From the report on the working of the Presidency College for 1913-14, it is observed that there were ~~over the~~ ³⁶⁸ ~~368~~ ³⁶⁸ students in that year 18 students receiving instruction in Sanskrit in the three classes of the B.A. Honours course and 49 students with Sanskrit translation as optional in the two intermediate classes. The number of students taking Sanskrit as optional in the intermediate course is not, however, separately given. ^(in the report.) The number at present receiving instruction in Sanskrit is not known. The D.P.I. may be asked u.d. to furnish this information.

2. Attention is, however, solicited to para. 3 of the D.P.I.'s letter on page 3 of fo. no. 1001 Edl. dated the 4th November 1913 from which it will be seen that though the number of students is comparatively few, they are distributed over a large number of classes, necessitating the employment of additional establishment.

There are 5 Students now taking Sanskrit as an optional in the Intermediate class. There has been a fall in this and in the total number taking Sanskrit since last year but as already pointed out it is not so much the number of students that is in question as the number of classes in which they are distributed. I believe it is the case that Students can do very little Sanskrit work by themselves, they want complete oral explanation of nearly every word they read. The present staff is far below what the Professor calculates as necessary.

There is nothing so occult about Sanskrit as to render it more difficult to teach than Greek for example. ~~But~~ There are only 5 students in the Intermediate class. How many other students are there in the other classes & how many Sanskrit teachers are there already? At Oxford we used to teach Sanskrit in a class of 20 or 30. If a man on Rs 100 is proposed simply to teach 5 youths I think Fin. should object.
