Let us not say "about 3,500." We may give the exact figure. A reference may be made to the D.P.I. and exact figures given. In fact we have figures district-war and taluk-war and so exact figures can be given.

In the course of the year, I believe, about a thousand schools have been started and most of them in the school-less centres. That also may be ascertained from the D.P.I.

With reference to the ^{query} of H.M. (Education) at on page 2 ante, attention is invited to the statements at in the linked file below, which show the number and names of school less villages with a population of 500 and above in each district, furnished by the respective D.E.O's. From these statements, an abstract statement has been prepared and is put up at 'S' below from which it will be seen that the number of villages is 4566.

2. The figure 4578 given in the draft answer was since furnished by the D.P.I. in a subsequent communication received from him in connection with the proposal of H.Pr. that a contribution might be claimed from the Govt. of India for buildings to be put up for elementary schools. The file was circulated to H.M. (Edn.), H.M. (Fin.) and H.Pr. on 26.1.49. It is understood that the file is with H.Pr. now. For orders whether the return of this file from H.Pr. may be awaited or the figure of 4566 given in para 1 above may be adopted for the answer.

To start schools in these school-less villages we had circularised to District Boards to combine un-economic schools and start schools in those places. Certain District Boards have written that they have started schools in the current year. I remember to have received a letter from the Krishna District Board that they are planning to start 20- 25 schools - I speak from my memory - in the next year. The D.P.I. may be asked to ^{state} start as to in how many of these places schools have been started in the current year and whether information is available for next year. That also may be given.

The draft need not be sent for answer until that information is received.
