Although the subscriber is due to retire in March 1951, and the recovery of the temporary advance in 24 instalments may not be possible, the question of deducting the un-recovered portion of the advance at the time of final closure as suggested by the Director of Public Instruction does not arise as the amount of advance will be debited to his account in the month in which it is drawn and the balance at the credit of his account will alone be payable to him on his retirement.

The advance applied for by the subscriber can, therefore, be sanctioned by Government as already intimated.
