(F) In G.O. No. 711 Est., dated the 30th June 1915, Mr. Guthrie, the Leather Expert, was permitted to proceed with the detachment of the Madras Artillery Volunteers for service in Force D. In his absence the following arrangements have been made for the conduct of work in the Leather Dress School which was opened toward the beginning of July last :-

- (1) D. Marsden, the Dyling Expert to be in ^(temporary) charge of the Leather School.
- (2) Mr. Mason, the head tanner of Messrs Chambers & Co., Madras, to give practical instruction in the schools on certain days.

Besides these Mr. Dresser ^{has} also stated that the course of engineering will be given by Mr. J. Karayanamanki ~~one of~~ one of the supervisors in the Deptt. - please see pages 5 to 7 of G.O. No. 1017 Est., dated the 17th September 1915, & the order. Though D. Marsden is nominally in charge of the school, he was recently deputed to Bangalore to carry on certain investigations in indigenous dyes at the Indian

I would say—

Mr Guthrie was permitted to proceed on military duty on the 30th June last. He is not expected to return upon the close of the war. The first year leather school was opened in July. The first year's course there consist mainly in lectures on general science which are being taken by other members of the staff. For practical work the services of one of the employees of Messrs Chambers and Co. have been engaged.
