3 RELIGIONS of the PAST AND PRESENT

For a true understanding of the spirit and history of the great religions of the past and present it would be difficult to find a better book than this. The general reader with interest in religions, the ecclesiastic, and the more serious student will find it a most authoritative, stimulating and readable one-volume treatment of those religions which have influenced the world's history.

In reading the volume we feel that the authors aim at the truth that the religion of a race is its highest cultural expression. The ideals, the history and the significance in modern life of certain great religions are presented with simplicity, directness and accuracy. Each man sets forth his subject according to his own ideas of matter and proportion—the result is the spontaneous, stimulating quality of each chapter and the authoritative nature of the whole.

War is bringing home the human need of ideas and buttressed faiths. Suffering, sacrifice, and familiarity with death stimulate thought concerning aspects of life termed religious. The deeper spirituality among the people of the battling countries is attested by a seeking of support from the organized churches and by the strivings for truth by isolated individuals through the maze of clashing ideals.

If we may judge from reading and lecture circles, library circulation and magazine material, the interest in the history and development of religions is particularly powerful in America. Any individual who desires to obtain an authoritative, lucid presentation of the religions which have played and are playing an important part in the thought of the world should read this book.

4
The history of religions is the history of man's endeavor to find satisfactory spiritual truth. As a study of the military wisdom of ancient leaders is by no means despised by the modern soldier, so the spiritual findings of our direct and collateral ancestors serve a valuable purpose in the religious life of our day.

THE CONTRIBUTORS

MORRIS JASTROW, JR., PH.D., LL.D. is Professor of Semitic Languages in the University of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the American Philosophical Society, one-time President of the American Oriental Society, etc. He has written numerous books dealing with the History of Religions in the Ancient East. Among these the best known are The Religion of Babylonia and Assyria, 1898, which appeared in an enlarged German edition, in three volumes, with an atlas of illustrations, in 1912; and Civilization of Babylonia and Assyria, published by the J. B. Lippincott Company in 1915. He is also the editor of a series of handbooks on the History of Religions of which five volumes have been issued.

FRANKLIN EDGERTON, PH.D. is Assistant Professor of Sanskrit in the University of Pennsylvania. He is Corresponding Secretary of the American Oriental Society and President of the Philadelphia Oriental Club. He is author of numerous articles on Indian literature and Sanskrit philology and has in press a book entitled Vikrama's Adventures, a Sanskrit story cycle (Harvard Oriental Series, 2 volumes).

GEORGE DEPUE HADZSITS, A.M., PH.D. is Assistant Professor of Latin in the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of many recent articles on the Roman Religion and has made special study of Epicureanism.

ARTHUR C. HOWLAND, PH.D. is Professor of Mediæval History in the University of Pennsylvania. He has made special study of the legal institutions of the Middle Ages and is the author of numerous articles on this and other mediæval subjects.

WALTER WOODBURN HYDE, A.M., PH.D. is Assistant Professor of Greek in the University of Pennsylvania. He has travelled extensively in Eastern Europe and the Mediterranean lands, especially Greece. He has published many treatises on Greek Archæology, Literature, Geography, Religion and Legal Antiquities, and is author of a work, De Olympionicarum Statuis.

FRANK G. SPECK, A.M., PH.D. is Assistant Professor of Anthropology in the University of Pennsylvania. He has done extensive field work among the Indian tribes of Indian Territory, Oklahoma, Maine and Canada and is author of many books and articles dealing principally with the American Indian.
