Communicating to Deputy and Assistant Commissioners Government Order approving, subject to certain modifications suggested by the Commissioner for Government Examinations, the revised rules regarding the tests required to be passed by officers of the Salt, Abkari and Customs Department.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE

(Separate Revenue).

Read—the following G.O., No. 497, Educational, dated 11th August 1898 :—

Read—the following Proceedings of the Board of Revenue (Separate Revenue), No. 95, dated 23rd March 1898 :—

Resolution—No. 95, dated 23rd March 1898.

The Board begs leave to address Government on the subject of the departmental tests required to be passed by the officers of the Salt, Abkári and Customs Department.

2. As Government is aware, the work of the department is very largely of a practical nature, and the officers who are best qualified for it are not unfrequently men who are by no means quick at passing examinations. At the same time the work of the department has increased in such a way from year to year that it is practically impossible for men in it to find time to study. With all this the tests required to be passed by them are, the Board believes, more numerous than, and quite as difficult as, those required in any other department. The result has been that hardly a single officer has completed the tests required of him and time after time applications have had to be submitted for permanent exemptions. Moreover, sanction having been granted in many cases only temporarily, the Board is now in the position of having on its list a number of officers whose promotion Government has only approved subject to their passing examinations by fixed dates, and who have by failure to pass rendered themselves liable to reduction to their former grade—a proceeding which the Board, on the ground of their having done their actual work satisfactorily, is by no means prepared to recommend. A list of these officers and of the examinations which they still have to pass is attached to these Proceedings.

3. The Board being convinced that the tests as they now stand are too difficult for an officer of average ability to pass while at full work, some on the ground of the difficulty of the papers set, others on account of the high minimum required for a pass or for other reasons, feels itself compelled to address Government to reduce their severity. Another reason for addressing Government at this juncture is the fact that, while the text-books set for some of the tests are numerous and more or less out of date, the Board will, at an early date, be issuing the manuals on each of the subjects dealt with by the department. The preparation of these manuals has been ordered in G.Os., Mis. No. 1572, Revenue, dated 23rd March 1897, and No. 869, Revenue, dated 12th October 1897, and will suitably replace the text-books at present in use.

4. The alterations it proposes will be discussed in order of the tests as they now stand :—

Test A.—Criminal Law, Procedure and Evidence. The papers at present set for Salt officers in this subject are the same as those set for the Special Text Examinations. That is to say, a Salt Inspector, whose appearances in court are not very frequent and whose attention is entirely confined to one or two classes of cases, is required to answer the same questions as a Deputy Collector who will be called upon in all probability to exercise the powers of a first-class Magistrate. It is true that the minimum marks required of him are not the same; but this does not affect the fact that the questions asked are altogether beyond the range of his ordinary experience and many of them are such as in the whole course of his service he will never be called upon to concern himself with. The Board would substitute for this test a much more elementary one dealing only with subjects which come within the range of a Salt officer's actual work.

Test B.—This is divided into five branches—the Salt Laws and Rules, certain Standing Orders of the Board, the Salt Commission Report, Dr. Ratton's Hand-book and the Manufacture and Chemistry of saltpetre. In the new Salt Manual ordered to be prepared in G.O., No. 869, Revenue, dated 12th October 1897, all these subjects will be dealt with, and the Board considers that two papers on this manual will answer the purposes of the examination more efficiently than the five papers now set on books which cover more ground than is necessary and are in parts more or less obsolete.

Test C.—This consists of two branches which are not very intimately connected with one another—the first, the Account Code and the Civil Service Regulations, and the second, the method of keeping the accounts and rendering the returns in use in the department. The first of these is a necessary subject of examination and the Board would not alter it materially; but, in view of the number of tests required to be passed, it would suggest that this, which is one of the least important, should be removed from the list of those the passing of which is a condition precedent to promotion, and that Inspectors should be allowed to pass it within two years following thereon. The second branch the Board would abolish altogether. There are in its opinion too many tests and this is one which can well be done without. As it is, the papers set in Tests B and F embody a number of general questions in accounts as will be seen from the file of papers herewith sent, and a thorough examination in the new manuals will ensure a general knowledge of the accounts embodied in them. At the same time it is impossible to insist on any special knowledge of details since the number of sets of accounts is so great, and no officer can be expected to show a special knowledge of the accounts pertaining to a branch of work that he has not been actually engaged in.

In Test D the Board would propose no alterations, but would reduce the number of branches to three by amalgamating the first two into one.

In Test E the only alteration the Board would propose is one in the wording of the description of Branch (ii). From the Hon'ble Sir Henry (then Mr.) Bliss's letter printed in G.O., No. 461, Educational, dated 19th July 1883, to which the original notification is attached, it appears that what he desired a candidate should be required to read was "an ordinary petition or report from a Petty officer," but the notification, as it stands, requires him to read "fluently and intelligibly" "an arzi badly written in a difficult hand and badly spelt." If this is strictly interpreted, the test, so far as this portion of it is concerned, is the hardest in the Presidency. The Board therefore proposes to adopt the wording of the late Commissioner's letter in the notification itself.

Test F.—The two branches of this test practically cover the same ground, and with the notifications and rules thereunder, which are embodied in about 100 pages of the Excise Manual, form the subject of sixteen questions in each grade every year. This the Board considers is a mistake. If he is not going to repeat the previous years' questions, the Examiner has to go into subjects which are quite out of the ordinary range of a Salt officer's practical work. The Board considers that a single paper of ten questions in place of the two would be ample, and that the text-book for it should be the Excise Manual now under preparation.

5. One addition appears to be necessary to the tests in view of the recent addition of Customs work to the other work of the department. Seeing that any officer in it may be called upon to perform Customs duties, the Board thinks that a simple test in this subject will have to be added, but would make it, like the Account Code and the Civil Service Regulations, a test to be passed after promotion instead of as a condition precedent to it. The text-books may be those fixed for the present Sea Customs test, but the Board would suggest that for the present at any rate the papers should be of a simple nature and that questions on the more abstruse points should be avoided.

6. In conclusion, the Board would represent that the minimum percentages required for passing the various tests need thorough revision. These vary at present from 60 to 20 per cent. and the lower percentages in many cases are prescribed for the easier papers. This is only explainable by the supposition that when the minima were first fixed, it was intended that one paper should be set for candidates for both grades, those obtaining the higher percentages securing a pass in the higher grade and the lower in the lower. This is a system which the Board thinks it would be wise to adopt now instead of making the lower grades absurdly easy to pass, as they are in some cases at present, while the higher ones are out of all proportion difficult.

7. At the same time the Board ventures to suggest that it is unnecessary to make Sub-Inspectors on Rs. 50 pass any of these tests. The work of these officers is for the most part out-door and it is not desirable, even if it is possible, to make them sit down to in-door study. The Board considers that it is sufficient to require them to pass tests when they are of a standing for promotion to act as Assistant Inspectors, that is to say, when they reach the second grade.

8. A revised notification embodying the changes above proposed is submitted for the approval of Government. It has been thought well to class Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Sea Customs together with the rest of the department into which they will presently be incorporated.

9. It will be impossible for the changes to come into force till October 1899 as the manuals will not be issued in time for this year's examinations, but the Board submits its recommendations at once in order that due and sufficient notice may be given to intending candidates and because, as stated in paragraph 2 above, a number of officers have become liable to reduction under the present scheme unless Government should see fit to exempt them for a further period.

Provided also that one of the two languages in each case must be Tamil or Telugu and that Hindustani shall not be reckoned as a vernacular of the Presidency. The examination of candidates in their own vernaculars will in most cases be a formal one, but it must be ensured that they can read a running hand.

Read—the following letter from the Hon'ble Mr. D. DUNCAN, M.A., D.Sc., LL.D., Commissioner for the Government Examinations, to the Secretary to Government, Local and Municipal Department, dated Madras, 7th July 1898, No. 235/2-D.:—

In returning the papers referred to me for remarks under endorsement No. 34 M., dated 25th May 1898, I have the honour to state that I find nothing to disapprove of in the modifications which the Board of Revenue proposes to make in the rules relating to the Salt Tests. I have always been of opinion that these rules needed to be simplified and, when submitting my proposals for the revision of the Special Tests generally in 1893, I should have dealt with the Salt Tests also, but the Board was of opinion then that no alterations were required.

2. From paragraph 6 of the Board's Proceedings, I understand that there is to be only one set of papers for the higher and lower grades in those tests where there are two grades, candidates who obtain the higher minimum being placed in the higher grade and those obtaining the lower minimum in the lower grade. If so, it appears to me that there ought to be only one uniform fee charged, there being only one examination under each test, which will be open to all candidates. I propose, therefore, to strike out the line in rule 2, where a fee of Rs. 5 is prescribed for the lower grade.

3. In the column of remarks the words "There will be no examination in the lower grade in the test," against some of the tests, seem to me to be misleading, inasmuch as they imply that, as regards the other tests, two distinct examinations will be held, one for the higher grade and one for the lower grade. It would be better, perhaps, to state that "where a lower and a higher minimum are prescribed, candidates failing to obtain the higher minimum but obtaining the lower minimum will be considered to have passed by the lower grade or standard, but will be allowed to appear again at any subsequent examination to pass by the higher grade.

4. I presume the new rules are not intended to come into force before next year. It is too late to make them applicable to the examination to be held in October this year.

Order—No. 497, Educational, dated 11th August 1898.

The recommendations of the Board, subject to the modifications suggested by the Commissioner for Government Examinations, are approved.

2. The Government observes that no proposals have been made either by the Board or the Commissioner with regard to the present Sea Customs Test. It appears that there will now be only one officer who will have to pass it, viz., the Deputy Collector of Sea Customs, Madras, and that he may be required to pass the new Test G, Customs. The Board will, therefore, be requested to report whether the present Sea Customs Test cannot be abolished.

Resolution—No. 276, dated 2nd September 1898.

Communicated to Deputy and Assistant Commissioners and Officers in charge of Circles. The revised rules for Test E should be brought into force at once. The rest will have effect only from next year.

2. With reference to paragraph 2 of the Government Order, the Board begs to submit that it appears necessary to retain the existing Sea Customs Test to secure the proper officering of the Madras Sea Customs establishment, thirty-five men of the Collector's office drawing Rs. 50 and over per month, and being therefore subject to the test.

3. It was pointed out in paragraph 9 of Board's Proceedings, No. 97, dated 23rd March 1898, that a number of officers have become liable to reduction under the present scheme unless Government should see fit to exempt them for a further period. The new scheme having been approved, the Board begs to suggest that existing exemptions * should be extended until the results of the first examination under it are known. It will have no hesitation in recommending the reduction of officers who are then found not to have qualified themselves for the posts they hold.
