I would suggest -

The medium of instruction in most subjects is English. Rule 69 of the Madras Educational Rules gives the Director discretion in the matter. The Govt. understand that the majority of the parents of the girls attending the school specially wish that their daughters should be taught [in] English.

I would suggest after the word "would" in the last line "make as much progress as possible in English and it is considered that in view of the comparative shortness of the school life of girls this is best answered by the system in vogue."

The question and answer as finally approved were as follows: -

189 Q.—With reference to the question 124 asked by me at the last meeting of the Council, regarding the medium of instruction in the Government Girls' school at Triplicane and the reply thereto, will the Government be pleased to state the result of the enquiry promised in the answer?

Medium of instruction in Government Girls' school, Triplicane.

189 A.—The medium of instruction in most subjects from the third standard upwards is English. Rule 69 of the Madras Educational Rules gives the Director discretion in the matter. The Government understand that the majority of the parents of the girls attending the school specially wish that their daughters should make as much progress as possible in English and it is considered that in view of the comparative shortness of the school life of girls this is best answered by the system in vogue.
