RESOLUTIONS

1. That the existing vacancies in the Indian Educational Service need not be filled up. Professors acting as inspectors may be reverted to their original duties so that Madras Educational Service and Assistant Inspectors may act as inspectors.

If there should be any unavoidable necessity to fill up any Indian Educational Service place best effort should be made to recruit from India.

Note.- The evidence before the Public Service Commission emphasised the point that the interchange between the two classes, professors and inspectors should be in very rare cases. The professors being specialists in certain subjects, they get out of date in that subject and their knowledge is lost to colleges.

3. The District Educational officers would replace the present inspector of schools, they may be recruited from Madras Educational Service or from assistant inspectors. Their pay may be given from 250 minimum pay.

4. The subject of formation of secondary school boards towards nationalisation of education (by decentralising in secondary education) is worth considering. A note on the subject may be circulated to Members so that it may be discussed further at another meeting.

5. There is no necessity for an L.T. section attached to Queen Mary's college. The removal of a section from Triplicane High School and converting into a practising school will impair its usefulness.
For a handful of students for L.T. there is no immediate necessity to have an L.T. section. There should be thorough re-organisation of training schools in the district headquarters in rural areas.

6(a). Recruitment for Women's Service also should be from India. If necessary scholarships may be given to women on a deputation to foreign countries to be trained in special subjects or as inspectresses.

(b) That proper encouragement should be given to the Indian Women teachers in the Educational Service as regards both pay and status.

7. Even if lower elementary teachers are eliminated and higher elementary teachers are encouraged, supervision in the matter of instruction and organisation is necessary. Supervisors therefore fill a place in the scheme of expansion of elementary education. The Sub Assistants or Deputy Inspectors will not be able to meet the requirements of elementary education. But we should get better class of supervisors who might be able to get promotion to Deputy Inspector, if possible. Even if the present class of supervisors be eliminated, a better class of supervisors, one or two, may be attached to Deputy Inspectors. The present method of instruction in training schools requires improvement so as to appreciate the organisation of a school as a whole. This matter may further be investigated by referring to District Educational Councils or other bodies and persons interested in or informed in the matter.

Mr. Ramalingam Chettiyar is not in favour of retention of present class of supervisors; in view of increase of sub assistant inspectors supervisors should be reduced.
