The divergence of opinion will no doubt have eventually to be met by an amendment of the Code, but the matter is not very pressing, where, as in most parts of the country at present, the proportion of cases in which appeals to the High Court are barred is comparatively small and a tendency to resort recklessly to the section has not developed itself among litigants.

42. In the Panjáb, on the contrary, the question is already pressing, and will become more so if this Bill is passed. We are therefore compelled to deal with it separately for that province; and the conclusion to which we have come after the most careful consideration, and having regard to the special circumstances of the Province and the peculiar features of the appellate system now proposed, is that the extraordinary jurisdiction conferred by section 622 of the Code should be exerciseable only on the ground that the lower Court has exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, or has failed to exercise a jurisdiction so vested, or has acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity. We propose, therefore (section 70 of the Bill), to limit the scope of section 622 of the Code in this way, and we believe that when so limited it will still be sufficiently wide to cover all cases which call for the exercise of revisional as distinguished from appellate jurisdiction.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 2nd October, 1884:—

No. 14 of 1884.

A Bill to repeal the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883.

V of 1877. XXI of 1883.

WHEREAS it is expedient to repeal the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. The Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, is repealed. V of 1877.

2. For section 102 of the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, the following section shall be substituted:— XXI of 1883.

New section substituted for section 102 of Act XXI of 1883.

Power for Governor General in Council to exempt emigration to Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements from Act.

"102. On and from such a date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix in this behalf, a Native of India who departs by sea out of British India under an agreement to labour for hire in any protected Native State adjoining the Straits Settlements to which the notification refers shall not be deemed to emigrate within the meaning of this Act."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to repeal Act V of 1877 (the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877), which extends only to the Madras Presidency. It is dictated by the policy which recently led to the enactment of Act VII of 1883, (to repeal the British Burma Labour Law, 1876.) As in the case of Burma, it is found that there is a system of "free emigration" to the Straits which not only competes with, but altogether distances, the Government system for which Act V of 1877 provides. From the information before it, the Government of India is of opinion that that Act has impeded instead of promoting emigration, that labour flows as naturally to and from the Straits as it does between Burma and India, and that attempts to control its movement in British territory merely induce it to seek an outlet from the French ports of Pondicherry and Karikal. Such provisions as in the opinion of the Government are necessary for the protection and control of the Indian immigrant after his arrival in the Straits have been embodied in a revised Labour Regulation, which is now before the Straits legislature, and will, it is expected, shortly become law. Under these circumstances, the Government of India considers that emigration from India to the Straits should be uncontrolled by law in this country save as regards the requirements of the Native Passengers Ships Act.

2. The repeal of Act V of 1877 necessitates, however, an amendment of section 102 of Act XXI of 1883 (the Indian Emigration Act, 1883). The first sub-section of that section provides for the extension of Act V of 1877 to other parts of British India. As the Act is itself now being repealed, it is clear that this sub-section should be repealed also. The second and third sub-sections of that section give the Governor General in Council power by notification to include any of the protected Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements within the scope of any law relating to emigration to those Settlements, and exempt, on and from the date of any such notification, emigration to the protected State specified therein from the operation of Act XXI of 1883. Though there will no longer be any special law relating to emigration to the Straits, it is deemed desirable to retain the power, which these sub-sections confer, of exempting emigration to the protected States from Act XXI of 1883. A new section has therefore been substituted by section 2 of the Bill for section 102 of Act XXI of 1883 empowering the Governor General in Council to exempt emigration to the protected States from that Act whenever he considers such exemption to be desirable.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 25th September, 1884:—

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 289-1L., dated 9th September, 1884 [Paper No. 1].
Telegram from Chief Commissioner, British Burma, dated 15th September, 1884 [Paper No. 2].

WE, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

2. The following is an extract from the Chief Commissioner's telegram of the 15th instant:—

"Opinions received on Burma Gaming Bill induce me to urge following points:—

"First, we must make touts for ti punishable; so please, after word 'players' in section 4, insert words 'or who promotes the game by soliciting or collecting stakes or otherwise.'

"Second, I fear Courts may unduly restrict meaning of word 'place'; therefore, for first eight words in clause (2), section 3, please substitute words 'every place, whether enclosed or unenclosed.'

Thirdly, our 1st class Magistrates are few; therefore please add clause as follows:—

'The Local Government may specially authorize any Magistrate of the 2nd class to exercise the powers conferred by section 5 of Act III of 1867 on the Magistrate of the district.'

Fourthly, we want power to arrest touts in public places; therefore please add clause as follows:—

'A police-officer may apprehend without warrant any person soliciting or collecting stakes for ti or any other game of like nature in any public street, place or thoroughfare.'

"Fifthly, on advice of officers consulted, I agree that section 2 of Bill may be omitted."

3. We have adopted all these suggestions except the second; and, though the Chief Commissioner adds that he lays much stress on that suggestion, we do not think it would be possible to adopt it, at least in the shape in which he proposes it. It must be remembered that the Bill is not an independent measure, but is to be read with Act III of 1867; and, if the provisions of that Act relating to common gaming-houses be referred to, it will, we think, be found that some at least of them are such that if every "place," without any distinction or limitation whatever, was to be made a "common gaming-house," they could not fairly or reasonably be applied. It may indeed be doubted whether, apart from all consideration of the harshness which the proposed amendment would involve, some of those provisions could be applied to every "place" indiscriminately without giving rise to something approaching an absurdity.

4. We have, we need hardly say, considered whether it might not be desirable to give some extension to the definition of "common gaming-house" short of that proposed by the Chief Commissioner; but we think, having regard to English decisions on the provisions of Statutes worded in a manner somewhat similar to Act III of 1867 and the present Bill, that the definition is as wide as it is desirable to make it. We think we may reasonably count on its being held, with reference to those decisions, to include all places which are sufficiently analogous to a house, walled enclosure or room to admit of being reasonably and fairly treated as gambling-houses for the purposes of the Act.

5. It must be remembered that the question here involved has little or no importance in practice except in its bearing on the position of persons who are induced to take tickets in the ti; for the managers and their assistants will in all cases be subject to severe penalties under separate provisions, which are completely independent of the definition of common gaming-house; and, as regards mere ticket-holders, it appears to us that it is sufficient if they are punishable under the common gaming-house provisions of the Bill and the Act as they now stand, and under the 13th section of the Act for gambling in public. We have, however, amended the last-mentioned section so as to give it a somewhat wider range in British Burma than it has elsewhere.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Local Self-government in British Burma was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 25th September, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to Local Self-government in British Burma was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 678-8R.M., dated 27th September, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 1].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 88-8R.M., dated 4th October, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 2].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 348-8R.M., dated 17th October, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 3].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 537-8R.M., dated 27th December, 1883, and enclosure [Papers No. 4].
Office Memorandum from Home Department, No. 762, dated 9th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 5].
From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 481-1G.M., dated 17th June, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 6.

2. The Bill as now amended by us will be seen at a glance to differ considerably from the Bill as introduced. The difference is due chiefly to three causes.

3. In the first place, there has been a change in the main plan and scope of the measure. As explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, the original Bill was framed with a view to the inclusion within municipalities of adjoining rural areas. This course was taken, on the advice of the Local Government, in order to meet the requirements of certain rural tracts, until such time as it might be found possible to establish a system of local boards for rural districts.

From the papers since submitted, however, it appears that, upon fuller consideration, the weight of opinion is against the attempt to include in one municipality urban and rural tracts; and the Chief Commissioner now recommends that the Bill be confined, as we believe all the Municipal Acts on our Statute-book are, to urban tracts, the matter of local self-government in rural tracts being left to be dealt with separately hereafter.

In this recommendation we concur. The difficulty of framing the provisions of the Bill so as to fit in with conditions so essentially different as those of the towns and the adjoining tracts of country has turned out to be greater than was anticipated, and the call for the establishment of a system of local self-government in the rural tracts of British Burma is not so pressing as to justify our running the risk of passing an unsatisfactory measure for the sake of at once meeting it. We have accordingly reduced the Bill to the form of a Municipal Bill pure and simple.

4. Another difference between the original Bill and the present Bill is due to our having, at the request of the Chief Commissioner, adopted the course taken by the Select Committee on the Panjáb Municipal Bill of substituting for wide general powers to make rules detailed provisions regarding nuisances and other matters affecting the public health, safety and convenience. It is in this way that most of the new sections contained in Chapters VI and VII of the amended Bill are to be accounted for.

5. Lastly, the greater light thrown upon the needs of municipal government and on the difficulties likely to present themselves in the application of a Municipal Act by the prolonged discussions which took place in the Select Committee on the Panjáb Bill has led to numerous amendments in, or additions to, the Bill of minor importance. As examples we may refer to—

Section 27 (e) (distribution of executive powers and duties);

Section 28 (extraordinary powers of president and vice-president in case of emergency);

Sections 44 and 88 (powers to impose a scavenging-tax and to undertake the scavenging of private premises);

Sections 51-57 (special rules applicable to taxation of immoveable property);

Sections 60 and 61 (constitution and application of the municipal fund);

Sections 65-67 (provisions relating to municipal property);

Section 138 (settlement of disputes);

Sections 151-153 (relating to notices); and

Section 158 (which confers a power to exempt a municipality from any provisions of the Act which appear unsuitable to it).

This last section, we may observe, is specially necessary in view of the numerous and somewhat elaborate provisions now contained in Chapters VI and VII, some of which would probably be unsuitable in small municipalities.

6. We have now to notice such of the more important alterations of the Bill as are not accounted for by the foregoing remarks, or as otherwise seem to call for explanation.

7. Section 12 of the original Bill, which required a member of the municipal body to vacate his seat when appointed to a salaried municipal office, and section 29, which provided for the payment of fees to members for attendance at meetings, have been omitted; the former because it is not thought advisable that any person while a member of a committee should be appointed to a salaried office under the committee, and the latter because a municipal area can now comprise only a town and its immediate suburbs, and the members of the committee, being residents of that area and not having to travel any distance to the meetings, may reasonably be expected to give their services gratuitously.

8. We have, following the course taken in the Panjáb Bill, limited the rates to be imposed for water, lighting and scavenging only by providing (in effect) that they shall not exceed what is requisite to defray the cost of the services for which they are levied; and we have, as in the Panjáb Bill, provided that the proceeds of these rates shall be carried to the one municipal fund, separate accounts only being kept, instead of constituting separate funds.

9. We have substituted for section 47 of the original Bill, which required a municipal committee to make grants-in-aid to schools in accordance with such rules as the Government might make, a section (62) specifically appropriating to educational purposes the income for schools and all sums acquired by the committee in trust for educational purposes, and further requiring the assignment for educational purposes from the general municipal revenues of such sum annually, not being more than 5 per cent. of the gross annual income of the municipality, as the Local Government may fix.

This section has been suggested by the Chief Commissioner with the view of meeting practical difficulties which have occurred in British Burma, and is, in his opinion, indispensable for the purpose of carrying out the educational policy which has recently been established in that province, and under which the municipalities, whilst relieved of police-charges, have been required to provide for the maintenance of local schools. It will be observed that the section, while it compels the committee to devote a certain minimum of its funds to educational purposes, imposes no such restriction as might have been imposed under the original section as regards the particular objects on which the money shall be spent.

10. The Chief Commissioner has in an unofficial communication proposed certain modifications in and additions to the new provisions introduced from the Panjáb Bill in Chapters VI and VII. Most of these are of minor importance, and we have in general adopted them, omitting only such as appeared to us superfluous or unnecessarily stringent. In one instance we, however, have found it necessary to omit a section of considerable importance proposed by the Chief Commissioner, namely, a section similar to section 14 of Act XLVIII of 1860 giving a certain power of control over brothels and other disorderly houses; but that section we have omitted merely because we think the matter is one to be dealt with by the Magistrates and police rather than by a municipal committee.

11. The only other point which appears to call for notice in connection with this portion of the Bill is that we have substituted two sections (126 and 127) based on similar sections in the Public Health Act, 1875, for a section proposed by the Chief Commissioner, to guard against the spread of infectious diseases through the medium of public conveyances.

12. Sections 49 to 51 of the original Bill provided for the exercise by a municipal committee or its members of certain magisterial powers in nuisance cases. We have omitted these sections for the same reasons that have led to the omission of the corresponding sections of other Municipal Bills recently before the Council, namely, that a section like section 49 could have little practical effect, and that it is not desirable that the powers given by the other two sections should be conferred.

13. We have not thought it advisable to adopt a proposal made by the Chief Commissioner that the Local Government should be empowered to invest municipal officers with the powers of police-officers for the purposes of section 34 of the Police Act (V of 1861).

14. We have added a clause to section 133 providing that the powers of control over municipalities, conferred by that section on the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioners, shall, in the case of the municipalities of Rangoon, Moulmein, Akyab and Bassein, be exercised not by those officers but by the Local Government.

15. Lastly, we have to state that we have considered a proposal of the Chief Commissioner to the effect that the appropriation provisions of the Bill should be modified in such a manner as to admit of a municipal committee subscribing to a public band or contributing to fireworks or the like on great occasions. We have not adopted this proposal, because the objects in question appear to us to lie beyond the sphere of the purposes for which municipal taxation is raised in this country.

2. We have rearranged the provisions of the Bill in a manner which we trust will make them more readily intelligible; and in the following remarks we shall as far as possible take the sections in their new order.

CHAPTER II.

THE CHIEF COURT.

3. It will be observed that under the proviso to section 8, sub-section (1), a single Judge of the Chief Court is prohibited from revising or modifying any proceeding of a lower Court except an "order" within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure. The restriction thus imposed does not, we believe, differ to any important extent from that contained in the corresponding provision (section 21, proviso) of the original Bill, and it relieves us of the necessity of using the phrase "interlocutory order," to which some difficulty attached.

4. We have also modified the last sub-section of section 8 by placing in the hands of the Senior Judge the power of determining which Judges of the Chief Court shall sit alone and which shall constitute benches, instead of leaving the power to be delegated by the Court to such Judge as it might think fit.

5. We have in section 14 added to the matters in respect of which the Chief Court is empowered to make rules—

(1) the translation of papers filed in the Chief Court and copying or printing any such papers or translations, and the payment by parties of the expenses thereby incurred; and

(2) the procedure in cases where a person is entitled to inspect a record of any Court or obtain a copy of it, and the fees payable for searches and copies.

We believe that these matters have long been dealt with by the Chief Court at its discretion, and we think it well that the power to deal with them should be placed on a legal basis.

CHAPTER III.

THE SUBORDINATE CIVIL COURTS.

6. The enumeration of the subordinate Civil Courts in section 17* differs from that in section 4 of the original Bill, but the substantive changes involved are smaller than might at first sight be supposed.

* (a) The Divisional Court.
(b) The Court of the District Judge.
(c) The Court of the Subordinate Judge.
(d) The Court of the Munsif.

The Divisional Court corresponds, with certain modifications, which we shall presently have to notice, to the Divisional Court of the original Bill.

7. The District Judge corresponds to the Assistant Judge of the original Bill, but his position as controlling the administration of civil justice in the district in somewhat the same manner as the District Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code controls the administration of criminal justice is more clearly brought out; and (section 23) his Court is, subject to certain exceptions, made the District Court for the purposes of those Acts which confer special powers on a District Court.

8. The Subordinate Judge corresponds to the Subordinate Judge of the first class of the original Bill, but we have, instead of fixing a pecuniary limit to his jurisdiction as in section 36 of the original Bill, empowered the Local Government to do so (section 26). It will thus be in the power of the Local Government to limit the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge to any sum it thinks fit, or to confer upon him the unlimited jurisdiction exercised by a District Judge in original suits.

9. The Munsif of the amended Bill is intended to comprise the second, third and fourth classes of Subordinate Judges of the original Bill, and his powers in original suits have been dealt with in a manner similar to that just described; that is to say, it is left (section 26) to the Chief Court to invest each Munsif with such powers as it thinks fit, provided that the limit of value does not exceed Rs. 1,000, which was the limit for Subordinate Judges of the second class under section 36 of the original Bill.

10. It will be observed that section 19 introduces an important change as regards the constitution of the Divisional Court; but as that change will be more conveniently explained when we come to speak of the appellate jurisdictions, it only remains to notice here that we have in the proviso to section 21 put the restriction on the powers of one of several Judges of a Divisional Court sitting alone on the same footing as the similar restriction in the case of the Chief Court (supra, paragraph 3).

11. We have inserted a new section (29), similar to section 27 of the Bengal Courts Act, providing for the transfer to a Subordinate Judge or Munsif of business under Act XXVII of 1860, Act XL of 1858 and Act IX of 1861.

12. In the section (now 30) which empowers the Local Government to confer the powers of a Small Cause Court Judge on certain judicial officers, we have, as in other cases, omitted all minute specification of pecuniary limits, and simply provided that the Local Government may confer such powers as it thinks fit within the limit of Rs. 500.

13. In dealing with a Bill of this description it is impossible to overlook the difficulties which present themselves in connection with the valuation of certain classes of suits for the purpose of determining the original jurisdiction and the course of appeal. The question of the simplest mode of valuing suits for the recovery of land is at present under the consideration of the Government of India, and we have not accordingly felt ourselves called upon to take it up; but there are certain other classes of suits which in the absence of any special provision for their valuation would be left in a very unsatisfactory position, namely, suits the subject of which does not admit of valuation on any intelligible basis. Such suits are usually valued at some low figure, and consequently may be heard without any reference to their importance or difficulty by Courts of the inferior grades. The necessity for making some special provision for them on the present occasion is the greater, inasmuch as, under the present Bill, the course of appeal will depend to a greater extent than before on the valuation.

We have accordingly introduced a new section (32) providing that, where the subject-matter of suits of any class is such that in the opinion of the Chief Court it does not admit of being satisfactorily valued, the Chief Court may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, direct that such suits shall be treated as if the subject-matter were of such value as the Chief Court thinks fit to specify in this behalf.

14. The only other provision of this chapter which appears to call for notice is section 36. As we have explained, it is intended that the District Judge should have the general control of the administration of civil justice throughout his district; but there may be cases, as e.g., that of Kulu, in which it would be convenient to delegate this control to a Subordinate Judge in some outlying portion of the district in somewhat the same way as certain powers of a District Magistrate are delegated to a Sub-divisional Officer under the Code of Criminal Procedure; and accordingly a power to effect such a delegation has been taken.

CHAPTER IV.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION IN CIVIL CASES.

15. We have omitted the words in the opening section of this chapter which conferred a power to place other classes of suits on the same footing as mufassal small causes for the purposes of appeal, the object in view being now sufficiently met by the new definition of "small cause" (in section 3), which gives power to place small causes within the meaning of the Presidency-towns Small Cause Courts Act on the same footing as mufassal small causes.

16. We have, moreover, restricted this section, as we have the entire chapter, to appeals from decrees as distinguished from orders, the latter being sufficiently provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure.

17. The subject of further appeals, which is dealt with in the following section, is one which has given rise to much discussion, and which is surrounded on all sides with difficulties of a serious nature. We have given to it the most careful and prolonged consideration, and have come to the conclusion that the right of further appeal allowed by the Bill as introduced must be extended in some important particulars.

The Bill as introduced allowed a further appeal from the appellate decree of a Divisional Bench only in two cases, namely, if the Judges differed or if some question of law or custom or of general interest was involved; and in these cases it did not allow the appeal as a matter of right, but only if both Judges, or when one had left the Court, the remaining one, certified that the case was of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal. Under the Bill as now amended a further appeal will lie as a matter of right and without any certificate from a Divisional Bench in all cases where the Judges differ. There will, moreover, be a further appeal in all cases in which any one Judge certifies that there is a question of law or custom or general interest involved, and that the case is in his opinion of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal. And, lastly, there will be a further appeal in cases of a class altogether new and not contemplated in the original Bill, namely, where the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 500.

The proviso barring a further appeal in small causes when the value does not exceed Rs. 500 is retained.

18. We have, as already indicated, made another alteration which is of considerable importance, and which it is convenient to notice here.

The Bill as introduced required that the Divisional Courts should consist in all instances of at least two Judges, that except as expressly provided no decision should be reversed except by a bench of two Judges, and that the restrictions on further appeal which we have described should apply to all Divisional Courts. To that objection was taken on the ground that there may be a difficulty in finding in the Panjáb a sufficient number of competent officers to furnish two Judges for each of the Divisional Courts proposed. We need hardly say that if the objection were well-founded it would be a serious one, inasmuch as the strict limitations on the right of further appeal to the Chief Court imposed by the original Bill were framed in reliance on the strength of the Divisional Benches; and though those limitations have now been relaxed in the important particulars already described, the Bill still proceeds on the assumption that a Divisional Bench will be a stronger, more reliable and more satisfactory tribunal than the Court of a Commissioner ordinarily now is.

19. It is of course impossible for us to say whether the precise number of competent officers required to constitute Benches in all the proposed Divisions is to be found in the Panjáb at this moment, but we understand that the Lieutenant-Governor has no misgivings on the point, and we think it may be safely affirmed that the difficulty of procuring a sufficient number of competent officers for the Benches has been much exaggerated.

In order, however, to guard against every possibility of miscarriage, we have now modified the Bill in such a way that, if the Lieutenant-Governor finds, at any time, that the materials required for establishing a Bench in any particular Division are not immediately available, he can make the Divisional Court there consist of a single Judge (section 19), and in the event of his doing so a further appeal will, subject only to the proviso as to small causes contained in section 40, lie from that Judge's appellate decrees precisely as they lie at present from the appellate decrees of a Commissioner [section 40, clause (b)].

CHAPTER V.

REVENUE COURTS.

20. We have recast this chapter, assimilating it in form and arrangement to the portion of the Bill relating to Civil Courts, and supplying certain omissions in details, as, e. g., provisions relating to ministerial officers, which it seems unnecessary to notice more particularly.

21. We have omitted from the list of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts given in the first section the so-called suits under section 40 of the Panjáb Tenancy Act, inasmuch as we find on reference to that Act that the proceedings in question are not suits but applications, and we think that the proper mode of dealing with them is to include them among the applications to be heard on the revenue side which are specified in section 42 of that Act, and from which they were apparently omitted by an oversight. We have accordingly added a section (75) to the Bill amending section 42 of the Tenancy Act so as to include them.

22. We have added to the list of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts "suits to determine disputes regarding boundaries of land" (i.e., of agricultural land) "which have been fixed by a Court or Revenue-officer." This addition has been advocated by several of the authorities consulted, and it appears to us to be a proper one, seeing that all that is ordinarily required for the decision of such disputes is the laying down on the ground of a boundary which is to be found in a map.

23. On the other hand, we have appended to the section a proviso which empowers the Local Government, after consulting the Chief Court, to retransfer to the Civil Courts the jurisdiction in any class of revenue cases cognizable in any part of the country where it appears desirable to do so.

24. We have for convenience sake divided the classes of suits into two groups, and at the instance of the Local Government included class (d), suits for ejectment of a tenant, in the group containing suits deemed to be of greater importance or difficulty.

25. We have in defining the powers of Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs [section 46 (2)], following the same course as in the provisions relating to original civil jurisdiction, omitted all minute specification of pecuniary limits, and left it to the Local Government to fix those limits as it thinks fit.

26. We have for the same reason as in the preceding chapter omitted all reference to appeals from orders.

27. We have introduced a clause in the proviso to section 47, based on similar provisions in the Rent Laws of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces, giving power to bar appeals from decrees of certain classes of officers in money-suits when the amount involved does not exceed Rs. 100 and no question of importance, such as a question of title, is involved.

28. We have added a section (51) empowering the Local Government to confer on any person the judicial powers, original or appellate, of a Financial Commissioner, Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner under this chapter.

29. We have, in order further to provide a means of relieving the Revenue Courts of the necessity of disposing of particular matters which may be found to be more proper for consideration by the Civil Courts, introduced two new sections (54 and 55).

The first of these is copied with certain modifications from section 208A of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, and is intended to take the place of section 40 of the original Bill, which has been the subject of adverse criticism. It empowers a Revenue Court, when it considers that any question in issue before it is more proper for decision by a Civil Court, to require any party to institute a suit in the Civil Court with a view to obtaining a decision on the question. If he fails to comply with the requisition, the Revenue Court is empowered to decide the question against him, but is not bound to do so, as under the corresponding provision of the North-Western Provinces Act. If the party institutes the suit in the Civil Court, the Revenue Court will follow the decision of that Court.

30. It has been suggested that any provision of this sort is superfluous, inasmuch as a Revenue Court being a Court of limited jurisdiction, and its decision in one case being accordingly, under section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, binding in other cases only to a limited extent, it may safely be compelled to decide all questions arising incidentally in any suit before it, even though they may be questions which would be obviously more proper for the consideration of a Civil Court.

To this view of the matter we are unable to assent.

31. It is undoubtedly true that in many cases, probably in the great majority of cases, it is best for all parties that the Revenue Court should take upon itself to decide all questions incidentally arising in the suit, even though some of them might be of a nature more proper for the consideration of a Civil Court. This would clearly be the right course for the Revenue Court to take when the question is a simple one and can be quickly disposed of, or when it is one not likely to arise subsequently between the parties in any other connection; but it seems equally clear that when, as must occasionally happen, some complicated and difficult question arises in a revenue-suit, and is certain to arise again between the parties unless it is finally settled, a Revenue Court ought to be allowed some discretion of the sort proposed. For, if some such discretion is not allowed, what must be the result? The question must be tried out at a great expenditure of time and money to all concerned by the Revenue Court, which ex hypothesi is not the best Court to try it. It may then go in appeal to the higher Revenue Courts, probably in the last resort to the Financial Commissioner, and, after all, as the decision obtained will not be binding except for certain limited purposes, the whole litigation may commence de novo and run a similar course through the Civil Courts.

It is in order to provide a means of avoiding scandals of this sort that we have introduced the section in question.

32. We are quite aware that the power it confers might be abused by an indolent Revenue-officer if he were free to resort to it at pleasure, but we have guarded against this by making the sanction of the immediately superior Court a condition precedent to its exercise.

33. Section 55, to which there is nothing corresponding in the original Bill, empowers the Financial Commissioner to refer to the Chief Court a point of law which he considers that Court is more competent to decide.

34. We trust that these two sections and the proviso which we have appended to section 45 (see supra, paragraph 23) will suffice to remove the apprehensions which have been expressed in some quarters that the Bill may force upon the Revenue Courts duties which they will be incompetent to discharge.

CHAPTER VII.

SUPPLEMENTAL PROVISIONS.

35. We have omitted section 63 of the original Bill, which provided for consultations between the two Financial Commissioners, as it is unnecessary to provide for such a matter by legislative enactment and the proposal to do so gave rise to some misapprehension.

36. We have likewise omitted section 66 of the original Bill, which expressly prohibited a judicial officer from disposing of a case in which he might appear to be interested. We are aware that such provisions have long found a place in our Courts Acts, but we think the matter is one on which legislation may well be dispensed with, the general principles applicable to it being perfectly well understood.

37. Section 68 of the original Bill, which reproduced section 48 of the present Panjáb Courts Act, gave power to the Government to appoint a single Judge to exercise the Chief Court's superintending functions. This power has never been exercised, and we are informed that the Government have no desire to retain it. We have accordingly omitted the section.

38. Sections 73 and 74 of the original Bill, which provide for the enhancement of the court-fees upon applications to the Chief Court for revision under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, were introduced with a view to discouraging such applications. We fully approve of their provisions and have retained them in the revised Bill. From statistics put before us by our hon'ble colleague Mr. Barkley it appears that such applications have of late been increasing to a formidable extent in the Panjáb; and, as observed by him when he asked for leave to introduce the Bill, they are certain to increase with greater rapidity if the provisions of the Bill, which give greater finality to the decisions of the Lower Appellate Courts, become law. Moreover, from the circumstance that only about one-sixth of the applications now made to the Chief Court are successful, it may be gathered that Panjáb litigants when debarred from appealing are tempted to incur the serious trouble and expense involved in making such applications, even where there may not be the slightest prospect of success. This appears to us to be a serious evil, and the only question has been whether the increase of the court-fee proposed in the original Bill would be enough to check it. The better opinion appears to us to be that it would have but a slight effect in that direction, and that nothing short of an alteration of section 622 of the Code as applied to the Panjáb will suffice.

39. We find that a considerable divergence of opinion has arisen between some of the highest Courts in the country as to the nature of the grounds required to support an application under that section. A full bench of the Allahabad High Court has held (I. L. R. 3 All. 203) that any grounds on which a second appeal would lie are sufficient. The practical result of this, as admitted by two of the learned Judges, is that section 622 of the Code gives a second appeal in all those cases in which the earlier sections of the Code expressly deny it. It may, no doubt, be said that the Court has a discretion under section 622 to interfere or not as it thinks fit, but we apprehend that as a rule a High Court holding the opinion just referred to, and finding what would be a good ground for special appeal made out, would be in practically the same position as if it were considering a special appeal under section 551.

40. A view which is probably more in accordance with that of those who framed the section was taken by a full bench of the Bombay High Court in a case reported in I. L. R. 7 Bom. 341. The conclusion to which the Court came in that case may be stated to be that the jurisdiction conferred by section 622 of the Code is an extraordinary jurisdiction to be exercised only in extraordinary cases, and that the precise circumstances under which it is to be exercised is left to the discretion of the Court and cannot be defined.

The question has not yet come before a full bench of the Panjáb Chief Court. It is impossible to predict what the result of its being fully considered by that Court would be; and, having regard to its intimate connection with the working of the present Bill, we do not think the matter should be left in uncertainty.

41. The root of the difficulty which has sprung up in connection with the section appears to lie in that portion of the wording introduced into the Code by Act XII of 1879, which empowers the High Court to interfere on the ground that the Lower Court has acted "illegally." The Allahabad High Court has construed this as justifying the High Court's interference whenever the Court below has erred on a question of law, and it is on this point mainly that the Bombay Court has dissented from the Allahabad decision. The divergence of opinion will no doubt have eventually to be met by an amendment of the Code, but the matter is not very pressing, where, as in most parts of the country at present, the proportion of cases in which appeals to the High Court are barred is comparatively small and a tendency to resort recklessly to the section has not developed itself among litigants.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 2nd October, 1884 :—

No. 14 of 1884.

A Bill to repeal the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883.

V of 1877. XXI of 1883.

WHEREAS it is expedient to repeal the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. The Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877, is repealed. V of 1877.

2. For section 102 of the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, the following section shall be substituted :— XXI of 1883.

New section substituted for section 102 of Act XXI of 1883.

"102. On and from such a date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix in this behalf, a Native of India who departs by sea out of British India under an agreement to labour for hire in any protected Native State adjoining the Straits Settlements to which the notification refers shall not be deemed to emigrate within the meaning of this Act."

Power for Governor General in Council to exempt emigration to Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements from Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to repeal Act V of 1877 (the Straits Settlements Emigration Act, 1877), which extends only to the Madras Presidency. It is dictated by the policy which recently led to the enactment of Act VII of 1883, (to repeal the British Burma Labour Law, 1876.) As in the case of Burma, it is found that there is a system of "free emigration" to the Straits which not only competes with, but altogether distances, the Government system for which Act V of 1877 provides. From the information before it, the Government of India is of opinion that that Act has impeded instead of promoting emigration, that labour flows as naturally to and from the Straits as it does between Burma and India, and that attempts to control its movement in British territory merely induce it to seek an outlet from the French ports of Pondicherry and Karikal. Such provisions as in the opinion of the Government are necessary for the protection and control of the Indian immigrant after his arrival in the Straits have been embodied in a revised Labour Regulation, which is now before the Straits legislature, and will, it is expected, shortly become law. Under these circumstances, the Government of India considers that emigration from India to the Straits should be uncontrolled by law in this country save as regards the requirements of the Native Passengers Ships Act.

2. The repeal of Act V of 1877 necessitates, however, an amendment of section 102 of Act XXI of 1883 (the Indian Emigration Act, 1883). The first sub-section of that section provides for the extension of Act V of 1877 to other parts of British India. As the Act is itself now being repealed, it is clear that this sub-section should be repealed also. The second and third sub-sections of that section give the Governor General in Council power by notification to include any of the protected Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements within the scope of any law relating to emigration to those Settlements, and exempt, on and from the date of any such notification, emigration to the protected State specified therein from the operation of Act XXI of 1883. Though there will no longer be any special law relating to emigration to the Straits, it is deemed desirable to retain the power, which these sub-sections confer, of exempting emigration to the protected States from Act XXI of 1883. A new section has therefore been substituted by section 2 of the Bill for section 102 of Act XXI of 1883 empowering the Governor General in Council to exempt emigration to the protected States from that Act whenever he considers such exemption to be desirable.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 25th September, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 289-1L., dated 9th September, 1884 [Paper No. 1].
Telegram from Chief Commissioner, British Burma, dated 15th September, 1884 [Paper No. 2].

2. The following is an extract from the Chief Commissioner's telegram of the 15th instant:—

"Opinions received on Burma Gaming Bill induce me to urge following points:—

"First, we must make touts for ti punishable; so please, after word 'players' in [illegible]

"Second, I fear Courts may unduly restrict meaning of word 'place'; therefore, for first eight words in clause (2), section 3, please substitute words 'every place, whether enclosed or unenclosed.'

Thirdly, our 1st class Magistrates are few; therefore please add clause as follows:—

'The Local Government may specially authorize any Magistrate of the 2nd class to exercise the powers conferred by section 5 of Act III of 1867 on the Magistrate of the district.'

Fourthly, we want power to arrest touts in public places; therefore please add clause as follows:—

'A police-officer may apprehend without warrant any person soliciting or collecting stakes for ti or any other game of like nature in any public street, place or thoroughfare.'

"Fifthly, on advice of officers consulted, I agree that section 2 of Bill may be omitted."

3. We have adopted all these suggestions except the second; and, though the Chief Commissioner adds that he lays much stress on that suggestion, we do not think it would be possible to adopt it, at least in the shape in which he proposes it. It must be remembered that the Bill is not an independent measure, but is to be read with Act III of 1867; and, if the provisions of that Act relating to common gaming-houses be referred to, it will, we think, be found that some at least of them are such that if every "place," without any distinction or limitation whatever, was to be made a "common gaming-house," they could not fairly or reasonably be applied. It may indeed be doubted whether, apart from all consideration of the harshness which the proposed amendment would involve, some of those provisions could be applied to every "place" indiscriminately without giving rise to something approaching an absurdity.

4. We have, we need hardly say, considered whether it might not be desirable to give some extension to the definition of "common gaming-house" short of that proposed by the Chief Commissioner; but we think, having regard to English decisions on the provisions of Statutes worded in a manner somewhat similar to Act III of 1867 and the present Bill, that the definition is as wide as it is desirable to make it. We think we may reasonably count on its being held, with reference to those decisions, to include all places which are sufficiently analogous to a house, walled enclosure or room to admit of being reasonably and fairly treated as gambling-houses for the purposes of the Act.

5. It must be remembered that the question here involved has little or no importance in practice except in its bearing on the position of persons who are induced to take tickets in the ti; for the managers and their assistants will in all cases be subject to severe penalties under separate provisions, which are completely independent of the definition of common gaming-house; and, as regards mere ticket-holders, it appears to us that it is sufficient if they are punishable under the common gaming-house provisions of the Bill and the Act as they now stand, and under the 13th section of the Act for gambling in public. We have, however, amended the last-mentioned section so as to give it a somewhat wider range in British Burma than it has elsewhere.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Local Self-government in British Burma was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 25th September, 1884:—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to Local Self-government in British Burma was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 678-8R.M., dated 27th September, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 1].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 88-8R.M., dated 4th October, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 2].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 348-8R.M., dated 17th October, 1883, and enclosures [Papers No. 3].
From Officiating Junior Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 537-8R.M., dated 27th December, 1883, and enclosure [Papers No. 4].
Office Memorandum from Home Department, No. 762, dated 9th May, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 5].
From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 481-1G.M., dated 17th June, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 6].

2. The Bill as now amended [illegible] at a glance to differ considerably from the Bill as introduced. The difference is chiefly to three points.

3. In the first place, there has been a change in the main plan and scope of the measure. As explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, the original Bill was framed with a view to the inclusion within municipalities of adjoining rural areas. This course was taken, on the advice of the Local Government, in order to meet the requirements of certain rural tracts, until such time as it might be found possible to establish a system of local boards for rural districts.

From the papers since submitted, however, it appears that, upon fuller consideration, the weight of opinion is against the attempt to include in one municipality urban and rural tracts; and the Chief Commissioner now recommends that the Bill be confined, as we believe all the Municipal Acts on our Statute-book are, to urban tracts, the matter of local self-government in rural tracts being left to be dealt with separately hereafter.

In this recommendation we concur. The difficulty of framing the provisions of the Bill so as to fit in with conditions so essentially different as those of the towns and the adjoining tracts of country has turned out to be greater than was anticipated, and the call for the establishment of a system of local self-government in the rural tracts of British Burma is not so pressing as to justify our running the risk of passing an unsatisfactory measure for the sake of at once meeting it. We have accordingly reduced the Bill to the form of a Municipal Bill pure and simple.

4. Another difference between the original Bill and the present Bill is due to our having, at the request of the Chief Commissioner, adopted the course taken by the Select Committee on the Panjáb Municipal Bill of substituting for wide general powers to make rules detailed provisions regarding nuisances and other matters affecting the public health, safety and convenience. It is in this way that most of the new sections contained in Chapters VI and VII of the amended Bill are to be accounted for.

5. Lastly, the greater light thrown upon the needs of municipal government and on the difficulties likely to present themselves in the application of a Municipal Act by the prolonged discussions which took place in the Select Committee on the Panjáb Bill has led to numerous amendments in, or additions to, the Bill of minor importance. As examples we may refer to—

Section 27 (e) (distribution of executive powers and duties);

Section 28 (extraordinary powers of president and vice-president in case of emergency);

Sections 44 and 88 (powers to impose a scavenging-tax and to undertake the scavenging of private premises);

Sections 51-57 (special rules applicable to taxation of immoveable property);

Sections 60 and 61 (constitution and application of the municipal fund);

Sections 65-67 (provisions relating to municipal property);

Section 138 (settlement of disputes);

Sections 151-153 (relating to notices); and

Section 158 (which confers a power to exempt a municipality from any provisions of the Act which appear unsuitable to it).

This last section, we may observe, is specially necessary in view of the numerous and somewhat elaborate provisions now contained in Chapters VI and VII, some of which would probably be unsuitable in small municipalities.

6. We have now to notice such of the more important alterations of the Bill as are not accounted for by the foregoing remarks, or as otherwise seem to call for explanation.

7. Section 12 of the original Bill, which required a member of the municipal body to vacate his seat when appointed to a salaried municipal office, and section 29, which provided for the payment of fees to members for attendance at meetings, have been omitted; the former because it is not thought advisable that any person while a member of a committee should be appointed to a salaried office under the committee, and the latter because a municipal area can now comprise only a town and its immediate suburbs, and the members of the committee, being residents of that area and not having to travel any distance to the meetings, may reasonably be expected to give their services gratuitously.

8. We have, following the course taken in the Panjáb Bill, limited the rates to be imposed for water, lighting and scavenging only by providing (in effect) that they shall not exceed what is requisite to defray the cost of the services for which they are levied; and we have, as in the Panjáb Bill, provided that the proceeds of these rates shall be carried to the one municipal fund, separate accounts only being kept, instead of constituting separate funds.

9. We have substituted for section 47 of the original Bill, which required a municipal committee to make grants-in-aid to schools in accordance with such rules as the Government might make, a section (62) specifically appropriating to educational purposes the income for schools and all sums acquired by the committee in trust for educational purposes, and further requiring the assignment for educational purposes from the general municipal revenues of such sum annually, not being more than 5 per cent. of the gross annual income of the municipality, as the Local Government may fix.

This section has been suggested by the Chief Commissioner with the view of meeting practical difficulties which have occurred in British Burma, and is, in his opinion, indispensable for the purpose of carrying out the educational policy which has recently been established in that province, and under which the municipalities, whilst relieved of police-charges, have been required to provide for the maintenance of local schools. It will be observed that the section, while it compels the committee to devote a certain minimum of its funds to educational purposes, imposes no such restriction as might have been imposed under the original section as regards the particular objects on which the money shall be spent.

10. The Chief Commissioner has in an unofficial communication proposed certain modifications in and additions to the new provisions introduced from the Panjáb Bill in Chapters VI and VII. Most of these are of minor importance, and we have in general adopted them, omitting only such as appeared to us superfluous or unnecessarily stringent. In one instance we, however, have found it necessary to omit a section of considerable importance proposed by the Chief Commissioner, namely, a section similar to section 14 of Act XLVIII of 1860 giving a certain power of control over brothels and other disorderly houses; but that section we have omitted merely because we think the matter is one to be dealt with by the Magistrates and police rather than by a municipal committee.

11. The only other point which appears to call for notice in connection with this portion of the Bill is that we have substituted two sections (126 and 127) based on similar sections in the Public Health Act, 1875, for a section proposed by the Chief Commissioner, to guard against the spread of infectious diseases through the medium of public conveyances.

12. Sections 49 to 51 of the original Bill provided for the exercise by a municipal committee or its members of certain magisterial powers in nuisance cases. We have omitted these sections for the same reasons that have led to the omission of the corresponding sections of other Municipal Bills recently before the Council, namely, that a section like section 49 could have little practical effect, and that it is not desirable that the powers given by the other two sections should be conferred.

13. We have not thought it advisable to adopt a proposal made by the Chief Commissioner that the Local Government should be empowered to invest municipal officers with the powers of police-officers for the purposes of section 34 of the Police Act (V of 1861).

14. We have added a clause to section 133 providing that the powers of control over municipalities, conferred by that section on the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioners, shall, in the case of the municipalities of Rangoon, Moulmein, Akyab and Bassein, be exercised not by those officers but by the Local Government.

15. Lastly, we have to state that we have considered a proposal of the Chief Commissioner to the effect that the appropriation provisions of the Bill should be modified in such a manner as to admit of a municipal committee subscribing to a public band or contributing to fireworks or the like on great occasions. We have not adopted this proposal, because the objects in question appear to us to lie beyond the sphere of the purposes for which municipal taxation is raised in this country.

2. We have rearranged the provisions of the Bill in a manner which we trust will make them more readily intelligible; and in the following remarks we shall as far as possible take the sections in their new order.

CHAPTER II.

THE CHIEF COURT.

3. It will be observed that under the proviso to section 8, sub-section (1), a single Judge of the Chief Court is prohibited from revising or modifying any proceeding of a lower Court except an "order" within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure. The restriction thus imposed does not, we believe, differ to any important extent from that contained in the corresponding provision (section 21, proviso) of the original Bill, and it relieves us of the necessity of using the phrase "interlocutory order," to which some difficulty attached.

4. We have also modified the last sub-section of section 8 by placing in the hands of the Senior Judge the power of determining which Judges of the Chief Court shall sit alone and which shall constitute benches, instead of leaving the power to be delegated by the Court to such Judge as it might think fit.

5. We have in section 14 added to the matters in respect of which the Chief Court is empowered to make rules—

(1) the translation of papers filed in the Chief Court and copying or printing any such papers or translations, and the payment by parties of the expenses thereby incurred; and

(2) the procedure in cases where a person is entitled to inspect a record of any Court or obtain a copy of it, and the fees payable for searches and copies.

We believe that these matters have long been dealt with by the Chief Court at its discretion, and we think it well that the power to deal with them should be placed on a legal basis.

CHAPTER III.

THE SUBORDINATE CIVIL COURTS.

6. The enumeration of the subordinate Civil Courts in section 17* differs from that in section 4 of the original Bill, but the substantive changes involved are smaller than might at first sight be supposed.

* (a) The Divisional Court.
(b) The Court of the District Judge.
(c) The Court of the Subordinate Judge.
(d) The Court of the Munsif.

The Divisional Court corresponds, with certain modifications, which we shall presently have to notice, to the Divisional Court of the original Bill.

7. The District Judge corresponds to the Assistant Judge of the original Bill, but his position as controlling the administration of civil justice in the district in somewhat the same manner as the District Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code controls the administration of criminal justice is more clearly brought out; and (section 23) his Court is, subject to certain exceptions, made the District Court for the purposes of those Acts which confer special powers on a District Court.

8. The Subordinate Judge corresponds to the Subordinate Judge of the first class of the original Bill, but we have, instead of fixing a pecuniary limit to his jurisdiction as in section 36 of the original Bill, empowered the Local Government to do so (section 26). It will thus be in the power of the Local Government to limit the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge to any sum it thinks fit, or to confer upon him the unlimited jurisdiction exercised by a District Judge in original suits.

9. The Munsif of the amended Bill is intended to comprise the second, third and fourth classes of Subordinate Judges of the original Bill, and his powers in original suits have been dealt with in a manner similar to that just described; that is to say, it is left (section 26) to the Chief Court to invest each Munsif with such powers as it thinks fit, provided that the limit of value does not exceed Rs. 1,000, which was the limit for Subordinate Judges of the second class under section 36 of the original Bill.

10. It will be observed that section 19 introduces an important change as regards the constitution of the Divisional Court; but as that change will be more conveniently explained when we come to speak of the appellate jurisdictions, it only remains to notice here that we have in the proviso to section 21 put the restriction on the powers of one of several Judges of a Divisional Court sitting alone on the same footing as the similar restriction in the case of the Chief Court (supra, paragraph 3).

11. We have inserted a new section (29), similar to section 37 of the Bengal Courts Act, providing for the transfer to a Subordinate Judge or Munsif of business under Act XXVII of 1860, Act XL of 1858 and Act IX of 1861.

12. In the section (now 30) which empowers the Local Government to confer the powers of a Small Cause Court Judge on certain judicial officers, we have, as in other cases, omitted all minute specification of pecuniary limits, and simply provided that the Local Government may confer such powers as it thinks fit within the limit of Rs. 500.

13. In dealing with a Bill of this description it is impossible to overlook the difficulties which present themselves in connection with the valuation of certain classes of suits for the purpose of determining the original jurisdiction and the course of appeal. The question of the simplest mode of valuing suits for the recovery of land is at present under the consideration of the Government of India, and we have not accordingly felt ourselves called upon to take it up; but there are certain other classes of suits which in the absence of any special provision for their valuation would be left in a very unsatisfactory position, namely, suits the subject of which does not admit of valuation on any intelligible basis. Such suits are usually valued at some low figure, and consequently may be heard without any reference to their importance or difficulty by Courts of the inferior grades. The necessity for making some special provision therefor on the present occasion is the greater, inasmuch as, under the present Bill, the course of appeal will depend to a greater extent than before on the valuation.

14. We have accordingly introduced a new section (32) providing that, where the subject-matter of suits of any class is such that in the opinion of the Chief Court it does not admit of being satisfactorily valued, the Chief Court may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, direct that such suits shall be treated as if the subject-matter were of such value as the Chief Court thinks fit to specify in this behalf.

15. The only other provision of this chapter which appears to call for notice is section 38. As there explained, it is intended that the District Judge should have the general control over the administration of civil justice throughout his district; but there may be cases, as in Kulu, in which it would be convenient to delegate this control to a Subordinate Judge in some outlying portion of the district in somewhat the same way as certain powers of the District Magistrate are delegated to a Sub-divisional Officer under the Code of Criminal Procedure; and accordingly a power to effect such a delegation has been taken.

CHAPTER IV.

APPEALS IN CIVIL CASES.

16. We have omitted the words [illegible] section of the original which conferred a power to place other classes of suits on the same footing as [illegible] small causes for the purposes of appeal, the object in view being now sufficiently met by the new definition of "small cause" (in section 3), which gives power to place small causes within the meaning of the Presidency-towns Small Cause Courts Act on the same footing as mufassal small causes.

16. We have, moreover, restricted this section, as we have the entire chapter, to appeals from decrees as distinguished from orders, the latter being sufficiently provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure.

17. The subject of further appeals, which is dealt with in the following section, is one which has given rise to much discussion, and which is surrounded on all sides with difficulties of a serious nature. We have given to it the most careful and prolonged consideration, and have come to the conclusion that the right of further appeal allowed by the Bill as introduced must be extended in some important particulars.

The Bill as introduced allowed a further appeal from the appellate decree of a Divisional Bench only in two cases, namely, if the Judges differed or if some question of law or custom or of general interest was involved; and in these cases it did not allow the appeal as a matter of right, but only if both Judges, or when one had left the Court, the remaining one, certified that the case was of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal. Under the Bill as now amended a further appeal will lie as a matter of right and without any certificate from a Divisional Bench in all cases where the Judges differ. There will, moreover, be a further appeal in all cases in which any one Judge certifies that there is a question of law or custom or general interest involved, and that the case is in his opinion of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal. And, lastly, there will be a further appeal in cases of a class altogether new and not contemplated in the original Bill, namely, where the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 500.

The proviso barring a further appeal in small causes when the value does not exceed Rs. 500 is retained.

18. We have, as already indicated, made another alteration which is of considerable importance, and which it is convenient to notice here.

The Bill as introduced required that the Divisional Courts should consist in all instances of at least two Judges, that except as expressly provided no decision should be reversed except by a bench of two Judges, and that the restrictions on further appeal which we have described should apply to all Divisional Courts. To that objection was taken on the ground that there may be a difficulty in finding in the Panjáb a sufficient number of competent officers to furnish two Judges for each of the Divisional Courts proposed. We need hardly say that if the objection were well-founded it would be a serious one, inasmuch as the strict limitations on the right of further appeal to the Chief Court imposed by the original Bill were framed in reliance on the strength of the Divisional Benches; and though those limitations have now been relaxed in the important particulars already described, the Bill still proceeds on the assumption that a Divisional Bench will be a stronger, more reliable and more satisfactory tribunal than the Court of a Commissioner ordinarily now is.

19. It is of course impossible for us to say whether the precise number of competent officers required to constitute Benches in all the proposed Divisions is to be found in the Panjáb at this moment, but we understand that the Lieutenant-Governor has no misgivings on the point, and we think it may be safely affirmed that the difficulty of procuring a sufficient number of competent officers for the Benches has been much exaggerated.

In order, however, to guard against every possibility of miscarriage, we have now modified the Bill in such a way that, if the Lieutenant-Governor finds, at any time, that the materials required for establishing a Bench in any particular Division are not immediately available, he can make the Divisional Court there consist of a single Judge (section 19), and in the event of his doing so a further appeal will, subject only to the proviso as to small causes contained in section 40, lie from that Judge's appellate decrees precisely as they lie at present from the appellate decrees of a Commissioner [section 40, clause (b)].

CHAPTER V.

REVENUE COURTS.

20. We have recast this chapter, assimilating it in form and arrangement to the [illegible] of the Bill relating to Civil Courts, and supplying certain omissions in details, as, e.g., provisions relating to ministerial officers, which it seems unnecessary to notice more particularly.

21. We have omitted from the list of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts given in the first section the so-called suits under section 40 of the Panjáb Tenancy Act, inasmuch as we find on reference to that Act that the proceedings in question are not suits but applications, and we think that the proper mode of dealing with them is to include them among the applications to be heard on the revenue side which are specified in section 42 of that Act, and from which they were apparently omitted by an oversight. We have accordingly added a section (75) to the Bill amending section 42 of the Tenancy Act so as to include them.

22. We have added to the list of suits cognizable by Revenue Courts "suits to determine disputes regarding boundaries of land" (i.e., of agricultural land), "which have been fixed by a Court or Revenue-officer." This addition has been advocated by several of the authorities consulted, and it appears to us to be a proper one, seeing that all that is ordinarily required for the decision of such disputes is the laying down on the ground of a boundary which is to be found in a map.

23. On the other hand, we have appended to the section a proviso which empowers the Local Government, after consulting the Chief Court, to retransfer to the Civil Courts the jurisdiction in any class of revenue cases cognizable in any part of the country where it appears desirable to do so.

24. We have for convenience sake divided the classes of suits into two groups, and at the instance of the Local Government included class (d), suits for ejectment of a tenant, in the group containing suits deemed to be of greater importance or difficulty.

25. We have in defining the powers of Assistant Commissioners and Tahsíldárs [section 46 (2)], following the same course as in the provisions relating to original civil jurisdiction, omitted all minute specification of pecuniary limits, and left it to the Local Government to fix those limits as it thinks fit.

26. We have for the same reason as in the preceding chapter omitted all reference to appeals from orders.

27. We have introduced a clause in the proviso to section 47, based on similar provisions in the Rent Laws of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces, giving power to bar appeals from decrees of certain classes of officers in money-suits when the amount involved does not exceed Rs. 100 and no question of importance, such as a question of title, is involved.

28. We have added a section (51) empowering the Local Government to confer on any person the judicial powers, original or appellate, of a Financial Commissioner, Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner under this chapter.

29. We have, in order further to provide a means of relieving the Revenue Courts of the necessity of disposing of particular matters which may be found to be more proper for consideration by the Civil Courts, introduced two new sections (54 and 55).

The first of these is copied with certain modifications from section 208A of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, and is intended to take the place of section 49 of the original Bill, which has been the subject of adverse criticism. It empowers a Revenue Court, when it considers that any question in issue before it is more proper for decision by a Civil Court, to require any party to institute a suit in the Civil Court with a view to obtaining a decision on the question. If he fails to comply with the requisition, the Revenue Court is empowered to decide the question against him, but is not bound to do so, as under the corresponding provision of the North-Western Provinces Act. If the party institutes the suit in the Civil Court, the Revenue Court will follow the decision of that Court.

30. It has been suggested that any provision of this sort is superfluous, inasmuch as a Revenue Court being a Court of limited jurisdiction, and its decision in one case being accordingly, under section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, binding in other cases only to a limited extent, it may safely be compelled to decide all questions arising incidentally in any suit before it, even though they may be questions which would be obviously more proper for the consideration of a Civil Court.

To this view of the matter we are unable to assent.

31. It is undoubtedly true that in many cases, probably in the great majority of cases, it is best for all parties that the Revenue Court should take upon itself to decide all questions incidentally arising in the suit, even though some of them might be of a nature more proper for the consideration of a Civil Court. This would clearly be the right course for the Revenue Court to take when the question is a simple one and can be quickly disposed of, or when it is one not likely to arise subsequently between the parties in any other connection; but it seems equally clear that when, as must occasionally happen, some complicated and difficult question arises in a revenue-suit, and is certain to arise again between the parties unless it is finally settled, a Revenue Court ought to be allowed some discretion of the sort proposed. For, if some such discretion is not allowed, what must be the result? The question must be tried out at a great expenditure of time and money to all concerned by the Revenue Court, which ex hypothesi is not the best Court to try it. It may then go in appeal to the higher Revenue Courts, probably in the last resort to the Financial Commissioner, and, after all, as the decision obtained will not be binding except for certain limited purposes, the whole litigation may commence de novo and run a similar course through the Civil Courts.

It is in order to provide a means of avoiding scandals of this sort that we have introduced the section in question.

32. We are quite aware that the power it confers might be abused by an indolent Revenue-officer if he were free to resort to it at pleasure, but we have guarded against this by making the sanction of the immediately superior Court a condition precedent to its exercise.

33. Section 55, to which there is nothing corresponding in the original Bill, empowers the Financial Commissioner to refer to the Chief Court a point of law which he considers that Court is more competent to decide.

34. We trust that these two sections and the proviso which we have appended to section 45 (see supra, paragraph 23) will suffice to remove the apprehensions which have been expressed in some quarters that the Bill may force upon the Revenue Courts duties which they will be incompetent to discharge.

CHAPTER VII.

SUPPLEMENTAL PROVISIONS.

35. We have omitted section 63 of the original Bill, which provided for consultations between the two Financial Commissioners, as it is unnecessary to provide for such a matter by legislative enactment and the proposal to do so gave rise to some misapprehension.

36. We have likewise omitted section 66 of the original Bill, which expressly prohibited a judicial officer from disposing of a case in which he might appear to be interested. We are aware that such provisions have long found a place in our Courts Acts, but we think the matter is one on which legislation may well be dispensed with, the general principles applicable to it being perfectly well understood.

37. Section 68 of the original Bill, which reproduced section 48 of the present Panjáb Courts Act, gave power to the Government to appoint a single Judge to exercise the Chief Court's superintending functions. This power has never been exercised, and we are informed that the Government have no desire to retain it. We have accordingly omitted the section.

38. Sections 73 and 74 of the original Bill, which provide for the enhancement of the court-fees upon applications to the Chief Court for revision under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, were introduced with a view to discouraging such applications. We fully approve of their provisions and have retained them in the revised Bill. From statistics put before us by our hon'ble colleague Mr. Barkley it appears that such applications have of late been increasing to a formidable extent in the Panjáb; and, as observed by him when he asked for leave to introduce the Bill, they are certain to increase with greater rapidity if the provisions of the Bill, which give greater finality to the decisions of the Lower Appellate Courts, become law. Moreover, from the circumstance that only about one-sixth of the applications now made to the Chief Court are successful, it may be gathered that Panjáb litigants when debarred from appealing are tempted to incur the serious trouble and expense involved in making such applications, even where there may not be the slightest prospect of success. This appears to us to be a serious evil, and the only question has been whether the increase of the court-fee proposed in the original Bill would be enough to check it. The better opinion appears to us to be that it would have but a slight effect in that direction, and that nothing short of an abolition of section 622 of the Code as applied to the Panjáb will suffice.

39. We find that a considerable divergence of opinion has arisen between some of the highest Courts in the country as to the nature of the grounds required to support an application under that section. A full bench of the Allahabad High Court has held (I. L. R. 3 All. 203) that any grounds on which a second appeal would lie are sufficient. The practical result of this, as admitted by two of the learned Judges, is that section 622 of the Code gives a second appeal in all those cases in which the earlier sections of the Code expressly deny it. It may, no doubt, be said that the Court has a discretion under section 622 to interfere or not as it thinks fit, but we apprehend that as a rule a High Court holding the opinion just referred to, and finding what would be a good ground for special appeal made out, would be in practically the same position as if it were considering a special appeal under section 551.

40. A view which is probably more in accordance with that of those who framed the section was taken by a full bench of the Bombay High Court in a case reported in I. L. R. 7 Bom. 341. The conclusion to which the Court came in that case may be stated to be that the jurisdiction conferred by section 622 of the Code is an extraordinary jurisdiction to be exercised only in extraordinary cases, and that the precise circumstances under which it is to be exercised is left to the discretion of the Court and cannot be defined.

The question has not yet come before a full bench of the Panjáb Chief Court. It is impossible to predict what the result of its being fully considered by that Court would be; and, having regard to its intimate connection with the working of the present Bill, we do not think the matter should be left in uncertainty.

41. The root of the difficulty which has sprung up in connection with the section appears to lie in that portion of the wording introduced into the Code by Act XII of 1879, which empowers the High Court to interfere on the ground that the Lower Court has acted "illegally." The Allahabad High Court has construed this as justifying the High Court's interference whenever the Court below has erred on a question of law, and it is on this point mainly that the Bombay Court has dissented from the Allahabad decision. The divergence of opinion will no doubt have eventually to be met by an amendment of the Code, but the matter is not very pressing, where, as in most parts of the country at present, the proportion of cases in which appeals to the High Court are barred is comparatively small and a tendency to resort recklessly to the section has not developed itself among litigants.

42. In the Panjáb, on the contrary, the question is already pressing, and will become more so if this Bill is passed. We are therefore compelled to deal with it separately for that province; and the conclusion to which we have come after the most careful consideration, and having regard to the special circumstances of the Province and the peculiar features of the appellate system now proposed, is that the extraordinary jurisdiction conferred by section 622 of the Code should be exerciseable only on the ground that the lower Court has exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, or has failed to exercise a jurisdiction so vested, or has acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity. We propose, therefore (section 70 of the Bill), to limit the scope of section 622 of the Code in this way, and we believe that when so limited it will still be sufficiently wide to cover all cases which call for the exercise of revisional as distinguished from appellate jurisdiction.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd October, 1884 :—

No. 15 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Oudh Estates Act, 1869.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Oudh Estates Act, 1869; It is hereby enacted as follows :— I of 1869.

1. Subject to the saving in section 2 of this Act, for the definition of "registered" in section 2 of the said Act, there shall be deemed to have been substituted from the date of the passing of the said Act the following definition, namely :— Amendment of definition of "registered" in section 2 of Act I of 1869.

"Registered." "'Registered' means—

"(a) in the case of a will, registered according to the law for the time being in force relating to the registration of assurances, or deposited with a Registrar according to the law for the time being in force relating to the deposit of wills; and

"(b) in the case of any other instrument, registered according to the law for the time being in force relating to the registration of assurances."

2. Nothing in section 1 shall affect any will— Saving of certain wills.

(a) declared by a judicial decision pronounced before the twenty-third day of October, 1884, to be invalid on the ground that it was not registered in accordance with the provisions of the said Act; or

(b) of which the validity is being questioned on that ground in a suit commenced before the twenty-third day of October, 1884.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

IT has recently been held by the Privy Council that a will that was deposited under the provisions of Part IX of Act VIII of 1871 was not "registered" within the meaning of section 13 and the definition in section 2 of the Oudh Estates Act 1869, which declares that "'registered' means registered according to the provisions of the rules relating to the registration of assurances for the time being in force in Oudh."

2. The consequences of this ruling, which affects also section 20 of the Act, where a similar provision occurs, are most important, since the procedure that is now pronounced to be inadequate to satisfy the requirements of the law has been constantly acted on. It is stated that the taluqdárs never suspected that the validity of wills formally deposited in the registration offices under sealed covers could be called in question. Moreover, it scarcely could have been intended that taluqdárs should be required to register their wills open, and it seems obvious that they cannot in the future be required to do so, which they will have to do under the decision of the Privy Council if the law remains unaltered.

3. Under these circumstances, it is considered advisable to amend Act I of 1869 so as to legalize the existing practice. This is done by the present Bill, and as the omission to fulfil the requirements of the law which has taken place in the past would seem to have been unintentional and due to a prevalent and hitherto undisputed misapprehension of its meaning, retrospective effect has been given to the amendment which covers all wills hitherto or at present only deposited and not registered, except wills already declared invalid by judicial decision or being questioned in a suit commenced before the date of the introduction of the Bill.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd October, 1884 :—

No. 16 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend Act XXII of 1881.

XXII of 1881. WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Excise Act, 1881; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

In the said Act, after section 34, the following section shall be inserted :—

"34A. The Local Government may, from time to time, invest any police-officers of or above the grade of head constable, either by name or in virtue of their offices, with the powers conferred on excise-officers by sections 27, 28 and 29 of this Act; and every officer so invested shall, for all purposes connected with the exercise of these powers, be deemed to be an excise-officer within the meaning of this Act."

Power to invest police-officers with powers of excise-officers.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

SECTION 46 of Act X, 1871, corresponding to section 59 of Act XXI of 1856, enabled Local Governments to confer on certain police-officers powers of searching for and seizing spirituous liquors and intoxicating drugs and arresting persons found in possession of them. These powers have been conferred and exercised up to the present time in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and are essential to the efficiency of the excise-administration, as no separate establishments for the prevention of smuggling are maintained in those provinces, and the land-revenue officials have little leisure for excise-duties.

2. The excise law came under revision in 1881 and was re-enacted in a somewhat simpler form by Act XXII of that year.

Section 24 of that Act gives Collectors power to appoint persons by name or by virtue of their office to be officers for the collection of the excise revenue, but as police-officers are not specially mentioned among the persons to be so appointed, and as section 20 of Act V, 1861, precludes the exercise by them of any such authority, it has been held that they cannot be appointed to discharge excise functions, and that the power of so employing them conferred upon Local Governments by Act X, 1871, has been taken away by the Act of 1881.

3. This seems to have escaped notice when Act XXII of 1881 was passed. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, in the Report of the Select Committee and in the speeches of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, nothing whatever is said of depriving the Local Governments of the power hitherto enjoyed by them of employing police-officers on excise-duties. Mr. Whitley Stokes, accounting for the omissions in the later Act, stated that they were provided for by other enactments or were fit subjects for executive orders. The omission now brought to light does not fall under either of these categories, and it is impossible to suppose that a power held to be necessary for the excise-administration was taken away from Local Governments by a side wind.

4. The Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh urge that the omission should now be rectified, and with this object the present Bill is introduced.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 5th December, 1884:—

No. 17 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the law in force in the Pánch Maháls.

WHEREAS it is expedient that the law in force in the territory comprised in the Pánch Maháls should, on and from the first day of March, 1885, be the same as the law in force in the district of Kaira, in the Bombay Presidency, and that the said territory should, on and from that day, cease to be a scheduled district under the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

XIV of 1874.
XV of 1874.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Pánch Maháls Laws Act, 1884.

Laws of Kaira to apply.

2. (1) Save and except the enactments specified in the schedule hereto annexed, all enactments which, on the first day of March, 1885, are in force in the district of Kaira and not in the Pánch Maháls shall be deemed to come into force in the Pánch Maháls on that day.

Other laws repealed.

(2) All enactments which on that day are in force in the Pánch Maháls and not in the district of Kaira shall be deemed to be repealed on and from that day in the Pánch Maháls.

Pending proceedings.

3. All proceedings commenced before any authority in the Pánch Maháls before the first day of March, 1885, and still pending on that day, shall be disposed of by such authority as the Local Government may direct, and, save as aforesaid, shall be carried on as if this Act had not been passed.

Territory to cease to be a scheduled district.

4. On and from the first day of March, 1885, the Pánch Maháls shall cease to be a scheduled district; and in Part II of the First Schedule to the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and in the same Part of the Sixth Schedule to the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874, the words "The Pánch Maháls" shall be repealed.

Partial repeal of Acts XIV and XV of 1874.

XIV of 1874.

XV of 1874.

THE SCHEDULE.

ENACTMENTS EXCEPTED FROM THE OPERATION OF SECTION 2.

Acts of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Title.	Extent of exception.
VIII of 1870 ...	For the prevention of the murder of female infants.	The whole.
XXI of 1881 ...	To amend the law providing for the relief of Thákurs in the districts of Broach and Kaira.	The whole.

Act of the Governor of Bombay in Council.

Number and year.	Title.	Extent of exception.
V of 1879 ...	To consolidate and amend the law relating to Revenue-officers and the land-revenue in the Presidency of Bombay.	Section 85 and last fifteen words of section 58.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE territory called the Pánch Mahâls, lying in the extreme east of Gujarát, in the Bombay Presidency, is a scheduled district under the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874, and, though for revenue-purposes part of the Kaira District, it has hitherto, from its backward state and the poverty and ignorance of the people, been treated as a non-regulation district.

The Government of Bombay are, however, of opinion that the Pánch Mahâls ought now to be placed upon a regulation footing, and at their suggestion the present Bill, which has been framed on the model of the Bánkí Laws Act, 1881, has been prepared. It assimilates the law in force in the Pánch Mahâls to that in the Kaira District from the 1st March, 1885, excluding the Female Infanticide Act, 1870, the Broach and Kaira Thákurs' Relief Act, 1881, and the Bombay Land-revenue Code, 1879, section 85 and the last fifteen words of section 58, which the Government of Bombay desire should not be extended to the Pánch Mahâls; it saves pending proceedings; and it declares that, from the above-mentioned date, the Pánch Mahâls shall cease to be a scheduled district, repealing at the same time the reference to those Mahâls which occurs in Part II of the first Schedule to the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and in the same Part of the Sixth Schedule to the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874.

[Second Publication]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 5th December, 1884:—

No. 17 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the law in force in the Pánch Mahâls.

WHEREAS it is expedient that the law in force in the territory comprised in the Pánch Mahâls should, on and from the first day of March, 1885, be the same as the law in force in the district of Kaira, in the Bombay Presidency, and that the said territory should, on and from that day, cease to be a scheduled district under the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874; It is hereby enacted as follows:— XIV of 1874. XV of 1874.

Short title. 1. This Act may be called the Pánch Mahâls Laws Act, 1884.

Laws of Kaira to apply. 2. (1) Save and except the enactments specified in the schedule hereto annexed, all enactments which, on the first day of March, 1885, are in force in the district of Kaira and not in the Pánch Mahâls shall be deemed to come into force in the Pánch Mahâls on that day.

Other laws repealed. (2) All enactments which on that day are in force in the Pánch Mahâls and not in the district of Kaira shall be deemed to be repealed on and from that day in the Pánch Mahâls.

Pending proceedings. 3. All proceedings commenced before any authority in the Pánch Mahâls before the first day of March, 1885, and still pending on that day, shall be disposed of by such authority as the Local Government may direct, and, save as aforesaid, shall be carried on as if this Act had not been passed.

Territory to cease to be a scheduled district. 4. On and from the first day of March, 1885, the Pánch Mahâls shall cease to be a scheduled district; and in Part II of the First Schedule to the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and in the same Part of the Sixth Schedule to the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874, the words "The Pánch Mahâls" shall be repealed.

Partial repeal of Acts XIV and XV of 1874. XIV of 1874. XV of 1874.

THE SCHEDULE.

ENACTMENTS EXCEPTED FROM THE OPERATION OF SECTION 2.

Acts of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Title.	Extent of exception.
VIII of 1870 ...	For the prevention of the murder of female infants.	The whole.
XXI of 1881 ...	To amend the law providing for the relief of Thákurs in the districts of Broach and Kaira.	The whole.

Act of the Governor of Bombay in Council.

Number and year.	Title.	Extent of exception.
V of 1879 ...	To consolidate and amend the law relating to Revenue-officers and the land-revenue in the Presidency of Bombay.	Section 85 and last fifteen words of section 58.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE territory called the Pánch Mahál, lying in the extreme east of Gujarát, in the Bombay Presidency, is a scheduled district under the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874, and, though for revenue-purposes part of the Kaira District, it has hitherto, from its backward state and the poverty and ignorance of the people, been treated as a non-regulation district.

The Government of Bombay are, however, of opinion that the Pánch Mahál ought now to be placed upon a regulation footing, and at their suggestion the present Bill, which has been framed on the model of the Bánkí Laws Act, 1881, has been prepared. It assimilates the law in force in the Pánch Mahál to that in the Kaira District from the 1st March, 1885, excluding the Female Infanticide Act, 1870, the Broach and Kaira Thákurs' Relief Act, 1881, and the Bombay Land-revenue Code, 1879, section 85 and the last fifteen words of section 58, which the Government of Bombay desire should not be extended to the Pánch Mahál; it saves pending proceedings; and it declares that, from the above-mentioned date, the Pánch Mahál shall cease to be a scheduled district, repealing at the same time the reference to those Mahál which occurs in Part II of the first Schedule to the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, and in the same Part of the Sixth Schedule to the Laws Local Extent Act, 1874.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 19th December, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 18 OF 1884.

A Bill to repeal part of section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, and to amend the Excise Act, 1881, and the Bengal Excise Act, 1878.

WHEREAS it is expedient to repeal part of section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, and to amend section 7 of the Excise Act, 1881, and section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

XI of 1882. XXII of 1881. Beng. Act VII of 1878.

XI of 1882.

1. The part of section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, beginning with the words "And whereas," down to and including the words "been paid," is repealed.

Repeal of part of section 6 of Act XI of 1882.

XXII of 1881.

2. For clause (a) of section 7 of the Excise Act, 1881, the following clause shall be substituted :—

Amendment of section 7 of Act XXII of 1881.

"(a) such duty as the Local Government may from time to time fix in respect of such spirit has been paid."

Beng. Act VII of 1878.

3. In section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, for the words "at the rate leviable under any Tariff Act for the time being in force" the words "at such rate as the Local Government may from time to time fix in respect of such spirituous liquor" shall be substituted; but nothing in this section shall affect any Act passed after this Act comes into force by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council.

Amendment of section 18 of Bengal Act VII of 1878.

XI of 1882.

4. The duty now fixed by the Local Government under section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, as leviable on spirit manufactured in all or any of the distilleries situate in the territories under its administration, or in any part of such territories, shall, in places in which the Excise Act, 1881, or the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, is in force, be deemed to be the duty fixed by the Local Government under sections 7 and 18 of those Acts, as amended by this Act, respectively,

Saving of duties already fixed under section 6 of Act XI of 1882.

XXII of 1881. Beng. Act VII of 1878.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Government of Madras recently submitted a draft Bill to consolidate and amend the Abkari law of the Presidency of Madras, for sanction to its introduction in the local Legislative Council, and, on examination of its provisions, it was found that two clauses of one of its sections, imposing a duty on liquor, were, as applied to spirit, ultra vires of the local legislature, as the mode of fixing the excise duty on spirit is determined by section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882. It was also feared that the penultimate clause of the latter section, by keeping in force, under the authority of the Governor General's Legislative Council, an unexplored mass of law existing on the 10th March, 1882, might render other provisions of that Bill ultra vires.

This in itself would make it necessary that legislation should be resorted to in the Council of the Governor General in order to prevent the Madras Bill from being declared invalid; and as, moreover, section 6 of the Tariff Act must seriously hamper any local legislature contemplating legislation like that proposed by the Madras Government, it is proposed to repeal that section, leaving it to the Local Governments to deal with the mode of fixing the duties of excise on spirit, under the other enactments locally in force, subject, so far as any discretion is allowed to them by those enactments, to the general executive control of the Government of India.

The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It first repeals section 6 of the Tariff Act except the last clause amending section 1 of Act XVI of 1863, which Act is still in force. It then amends section 7 of the Excise Act, 1881, and section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, which at present contain references to the provisions of section 6 of the Tariff Act, by omitting these references and conferring on the Local Governments concerned power to fix the duty payable in respect of country spirit. Lastly, in order to prevent any question being raised as to the effect of the repeal of section 6 of the Tariff Act, the Bill declares that duties already fixed by the Local Government under section 6 of the Tariff Act shall be deemed to be duties fixed by the Local Government under sections 7 and 18 of the Excise Act, 1881, and the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, as amended by this Act, respectively.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 19th December, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 19 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea.

[Act II of 1860, preamble.]

18 & 19 Vic., c. 119.

WHEREAS by section 99 of an Act of the Imperial Parliament called "the Passengers Act, 1855," it is enacted that "it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council, from time to time, by any Act or Acts to be passed for that purpose, to declare that this Act or any part thereof shall apply to the carriage of passengers upon any voyage, from any ports or places within the territories of British India, to be specified in such Act or Acts, to any other places whatsoever, to be also specified in such Act or Acts;" and it is thereby also enacted that "on the passing of such Indian Act or Acts, and whilst the same shall remain in force, all such parts of this Act as shall be adopted therein shall apply to and extend to the carriage of passengers upon such voyages as in the said Indian Act or Acts shall be specified. The provisions of such Indian Act shall be enforced in all Her Majesty's possessions in like manner as the provisions of this Act may be enforced;"

[New.]

And whereas certain parts of the said Act of Parliament were by Act II of 1860 (to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea) made applicable to the carriage of passengers upon certain specified voyages;

[New.]

26 & 27 Vic., c. 51.

18 & 19 Vic., c. 119.

And whereas by an Act of the Imperial Parliament called "the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863," certain parts of the Passengers Act, 1855, which were so made applicable have been amended, and it is provided that the said Acts of the Imperial Parliament shall be construed together as one Act;

[New.]

18 & 19 Vic., c. 119.

And whereas it is expedient that the amendments so made in the Passengers Act, 1855, should also be made in the parts of that Act so made applicable, and it is also expedient to apply those parts so amended to the carriage of passengers upon certain voyages not specified in Act II of 1860;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Sea Passengers Act, 1885: and [New.]

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of March, 1885. [New.]

Repeal of Act II of 1860.

2. On and from the day on which this Act comes into force, Act II of 1860 (to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea) shall be repealed. [New.]

Certain provisions of the Statutes made applicable to specified voyages from India.

3. The provisions contained in sections 4, 5 and 6 of this Act, and the schedule hereto annexed (being parts of the Passengers Act, 1855, as amended by the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863), are declared applicable to the carriage of passengers upon the following voyages, namely:— [Act II of 1860, s. 1, Act VII of 1871, ss. 23 and 24.] [New.] 18 & 19 Vic., c. 119. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 51.

(a) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the British Colonies of Mauritius, Jamaica, British Guiana, Trinidad, St. Lucia, Grenada, St. Vincent, Natal, St. Kitts, Nevis and Fiji; [New.]

(b) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the French Colonies of Réunion, Martinique, Guadeloupe and its dependencies, and Guiana; [New.]

(c) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the Netherlands colony of Dutch Guiana; [New.]

(d) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the Danish colony of St. Croix; [New.]

(e) Voyages under the Native Passenger Ships Act, 1876, from Calcutta Madras, Bombay, Karáchí, Rangoon and other ports in British India to the Straits Settlements, to the protected Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements, to Australia, and to ports in the Red Sea or Persian Gulf. VIII of 1876.

[Act II of 1860, s. 2.]

Governors or Consuls may pay expenses of passengers taken off passenger-ship.

4. If the passengers upon any such voyage as is specified in the last preceding section are taken off from the ship carrying such passengers, or are picked up at sea from any boat, raft or otherwise, it shall be lawful, if the port or place to which they shall be conveyed is in any of Her Majesty's colonial possessions, for the Governor of such colony, or for any person authorized by him for the purpose, or, if in any foreign country, for Her Majesty's Consular officer, at such port or place therein, to defray all or any part of the expenses thereby incurred.

[Act II of 1860, s. 3, 26 & 27 Vic., c. 51, [New.]

Governors or Consuls may send on passengers, if the master of the ship fail to do so.

5. If any passenger of any such passenger-ship as aforesaid, without any neglect or default of his own, finds himself within any colonial or foreign port, or place other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he, or the Emigration Agent, or any public officer or other person on his behalf, has contracted that he should land, it shall be lawful for the Governor of the colony, or for any person authorized by him for the purpose or for Her Majesty's Consular officer at the foreign port or place, as the case may be, to forward the passenger to his intended destination, unless the master of the ship, within forty-eight hours of the arrival of such passenger, gives to the Governor or Consular officer, as the case may be, a written undertaking to forward or carry on within six weeks thereafter the passenger to his original destination, and unless the master accordingly forwards or carries him on within that period.

Act II of 1860, s. 4, 26 & 27 Vic., c. 51, s. 16.]

Expenses incurred under sections 4 and 5 to be a Crown debt.

6. (1) All expenses incurred under the last two preceding sections, or either of them, by or by the authority of a Governor or Consular officer, or other person as therein respectively mentioned, including the cost of maintaining the passengers until forwarded to their destination, and of all necessary bedding, provisions and stores, shall become a debt to Her Majesty and Her successors from the owner, charterer and master of the ship, and shall be recoverable from them, or from any one or more of them, at the suit and for the use of Her Majesty, in like manner as in the case of other Crown debts.

[New.]

(2) A certificate in the form given in the Schedule hereto annexed, or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit, purporting to be under the hand of any such Governor or Consular officer (as the case may be), stating the total amount of the expenses, shall, in any suit or other proceeding for the recovery of the debt, be received in evidence without proof of the handwriting or of the official character of the Governor or Consular officer, and shall be deemed sufficient evidence of the amount of the expenses, and that the same were duly incurred;

[New.]

nor shall it be necessary to adduce on behalf of Her Majesty any other evidence in support of the claim, but judgment shall pass for the Crown, with costs of suit, unless the defendant specially pleads and duly proves that the certificate is false or fraudulent, or specially pleads and duly proves any facts showing that the expenses were not duly incurred:

Provided, nevertheless, that in no case shall any larger sum be recovered on account of the expenses than a sum equal to twice the total amount of passage-money received or due to and recoverable by or on account of the owner, charterer or master of the passenger-ship or any of them from or on account of the whole number of passengers who may have embarked in the ship; which total amount of passage-money shall be proved by the defendant if he will have the advantage of this limitation of the debt: but if any such passengers are forwarded or conveyed to their intended destination under the provisions of the last preceding section, they shall not be entitled to the return of their passage-money, or to any compensation for loss of passage.

THE SCHEDULE.

[26 & 27 Vic., cap. 51, Sched.] [New.]

Form of Governor's or Consul's Certificate of expenditure in the case of Passengers shipwrecked &c.

(See section 6.)

(a). N. B.—1. If more passengers were rescued than forwarded, or if bedding, &c., was not supplied, alter the certificate to suit the facts of the case.

(b). N. B.—2. State generally the nature of the disaster and where it occurred. But if the passengers were only left behind without any default of their own, state the fact accordingly.

I hereby certify that acting under, and in conformity with, the provisions of the Indian Sea Passengers Act, 1885, I have defrayed the expenses incurred in rescuing, maintaining, supplying with necessary bedding, provisions and stores (a), and in forwarding to their destination passengers who were proceeding from to in the passenger-ship which was wrecked at sea, &c. (b).

And I further certify, for the purposes of the sixth section of the said Indian Sea Passengers Act, 1885, that the total amount of such expenses is , and that such expenses were duly incurred by me under the said Act.

Given under my hand this day of 18 .

{ Governor of &c., (or, as the case may be), Her Britannic Majesty's Consul at .

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Act II of 1860 declares certain parts (namely, sections 52, 53 and 54) of the English Passengers Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vic., cap. 119) to be applicable to the carriage of passengers upon voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the colonies of Mauritius, Jamaica, British Guiana, Trinidad, St. Lucia and Grenada, and from ports in British India to ports in the Red Sea or Persian Gulf. The colonies mentioned were the places to which emigration was then lawful. Since 1860, emigration to the colonies of Fiji, Natal, Réunion, St. Croix, Guadeloupe, Martinique, Dutch Guiana, St. Vincent, Nevis and St. Kitts has been sanctioned. With respect, however, to voyages to places not specified in Act II of 1860, that

Act gives no power to any authority to recover expenses incurred in forwarding shipwrecked passengers to their destination and in maintaining them until they are so forwarded. At present, therefore, the voyages to which the Act does not apply are more numerous than those to which it does.

2. Again, the Act, as it stands at present, is, if strictly construed, inapplicable to the conditions under which emigration from India is usually conducted. Section 3 of the Act, following section 53 of the English Passengers Act, 1855, runs as follows:—"If any passenger * * * find himself within any colonial or foreign port or place other than that at which he may have contracted to land," &c. But as a rule, emigrants from India do not themselves contract with the owners or charterers of the vessels in which they emigrate. In all cases falling under the Indian Emigration Act VII of 1871 (or which may fall under the Indian Emigration Act XXI of 1883, when that Act is brought into force) the contract is made by a recruiter for the colony importing labour, under the supervision of the Protector of Emigrants. Emigrants despatched in this way are therefore technically excluded from the provisions of Act II of 1860. A similar difficulty appears to have arisen in England, and to have been met by an amendment of the law. Section 12 of the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vic., cap. 51), repeals section 53 of the English Passengers Act, 1855, and section 15 of the former Act substitutes for the words "other than that at which he may have contracted to land" the words "other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he or the Emigration Commissioners, or any public officer, or other person on his behalf, may have contracted that he should land".

3. These two defects in the Act came to notice in connection with the following occurrence. In the end of April last, the steamer Laleham, carrying emigrants from Calcutta to Dutch Guiana, grounded off Ceylon, and was compelled to land her passengers at Trincomalee. The Laleham returned to Calcutta, where she was examined by the Engineer-Surveyor to the port, and reported "unseaworthy and unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life". The Agents of the Laleham at first proposed to substitute another vessel, but subsequently declined to do so, offering merely to have the Laleham repaired at Calcutta, and to fulfil her charter-party by re-embarking the coolies at Trincomalee and taking them on to Surinam.

The Advocate General of Bengal, on being consulted, was of opinion that no action could be taken under Act II of 1860, and that the matter would be governed by the charter-party. Surinam, he said, being in Dutch Guiana, is not a place to which Act II of 1860 applies. He thought further that the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, would be construed strictly, and according to such construction he did not think that the words of section 3 of Act II of 1860 would cover the break-down in a voyage to which that Act applied, in any case other than that in which the passenger had himself contracted.

Under these circumstances legislation seems necessary in order to bring Act II of 1860 into conformity with the present system of emigration and the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863.

The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It repeals and re-enacts Act II of 1860 with the necessary amendments. Section 3 of the present Bill declares the subsequent provisions of the Bill (being parts of the English Passenger Act, 1855, as amended by the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863) to be applicable to all voyages to certain specified colonies and places, which are, in fact, the colonies and places to which under the existing law emigration is now lawful or is likely to be legalized; and in sections 5 and 6 the amendments made by the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, in sections 53 and 54 of the English Passengers Act, 1855 (which formed sections 3 and 4 of Act II of 1860) are incorporated with some slight modifications so as to adapt them to this country.

XI of 1882.

1. The part of section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, beginning with the words "And whereas," down to and including the words "been paid," is repealed.

Repeal of part of section 6 of Act XI of 1882.

2. For clause (a) of section 7 of the Excise Act, 1881, the following clause shall be substituted :—

XXII of 1881.

Amendment of section 7 of Act XXII of 1881.

"(a) such duty as the Local Government may from time to time fix in respect of such spirit has been paid."

3. In section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, for the words "at the rate leviable under any Tariff Act for the time being in force" the words "at such rate as the Local Government may from time to time fix in respect of such spirituous liquor" shall be substituted; but nothing in this section shall affect any Act passed after this Act comes into force by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council.

Beng. Act VII of 1878.

Amendment of section 18 of Bengal Act VII of 1878.

4. The duty now fixed by the Local Government under section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, as leviable on spirit manufactured in all or any of the distilleries situate in the territories under its administration, or in any part of such territories, shall, in places in which the Excise Act, 1881, or the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, is in force, be deemed to be the duty fixed by the Local Government under sections 7 and 18 of those Acts, as amended by this Act, respectively.

XI of 1882.

XXII of 1881.

Beng. Act VII of 1878.

Saving of duties already fixed under section 6 of Act XI of 1882.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Government of Madras recently submitted a draft Bill to consolidate and amend the Abkari law of the Presidency of Madras, for sanction to its introduction in the local Legislative Council, and, on examination of its provisions, it was found that two clauses of one of its sections, imposing a duty on liquor, were, as applied to spirit, ultra vires of the local legislature, as the mode of fixing the excise duty on spirit is determined by section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882. It was also feared that the penultimate clause of the latter section, by keeping in force, under the authority of the Governor General's Legislative Council, an unexplored mass of law existing on the 10th March, 1882, might render other provisions of that Bill ultra vires.

This in itself would make it necessary that legislation should be resorted to in the Council, of the Governor General in order to prevent the Madras Bill from being declared invalid; and as moreover, section 6 of the Tariff Act must seriously hamper any local legislature contemplating legislation like that proposed by the Madras Government, it is proposed to repeal that section, leaving it to the Local Governments to deal with the mode of fixing the duties of excise on spirit, under the other enactments locally in force, subject, so far as any discretion is allowed to them by those enactments, to the general executive control of the Government of India.

The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It first repeals section 6 of the Tariff Act except the last clause amending section 1 of Act XVI of 1863, which Act is still in force. It then amends section 7 of the Excise Act, 1881, and section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, which at present contain references to the provisions of section 6 of the Tariff Act, by omitting these references and conferring on the Local Governments concerned power to fix the duty payable in respect of country spirit. Lastly, in order to prevent any question being raised as to the effect of the repeal of section 6 of the Tariff Act, the Bill declares that duties already fixed by the Local Government under section 6 of the Tariff Act shall be deemed to be duties fixed by the Local Government under sections 7 and 18 of the Excise Act, 1881, and the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, as amended by this Act, respectively.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 19th December, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 19 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea.

ct II of 60, pre-mble.]

WHEREAS by section 99 of an Act of the Imperial Parliament called "the Passengers Act, 1855," it is enacted that "it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council, from time to time, by any Act or Acts to be passed for that purpose, to declare that this Act or any part thereof shall apply to the carriage of passengers upon any voyage, from any ports or places within the territories of British India, to be specified in such Act or Acts, to any other places whatsoever, to be also specified in such Act or Acts;" and it is thereby also enacted that "on the passing of such Indian Act or Acts, and whilst the same shall remain in force, all such parts of this Act as shall be adopted therein shall apply to and extend to the carriage of passengers upon such voyages as in the said Indian Act or Acts shall be specified. The provisions of such Indian Act shall be enforced in all Her Majesty's possessions in like manner as the provisions of this Act may be enforced;"

& 19 Vic., 119.

And whereas certain parts of the said Act of Parliament were by Act II of 1860 (to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea) made applicable to the carriage of passengers upon certain specified voyages;

New.]

And whereas by an Act of the Imperial Parliament called "the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863," certain parts of the Passengers Act, 1855, which were so made applicable have been amended, and it is provided that the said Acts of the Imperial Parliament shall be construed together as one Act;

& 27 Vic., 51.

& 19 Vic., 119.

New.]

And whereas it is expedient that the amendments so made in the Passengers Act, 1855, should also be made in the parts of that Act so made applicable, and it is also expedient to apply those parts so amended to the carriage of passengers upon certain voyages not specified in Act II of 1860;

19 Vic.,

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Sea Passengers Act, 1885: and [New.]

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of March, 1885. [New.]

Repeal of Act II of 1860.

2. On and from the day on which this Act comes into force, Act II of 1860 (to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea) shall be repealed. [New.]

Certain provisions of the Statutes made applicable to specified voyages from India.

3. The provisions contained in sections 4, 5 and 6 of this Act, and the schedule hereto annexed (being parts of the Passengers Act, 1855, as amended by the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863), are declared applicable to the carriage of passengers upon the following voyages, namely:— [Act II of 1860 s. 1, Act VII of 1871, ss. 23 and 24.] [New.] 18 & 19 Vic., c.119. 26 & 27 Vic., c. 51.

(a) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the British Colonies of Mauritius, Jamaica, British Guiana, Trinidad, St. Lucia, Grenada, St. Vincent, Natal, St. Kitts, Nevis and Fiji; [New.]

(c) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the Netherlands colony of Dutch Guiana; [New.

(d) Voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the Danish colony of St. Croix; [New.]

(e) Voyages under the Native Passenger Ships Act, 1876, from Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí, Rangoon and other ports in British India to the Straits Settlements, to the protected Native States adjoining the Straits Settlements, to Australia, and to ports in the Red Sea or Persian Gulf. VIII of 1876.

[Act II of 1860, s. 2.]

Governors or Consuls may pay expenses of passengers taken off passenger-ship.

4. If the passengers upon any such voyage as is specified in the last preceding section are taken off from the ship carrying such passengers, or are picked up at sea from any boat, raft or otherwise, it shall be lawful, if the port or place to which they shall be conveyed is in any of Her Majesty's colonial possessions, for the Governor of such colony, or for any person authorized by him for the purpose, or, if in any foreign country, for Her Majesty's Consular officer, at such port or place therein, to defray all or any part of the expenses thereby incurred.

[Act II of 1860, s. 3, 26 & 27 Vic., c. 51, New.]

Governors or Consuls may send on passengers, if the master of the ship fail to do so.

5. If any passenger of any such passenger-ship as aforesaid, without any neglect or default of his own, finds himself within any colonial or foreign port, or place other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he, or the Emigration Agent, or any public officer or other person on his behalf, has contracted that he should land, it shall be lawful for the Governor of the colony, or for any person authorized by him for the purpose or for Her Majesty's Consular officer at the foreign port or place, as the case may be, to forward the passenger to his intended destination, unless the master of the ship, within forty-eight hours of the arrival of such passenger, gives to the Governor or Consular officer, as the case may be, a written undertaking to forward or carry on within six weeks thereafter the passenger to his original destination, and unless the master accordingly forwards or carries him on within that period.

Act II of 1860, s. 4, 26 & 27 Vic., c. 51, s. 16.]

Expenses incurred under sections 4 and 5 to be a Crown debt.

[New.]

[New.]

nor shall it be necessary to adduce on behalf of Her Majesty any other evidence in support of the claim, but judgment shall pass for the Crown, with costs of suit, unless the defendant specially pleads and duly proves that the certificate is false or fraudulent, or specially pleads and duly proves any facts showing that the expenses were not duly incurred:

Provided, nevertheless, that in no case shall any larger sum be recovered on account of the expenses than a sum equal to twice the total amount of passage-money received or due to and recoverable by or on account of the owner, charterer or master of the passenger-ship or any of them from or on account of the whole number of passengers who may have embarked in the ship; which total amount of passage-money shall be proved by the defendant if he will have the advantage of this limitation of the debt: but if any such passengers are forwarded or conveyed to their intended destination under the provisions of the last preceding section, they shall not be entitled to the return of their passage-money, or to any compensation for loss of passage.

THE SCHEDULE.

[26 & 27 Vic., cap. 51, Sched. New.]

Form of Governor's or Consul's Certificate of expenditure in the case of Passengers shipwrecked &c.

(See section 6.)

(a). N. B.—1. If more passengers were rescued than forwarded, or if bedding, &c., was not supplied, alter the certificate to suit the facts of the case.

(b). N. B.—2. State generally the nature of the disaster and where it occurred. But if the passengers were only left behind without any default of their own, state the fact accordingly.

I hereby certify that acting under, and in conformity with, the provisions of the Indian Sea Passengers Act, 1855, I have defrayed the expenses incurred in rescuing, maintaining, supplying with necessary bedding, provisions and stores (a), and in forwarding to their destination passengers who were proceeding from to in the passenger-ship which was wrecked at sea, &c. (b).

And I further certify, for the purposes of the sixth section of the said Indian Sea Passengers Act, 1855, that the total amount of such expenses is and that such expenses were duly incurred by me under the said Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

ACT II of 1860 declares certain parts (namely, sections 52, 53 and 54) of the English Passengers Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vic., cap. 119) to be applicable to the carriage of passengers upon voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the colonies of Mauritius, Jamaica, British Guiana, Trinidad, St. Lucia and Grenada, and from ports in British India to ports in the Red Sea or Persian Gulf. The colonies mentioned were the places to which emigration was then lawful. Since 1860, emigration to the colonies of Fiji, Natal, Réunion, St. Croix, Guadeloupe, Martinique, Dutch Guiana, St. Vincent, Nevis and St. Kitts has been sanctioned. With respect, however, to voyages to places not specified in Act II of 1860, that

Act gives no power to any authority to recover expenses incurred in forwarding shipwrecked passengers to their destination and in maintaining them until they are so forwarded. At present, therefore, the voyages to which the Act does not apply are more numerous than those to which it does.

2. Again, the Act, as it stands at present, is, if strictly construed, inapplicable to the conditions under which emigration from India is usually conducted. Section 3 of the Act, following section 53 of the English Passengers Act, 1855, runs as follows:—"If any passenger * * * find himself within any colonial or foreign port or place other than that at which he may have contracted to land," &c. But as a rule, emigrants from India do not themselves contract with the owners or charterers of the vessels in which they emigrate. In all cases falling under the Indian Emigration Act VII of 1871 (or which may fall under the Indian Emigration Act XXI of 1883, when that Act is brought into force) the contract is made by a recruiter for the colony importing labour, under the supervision of the Protector of Emigrants. Emigrants despatched in this way are therefore technically excluded from the provisions of Act II of 1860. A similar difficulty appears to have arisen in England, and to have been met by an amendment of the law. Section 12 of the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vic., cap. 51), repeals section 53 of the English Passengers Act, 1855, and section 15 of the former Act substitutes for the words "other than that at which he may have contracted to land" the words "other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he or the Emigration Commissioners, or any public officer, or other person on his behalf, may have contracted that he should land".

3. These two defects in the Act came to notice in connection with the following occurrence. In the end of April last, the steamer Laleham, carrying emigrants from Calcutta to Dutch Guiana, grounded off Ceylon, and was compelled to land her passengers at Trincomalee. The Laleham returned to Calcutta, where she was examined by the Engineer-Surveyor to the port, and reported "unseaworthy and unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life". The Agents of the Laleham at first proposed to substitute another vessel, but subsequently declined to do so, offering merely to have the Laleham repaired at Calcutta, and to fulfil her charter-party by re-embarking the coolies at Trincomalee and taking them on to Surinam.

The Advocate General of Bengal, on being consulted, was of opinion that no action could be taken under Act II of 1860, and that the matter would be governed by the charter-party. Surinam, he said, being in Dutch Guiana, is not a place to which Act II of 1860 applies. He thought further that the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, would be construed strictly, and according to such construction he did not think that the words of section 3 of Act II of 1860 would cover the break-down in a voyage to which that Act applied, in any case other than that in which the passenger had himself contracted.

Under these circumstances legislation seems necessary in order to bring Act II of 1860 into conformity with the present system of emigration and the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863.

The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It repeals and re-enacts Act II of 1860 with the necessary amendments. Section 3 of the present Bill declares the subsequent provisions of the Bill (being parts of the English Passenger Act, 1855, as amended by the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863) to be applicable to all voyages to certain specified colonies and places, which are, in fact, the colonies and places to which under the existing law emigration is now lawful or is likely to be legalized; and in sections 5 and 6 the amendments made by the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, in sections 53 and 54 of the English Passengers Act, 1855 (which formed sections 3 and 4 of Act II of 1860) are incorporated with some slight modifications so as to adapt them to this country.
