mentioned in the margin who intend prosecuting their studies for the L.M.S at the Madras Medical College.

2. I may state that one of them has already successfully completed the first year's course of study and the other has applied for permission to join the College at the commencement of the autumn session. The Principal of the Medical College recommends the remissions of the fees.

3. Both of them are poor and unable to defray their expenses of study. They are deserving Government servants and have been consistently well reported on. On their own account therefore I am desirous to help them to better their position by obtaining a University medical qualification. But in view of improving the position of the Hospital Assistant and encouraging a better class of men to enter the service it is sound public policy to aid any Hospital Assistant who is capable of improving his medical education.

4. On these grounds mainly I earnestly request that Government will be pleased to grant them the concession prayed for. The total cost for the whole course of study will average

He may be asked in 80% whether he supports the Surgeon General's proposal. The remission will affect the receipt of the Medical College -

2. The Surgeon Genl. notes that both men are poor & unable to defray the expenses of study - The proposal in L. & M. to make them pay half fees will probably be dropped their means - If exempted from payment of fees, they will still have considerable expense for books & living at Washington - At the same time an undesirable precedent may be created - many other young men of the Hospital Ant. class, who have been medically educated at the expense of the State may seek to go through the College Dept. without payment of fees.

Submitted that such endeavours on the part of hospital assistants to improve their qualifications should be encouraged, & that the precedent will not be undesirable but good. As the S. G. observes it is very desirable to improve the position of the hospital assistant & encourage a better class of men to enter the service.

The course is a ⁴year's one will these men be absent from duty all the time? If so how is it managed? Can they be spared?

from the W.S.

The Surgeon Genl. states that the first man, J. Devasigamani, has completed the first year's course of the L.M.S. degree. He must therefore have joined the Medical College on the 1st July, 1907 - The quarterly Civil Medical List, connected to 31.3.08, (page 124) shows this Hospital as being in the General Hospital & to have been in Madras since April 1905 - The arrangement apparently is that the candidates are allowed to combine duty at a Presidency Hospital with attendance at the Medical College. The second man,

A. Rangaramanujam, (Page 130) is shown to have been on Cholera duty at Chittoor on 31.7.08. It is possible that the Surgeon General will arrange to attach him to one of the Presidency hospitals while he is undergoing the College course.

The S. G.'s proposal may perhaps be approved. It is of course a precedent, but cannot in the nature of things be largely followed, if the men have to be provided with appointments in Madras, and have to meet the expenses other than fees incidental to the course.

J. 25/6/08

It is a pity the Surgeon General has not told us more about it - Why ^{have} these two men been selected? He may have selected them merely on grounds of poverty or because they are particularly Shastri men. He has told us. We can always refuse without giving any grounds. As I do not think as a matter of precedent to take matters much.

As there is no time now to get further information, permission may be given for the remission of fees in this case. But let the Engineer. He has been given no more information & that if he makes recommendations again he must give ^{full} reasons for his selection.
