From Rao Bahadur V. KRISHNAMA CHARIAR, Registrar of Books, Madras, to the Director of Public Instruction, dated 29th November 1895, No. 299.

I have the honour to send on, for submission to Government, the printed copies of the Catalogue of publications registered during the third quarter of 1895.

2. The works registered during the quarter are 217 in all. Of these 165 have been entered under "Books" and 52 under "Periodicals."

3. A classification of the registered publications according to languages shows that 72 are in English including bi-lingual works, 43 in Tamil, 50 in Telugu, 11 in Malayalam, 11 in Kanarese, 2 in Tulu, 3 in Hindustani and 25 in Sanskrit, including diglot editions and those printed in the Grandha and Devanagiri characters.

4. More than 27 per cent. of the total number are works designed for educational purposes.

5. Brief notes or remarks on the subject matter of most of the registered publications are entered in the last column of the catalogue.

6. The accompanying extract contains the copyright entries made against 75 works whose proprietors have registered the copyright paying the usual fee, besides four other volumes containing the District Manuals of South Canara and North Arcot which have been registered free of charge, as these are Government publications. The last two entries in this list relate to works presented for registration during the first-half of 1895, but their copyright has only been registered during the third quarter of the year.

A poem in the popular ballad style of which the subject is briefly as follows. King Chitravarma had a very beautiful daughter Simantani. Her horoscope being examined it was found that she would lose her husband in her 14th year. She was therefore advised by her guru to worship the moon to avert the evil. She grew up and the marriageable youths of the famous royal race were all invited on an auspicious day fixed for the marriage. The Princess Chintrángada chose for her husband the beautiful Chandrángada from among the princes. This youth one day in company with some of his friends went for boating. The ill-luck would so have it that the boat was upset and all in the boat were drowned. A nága damsel of the snake type picked up the prince and took him to the abode of Nágás whose king Takshaka took pity on him and sent him to the earth. He met his wife and lived happily with her.

15th July.	34	16mo..	1st ..	400	Do.	0 1 0	.....	"Grievous hurt," as the title signifies, is an imaginary complaint in prose before Dharma Raja, preferred by Súrpanaka, charging Lakshmana, the first defendant, with having cut off the nose, &c., of the complainant and Ráma with aiding and abetting the said offence. Then begins a regular trial and the accused are proved guilty and sentenced. An appeal is then made to Siva, the judge of the Appellate Court, who reverses the finding of the Lower Court and acquits the prisoners. This is evidently a parody of the legend of nassik in the Rámáyana.

The manner of the story is simple and wholly individual, scorning the conventional form of vernacular composition and breaking the bonds of tradition in other respects. Whatever language and whatever spirit it may be written in, it is a question whether the story is likely to be perused more than once by those Telugu and Kanarese speaking people for whom the book is intended. Copyright registered.

The publication of such a technical magazine in this country, whose millions are governed by astrological rules, is but natural when Hindu astrologers are credited with anticipations, centuries ago, of scientific discoveries of Newton and other scientists and astronomers of modern times. The articles on the establishment of an institution for the revival of astrological study and its future work, and on solar energy and atmospheric work from the Hindu standpoint appeal to the lover of astronomical learning. In this number the difference between astronomy and astrology, and Venus and its influence are considered in detail without unnecessary technicalities. Copyright registered.
