Bubonic Plague.

Recording Government Order, Marine, observing that there is no power vested in the Government to extend the period of medical inspection of ships in view to withholding a clean bill of health beyond the ten days prescribed by the Venice Convention, and that if events subsequently occur which prove that this period is insufficient, the question may be revived.

READ—the following paper:—

G.O., No. 960, Marine, dated 25th November 1897.

Read—the following paper:—

From Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel W. G. KING, M.B., C.M., D.P.H., Sanitary Commissioner for Madras, to the Secretary to Government, Marine Department, dated Fort St. George, 18th November 1897, No. 2351-S.

I have the honour to advise that G.O., No. 327, Marine, dated 3rd April 1897, be modified. Having regard to the fact that the incubation stage of plague extends up to eight days, and possibly ten days, it is not advisable that a ship which has arrived in the Madras Presidency from an infected port should be excused complete inspection, because it has already been proved free of plague after its arrival within the limits of any single port. Indeed, when it is remembered that practical experience has shown that plague can be imported to London from Bombay—infection having probably been acquired en route from some articles capable of retaining the contagion—it becomes obvious the practice allowed by the Government Order is unsafe. I therefore advise that Government direct that all ships known to have communicated with an infected port be liable to inspections at all ports in the Madras Presidency for a period of one month from date of departure.

Order—No. 960, Marine, dated 25th November 1897.

His Excellency the Governor in Council observes that there is no power vested in the Government to extend the period of inspection (in view to withholding a clean bill of health) beyond the ten days prescribed by the Venice Convention. If events subsequently occur which prove that this period is insufficient, the question may be revived.
