they do they will not consent to appear for all hearings of the same case unless additional fees with the necessary allowances are given to them. The clients troubles do not end here.
Even after satisfying the pleade with the money demanded he has to wait at his lodgings and Court his favour. The certifie pleaders rarely consent to come to talluks other than their own.
The ryots of the land are like the petrs mostly very poor and cannot consequently bear the charges of carrying on litigation by a certified pleader. They are not generally educated to conduct their cases without the aid of vakils; and even if there be some among them who have received some general education, none of them are conversant with law. Under these circumstances it is necessary that there should be a class of easily accessible men to conduct their criminal cases which are all of an urgent nature. Civil cases deal with property alone whereas in criminal cases, a man's self respect and station or life are involved. Certified plea ders are not procurable in time by such parties as are involved

involved in criminal cases and in cases suddenly brought by the Police.

The petrs therefore pray that Govt may be pleased to take into consideration the well-being of the people and to issue the necessary orders for allowing private vakils to continue in their presen profession undisturbed.
