No. 53. Read the following letter from the Officiating Comptroller-General of Accounts, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, dated Calcutta, 30th May 1871, No. 30:—

I have the honour to submit the first Annual Report on the working and progress of the District Savings' Banks for the year ending 31st March 1871, together with the following statements:—

I.—The transactions of each Bank.

II.—The weekly progress of Banks in each Province.

III.—A Classification of Depositors.

IV.—Average Statements.

2. The District Savings' Banks were established under the Order of Government, No. 167, dated 16th May 1870, which directed that Banks should be established in connexion with such District Civil Treasuries as might be from time to time selected by the several Local Governments and Administrations.

3. The conditions upon which business was to be transacted in them were, in nearly all respects, similar to those which had previously obtained in the Presidency and Government Savings' Banks in Bengal, with this chief difference that whereas these had been open, except in the Presidency town, to Government servants only, the newly-established Savings' Banks were to be open to all classes of persons who might desire to make use of the advantages which they offered.

4. No deposit under one Rupee is allowed, and deposits exceeding Rupees 500 in each year are not permitted, except in the case of persons having an account in the Presidency Savings' Bank, and wishing to withdraw the balance at their credit with a view to depositing it in the District Savings' Banks, when the amount of balance so deposited is excluded in calculating for the first year the limit of Rupees 500 assigned by the Government for annual deposits.

5. In establishing the system of District Savings' Banks, my predecessor thought it unadvisable to open too many at once, and commenced with a few tentatively, until the Central Office became fully accustomed to the system and the work which it involved. The inconvenience of an opposite course was felt when the Money Order Offices were established in 1862, and the difficulty consequent on opening at one stroke a large number of offices, in introducing the working of that system in the Central Office of control, was found to be very great, while confusion, which might otherwise have been avoided, was the result.

6. Acting on this experience, Mr. Harrison commenced operations by opening six Banks in Bengal and seven in British Burmah.

7. The first Bank opened was at Bhaugulpore, which commenced business on the 11th July 1870. The total number of Banks now actually working is fifty-two, the total amount deposited being on the 31st March Rupees 1,84,433-7-7, the deposits in the year having numbered 2,284 against 247 withdrawals. Forms and instructions have been issued to ten other districts, in which it is hoped that business will very shortly commence.

8. No District Savings' Banks have been opened under that name in the Madras or Bombay Presidencies, but practically they do exist in every district under those Governments, as the Government Savings' Banks in both Presidencies extend their benefits to all classes of depositors, and do not restrict them, as in Bengal, to Government servants.

9. These Banks, therefore, perform in Madras and Bombay the precise functions for which the newly-established Banks have been created in the rest of India, and they are freely resorted to by the public. The latest accounts which have been received show that the numbers of depositors are 7,189 in Madras, and 15,679 in Bombay, the balance of deposits in Madras being Rupees 18,57,978 and in Bombay Rupees 48,32,179. Under these circumstances, I would not advocate for the present any interference with a system which is found to work well, the only gain that can be attained by such a step being that of introducting uniformity of working. Copies of the rules of the Savings' Banks in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies are annexed.

10. The statements accompanying this report are intended to show the present position of the Banks as well as their gradual growth, and what classes of the community chiefly avail themselves of their benefits.

11. The establishment of District Savings' Banks having been so far successful, steps will now be taken to extend the system by opening fresh Banks, and I will at once place myself in communication with the Local Governments and Administrations on the subject.
