Question.

The Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh asked:--

"Under section 13, Chapter V, of the Educational Code, head masters are required to set apart two half hours in the week for religious instruction by a single instructor to boys whose parents wish them to receive it. This space of time being quite inadequate and insufficient, will the Government be pleased to raise it to half an hour daily at least, so that the boys may be able to derive advantage from such instruction?"

Answer.

The Hon'ble Mr. De La Fosse replied:--

"It is understood that the rule to which the honourable member refers is that contained in section 74(a) of Chapter IV of the Educational Code. No representation has reached the Lieutenant-Governor to the effect that the time provided by this rule for religious instruction has proved to be insufficient. As a matter of fact, however, the facilities for religious instruction permitted by the rule have not been made use of to any appreciable extent. The rule dates from 1896, and classes for religious instruction were subsequently opened in the schools at Amroha, Shahjahanpur and Almora. In each case the class had to be discontinued owing to lack of attendance. The Lieutenant-Governor understands that classes for religious instruction have recently been established at the Government High schools at Meerut and Muzaffarnagar. His Honour is himself a strong supporter of religious instruction in schools and he considers that there should be no objection to a headmaster increasing the time devoted to religious instruction, provided that a wish to this effect was expressed by the parents of the students concerned, and that the extra time was not taken from the hours devoted daily to secular instruction."
