Please see paragraph 112 of the Public Instruction Report for the quinquennium ending the 31st March 1907. The Director of Public Instruction (Dr. Bourne) there wrote as follows:-

"A noticeable feature in connection with female education is that more girls attend boys' schools than girls' schools; on an average out of 20 girls under instruction 11 are found in schools for boys. This circumstance so far from being undesirable has certain advantages, and boys' or mixed schools are less expensive to maintain than special schools for girls. The elementary schools under public management were made open to boys and girls alike in the new educational rules of 1906, except those girls' schools where the Inspectress considers the presence of boys or of boys above a certain age, to be undesirable".

2. It does not appear that any necessity exists for taking action in the direction indicated by the Hon Secy.

H.M.

The following answer is suggested.
