GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

READ—the following papers :—

From G. STOKES, Esq., Collector and District Magistrate of Salem, to the Chief Secretary to Government, dated 21st November 1894, No. 2006 M

Licenses in Form VIII under the Indian Arms Act now in use are so framed that a single form is to last for ten years. This form of licenses having been issued during the current year, all that has to be done during the next calendar year is to renew them by entering therein the date of renewal and of expiry of the licenses under signature of a District Magistrate. For this purpose the licenses in possession of the parties will have to be received back by the District Magistrate. Some arrangement for their transmission is therefore necessary. All applications for licenses received by magistrates are at present forwarded to the local police subordinates for opinion and on receipt of their report licenses are issued. Further, the licenses after issue are sent to the Taluk Magistrates, who deliver them through the police. In this office and in the taluk offices are kept registers of all licenses issued; but, owing to the difficulty of identifying the individual licensees there has hitherto been very great difficulty in checking and enforcing the proper renewal of licenses. This the change in form will do much to facilitate, but it seems to me that the check would be much more complete if the station-house officers were required to maintain a register of the arms licensed within their limits and were required to see that licenses for these arms or for any new arms brought in were taken out annually. It would only be necessary to require that all applications for renewal of license should be sent through the station-house officer in the first instance. The work could be checked very easily by magistrates, who should be required to register the licenses by stations and who could at once call for explanation if in any station limits there was a marked falling off in the number of licenses renewed and applied for.

2. I have the honour therefore to enquire if there is any objection to requiring the police to receive such applications, to forward them together with the licenses of the previous year for renewal and to maintain in each station a register of the licenses within it independent of the magistrate and to holding the police responsible for seeing that the licenses are taken out. It is the police who do these duties in Ireland, where the system works very satisfactorily.

From Colonel C. A. PORTEOUS, Inspector-General of Police, to the Chief Secretary to Government, dated Madras, 12th December 1894, No. 7328.

In reply to endorsement, No. 2375, dated 29th November 1894, on letter from the District Magistrate, Salem, No. 2006 M., dated 21st November 1894, I have the honour to state that there is no objection, but that the plan is a good one and has already been ordered.

SIR,

Licenses in Form VIII under the Indian Arms Act now in use are so printed that a single form is to last for 10 years. This form of licenses having been issued during the current year all that has to be done during the next calendar year is to renew them by entering therein the date of renewal and of expiry of the licenses under signature of a District Magistrate. For this purpose the licenses in possession of the parties will have to be received back by the District Magistrate. Some arrangements for their transmission is therefore necessary. All applications for licenses received by magistrates are at present forwarded to the local Police subordinates for opinion and on receipt of their report licenses are issued. Further the licenses after issue are sent to the Saluz Magistrates who delivers them through the Police. In this office and in the Saluz offices are kept registers of all licenses issued; but owing to the difficulty of identifying the indi-vidual licensees there has hitherto been very great difficulty in checking and enforcing the proper renewal of licenses.

This the change in form will do much to facilitate ^{but} it seems to me that the check would be much more complete if the Station House Officers were required to maintain a register of the arms licen-sed within their limits and were required to see that licenses for these arms or for any new ~~new~~ arms brought in were taken out annually. It would only be necessary to require that all applications for renewal of license should be sent through the Station House Officer in the first instance. The work could be checked very easily by Magistrates who should be required to register the licenses by stations and who could at once call for explanation if in any station limits there was a marked falling off in the number of licenses renewed and applied for.

2. I have the honor therefore to enquire if there is any objection to requiring the Police to receive such applications, to forward them together with the licenses of the previous year for renewal and to maintain in each station a register of the arms within it independent of the Magistrate and to holding the Police responsible for seeing that the licenses are taken out. It is the Police who do these duties in Ireland where the system works very satisfactorily.
