Copy of a letter no.3742, dated the 26th March 1917, from the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Education (Examinations).

I am directed to invite reference to the rules regarding the institution of a new literary examination to be called the "Oriental Language Teacher-ship Examination" published in the notification from your Department no.89 dated 7th September 1916. I am to inquire whether it was the intention of these rules that only persons should be examined and given certificates who intend to make teaching their sole or main profession? The reason of this enquiry is that a subordinate Government servant, who has in the past successfully taught Government servants his vernacular language (Marathi), desires to be examined for the certificate provided for in the Rules referred to. I am to say that there seems no objection to his request being granted, and the Government of India are no doubt aware that in many stations Government servants are the best persons available for giving instruction. The intention of the Government of India may however have been to ascertain the competency and raise the standard of private persons professing to teach.
