Paragraph 4 of G.O. 725, Educational, 8th August 1913.

2. As regards dyeing the Government have decided to establish technical classes in dyeing at the Madura Technical Institute when the new buildings for the latter which are under construction are ready. It may not be possible to establish similar classes in other centres for this industry for some time to come.

3. No other form of Government assistance for the revival of the weaving and dyeing industries in Nellore, which the Municipal Council states are dying out, seems to be feasible of adoption at present.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

In his notes on the inspection of hand-loom in the Madras Presidency, the Weaving Assistant, M.R.Ry. N. Subrahmanya Ayyar, stated in 1912 that in Nellore town there were very few weaver families but that some considerable amount of work was carried on in the dyeing of yarn and of finished goods. In the Nellore district, however, there are several centres where ordinary and fly shuttle looms are working. There are at present two peripatetic weaving parties, one touring in the southern and the other in the northern districts of the Presidency, which are engaged in demonstrating to weavers the advantages of improved methods and appliances. The party for the northern districts was organized only in August 1914. In the year 1914-15, it had visited the Kistna and Gōdāvari districts. It will in due course move to other districts including Nellore.

Returned with the following extract from

His Excellency's reply:--

"You refer to the fact that your town had long been an important centre of art and industry. I share your regret that weaving and dyeing have here fallen upon less prosperous days. The Government have, as perhaps you are aware, recently constituted two peripatetic weaving parties for instructing the weavers of this Presidency in improved methods and appliances and one of these parties will in due course visit this district. With regard to dyeing, it is the intention of Government to provide in the Madura Technical Institute a centre where technical instruction on modern lines will be given, and we trust that this project will be of benefit to the Presidency at large. In this connection I may perhaps appropriately draw your attention to the Exhibition of the Arts and Industries of this Presidency and of Southern India generally which is being organized with the help and under the direction of the Madras Government, and will open in Madras on the 27th of this month. It is hoped that this Exhibition may attract visitors from all parts of the Presidency, and thereby achieve its purpose of making more widely known the natural resources of the Presidency in agriculture, fisheries, also better methods, and also the products of the local and indigenous industries which exist in such variety throughout the Presidency."
