The Zamorin's College, Calicut. 30-11-14

The New India of the 6th November, has the following+

"We wrote a note in these columns on the fines in the Basel Mission College at Calicut. Mr. Thaddeus, one of the lecturers of that College, sends us a letter, printed in the West Coast Spectator which states that the Headmaster of the Primary Department of the Zamorin's College, Calicut, punished a boy who stole some fried gram by making him eat a piece of cow-dung. If this be true---and the West Coast Spectator is a very reputable journal---the Principal of the College will, we are sure, at once interfere, for he would not allow his college to be thus disgraced. We appeal to Mr. Moore to look at once into this matter, and save the boys in the school attached to his College from such unclean indignity. We are much obliged to Mr. Thaddeus for drawing our attention to this most wrongful act."

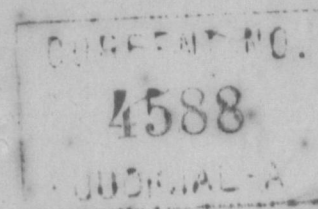

The matter mentioned in para 3 seems one to which the attention of the Educational Department should be drawn.

The punishment inflicted on the pupil was touching cord with his tongue.

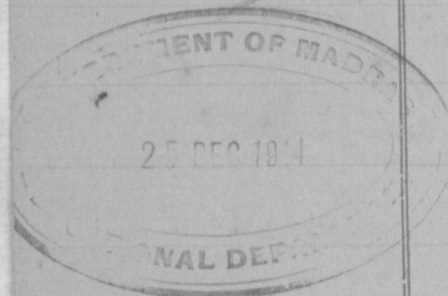

The Principal first heard of the matter on a complaint of the parent to the Managing Committee of the College who asked him to propose a punishment for the headmaster who was on the Principal's recommendation removed from the post of headmaster of the primary department and had his bag reduced by ten rupees a month.

The Inspector tells me that the whole affair has blown over and no action seems necessary.
