Q.NO.489.

Will the Hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state:

(a) whether in the admission to the professional colleges, there is any instruction that in addition to observing communal ratio in admission, any district-wise distributions also are to be made in the admissions;

(b) whether there is any distinction or variations between the candidates of the various districts as regards the percentage of marks, to be obtained by them for qualifying themselves to admission to the classes such as Tanjore Brahmin must get 90% while Brahmins from other districts may obtain less and get admitted; and

(c) whether this principle if adopted does not put a handicap upon the best students getting the best training and thus there is a loss of the best talent for the service of the country;

(d) whether even accepting the communal the communal ratio, will the Government be pleased to issue instructions that best men and persons who have obtained very high marks in each of the communities may be selected irrespective of the districts they come from? and

(e) in view of the repeated complaints made about the dearth of competent professional men, Engineers, Medical men, Agriculturists, etc., will
