I think broadly the same answer is in the other case with the difficulty in the way somewhat greater in the case of Muhammadan teachers.

but I don't think this is a reason for making a general concession and so it is the difference between a general and a special concession

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar Avargal.
Home (Education) Department.

13/ 7 Q.—With reference to G.O. No. 320, Educational, dated 24th March 1916, will the Government be pleased to state—

- (i) whether untrained teachers are easily obtained for Rs. 8 a month; and
- (ii) whether such teachers may be employed on Rs. 10 a month as a temporary measure until trained teachers become available.

[Meeting of 3rd April 1916.]

Provisional answer.

1. There does not appear to be any general difficulty in obtaining untrained teachers on Rs.8/- a month. In cases where such difficulty has been reported Government have approved the payment of untrained teachers at a rate usually reserved for trained teachers.

2. Government are not prepared to give the general sanction apparently contemplated by the Honourable Member.
