I passed 97th in the open class I and Indian Civil Service examination in 1906, and was one of the selected candidates for the Indian Civil Service in that year, but I did not obtain the certificate owing to failure to obtain half-marks in Hindustani by 13 marks, in the final examination in September 1907; in which however I passed in the other subjects, and in the total marks in the examination gained one place.

I am undertaking in January 1908 the course for the Oxford University Teaching Diploma which I hope to obtain by June or July 1908.

I wrote twice for the Newdigate prize at Oxford, and in 1904, the second occasion was near first place, being placed "second if not first" by one of the Examiners. I have a letter to this effect from one of the Examiners.

Annex 1.

ABINGDON SCHOOL,
27th March 1905.

Mr. O. J. Couldrey was for nine years a member of this school and left in 1901 as a Classical Scholar of Pembroke College, Oxford.

He is a man of high instinct and character widely read and with considerable power of originality. His achievements as a pure scholar do not adequately represent his intellectual ability.

He has literary gifts of a very high order and as an artist possesses a great talent for illustration. In either of these lines he may be expected to make his mark.

He has taken both at school and at college his due share in the general life of the community. He is a good oarsman, a fair musician and a most interesting companion.

I am sure that he will perform conscientiously and with diligence the duties of any office which he may be called to fill.

THOMAS LAYNG, M.A.,
Headmaster of Abingdon School,
formerly Scholar of Jesus College,
Cambridge.

Annex 2.

PEMBROKE COLLEGE,
OXFORD, December 3, 1907.

Mr. O. J. Couldrey, lately a Scholar of this College has a good record with us.

His conduct and character during his residence among us were satisfactory to the Authorities of the College and, I may add, he was a deservedly popular man among his compeers.

J. MITCHINSON,
Master.

Annex 3.

1, MARSTON FERRY ROAD,
OXFORD, 3rd December 1907.

Mr. O. J. Couldrey read with me for three terms in 1906-1907 during his year of probation.

He attended seven lectures in Indian Law, and also came to my house to do papers on the subjects for the examination. At the Final I.C.S. examination he passed in all the subjects which I taught him. He is seeking a post in the Indian Educational Service. As far as I can see he is quite competent to be admitted to that service. So far as character is concerned, all that I can say is that if there had been anything against him I should have heard of it.

I have heard nothing in any way about it.

E. J. TREVELYAN,
Reader in Indian Law at the University of Oxford.

Annex 4.

PEMBROKE COLLEGE,
OXFORD, 6th April 1905.

I have much pleasure in giving this testimonial on behalf of Mr. O. J. Couldrey, scholar of Pembroke, who has been my college pupil during the last two years.

Mr. Couldrey bears an excellent character, and his conduct during the whole of his career has been blameless. He has excellent abilities, and has taken an interest in all the varied sides of college life.

I have been much pleased with the work which he has done for me; and I have always found him very agreeable to deal with.

I have confidence in recommending him for the post of an assistant master.

G. WOOD,
Fellow and Tutor of Pembroke.
