The chief feature of this new guide to translation is the step-by-step system adapted for teaching the young Malayali the rudimentary construction of a sentence and the difference in the English order of words as contrasted with the same sentence rendered into his own vernacular. The difficulties of reciprocal translation are graduated and the peculiar idioms and turns of expression in the two languages are noted. The helps given in Malayalam are judicious while the selection of English phrases and passages seem to be of greater variety and value than that in other exercise books.
