Report of the Inspector-General of Police

Madras

Dec. 1887.

1. Foreign emissaries, real or suspected.

2. Political intrigues.

3. Political or social excitements or movements.

4. Religious excitements or new, or special organizations. The feeling between the Shanars on one side and the Muslims and other castes on the other, still continues in North Tinnervilly - There is less friction between these castes in South Tinnervilly - At Arupakota in the Madurai District, the disputes between the Shanars and other castes are nothing more than a repetition of the "right and left-hand caste" quarrels now finally taking place in that part of the country - As the Shanars grow richer, they become more precautionous and are undoubtedly steadily gaining ground.

5. Criminal classes, any unusual gathering or movement.

Shamans and other castles are nothing more than a repetition of the "Right and Left-hand castle" quarrels continually taking place in that part of the country — As the Shamans grow weaker, they become more precautionary and are undoubtedly steadily gaining ground.
