C. No. 50/3.

FOR ORDERS.

The S. Munshi's action seems to be opposed to the provisions of Sec 266, proviso (i), Civil Procedure Code. But the Court seems to have no power to interfere in the matter. The only course open to the defendant to obtain a remedy is either to prefer an appeal against the decree of the S. Munshi or to move the High Court to exercise its powers of revision under Sec 622 of the Code.

The office do not seem to be right. It appears that British Civil Courts have no power to execute their decrees in Travancore. The provisions of sec 229. A. Civil P.C. have never, apparently, been extended to Travancore, (Please see page
