FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Chief Secretary.

No liability whether definite or indefinite should be incurred, it is thought, without the acceptance of Financial, otherwise this department will be in the dark as to what this Government is committed to Financially. The mere determination of the ^{exact} cost at some subsequent stage of the liability which an administrative department has committed to Government to is quite a minor affair and it is thought that the true function of Financial extends to something more than this.

I entirely agree with what Registrar says.

The Finance Department should be informed before orders issue committing Government to any new departure in the way of expenditure even though the exact amount has not yet been arrived at. This is the invariable practice in the Government of India.
