There are 14 posts of assistant inspectors included in the Provincial Educational Service. In the past these were filled either by direct recruitment of persons possessing English qualifications or by the promotion of qualified members of the Subordinate Collegiate branch or sub-assistant inspectors. The Additional Member suggests that the posts should be reserved for sub-assistant inspectors. It is doubtful whether the adoption of the suggestion will conduce to the efficiency of the service. In their memorandum prepared for the Public Services Commission, the members of the Provincial Educational Service advocated that recruitment for the proposed class II of the Madras Educational Service (corresponding to the present Provincial Educational Service) should be partly by promotion from the subordinate service and partly by direct appointment in the proportion of 3 to 1. Some of the members even advocated that 50 per cent. of the vacancies should be filled by direct recruitment.

2. The Public Services Commission have recommended that the appointments on the administrative side should be kept apart from collegiate and special appointments, that they should be divided into two classes - superior and inferior - and that in class II (inferior) should be included assistant inspectors of schools, vice-principals of training colleges and headmasters of less important high schools. They have not made any specific recommendations as regards recruitment for class II, but have left the whole question to be decided by the local Governments. In the scheme for the reorganization of the inspecting agency submitted by the Director in 1914, it was

I would certainly not advocate any restriction as the Hon. member wants. I think that the all among the B.I.S. system was built due to its being largely constituted by promotion from the subordinate service and that direct appointment of men without special training is very desirable. It is sometimes convenient to appoint such men as assistant inspectors even when it is intended to employ them ultimately in core work. I am inclined to a slight negative.
