Yanjore piled up, one on top of the other, in tiers on an open stand, with no attempt at arrangement, and no protection against theft. I, at that time, made a resolution never to recommend the loan of any part of the Collections, of which I am the custodian, on the occasion of Exhibitions. These are, at Exhibitions, such as the short-lived ones which are now held annually in connection with the Congress, no funds for the suitable arrangement of exhibits in glazed cases. And, at Delhi, I lost a rather valuable chased metal tray, which I have been unable to replace.
