WGAO 166 of 30.10.16

I have not got the information and should have to ask each college for it.
It is not known that they all have a record of applicants. However students commonly apply to more than one college
so that the number of rejections ^{from all colleges} would be considerably larger than the number that failed to obtain admission to any college.
Even if we could get the latter number

it would mean little - we should want to know the causes of rejection and classify rejection at any rate under "unfit for mission", "want of room".

The inclusion of a student in the university list merely means that the university is prepared to matriculate him if he is admitted to a college and imposes no obligation on any principal to admit him.

If the position is to be made clear (to the Addl. Member) it appears that the Director's w/o note above will have to be ^{mainly} embodied in a draft answer. The following draft answer is suggested: -

"The information asked for is not available. Even if it were called for, it is not likely that the college authorities will have a record of applicants. Further as students conveniently apply to more than one college, the number of students who were refused admission from all colleges would be considerably larger than the number that actually failed to secure admission to any college.

Please see the

D. P. P. note on page 4 & 5. It is evident that accurate information on this point will be difficult to get, and that no definite conclusion can be drawn from the total number of students refused admission into the intermediate classes of colleges. Order solicited as to the lines on which a reply should be drawn.
