The omission of these words appears to have given rise to the belief that the mere fact of a person's having held a permanent appointment before the new rules came into force on the 1st July 1894 relieves him from any disabilities in the matter of promotion under which he may have previously been placed and entitles him to promotion to any appointment, whatever his educational attainments may be. The object of Government, I

If Government approve of my suggestion, I propose to give effect to it in the Calendar for the Commission which is now being revised.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient Servant,
