106. Will the Government be pleased to state whether dismissal from Government service disqualifies a registered medical practitioner from being a medical Inspector of Schools?

[Meeting of the 14th February 1931.]

The dismissal of a registered medical practitioner from Govt. service does not entail removal of his name from the Medical Register, and there seems to be no objection to his being a medical inspector of schools — although in the case of ~~aided schools~~ schools under local bodies or under private management one of the conditions for the payment of grant towards the cost of medical inspection is that the name of the medical officer selected for inspection shall be submitted to the D.P.J. for approval.

"The Govt. have nowhere laid down that dismissal from Govt. service disqualifies a registered medical practitioner from being a medical inspector of schools."

3) As the subject however relates to the Law (Educn) Dept, that Dept. may be asked whether they will take over the question.

Before accepting an officer as Medical Inspector of schools I consult the Surgeon-General. On a reference from the Inspector of Schools, III Circle, I asked the Surgeon-General whether he saw any objection to the appointment of medical practitioners as Medical Inspectors of schools who had been dismissed from Public Service not on account of "infamous" conduct in any professional respect but for disobedience of orders and refusal to undertake military duty. The Surgeon-General stated that he was not in favour of appointing such persons as Medical Inspectors of schools and the Inspector was informed accordingly. The draft answer proposed therefore hardly meets the case. I think the Surgeon-General might with advantage see the file before the question is answered.

Since writing the above, Mr K. Dhundiganapathy, Registered Medical Practitioner of Palakol Kistna Dt., has informed me that he is petitioning for it on the subject. In these circumstances, it might be a correct answer to say that "the matter is under consideration."
