Copy of letter from the Registrar of Books dated 4th November 1895, No. 289.

With reference to G. O. No. 873 of the 19th Ultimo and our interview last week at the Reference ^{Library} ~~Lib~~-attached to this Office, I have the honour to annex a statement which shows approximately that there are two thousand odd books, pamphlets and leaflets (out of the total stock of about 15,000 publications) which are verbatim reprints of works, of each of which a number of copies are in the Library. If it is inexpedient to overburden the shelves of the Connemara Library with the surplus copies, they may be detained here and ultimately disposed of public auction together with the duplicate copies of many old publications delivered by printers prior to 1891, when 3 copies of every book used to be presented, instead of a single copy as at present under Act X of 1890.

Awaiting a decision on this point.
