reduced and that it was not contemplated to effect a reduction in the rate of increment also.

4. As the question is not altogether free from doubt, I have the honor to request that Government may be pleased to lay down an authoritative ruling in the matter.

to the reduction of one-tenth.

3. The Treasury Dy Collector, however, contends that, in the instance quoted above, the pay of the post after the accrual of the increment must be taken to be Rs $18 + 1\frac{4}{5}$ or Rs $19\frac{4}{5}$ and not Rs $18 + 2$ and that the Pensionary Contribution at the rate prescribed should be paid on Rs $19\frac{4}{5}$ and not on Rs 20. In other words, according to the Treasury Dy Collector, a reduction must be made in the rates of annual or Biennial increments as well, as in the minimum and maximum pay of appointments provided with progressive salaries. I am disposed to agree with the Treasury Dy Collector's view of the matter. But it may be urged, on the other hand, that a reduction in the total amount of the increment was made once for all, when the minimum and the maximum salaries of the post were reduced by an annual or a biennial increment of Rs 5, 3, 2, 2, 2, or 1 as the case may be. The minimum and the maximum pay of these offices were reduced by one-tenth as shown in the statement submitted with this office letter read in the C.O. above referred to, but no corresponding reduction was made in the rates of annual or biennial increments. Suppose, for instance, the pay of a post was Rs 20 rising to Rs 30 by an annual increment of Rs 2, before the 1st April last. From the 1st April, the pay of the post would be Rs 18 rising to Rs 27 by annual increments of Rs 2. After the accrual of the first increment, the pay of the post would be Rs $18 + 2$ or Rs 20 and the pensionary Contribution would be paid on Rs 20 at the rate of one-ninth, while pay actually drawn by the incumbent would be Rs 20 and so on, if the annual increment is not liable to

The increase from a minimum to a maximum is always reached by so many equal instalments. If the procedure described in para 2 is adopted, this will not be possible.
