LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Educational Department.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. S. Srinivasa Sastri.

131 Q.—Are there any rules governing the writing and publishing of school-books by officers of the Educational department?

If so, will the Government be pleased to lay a copy on the table?

admission to the service, he should obtain the permission of the D. S. if he is a member of the Board or a Schoolmaster in Service or of the Govt. If he belongs to the Indian Educational Service. The permission is not given in these cases (especially in the case of persons who are used in schools) is generally, subject to the condition that the officer concerned should retain no interest in the sale of the published and should immediately dispose of it to the publisher. In some cases, authors have been permitted to enter into a contract with the publishers on the royalty system.

2. At the instance of the Chief of the Press, Bombay, the question whether any change in the existing practice was called for, was examined in 1914 in consultation with the Govt. It was finally decided that a change was necessary.

3. The following draft was submitted for approval:

"No. 1. No rule in the Educational Department is that, before an officer is appointed to it accepts any specific literary employment."

Educational Department.

It is a standing rule in the Educational Department that before an officer belonging to it accepts any specific literary employment of an editorial or compilatory character, he should obtain the permission of the D.I. if he is a member of the Provincial or Subordinate Educational Service or of the Govt. if he belongs to the Indian Educational Service. The permission accorded in these cases (specially in the case of publications to be used in schools) is generally coupled with the condition that the officer concerned should retain no interest in the sale of the publication and should immediately dispose of it to a publisher. In ^{stray} ~~some~~ ^{where the book needs no designation for schools for other uses} cases, authors have been permitted to enter into a contract with the publishers on the royalty system.

2. At the instance of the Oxford University Press, Bombay, the question whether any change in the existing practice was called for, was examined in 1914 in consultation with other Govts. It was finally decided that no change was necessary.
