Through The Port Officer,

V i z a g a p a t a m.

& Presidency Port Officer
Madras.

The humble petition of P.V. Seshagiri Rao
Head Clerk Landing & Shipping Department
Port Office, Vizagapatam.

Most Respectfully, sheweth,

That your honor's humble petitioner is a Government Servant of upwards of 21 years in the Marine Department and now holds a permanent & pensionable appointment in the Port Office Vizagapatam as Head Clerk Landing & Shipping branch on a salary of Rs.35/- per mensem and has passed the late Middle School examination in the First Class which was at one time considered equal to the old Matriculation examination and earnestly seeks exemption from the present examination rules for appearing for the Translation Higher in Telugu of the Special Test Examinations for some of which he appeared under the old rules and failed, to enable him to better his prospects in Government Service.

That as regards his knowledge of English your humble petitioner will not take up your honor's time by mentioning anything but contents himself with submitting herewith ^{some of} his literary credentials which he hopes and trusts will convince your honor that he is deserving of the little concession he prays for.

That your petitioner relying on your justice and generosity beseeches early consideration of his representation and prays that your honor may be graciously pleased to exempt him from the operation of the present day Rules of the Public Service Notification and allow him to appear for the Translation Higher grade in Telugu of the special ^{Test} Examinations.

And your petitioner as in duty bound ^{will} ever pray.

P. V. Seshagiri Rao.

Examinations.

The Madras Mail says:—

The essays which are 127 in number have been selected in the course of the compiler's wide reading. They embrace a variety of subjects such as ambition, beauty, character, drinking, economy, friendship, God, health, life, man, prayer, religion, and truth, and are representative of the writings of eminent Divines and great masters of English literature such as Addison, Johnson, Carlyle and Ruskin. The compiler has bestowed great labour in the selection of subjects. Mr. Seshagiri Rao's compilation entitled "Nobleliving" is well suited as a text book of morals.

NOBLE LIVING

Being Essays on Religious and Moral Subjects
COMPILED BY

P. V. SESHAGIRI RAO.

Select Press Opinions.

Madras Standard.—The compilation contains, amongst other things, masterpieces from such men as Dr. Martineau, Dr. Channing, Theodore Parker, Emerson, Carlyle, Ruskin, Tennyson, Johnson and Addison.

The Hindu.—The book consists of 127 essays culled and clipped from the masterpieces of the English language, containing some of the greatest thoughts of some of the greatest minds and forms a most interesting and instructive study for the young as well as the old.

The Theosophist.—A choice collection of valuable extracts on moral subjects from the world's best writers.

The Christian Patriot.—The book will do admirably as a book of reference for those who wish to seek for information or advice.

The Christian College Magazine.—Mr. Seshagiri Rao has here collected a number of extracts on such subjects as Simplicity, the Reality of Sin, Early Rising, Success, Sympathy, Bhakti. His range is from the Imitation of Christ to the Gita, and from Ruskin and Addison to the unknown contributors to Indian newspapers. The extracts are not long and are usually suggestive, and we can well believe that men of indeterminate religion might find moral stimulus in reading them.

Mysore Standard.—The compiler of this exceedingly well got up publication has done a service to the rising generation in this country by placing before them quotations from the writings of eastern and western thinkers ancient and modern. As a moral Text Book in our schools it ought to be of great value.
