The Board invites the attention of the Government to their orders cited above in which the action of the Board in having permitted the Collectors of all districts except Viziagapatam, Coimbatore, Ramnad Tinnevely, South Kanara, Malabar and Madras to get the heading slips of procurement Registers AI, AII, BI and BII printed locally. The Board considers that the same procedure should be followed for fasli 1356 and that in the districts of Viziagapatam, Coimbatore, Ramnad, Tinnevely and South Kanara also the forms should be printed so as to have uniformity and neatness in the preparation of the Registers prescribed under the intensive procurement schme.

2. In order to prevent wastage of paper and to avoid overlapping of AI and BI Registers, the Board has ordered that the Registers AI and AII should be combined and that BI register should be maintained in a simplified form. A copy of B.P.Rt.920 dated 16.7.46 containing the instructions issued to Collectors in the matter is enclosed for reference. As the writing up of the procurement registers had to be commenced immediately, the Board has, in anticipation of the approval of the Government permitted the Collectors of all districts except Malabar and Madras to get the heading slips printed locally, supplying the required paper from their allotment of stationery and replenishing the stock by indents on the Superintendent of Stationery. The Board requests that its action may be ratified.

Sub:-Procurement-Paddy rice and millets-yield and surplus determining registers-Revision of-Instructions-Issued.

Read:Board's ref.No.395/44-11 CS dated 26-7-'44.

In order to determine correctly the surplus of paddy and millets with ryots, the Board has prescribed a special set of registers, A I, A II, B I and B II to be maintained by the karnams. The forms in which these registers should be maintained and the instructions as to how they should be filled in are contained in the booklet entitled 'the Intensive Procurement scheme of paddy and millets-Instructions'. It has been found that in actual practice the writing up of these registers in their present form involves considerable wastage of paper. In order to prevent this and to avoid overlapping of A II and B I registers, the Board considers that the register A I and A II should be combined and B I register should be maintained in a simplified form. It accordingly directs that for fasli 1356 the karnams should be instructed to maintain the registers in the forms shown in the Appendix. Section II of the B register should continue to be maintained in the existing form.

2. In modification of the instructions already issued regarding the manner in which the registers A I, A II and B I should be filled in, which are embodied in the booklet the following instructions are issued:-

Register 'A' (Revised)

Where a ryot cultivates only one field or survey No. the entries should be made in one line. Where he cultivates two survey Nos. the entries in the left half of the page (i.e. cols. 3 to 13) should be made in two lines and the yield and surplus to be noted in cols. 14 to 24 should be entered against the second line. If the number of fields cultivated by the ryot are many and the crop is one, some lines on the right hand side of the page will be left blank, since the total yield, the requirements and the surplus will be entered only on one line as indicated in the sample form given in the Appendix. When more than one crop is raised by a ryot, in col. 14, showing the total yield under each crop, the name of the crop should be noted as numerator and its yield as the denominator. If on a single field two crops are raised two lines should be used on the right half of the page (i.e. cols. 14 to 24), while only one line will be sufficient on the left half (cols. 3 to 13). If three or more crops are raised on one and the same field as many lines will be used in the right half of the page as there are crops (cols. 14 to 24) while only one line will be sufficient in the left half. If on a number of fields a number of crops are raised, as many lines as there are survey numbers will be utilised in the left half of the page while the lines used in the right half of the page will be as many as the varieties of crops raised. Where a ryot is likely to grow a second or third crop on a field on which he has already raised one crop, or where he is likely to raise another crop later in the year in another survey No. or portion of it, some lines may be left blank for making the necessary entries. From the karnams local knowledge it should be possible for him to know approximately how many lines should be left over for making such entries subsequently.

Register B I (Revised)

This register should be written only for those cultivators who have a surplus. The headings of the several columns are self explanatory. If a cultivator has a surplus according to

According to the 'A' register (Revised) it will be entered in column 3. If he has also a surplus according to the B II register on account of rents received by him in kind, it will be entered in column 4 and the total struck in Column 5. If a person has no surplus from his own cultivation according to the 'A' Register but has a surplus because of the rents received as shown in the B II register, that surplus quantity should be entered in columns 4 and 5. It may be that any sufficient producer receives rent which more than meets his deficiency, with the result that he may have a surplus. If so, this quantity should be noted in the remarks column of B II register and the nett surplus will be carried forward to columns 4 and 5 of the B I register.
