SAINT LOUIS, September 1st, 1908.

The accompanying Handbook presents a system of art education worthy the attention of students and of their parents and friends.

The thirty-fifth year of the Saint Louis School of Fine Arts opens September 21st. Generous gifts by friends of art education during a third of a century have enabled the Board of Control to extend the advantages of the institution,—purely a public educational work, in which no financial profit is derived or sought and the students receive the benefits—which they return in their own enhanced value to the country.

The School has students from the Pacific Coast and from the East, from Canada and Mexico, as well as from the more closely surrounding territory; and due attention is given to the welfare of all.

Every student of art is regarded as presenting an individual educational problem, and this Handbook does not attempt to deal with all points. Further information will be gladly supplied, as to individual requirements and matters not fully understood. Inquiries addressed to the director, at 19th and Locust Streets, will receive immediate attention.

Director.
