Clause (a) of the question

It is not clear what anomalies the M.L.C. refers to.
Perhaps he desires to point out the difference in the scales of pay for teachers in Govt. institutions ^{and for teachers} in those under local bodies and private agencies.

Clauses (b) to (d) of the question.

The general question of revision of salaries of teachers is being considered. The Cabinet Sub Committee has made its recommendation and the whole question will be discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet to be convened shortly. Perhaps the question of the revision of all-salarie decision of Government may be known before the question is to be answered in the council. If no decision is taken by that time the answer may be as follows: --

"The general question of the revision of salaries of teachers in schools is under consideration".

The question may be referred back to the author for clarification as to what are the anomalies he refers to

The answer may be as follows:

(a), (b), (c) and (d). Yes. Certain representations have been received from teachers protesting against the different scales of pay in the different agencies of service. These differences in the pay of teachers have existed all along and they are inherent in the system of having various agencies for the spread of education. The Cabinet-Sub-Committee which recently considered the question of the revision of salaries has not gone into the large questions of policy with reference to agencies of education and other matters on educational re-organisation, but they have made only such recommendations as they thought fit in the matter of revision of salaries.
