Madras,
5th May 1915.

To

The Secretary,

To the Government of Madras,
Educational Department, Madras.

Respected Sir,

I have just brought out a Second Edition of my book,
the Dhātūrūpa-muktāvali--a handbook of Sanskrit Grammar.

I beg to state for your information that many eminent pandits and Professors in Sanskrit have borne testimony to the excellence of the book and to the features that characterise it and distinguish it from other treatises on the same subject.
The Selections which have been added in this Edition give it,
I am assured, the character of being very practical.

I beg therefore to request you to be kind enough to approve of the book and have it introduced into the Schools under your Jurisdiction.

Praying to be favored with your help,

I beg to remain,

Respected Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

P. K. Doraiswami Ayangar

SELECT OPINIONS.

Pandit P. K. Doraiswami Aiyangar's New Edition of his Dhaturupamuktavali is, I am glad to say, an improvement in many respects upon the first edition of that work. He has pointed out clearly in this new edition what portions of the book are to be studied in the various Forms beginning from the first and going up to the sixth; and in doing this he has rightly relied upon his long experience as a Sanskrit teacher in an important and popular High School. Another improvement is the addition of suitable literature in Verse and Prose to be read in the various Forms, so as to make the book serve the purposes of a Grammar and a Reader at the same time. I consider the book to be a fit publication for use in all High Schools wherein Sanskrit is being taught, and can confidently recommend it to such High School students as wish to learn Sanskrit accurately and well.

DEAR SIR,

I went through a few pages of your 'Dhaturupamuktavali.' It is just the sort of grammar that we want for High Schools. The publication of this work in two Parts with selections in Prose and Verse suited to the capacity of the students under various stages of instruction is likely to be popular.

Yours truly,
(Sd.) R. KRISHNAMACHARIAR, M.A., VIDYANIDHI,

Madras Presidency.*

I have seen some portions of Pandit P. K. Doraiswami Aiyangar's Dhaturupamuktavali. I am glad to be able to say that by a judicious combination of the Indian and European methods of studying the Sanskrit language, the work is made specially useful to Sanskrit students in Secondary Schools, and I am sure it will provide them with the necessary equipment for acquiring a fairly good acquaintance with the complicated structure and idiom of the Sanskrit language.

Presidency College, and Curator, Government Oriental

I have read portions of Dhaturupamuktavali composed by Mr. Doraiswami Aiyangar, Sanskrit Pandit of the Hindu High School, Triplicane. I am of opinion that the work will be very useful to all Sanskrit students studying Grammar. He has taken great pains in so arranging the course of studies as to be of use to students of Forms I to VI. The selections of Prose and Poetry are excellent. His long experience as a Sanskrit Teacher of Students preparing for University Examinations, has enabled him to understand thoroughly their real difficulties, and he has done his best to remove them. I wish him success.
