case of the system.

Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CG) and an exercise group (EG). The CG performed no exercise, while the EG performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a maximal exercise test at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the EG had a significantly lower HR and HRR at rest and during the maximal exercise test compared to the CG. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and HRR of sedentary, middle-aged men.
