since the expiry of the Treaty of 1879 between the British and Portuguese Governments no case of sufficient importance has occurred to justify Government in applying to Goa for the extradition of the offender as an act of comity.

3. I am at the same time to observe that had the prima facie evidence received with your letter dated the 10th December been complete, this Government would probably have been able to prefer a request for extradition before Ghulam Rasul was allowed to leave Goa on the 17th December though whether the Portuguese Government would have complied with the request or not, it is impossible to say. In telegraphing as they did to Madras that the fugitive had left Goa for Mangalore the Portuguese Government appears however to have performed a friendly act.

4. An inquiry will however be made with reference to the telegram sent on 6th December asking that the accused should be detained pending receipt of application for extradition as to whether this Government is right
