reconstruction work by educating the village people to tackle their economic, social and other problems. Five training centres have been sanctioned under the schemes each to train 35 workers a year.

In 1939, a Committee was appointed to draw up a scheme for training women workers in rural reconstruction work, but the scheme prepared proved defective. Consideration of the scheme has been deferred for the present but enquiries are being made as to whether any of the existing institutions interested in women welfare will agree to train women workers in rural development work.

A short account of the activities of the Labour Welfare Department and of the institutions doing social service work is given below. At present no co-ordination exists.

Labour Welfare Department: This Department aims at providing the labour population of large industrial towns with means of employing their leisure time in healthful activities and wholesome amusements. Recreation centres have also been started with the object of improving their education, health and moral outlook. There are 4 large and 16 small centres; large centres possess a central hall for meetings, lectures, cinemas, and dramas, a library, a gymnasium, a large playground for adults and a smaller one for children, while smaller centres are located in rented premises where such activities are conducted on a smaller scale. They are managed by a large number of welfare officers, and the personnel of the Department also includes many research workers. In one of the centres (at Ahmedabad) there is an industrial workshop for the training both of apprentices and of labourers already employed with the dual purposes of solving the problem of industrial unemployment and of raising the standard of skill and efficiency of operatives already engaged in the mill industry. The Department has a Film Producing Unit which has produced 16 new films
