The plan was already in the file, perhaps they escaped notice.
There was some misapprehension about the estimate.
Hence the delay. It was first of all wrongly thought in the office that the estimate had been received from the D.P.D.'s office, and mislaid in our office. But on detailed inquiry it is found that the D.P.D.'s office overlooked to return it. It has now been obtained and is submitted

To

The Director of Public Instruction,

Madras.

Sir,

With reference to your endorsement, n^o 1404, dated, the 8th ultimus upon G. O. n^o 87(a) dated, the 2nd ultimus, I have the honour to submit herewith (enclosure n^o 1) a plan of this Town drawn to scale showing therein the relative positions of the various school buildings and the site on which it is proposed to erect a new building for the Training college, Rajahmundry.

2. Enclosure n^o 2 is a statement showing the strength of the various classes of the Training college. It will be seen from this that there are 477 students including 97 students who have been lately transferred to the Municipal Lower Secondary School newly opened. Of these the collegiate training classes and the High School school department of the Practising school (numbering about 206) are located in the Arts college building, in which there is barely space (vide enclosure no 3) sufficient for the new Division of the 6th Form, which is at present accommodated in a shed on the roof of the building and for the collegiate Training classes which have to look out every hour for a vacant room.

The remaining classes of the Practising school (the middle and the Primary departments) and Upper and Lower Secondary and the Primary grade Training classes containing respectively 209 and 62 on rolls are housed in the old Normal school including also that part of the building originally occupied by the Inspector of Schools, Northern circle, which we have rented since July 1894. Sometime for this rent was sought in my letter no 590.

As regards the doubt entertained by Government that the opening of the Municipal Lower Secondary school may have the effect of leaving the Training college without proper practising classes, I beg to

to state as follows.

About 75 per cent of the school going population of this town belong to the mofussil. The major portion of these again reside in Dinespattah on account of the superior accommodation which they find there. Hence there is no reason to fear that the strength of the practising classes will suffer by the opening of the new Municipal school.

Even when there was a branch of the Union High school in Dinespattah, the Practising classes of the old Training school were sufficiently large.

As to the necessity of the expenditure upon the new Training college Building I have the honour to say that if the new Institution is to serve as a central school for the whole town, there can be no question that it should be sufficiently large and spacious for at least 500 or 600 boys. The papers sent with the endorsement, no 1404, dated

OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR OF

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,

Madras, 4th May 1895.

No. 5333

From

THE HONORABLE MR. D. DUNCAN, M.A., D.Sc.,

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,

Madras,

To

THE HONORABLE THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT,

FORT ST. GEORGE.

SIR,

With reference to para 4. of G.O. dated, 2nd February 1895,
No. 87a, I have the honour to submit herewith copy of a letter from the Principal, Rajahmundry College, No. 704, dated, 11 April 1895 together with its enclosures, which furnish all the information required by Government. It will be seen therefrom that both the Training and Practising departments are well attended and that there is no fear of the new Municipal Lower Secondary school affecting the strength of the latter department prejudicially.
At present the Training college classes are located in two separate buildings wide apart from each other, and it is essential that the whole institution should be brought together under one and the same roof if efficient supervision is to be secured. I am personally acquainted with the accommodation

accommodation available in the Arts College buildings for the two collegiate training classes and the High school classes. Some of these classes are held in a shed; one is held on the roof of the building under a thatched cover and exposed to the intense glare off the chunam roof. The two collegiate training classes wander from room to room, seeking a vacant spot in which they may listen to the lectures in peace.

2. Ever since my first visit to Rajahmundry in April 1893, I have given a great deal of attention to the condition of secondary education in the town, which at that time had sunk about as low as in some of the worst Municipalities in the Presidency. The measures I proposed in July of that year and which, on receiving the general approval of Government, were adopted, have already begun to effect improvement; and I am sanguine that, if Government will now come forward and perform generously the part which, in the understanding then entered upon, it was to perform, Rajahmundry will soon become what it ought to be, the great educational centre for the Northern Circars. The cost of the new building may seem large looked at by itself; but when one considers how far the three northern districts are behind in education, and the insuperable difficulties experienced by the Head of every Government office to

to get qualified men for the public service, the amount to be spent on this building appears very small indeed.

3. Government need entertain no fears as to the permanence of the Training section of the college, for trained teachers are in constant demand and the demand will long continue to be greater than the supply. Nor need any fear be entertained as to the permanence and growth of the High school classes (the practising school for the collegiate students under training), for there is no other high school in the town. The delay that has already taken place and the seeming hesitation of Government to fulfil its part of the arrangement by providing a school house, has already begun to have a prejudicial effect, and there are not wanting those who say that Government will ultimately back out of the arrangement. How prejudicial such an impression is to the interests of the institution I leave Government to judge. The popularity and success of the institution depend largely on the college being provided without loss of time with a good and permanent building of its own, and nothing but this will, I fear, enable the department to regain the full confidence of the public.

enable

I beg to request, therefore, that the early sanction of Government may be obtained for the construction of a suitable building for the Training college. An allotment of Rs 10,000 has been made for the purpose in the P.W. budget for the current year.

4. The plans and estimates received with the G.O. under reply are herewith returned.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,
Your most obedient servant.

for the here) that there should be a thoroughly good Training College of the 1st Grade at Rajahmundry, capable of accommodating 500 or 600 students. The Training College at Madras, full as it is, can barely meet the wants of the Central & Southern districts & can do nothing for the Northern Circars. Tamil is the vernacular here, not Telugu. It is certain that the continuous demand for trained teachers will give prominence to a good training college at Rajahmundry & Mr. MacCallister's figures show that it will always be able to command a good practising dep. The present arrangements under which the Training College containing 475 students is distributed over two buildings, partly accommodated in a shed & partly in a thatched place on a roof cannot be continued.

Please see P.O. of 2 February 1895 to 574. which called for certain information regarding the Rajahmundry Training College. - The enclosures to this current include a map which shows that the distance between the training college site and the town school is about a quarter of a mile. A second enclosure shows the strength of the training college (including practice places) after the opening of the Municipal Lower Secondary School which appears to have taken away only 97 boys out of 574 previously attending the training College. - Of the remaining 477, 206 - the practice school - occupy portions of the old College buildings some of them being located in a shed upon the roof, while the other 271 work in the normal

ORDER. D. 6th June 1895 No. 469

The Govt. agree with the D.P.I. in considering that the expenditure, large as it is, is justified by the circumstances. It is essential, in the interests of Education in the Northern Circars, and of the public service which demands a supply of well-educated youths in those Districts, that there should be a thoroughly efficient Training College of the first grade at Rajahmundry, capable of accommodating 500 or 600 students. The Training College at Madras can barely meet the wants of the Central and Southern Districts and can give no benefit to the Northern Circars in which the vernacular spoken is Telugu - not Tamil.
