In the scale of establishment sanctioned for the Reformatory School, Chingleput, there is provision for a rattan Instructor on Rs. 15 per mensem, but it has not been utilized for years. The subjoined extracts from a letter of the Superintendent of the school, No. 816, dated 18th May 1893, explain why the rattan industry has been given up in the school since 1893:-

"Very few of the pupils care to learn rattan work; and it is only to pupils who return to Madras or to large towns rattan work will be of any use, and to such pupils carpentry is decidedly a better paying and more useful trade.

Mr. Grigg was of opinion that with the present strength, accommodation, and staff, the five trades now taught are quite enough. I quite concur in this opinion, and

I think you will agree.

Rattan work may be introduced later on when the strength of the school increases. Boys in the Carpenter Class may be taught that trade as a subsidiary industry."

The strength of the school has since increased considerably and the Superintendent now reports that there are about 10 Korava boys in the school whose ancestral profession is basket-making and who will therefore readily take to rattan work and are likely to turn out to be efficient workmen. It is reported that there are also other boys - especially those coming from large towns-whom it is difficult to draft into any of the existing industrial classes and to whom a training in rattan work will be very useful. I agree with the Superintendent in thinking that as rattan work forms a subsidiary industry to carpentry every boy who is being trained as a carpenter should have a training in rattan work. I have the honour therefore to request that sanction may be accorded to utilize from 1st February next the provision for the rattan Instructor which exists in the current and ensuing years' budgets.

I have the honour to be,
