Fort St. George, Judicial Consultation, 14th September 1858.

No. 31.

35 Michael's Place,
Brompton, S. W., London, 7th August 1858.

SIR,

I have recently published an enlarged re-print of the "Introduction" to my "Digest of Indian Cases," with additions, making it applicable to the present day. I have somewhat altered the original arrangement, and have spared no pains in endeavouring to make my new work a plain and perspicuous account of the past and present judicial systems and of the laws administered in India from the time of Clive to the year 1858. It is thus a separate treatise, complete in itself, and I have been advised by the most competent persons that it may be of permanent utility as well as of casual importance. The Court of Directors have signified their approbation of my work by subscribing for 100 copies. Will you be so good as to mention the matter to the Right Honorable the Governor of Madras, and to request in my name his patronage of my work. Should he deem it worthy of encouragement, I should be greatly obliged by your applying to me personally for as many copies, if any, as may be required by the Government, and informing me to what address they should be forwarded.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) WILLIAM H. MORLEY.

P. S.—The title of my work is "the Administration of Justice in British India; its past history and present state: comprising an account of the laws peculiar to India."—Royal 8vo. pp. V. 357. The price is fifteen Shillings per copy.
