The difference between Mr Baynes' former and present edition of the Criminal Law consists in arrangement.

In his first compilation, the Regulations and Acts are arranged according to the Courts to which they relate, - as the Soydane Udakut. Sessions Courts - the Magistrates &c; and where this is impracticable according to subjects. The principal Regulation respecting each is taken as the basis of a Chapter and into it are incorporated the modifications and additions introduced by subsequent enactments, so as to form the whole into one consolidated Regulation. Alterations of the text are made in italics. The Circular Orders of the Soydane Udakut are appended, those relating to the same Reg. or Act are placed together.

In the present edition this scheme is entirely abandoned. The Regulations and Acts follow each other in datorial order and foot notes are added giving the ruling of

of the Fajdasee Moalut & other Courts in regard to them. It is brought up to Act VI of 1858.
